A Straight Line is the Shortest Distance Between Two Points

THE direct way is always the best way.

Vitagraph service is direct service—from manufacturer to exhibitor—a line without a break.

Such centralized responsibility means complete co-operation.

It means the utmost responsiveness to the needs of the trade.

That the benefits accruing to exhibitors from this direct contact are most substantial, is evidenced by the fact that

Although the V-L-S-E has been the selling department of Greater Vitagraph exclusively for but a short time, the business of this company has increased tremendously.

And the beginning has hardly been made.

"The Last Man"

A Thrilling Masterful Blue Ribbon Feature

Written By James Oliver Curwood

Directed By William Wolbert

TWO men and a woman face the red storm of native fury in a Philippine jungle.

Between them lies a hate and passion, born of deception and betrayal.

One—the tower of strength—bulwarks and shelters those who have wronged him.

But with the passing of the peril, he exacts a penalty worse than death—a penalty that will sear their souls for all time.

A LOVE tragedy of the outposts of civilization, "The Last Man" is big, vital, gripping.

It pulses with man's primitive passions and mad desires.

It should be booked for long runs and advertised extensively.

It is a picture such as comes but seldom and endures.

Greater Vitagraph's Mile-A-Minute Super-Serial by C·N·and A·M·Williamson

Featuring

Earle Williams

A HEADLONG dash in a speed demon—over a mountain side—a thrilling balloon flight in search of a captive girl—a nerve-racking auto race, ending in the explosion of a car going at full tilt—these are but a suggestion of the action which crams every episode of "The Scarlet Runner."

IT is these big moments—plus the dramatic climaxes, so unexpected that they come as a shock—plus the popularity of Earle Williams and the drawing power of C. N. and A. M. Williamson—plus the power of its advertising campaign—that make "The Scarlet Runner" the winning serial of the day.

Mr. Exhibitor:—

We are vitally interested in your bank account!

We recognize the close connection between good pictures and fat bank balances, therefore, we supply you with one so you may always have the other.

Next in importance to a good picture is a good poster—it attracts patrons and they then become walking, talking advertisements for your theatre.

With unmatchable short length features such as supplied by bulwarked by posters with a punch, you are assured of prosperity and a satisfactory bank account.

The best proof that General Film Service will do what we say, is the fact that more than 6,000 exhibitors subscribe for it.

The Motion Picture News, after investigation, says there are less than 12,000 moving picture theatres (not counting the fly-by-night or those built for speculation only). We supply more than 6,000 with Service. Isn't that sufficient proof?

Dear Sir:-

In placing our booking for "Lonesome Luke Comedies" for November, we would like to mention the fact that in our humble estimation we have never played as satisfactory comedies as the above.

The producers seem to have hit the happy combination of novel plots - with a mighty clever comedy cast. We find that "Luke" does as much business, and gives better satisfaction than any comedy we have played here, and as you know we play them all.

Yours very truly,

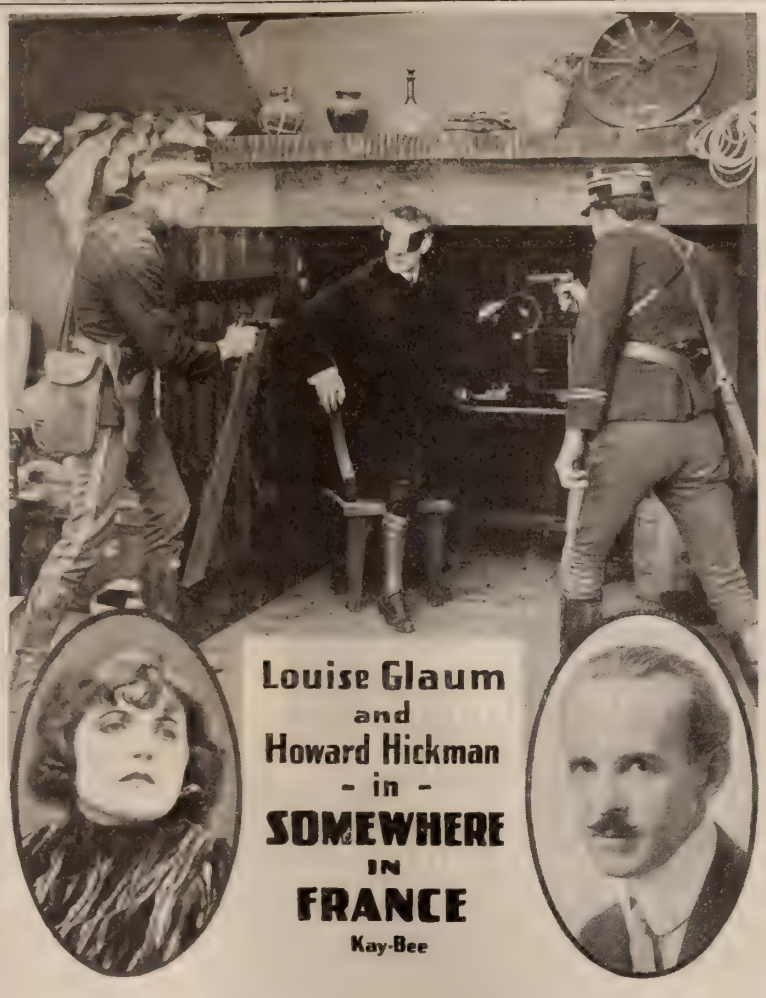
Bessie Love in "Sister of Six"

Fine-Arts

There's a "something" indefinable about this dainty, demure little star that's irresistible. Her sweet, winsome manner reaches right down to the heart of every moving picture patron and "gets" it. Somehow they can't help loving Bessie Love.

And when you show "Sister of Six," the latest picture in which this star appears, you will understand why this is true. You'll enjoy it—and so will your patrons. They'll go away loving Bessie Love more than ever.



Louise Glaum and Howard Hickman in "Somewhere in France"

A picture that holds you in suspense until the very end—a tale so full of mystery that you cannot guess the outcome—a story so gripping that hours pass like minutes. Such a picture is "Somewhere in France," the new TRIANGLE PLAY co-starring Louise Glaum and Howard Hickman, written by the late Richard Harding Davis.

There's no question about the way this picture will be received.

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

NOVEMBER 4, 1916

Countless Thrills Abound in "A Lass of the Lumberlands"

DARING deeds, reckless risk of life and limb, and countless other thrills abound in "A Lass of the Lumberlands," the new chapter-play in which Helen Holmes is appearing. Many exhibitors thought the acme of daring had been reached in "The Girl and the Game." The public held its breath and believed that nothing more daring or foolhardy could be accomplished than some of the feats they witnessed in that series of railroad tales. But now "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is proving that the limit has not yet been reached. Helen Holmes and the company supporting her have staged sensations that outdo anything that happened in "The Girl and the Game."

Auto Plunges Off Bridge.

Chapter one is largely introductory of what is to follow. It is the foundation stone upon which the rest of the structure is erected. It closes with the scene depicting the breaking of a log-jam with dynamite just as a mother and baby are crossing the river on the logs. With chapter two big thrills begin. First of all, you see a five-passenger automobile driven at reckless speed through road obstructions, set up to bar all traffic across a certain bridge. Arrived at the center of the bridge, the driver loses control of his car. It swerves to one side. It dashes against the frail barrier at the side of the bridge. It turns end over end and plunges 75 feet into the river beneath. Its occupants are hurled far out into space.

Daring Helen Holmes.

Following close upon the first thrill comes another. Helen Holmes and Leo Maloney drive a locomotive out on a lofty railroad trestle. Stopping the engine at the middle of the structure, they fasten ropes to either end of a canoe. Helen seats herself in the birch-bark fabric. You will fairly hold your breath as she is slowly lowered down, and down and down into a chasm of immense depth. It seems she will never reach the bottom. Just as the last inch of rope seems payed out, the frail canoe sinks to rest on the bosom of the river. Another second and the ropes are loosened. Helen seizes a paddle. A moment more and she is off again on her race to save the timber claim. And these are only two of the sensations in "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Those exhibitors who have not yet arranged to show this powerful chapter-play can make bookings now at any of the 68 Mutual exchanges.

"Behind the Screen" Is Newest Mutual-Chaplin

A perfect hurricane of mirth will sweep across the country with the release of "Behind the Screen," the newest of Chaplin-Mutual features. Never before was Charlie in a funnier mood. Never before did he depict for the screen so many absurd and ridiculous adventures. In times gone by various comedians have attempted to enact a comedy of studio life. The public has been given a peep behind the scenes and shown how certain types of production are staged by motion-picture directors. But never before has anybody played horse with the serious business of film-making in the fashion that Charlie Chaplin does. The mere thought of Charlie, turned loose in a big motion-picture plant to do as he wills, brings smiles to the lips. "Behind the Screen" is the seventh of the Mutual-Chaplin Specials. The previous releases are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count" and "The Pawnshop."

The Saturday Evening Post, the world's greatest weekly magazine, pays homage to Charlie Chaplin, the world's greatest comedian, by alloting to him space on its front cover in the issue of October 14.

Mary Miles Minter & Margarita Fischer This Week's Stars

DAINTY MARY MILES MINTER and beautiful Margarita Fischer are the stars of this week's Mutual Star Productions. Both are famous wherever films are shown. Both are known box-office magnets of real worth. The features in which they appear are widely varied in character. The Minter Star Production is a convincing little human-interest tale entitled "Faith." The first of the series of Fischer Star Productions is a thrilling tale of the South Sea islands, and bears the title "The Pearl of Paradise."

"Faith."

"Faith" is the third of the Mary Miles Minter Features—the two previous ones being "Youth's Endearing Charm" and "Dulcie's Adventure." Miss Minter finds herself a servant in the house of John Thorpe, her grandfather, though both are ignorant of their relationship. Faith, the character impersonated by Miss Minter, becomes a friend and loyal comrade to Laura, her grandfather's daughter by a second wife, even going so far as to assume the guilt of a theft by the other girl. Eventually Faith's real position in the household is determined, and she finds happiness and a real mother's love. The production was made under the direction of James Kirkwood, Mary Pickford's former director, at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara, Cal.

"The Pearl of Paradise."

Beautiful Margarita Fischer, star of many Mutual productions in the past, is once more back in the fold, and this week will be presented in one of the most lavish offerings ever released by the Mutual Film Corporation. The title of the first of the Fischer Mutual Star Productions is "The Pearl of Paradise." Its scenes are laid on a South Sea island, and Miss Fischer appears as Yulita, a true daughter of nature, who disports herself about the wild caves and along the silvery sands of the seacoast in nature's own garb. She is completely innocent, and has never beheld a man other than her father. Suddenly John Dellow, a wealthy young American, shipwrecked on the coast, comes into Yulita's life, and the remainder of the story is concerned with her struggles to win his love and make him content on the island. It was made at the studios of the Pollard Picture Play Company. Bookings on both these productions are now being taken at all 68 of the Mutual exchanges.

EVERY EXCHANGE MAN NEEDS THE NEW STUDIO DIRECTORY:

"It will help me answer some of the many, many questions asked about this or that star," says Manager Mitchell of the Laemmle exchange.

"See it here on my desk?" asked Manager Calvert of the Bluebird exchange. "Well, right there it is going to stay. I know a lot about stars now, but I figure I can't learn too much, and I don't know of a place where I can learn more quickly, more accurately or more pleasurably."

EVERY EXHIBITOR NEEDS THE NEW STUDIO DIRECTORY:

"The exhibitor who does not have this last MOTION PICTURE NEWS STUDIO DIRECTORY is losing an opportunity to increase his business by being better posted on the business in which he is engaged," declared Harry Heyman, manager of the Omaha World Exchange.

EVERY ACCESSORY DEALER NEEDS THE NEW STUDIO DIRECTORY:

"Maybe, you think I don't have any use for it?" asked F. A. Van Husan, head of the Western Supply Co., distributors of motion picture machines and other supplies. "Don't I deal with exhibitors? Are not exhibitors always talking about pictures? Well, I guess. And I am able, through the help of this Directory and other means, to talk with them just as expertly as anyone."

EVERY PHOTOPLAY EDITOR NEEDS THE NEW STUDIO DIRECTORY:

"Well, well! Here's that Directory," exclaimed Charles Cobry, photoplay editor of the Omaha World-Herald as he received his copy. "Let's see—what about that star some girl from out in the State wrote about?" He dug out a letter, and, with it in one hand and the Directory in the other, went to work.

OF THE LUMBERLANDS

Bigger Than "THE GIRL AND THE GAME"

Back Again! Helen Holmes in a master chapter play bigger and better than the big success, "The Girl and the Game." In response to the requests of more than 6,000 exhibitors all over America who found "The Girl and the Game" the biggest serial success ever produced, Helen Holmes is back again in a newer and bigger chapter play of the Great North Woods—"A Lass of the Lumberlands."

Audiences everywhere will welcome the announcement of this spectacular chapter play. The story by E. Alexander Powell, the noted novelist, is unique and profoundly interesting. It will appear in hundreds of newspapers. It depicts, in truthful fashion, life in the logging camps of the virgin Northwest. Love, adventure, thrills—all are possessed by this story in a combination never before seen.

"A Lass of the Lumberlands" is in fifteen chapters. A new chapter is released every week thru the sixty-eight Mutual Exchanges in America. The rental price is very low. It is within the reach of every exhibitor. Wire, write or visit your nearest Mutual Exchange now for prices and dates.

The Motion Picture Theatre

LAST week we published some figures on motion picture theatres in this country which, briefly condensed, present the following situation:

(1) 80 per cent of the theatres are small theatres, with capacities under 650 seats.

(2) The average admission price is ten and a half cents.

Before adding further figures, gained from our survey, it may do just as well to make deductions from the above.

THE main deduction is obvious and simple enough. It is this, that the preponderant theatre is the smaller theatre, and that this theatre is either a smaller town theatre or a community theatre in a larger town.

At any rate, it is a community theatre, with the fixed responsibility of giving to a community of homes each week and throughout the year all that these homes ask for in entertainment and information and all they ought to expect from the medium of the motion picture.

HERE then is the backbone of the picture business; here is the main outlet—don't forget, it is eighty per cent large—of the steady makers of motion pictures. Here—within this field, in these community theatres, and the homes they cater to—are contained the great bulk of the regular picture-theatre-going public

They are, by our survey, paying ten cents admission price.

WE must, therefore, for the main part—the main part of our manufacturing resources, consider—and never lose sight of—the requirements and the pocket-books of this eighty per cent public.

We cannot, it would seem, overestimate these plain facts and their import.

Let the business trend any way it will, we must keep our eyes on the main issue—the rock-bottom issue—and that is the community theatre, its needs and its limitations.

THE motion picture is a wonderful medium. It is very elastic in expression. But its very elasticity makes it wander away, in our own eyes—and we take the tangent it goes off on as its principal or only function.

We may make great photodramas and spectacles—once a year, twice a year, twenty times a year. Very wonderful productions they may be, elevating the industry, successful commrcially, admirable from every standpoint.

We may, following blindly the lead of the stage, turn all or nearly all our output into photoplays.

We may rush recklessly into production expense, dazzling the public eye and mind with our expenditures and effects.

We may raise stars and their salaries to the nth power.

BUT what about the eighty per cent theatre? How about keeping its seats filled every performance every day at ten cents a seat? How about catering to all the family wants of all the homes of all the communities which in their aggregate represent a great majority of the millions who go each day to picture theatres.

THEY want a little art, a little literature, a little drama, a little travel, a little fun, a little news. They look upon the motion picture now as they look upon type. Its mechanical novelty is gone; so are many of its novel phrases.

They now expect this new medium to feed them with amusement and information. It is their modern day publication—with regular and frequent issues.

IN their community there's a motion picture theatre. It has become an established community centre with a more or less daily function. It is not an intermitting show place. They want to attend it regularly and often to see, feel, learn, laugh, and think.

The big show is an event with them. The star is one attraction; the drama is another. But these, however important in themselves, are but elements—not its whole. The whole is a changing program of composite interests—just like a publication—with something for the men, women, and children of the family circle.

IF the advertising announcements in the trade paper may be taken as a criterion the manufacturers to-day are not meeting this broad and basic demand of the motion picture. There is too much of the same kind of output, and much too little diversity. There is too much of one kind of policy.

And the reason for this, it strikes us, is that we are constantly thinking of the show place, the big show place particularly, and not enough of the true motion picture theatre—the community house.

It is—remember—eighty per cent numerous and strong.

VOL. XIV November 4, 1916 No. 18

It's Time Something Besides a Picture Shocked This Official

THE career of the picture "Purity" has been an astonishing one. Before it commenced its state rights career, while it was still at the Liberty Theatre, New York, early in August, many would probably have predicted infinite trouble for it at the hands of the state censors.

Difficulties the picture has had, but they have been easily overcome. "Purity" has been accepted by two censor boards—Maryland and Ohio—it has won a case in an Indianapolis court.

It has remained for the District of Columbia authorities to become panic-stricken at the approach of "Purity."

ABOUT ten days ago Tom Moore booked the picture for the Strand theatre, Washington. Relying on the record it had made in Maryland, where he had obtained the censor board's approval, Sidney Lust, the exchange man handling the picture, had made the rental without apprehension.

JUST before the day of the engagement, Moore was called by telephone from the office of Commissioner Brownlow, one of the authorities of the district. Mr. Moore was informed that his license would be endangered and that his own arrest might result if he ran the picture. There was nothing to do but cancel, and he did.

EVERY newspaper in the Capital city commented on the Commissioner's action, none favorably, some with unpleasant sarcasm.

Mr. Lust called on the Commissioner and reviewed the picture's record up to that time. At the conclusion of the talk he asked Mr. Brownlow to look the feature over, and make his own eliminations.

THE answer was a flat refusal to take any further steps in the case. He had not seen the film. He did not care to see it. He knew all about it. He would not reconsider his decision, and he did not propose to have the picture appear in Washington, no matter what the abbreviations.

WHATEVER the right of the matter until then, Commissioner Brownlow is now entirely in the wrong. As a public official, it is his duty to investigate such matters before he makes a decision. If he neglects to do so, he should be compelled to investigate afterward, by any legitimate means at hand, and render his decision in accordance with accepted ideas of duty and thoroughness.

* * *

MR. LUST has an excellent reason for appealing to the courts. It may cause him a little extra expense, a little delay that should have been unnecessary. But for the good of the business at large, for his own future comfort and that of his fellow exchange men in the Washington territory, he should call Commissioner Brownlow to account in a court of law.

He has been shocked by the picture. He needs another shock of a different sort.

A reversal of the Commissioner's decision and the granting of permission to show the picture, whatever the eliminations, will help to put the film business where it belongs in the minds of the Washington public.

An Ally in Spite of Himself

WE ask the reader's indulgence for this editorial. We realize that he is much more interested in an editorial on his own business than in one on ours. He has undoubtedly noticed that it is our firm custom to put our housecopy—dealing with our circulation and advertising progress—in our advertising pages and not here.

However we may, perhaps, be allowed, just once, an editorial directed at ourselves.

THERE is, on a contemporary publication, an editorial writer whose temperament, apparently, is exceedingly bilious. He barks at us constantly.

He worries excessively—over our circulation, our editorial and reviewing policy, our news matter, our advertising—over everything in fact we do. There are times when we gravely question his sincerity as well as his knowledge of the methods of better-class journalism. But on the whole he pleased us—every week.

AN exhibitor from Montreal told us the other day that he got his first realization of the true prominence of Motion Picture News from reading one of these editorial "barks," since which time he has read the "News" exclusively.

We doubt not but that we have won other exclusive readers by the same process. Hence this expression of thanks to our friend and coadjutor and this bit of self-congratulation.

Don't Miss It

THE interesting folder, prepared by the National Association of the Industry and setting forth the important utterances on censorship by President Wilson and Presidential Candidate Hughes, is an impressive document.

It should have a decidedly favorable effect upon newspapers and it ought to make every exhibitor who reads it want to join an association of his industry which is able, by one effective effort, to make federal censorship well nigh impossible.

Open Booking or the Program—Which?—IV

"The Principle of the Open Market Is Basically and Fundementally Right," Says William L. Sherrill, President and General Manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation—"Difficulty of Making Pictures According to a Time Schedule Is Important Factor in Marketing"

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, president and general manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, when asked to express his views on the question of open versus program booking, came out unqualifiedly in favor of the open market. During the course of the conversation he advanced two major arguments which are well worthy of consideration in any fair and just analysis of this very pertinent question.

"In the first place, I have been forced to the open market," said Mr. Sherill, "because of my disastrous experiences with several programs. This naturally forced me to go into the problem very carefully, and as a result I have come to the conclusion that the principal of the open market is basically and fundamentally right. As to whether it can be put into execution in this country at the present time, that is another question, but I believe that it can be.

"The difficult problem in any manufacturing business, whether it be boots and shoes or motion pictures, is the sale and disposal of the manufactured product. In every legitimate business the buyer is the final authority as to whether or not he wants and considers it advantageous to pay his money for the product which is offered him. Now, if this principle is right and holds true for other forms of industry, I can see no reason why it should not hold true for the motion picture.

"The theory has been advanced that the manufacture of motion pictures is different from any other manufactured product, that it is impossible to control the raw material, that it is impossible to constantly obtain stories of equal merit. This impresses me as downright foolishness. On my desk there is a row of books every one of which contains a story, which, if transferred to the screen, would hold an audience spellbound from the first showing of the title introducing the various characters to the last flicker of the projection machine. The right and proper kind of stories can be procured if the manufacturer is willing to pay the price. In the past they have not been willing to do this.

Pictures Should Be Sold on Their Merits

"Motion pictures should be sold on their merits in just the same manner that other products are sold on their merits. It is a case of producing a marketable article and then disposing of it through proper methods of salesmanship. Let us take a manufacturer of shoes just starting in business. He must first buy the land for his plant, build his factory, equip it with the most modern and up-to-date machinery, buy his raw material commensurate with the quality of product which he desires to turn out and then make that product. But with his completed product it is of no value to him unless he can sell it. This requires salesmanship.

"The motion picture is identically the same. After the product is obtained, after it has been completed, it is just a case of salesmanship to dispose of it. Salesmanship is another one of the things that have been lacking in the motion picture business in the past. The demand was so great that there was no necessity for it. Now the demand is not so great and its need is apparent to every manufacturer.

"There is another important point to be made in favor of the open market which I believe has been given too little consideration, and that is the difficulty in making pictures according to a time schedule. It stands to reason that the director who is making a picture with a release date in the back of his head, with the idea that it must be finished at a certain definite, specified time, cannot put the same degree of quality and efficiency into the making of that picture as he could were he unhampered by this consideration. Each picture is a separate thing unto itself, and nothing should be put in the way of the director that is going to hinder him in the least in putting the best that he has to give into the making of that picture and in getting the best that the people in his cast have to give as their contribution towards its general excellence.

"When a director starts in to make a picture he should be allowed to give all of his time and energy and ability to the making of that picture without the hindrance of worrying and fretting as to whether he was progressing fast enough or slow enough to meet a definite release date. It stands to reason that a picture made under these conditions is going to be better in every way, provided the director has the material with which to work, than one made against a time schedule.

"I honestly believe that a way will be found whereby every exhibitor in the country will be able to see every picture before he decides whether he wants to show it in his theatre or not. This principle is right, therefore it will evolve eventually. In my mind there is no question but what the manufacturer of a high standard of pictures can right now obtain more money for them by booking them on the open market than he can on the program. This at least holds true for the independent manufacturer today, and if it applies to his case it applies to all cases."

"Vitagraph Big V Comedy" Is Brand Ready November 13

The Pictures Will Feature Hughie Mack, Patsy de Forest and Their Company of Comedians—Direction Will Be Under Lawrence Semon

BEGINNING Monday, Nov. 13, the Vitagraph Company will release each week through the V-L-S-E organization a one-reel comedy, to be known as a "Vitagraph Big V Comedy."

These Big V comedies will feature Hughie Mack, Patsy de Forest and their company of comedians. The selection of this brand name as a better title than "The Hughie Mack Comedies," the name by which they have heretofore been known, was the result of a contest participated in by all the members of the Vitagraph Family. It is quite probable that other comedians of co-ordinate drawing power with Hughie Mack will from time to time be presented in these films.

The Big V Comedies will be written by Graham Baker and Lawrence Semon, and directed by Mr. Semon.

The Big V Comedies will be a regular part of the Greater Vitagraph program from November 13 on. There is to be nothing spasmodic about the release of these films; exhibitors may count upon a comedy of the utmost seat-selling quality being available each week.

These productions will have a novel, animated title piece and illustrated sub-titles, both of which will add much to their distinctiveness. They will be completed far in advance of their release dates, so as to avoid any diminution in the standard by reason of rush work. The first ten Big V Comedies in the order of their release are as follows:

"Walls and Wallops," "Jumps and Jealousy," "His Conscious Conscience," "Hash and Havoc," "Rah, Rah, Rah," "Help! Help! Help!" "Shanks and Chivalry," "Speed and Spunk," "Bullies and Bullets," "Jolts and Jealousy."

The release of the Big V Comedies through the V-L-S-E organization now makes it possible for an exhibitor to obtain a complete program from the one exchange.

The Big V Comedies will be advertised extensively in the trade papers from now on until their release date, and in adequate space thereafter. On each of the comedies, there will be available, one and three sheets, and a stock slide.

THREE FILM MEN BUILD CABIN

H. C. Drum, formerly assstant general manager of the World Film Corporation, and now with the Pathe organization, is spending a vacation in Los Angeles prior to returning East and taking up his new position. The sales and office force of the Pathe exchange have been having week-end parties at the mountain home built by B. E. Loper, Jr., Pathe cameraman in Los Angeles; George L. Haines, booker, and Ford Bently, shipping clerk of the Pathe Exchange.

The pretty mountain home was built by the three men five miles up the trail from Sierra Madre. It is hidden away in the canyon out of view from the foot trail, and is a very delightful retreat, extremely popular with Los Angeles exchangemen. The three men did all the work on the cottage themselves, and the building required more than a year's time. It bears the sign of the Gold Rooster, and in the furnishings of the house is a Pathephone and a Pathescope.

WANTS TO REPEAT ON TWENTY-FIVE WEEK SERIES OF KALEM'S "GIRL FROM 'FRISCO"

Repeat bookings on individual features are sometimes heard of, but it has remained for an enterprising Michigan exhibitor to plan a repeat run of an entire twenty-five week series. This unusual tribute to a picture's popularity has been paid to Kalem's "The Girl From Frisco," by Lester E. Matt, of the Strand theatre, Flint, Mich. With his order for the second run, Exhibitor Matt sent the following letter to the General Film office at Detroit.

"I wish to reserve the right on second run on 'The Firl From Frisco,' and would thank you to keep it out of any other theatre here until we have repeated on ourselves. I expect to run this series again after I have nearly completed the first run, and if anything happens that we change our mind I will pay you second run on the entire series."

Motion Pictures Are Now Produced in South Africa

Time May Come When Film Produced in the Land of the Boer and the Zulu Will Be Seen in the American Market, According to Ben Clinton

IT will come as a distinct revelation to most people in this country that the ubiquitous motion picture is being produced and shown in South Africa, and that in the near and immediate future it is possible that pictures made in this far off country will be shown on the American market.

Ben Clinton returned to New York last week from Johannesburg, where he has been engaged for the past nine months producing pictures for the African Film Productions, Ltd., which is practically owned and controlled by I. W. Schlessinger, who also owns and controls practically everything connected with the motion picture in South Africa. Mr. Clinton had some interesting information about producing conditions in the far off land of the Boers and Zulus. "The most serious obstacle we had to contend with," he said, in speaking with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "was the light. It has a peculiar yellowish tinge, which makes it very hard to obtain clear, distinct photographs. It can compare in no way with the light in Southern California for the brilliance and sharp contrast in the photography.

"It is impossible to take a picture after three thirty in the afternoon as the light gets so poor that it will not register to any appreciable extent, even on the most sensitive film. The pictures taken under this light look as though they were taken in a fog or haze.

"Picture production has not advanced by any manner of means to the high standard which is prevalent in this country. But while on this subject, I would like to say that I was very much surprised to find that picture production had not advanced more in this country, since I have been away than it has. It seems to have stood still. I expected to see great and wonderful things on my return and I find that they are not much different from what they were when I went away.

"The first pictures to be produced in South Africa were news weeklies similar in every respect to those shown in this country. They were called the African Mirror and carried good views of the news events of the country. We then produced a number of Zulu pictures and quite a number of single and double-reel comedies, using the members of the English stock company which we had for this purpose.

"All the mechanical work around the studio was done by Zulu workmen and this was a serious drawback, for although they are good imitators they have little creative and practical imagination, so that in getting them to do things it was often easier to do it ourselves. I believe the longest picture that was produced in South Africa was a four-reel feature, but most of the work was confined to the shorter length subjects.

"The scenery around Johannesburg is not conducive to either remarkable or beautiful travelogues, but in other parts of the country some beautiful and interesting views could be obtained, especially in the country round and about Victoria Falls."

Laemmle in Exchange Field Ten Years, Week of October 30

The First Program of Films Handled by Him Were Issued from the Crilly Building, Monroe and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, on November 1, 1906

THE week of October 30, 1916, marks the tenth anniversary of Carl Laemmle's entrance into the exchange field. On October 30, 1906, Carl Laemmle, then proprietor of the White Front theatre at 909 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, and of the Laemmle theatre at 1233 South Halsted street, Chicago, issued his first program of Laemmle releases and took the first steps in the incorporation of the Laemmle Film Service, which a year later had branches in Minneapolis, Omaha, Evansville, Memphis, Salt Lake City, Portland, Winnipeg, Montreal and Des Moines.

The first program of Laemmle films was issued from the Laemmle Film Service offices in the Crilly building at Monroe and Dearborn street, Chicago, on November 1, 1906. That first Universal Program listed two feature films, "Roosevelt in Africa" and "The Crusaders; or, Jerusalem Delivered." Whereas that first program had only two releases Carl Laemmle's Universal Program for the week of October 30, 1906, contains thirty-three full reels of film.

Carl Laemmle's interests have made tremendous strides in the past ten years, and the quality of his pictures has kept pace with the increase in output. From the beginning the "Laemmle Program" has been a moneymaker for exhibitors. It is an interesting fact that President Laemmle received this week a letter signed by forty-seven exhibitors in the Middle West, who have been using Laemmle Film Service for the last ten years thanking him for providing them with the opportunity to make snug little fortunes.

"We have been using Laemmle service since October, 1906," read the round robin letter, "and it has carried us through panics and business depressions. In normal times it has been a moneymaker beyond compare. Ten years is a long time in the picture game, but the Exhibitors Old Guard is ready right now to sign up for ten years more of Laemmle Service."

Novel Advertising Matter Issued for "Lumberlands"

THE new Signal Film Corporation offering, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," starring Helen Holmes, heroine of "The Girl and the Game," and a number of Mutual star productions, was announced to the trade by attractive eight-page booklets, 8 by 8 in size, which were enclosed in sepia envelopes bearing on the surface a reproduction of the bark of a tree across which was lettered in white, "Announcing a Big New Chapter-Play." In the lower left hand corner appeared a portrait of the star.

The cover of the booklet is a two-color reproduction of a huge log, on one end of which appears the announcement of the picture and the title. The back cover shows another long-end, on which appears the face of Miss Holmes, and the inside back cover contains a full list of the sixty-eight Mutual film exchanges. Each of the eight pages of the booklet is illustrated and printed in two colors. "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is described in detail on the first page, while other pages are devoted to E. Alexander Powell, the author of the story; Helen Holmes, the star of the production; J. P. McGowan, the director; a description of some of the earlier thrills of the picture; a mention of the nation-wide advertising campaign in newspapers and trade journals; the helps the exhibitor is offered in the way of the presentation of the fiction story by hundreds of newspapers, and a page devoted to the profit-making possibilities of the attraction.

The booklets and their enclosing envelopes were designed and written by the Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company of Chicago, the same firm which handled the advertising and publicity campaigns of several other motion picture serials.

"WORLD'S BASEBALL SERIES, 1916," SELIG, PROVES POPULAR

The Selig Company's special release, "The World's Baseball Series, 1916," in four reels, is proving very popular, according to reports from the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay branch exchanges. The pictures are strictly exclusive, the Selig Company being given exclusive rights to film the series at Brooklyn and Boston. All the exciting plays made by both teams, closeups of the star players, panorama of the grounds and other details make the games almost as entertaining and interesting as if one were seated in a box at the Boston or Brooklyn baseball grounds.

Pictures Other Than Pickfords from Artcraft

"It Seems to Be the General Impression That the Company Was Formed Merely for the Purpose of Releasing Films Featuring This Star," Says W. E. Green, President of the Corporation—"The Aim Is to Handle Other Headliners in Photodrama as Well"

W. E. GREENE, president of Artcraft Pictures Corporation, believes that an eroneous impression has been gathered as to the aim and object of the company. "It seems to be the general impression," said Mr. Greene, "that Artcraft was formed merely for the purpose of releasing the Mary Pickford pictures. This is not the case. The aim and object of Artcraft is to handle the headliners of motion pictures.

Artcraft will release any picture which measures up to the standard of quality which we have set and which we believe is worth the price which we ask for Artcraft pictures. This company was formed by men who believe that something must be done for the new class of motion picture theatre which demands big features for long runs. In other words we believe that there is developing throughout the country a class of big motion picture theatres for which there is no steady and regular product. It is our desire to supply these theatres with a product which will be profitable for the theatre, for the manufacturer and for the distributor.

"We believe that something must be done for the producer who wants to make masterpieces unrestricted by the limitations of the program system of distribution. At present any producer making pictures of this class is more or less forced to take his chances in booking them independently through the legitimate theatres of the country. We believe that there should be a market for productions of this class in the motion picture theatre and we are going to develop this market to the extent that the big pictures will be reserved for the motion picture exhibitor and not for the legitimate theatre.

"We are going to do this in a manner that is radically different from anything that has been tried in this country before. Our booking price for any picture which we handle will be based on the capacity of the theatre and according to the population of the city in which it is located. For a first run exclusive showing in New York we would naturally expect a much larger price than for a city the size of Atlanta, Ga. For a theatre the size of the Strand we would expect a much larger price than for one seating a thousand less.

Aggregate the Price for Each Territory

"In making our geographical divisions, however, we will set an aggregate price on each territory. Should the theatre in some one territory booking our pictures not have the capacity to pay the price we demand for a week's showing then the price will be divided over a showing of several weeks. In the same way we will give exhibitors protection wherever it is demanded. If an exhibitor wants our picture exclusively in his city we will guarantee to give it to him, not showing the picture in any other theatre in that city for an agreed upon length of time. The point that I want to get at is that the showing of our pictures in the various territories will be governed by local conditions, that we will make individual arrangements with the exhibitor so that both of us will be able to make the most money possible from the showing of our pictures.

"With this system in operation it is no longer necessary for the ambitious producer to pit his masterpieces against a system of territorial distribution or organization of expensive road companies that from their very nature are barred from the motion picture theatre where the real motion picture enthusiast goes for his amusement.

"Artcraft is prepared to give this producer his real incentive, obtain adequate presentation for his work and pay him sufficiently for it. At the same time the motion picture theatre is protected. The new big feature houses are able to obtain the kind of pictures that their policy requires and the smaller theatre may share in the profits by engagements of big productions that have been successful in the long run houses. Together we can keep our pictures out of the opera houses and combination theatres. This is the opportunity Artcraft gives to the exhibitor: To have and to hold the best in motion pictures.

"We cannot handle the ordinary picture and expect Mary Pickford will soon have a companion in the Artcraft circle."

Laemmle Makes Denial of Story in Trade Paper

President of Universal Says That There Is No Truth in Clipper Statement to Effect That He Intends to Head Another Company and That Spreckles Interests Hold "U" Stock

THE following official statement has been issued by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company:

"The New York Clipper in its issue of October 14, published a story headed 'Laemmle to Start New Film Company, Is Report.' I have no idea where the Clipper secured all the misinformation contained in the article in question, but it would be difficult to pack more mis-statements in a few paragraphs than was done in this case.

"It is totally untrue that I have any idea of heading any other organization.

"It is totally untrue that the Spreckles Sugar interests hold or have any interest in even a single share of Universal stock. Practically all of the Universal stock is owned by Mr. Powers, R. H. Cochrane and myself, with the exception of a few scattering shares among our close friends. Never has an outside dollar of capital been put into the company. The Universal's earnings have paid for all of its improvements and extensions all over the civilized world.

"It is totally untrue that our Fort Lee studio has caused trouble of any kind. Our plant at Universal City has been enlarged and systematized in such a way that it is much easier and less expensive to make pictures there than at Fort Lee. There was a time when the Fort Lee studio was absolutely essential to us. We are still using it, but only for one or two producing companies.

"It is totally untrue that we used only two or three scenes made at the Coast for our submarine picture 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.' I have not counted the scenes used, of course, but the picture would be far from complete without them.

"In fact the story is untrue from start to finish. I don't know who started it, but it must have been someone who desired to vent a pretty spleen against the Universal."

Philadelphia Turns Out for "Daughter of the Gods"

Packed Houses with the S. R. O. Sign Indicate the Keen Reception Given the Fox Production, Featuring Annette Kellermann, in Quaker City

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS" the big Fox spectacle made its bow to a large and appreciative Philadelphia audience on October 17, the same date that witnessed its New York debut. The Chestnut Street Opera House, the large Keith theatre, which for the last year or more has been given over to pictures when it was in use at all, was chosen by Fox for the run of the new picture. The packed houses which have marked the opening week showed the wisdom of this choice.

On the opening night the house was all sold out long before the doors were opened, while the line from the box office reached down the block. Many stood during the long performance. The same thing holds good of every performance this week.

All the daily papers gave favorable notices, praising particularly the lighting and scenic effects. Of course, the acting and stunts of Annette got their full meed of praise.

The picture is being handled just like any large road show. Manager Taylor of the Fox New York forces is in full charge here.

Large advance advertising was done in all the Philadelphia papers.

This feature is being kept up. No special decoration was given the theatre, other than flowers on the posts at the entrance.

The orchestra of twenty-five, led by Professor Dalby, gave a fine interpretation of the special music score.

All indications point to a long and successful run in Philadelphia for the "Daughter of the Gods." The Opera House is under the management of McCarthy & McSween.

TWO-REEL HUGHES PICTURE

The Republican National Campaign Committee are using as an aid in their efforts to elect Charles Evan Hughes to the presidency of the United States, a two-reel picture which they have entitled "A Reunited Party."

This picture has been made under the direction of Mortimer D. Metcalf who is known to film people throughout the country by reason of his past connection with the Picture Playhouse Film Company. Mr. Metcalfe is manager of a bureau connected with the Republican Campaign Committee that is in charge of the motion picture work. This bureau is distributing prints of the picture to such people as are finding use for them. This includes many exhibitors throughout the country. Special two-sheet and three-sheet posters have been prepared to accompany the prints.

HELEN SCHNEIDER IS MADE GENERAL OFFICE SUPERVISOR

Helen Schneider, who has for several years been private secretary to J. Parker Read, Jr., and who still remains in the same position, has just been appointed general supervisor of office details in the Thomas H. Ince "Civilization" offices in the Times Building, New York.

Pathe's "Grip of Evil" Gathers Strong Praise from the Trade

Many Complimentary Letters Are Received from Gratified Exhibitors in Different Sections Covering the Country from Coast to Coast

EXHIBITORS and newspaper critics throughout the country have been practically unanimous in their verdict that "The Grip of Evil," Pathe's master plot in fourteen chapters, is one of the most interesting, continued photoplays that has been shown in some time. Thrills, tense situations and interesting questions which have been commented upon by the foremost minds of America, are treated in "The Grip of Evil."

There are among the many letters received from exhibitors the following, which speak for themselves:

E. Sachs, manager of the Ye Drury Lane theatre, New York City, writes:

"I think it my duty to let you know what your wonderful series is doing for me. Never in my experience have I had the pleasure of running a continued photoplay, which after the third or fourth episode would have the same power of your 'Grip of Evil.' I have run five serials, and don't you think I ought to know what I am talking about? My advice to any manager is—book it. It's a Pathe, that's all you need to know."

E. U. Cadugan, manager of the Bon Ton theatre, Jersey City, N. J., says:

"Your series, 'The Grip of Evil,' has certainly been a money-getter for me, and the photoplay is almost perfection itself. Action is good and stars strong, and my business at the box office has surpassed all previous serial business. To show you how I feel toward Pathe serials you may book 'The Shielding Shadow.'"

Thomas G. Wiley, Acme theatre, Elmhurst, L. I., writes:

"When we arranged with your New York Exchange to book your series, 'The Grip of Evil,' we anticipated the usual good business which attends the showing of all Pathe serials at our house. The results, however, have surprised us. Our attendance exceeds all previous records, and our patrons have been so highly pleased with this series that we feel it our duty to express our gratification. Pathe nights are profit nights for us, and mean not only money for the box office, but please patrons in the meantime."

Scott Palmer, Savoy theatre, San Diego, Cal., writes:

"We find 'The Grip of Evil' to be a fine drawing card, and are showing it to capacity houses every night. It is the strongest of any of your series that I have run. Each episode seems to grow in popularity."

The manager of the Park Amusement Company, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"'The Grip of Evil' has been a hot weather life-saver for us. We played No. 5 last week, and the business we did on this showed such a favorable increase that we feel compelled to write you this letter of commendation.

"We also wish to state that on Monday and Tuesday, which are 'The Grip of Evil' nights, we have cut down our service one reel, so that we may be able to take care of our patrons."

N. A. Werffinbach, of the Southern theatre, Oak Park, Chicago, Ill., writes as follows:

"Owing to the fact that 'The Grip of Evil' is doing such an enormous business, we were forced to run a slide on our screen, requesting some of our patrons whom we could not seat to see the previous episode at my competitor's theatre, which is the Elmwood."

Exchangemen and Exhibitors Develop Stunts for "Gloria"

M. E. Smith, General Manager of George Kleine Exchanges, Finds Picture Men in Ohio Using Effective Publicity Schemes for Exploitation of Billie Burke Film

M. E. SMITH, general manager of the George Kleine exchanges, now distributing the product of Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay studios, has recently returned to Chicago from a swing around the circuit of exchanges, and reports tremendous business being done on "Gloria's Romance," featuring Billie Burke.

"Some exceptional advertising ideas are being developed by the exchange managers and the exhibitors," remarked Mr. Smith in speaking of his trip. "Down in Ohio I found one good sized town in which Billie Burke is on everyone's tongue. Inquiry developed the fact that the enterprising theatre manager, acting upon a suggestion of the exchange manager in that territory, has provided a number of grocery stores in the vicinity of his theatre with paper bags of the usual grocery store variety. On each bag is printed 'Trade at Blank's Grocery, and don't forget to see Billie Burke in 'Gloria's Romance,' every Tuesday night at the Pastime theatre.' Every housewife for blocks around is reminded of the feature attraction daily, and the result is plainly evident at the theatre, which is playing to capacity business on the nights that Billie Burke is presented on the screen.

"The handling of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay feature attractions are bringing many new customers to the exchanges for the Burke novel," continued Mr. Smith. "In one territory alone more than a hundred new patrons have been secured and of this number nearly half are using the 'Gloria's Romance' picture to complete their evening's program, running Billie Burke as a companion feature to one of the five-reelers from the regular Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service.

"The high class character of the Rupert Hughes novel is causing people who never ordinarily attend motion picture theatres to visit the houses showing 'Gloria's Romance'" explained Mr. Smith, in commenting on his visit to another territory. "Manager after manager comments on the number of new faces he finds among his regular customers, since he began showing Billie Burke. Undoubtedly, in this respect, the celluloid novel from the pens of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes is doing real missionary work for motion pictures as a whole, since it attracts to the picture houses people who never before have considered them worth while, and these people are so charmed and delighted with demure little Billie Burke that they look with favor upon a form of entertainment they always used to consider beneath their attention.

"In this way the Burke picture is building up a profitable business for theatre managers in communities of the very highest class, which the exhibitors will be able to hold in the future by booking only the highest class productions."

GOLDFISH NOT TO PRESENT GEORGE M. COHAN

It was reported last week that Samuel Goldfish, who recently resigned from the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, had plans under way for the formation of a new film company to present George M. Cohan as a screen star. Mr. Goldfish when seen by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS denied the rumor most strenuously and said there was nothing in it.

Many offers have been made George M. Cohan for his appearance on the screen, many of them running into fabulous sums it is said, but up to the present time he has refused all of them.

TRENCH CONDITIONS SHOWN IN "WAR BRIDES"

In making "War Brides," Herbert Brenon has staged a scene which will show the actual trench conditions of the fighting armies in Europe. This trench is four stories deep and in lieu of a battle scene the defending soldiers are shown undergoing a bombardment in which large shells, shrapnel, liquid fire and gas bombs are used.

It is a scene that will be unique in motion picture production. "War Brides" is practically finished with the exception of the cutting and assembling and the introduction of the subtitles. Its release date through Lewis J. Selznick will be announced in the near future.

All Star Selig Comedy Starts Week of General Films

Plenty of Drama, Mirth and Animated News to Be Found from All Companies for the Week of October 30 to November 4

GENERAL Film Service for the week October 30 to November 4 inclusive will begin with a Selig three-part comedy "Small Town Stuff" which, Selig's publicity department says, was made by an all-star cast, which included William Hutchinson, John Lancaster, Lee Morris, Ralph McComas, William M. Chapman, Harold Howard, Martha Mattox, Lyllian Brown Leighton and Irene Wallace. This comedy was made under the direction of Norval MacGregor. This will be followed by a one-reel Vitagraph comedy, "The New Porter." Selig-Tribune will then tell pictorially all the big events of the world. This will be followed by a Biograph one-act drama featuring Blanche Sweet, "The Goddess of Sagebrush Gulch."

An Essanay comedy in two parts, "The Beachcombers," presenting Harry Dunkinson and Virginia Bowker, will be the first picture screened the following day. Then will come a Kalem comedy "The Merry Motor Menders," with "Ham" and "Budd," and Ethel Teate and Henry Murdock furnishing the fun.

The following day after an Essanay split reel of Canimated Nooz Pictorial and scenic will come a Vim comedy, "Gertie's Garters," with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in the titular roles. Then will be seen the thirteenth episode of Kalem's "The Girl From 'Frisco" under the caption "The Son of Cain," presenting Marin Sais and True Boardman. "The Power of the Press," a three-part Biograph drama with Lionel Barrymore featured, will be the last picture shown that day. A reel of Selig-Tribune and a Vim comedy, "Twin Flats" with Babe Hardy and Kate Price, will comprise Thursday's offering.

Marguerite Nichols will be featured in a two-reel drama, a Knickerbocker Star Feature production, as the first of Friday's offerings, entitled "Jess of the Hill Country." This will be followed by the third episode of Kalem's "Grant, Police Reporter," in which George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby have the chief roles. Then will come a Vitagraph one-reel comedy, "The Game That Failed," with Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell as fun makers.

Still another comedy in a one-reel Vim, "In the Ranks" with "Pokes" and "Jabs" featured, will be shown.

An Essanay three-part drama, "The Heart of Virginia Keep" with Marguerite Clayton and Edward Arnold as stars, will be shown Saturday, November 4. This will be followed by a three-part drama from the Vitagraph studios "The Heart of a Fool," with Harry Davenport. This will be followed by an episode of "The Hazards of Helen Series" from the Kalem studios featuring Helen Gibson. The weeks offerings will be concluded by a Selig one part drama, "Tom's Sacrifice," with Tom Mix and Victoria Forde as stars. The scenario for this picture was written by Tom Mix himself.

An Efficient Distributor Makes Film Sell Well

"Preference Is Always Given to Man of Established Reputation in Marketing Ivan Productions," Says General Manager Chadwick. "And Results Are Always Satisfactory"

SPEAKING principally of methods of feature film distribution, Mr. Chadwick, general manager of the Ivan Film Productions said, recently:

"Much that is sheer nonsense is being constantly written and, sad to say, sometimes printed, on the subject of motion picture distribution. So much, in fact, that one advocating in print a sane, sensible method of distribution is more than apt to be considered revolutionary.

"Distribution is, of course, one of the greatest factors of this business, as it is of any business, and yet in motion picture work the matter of general ditribution is given much less attention than that given production.

"The capable, experienced producer who wishes to get his picture a worth while showing in New York, does not permit it to open at a Nickelodeon on Fourteenth street. Rather, he waits until he can get a house ideally situated to his purpose, one where his film may have the proper kind of an audience; the kind of a showing that will get the right kind of publicity for all of its future exhibitions.

"Thoroughly understanding this, I have never sought, when the distribution of an Ivan film play was being arranged, to secure merely the greatest possible amount of money for the production. Instead, there has been fixed an amount which represented the minimum sum that sound business policy would permit of our accepting for the film. This system has resulted in several applicants for the distribution in each territory. In this manner we have been able to choose, and preference has always been given to the distributor of established reputation, a man whom we know to be possessed of integrity and worth, and who we are sure is experienced in his field. And we, who have tried it, can say that the results of this policy have been intensely gratifying. The staff of exchangemen engaged in the exploitation of Ivan films, is second to none in efficiency and, we think, second to none in success.

"The life of the photoplay which secures proper, efficient distribution, is naturally far greater than that of the play produced and distributed to the exhibitors in haphazard fashion. That Ivan has succeeded in this direction, is evidenced by the fact that such plays as 'A Mother's Confession,' 'Concealed Truth' and 'A Fool's Paradise,' are still playing after many months on the screen."

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Charles Clary, former Selig leading man who for the past several months has been playing with Lasky, has been added to the William Fox stock organization.

ENID BENNETT BEGINS WORK AS TRIANGLE-KAY BEE STAR

Rarely has the initial work of a new film star aroused the interest that is being accorded the debut of Enid Bennett at the Triangle-Kay Bee studios in Los Angeles.

Little Miss Bennett is the special "find" of Thomas H. Ince, who was so impressed by her dramatic talent and photographic possibilities during his recent sojourn in New York that he urged her to return with him to California and become one of the stars of the Kay Bee Company.

Enid Bennett (Kay Bee)

The far-away settlement of York, in Western Australia, is the birthplacs of Miss Bennett. She is a blonde of the vivacious type, with clear, fresh coloring and wide blue eyes.

"It was through meeting Katherine Grey that I came to go on the stage," said Miss Bennett when asked about the incidents that affected her in choosing a career. "She was kind enough to help me secure an engagement as Modesty in 'Everywoman' within a few days. My work attracted the attention of Fred Niblo and Josephine Cohan and I became an ingenue in their company, appearing in 'Seven Keys to Baldpate,' 'The Fortune Hunter,' 'The Whip,' 'Excuse Me,' 'Broadway Jones' and other plays in their repertory.

"I feel that the most fortunate incident in my life, however, will prove to be my meeting with Mr. Ince in New York last summer, as I think motion picture acting is perfectly thrilling, and I am very eager to make good all the confidence that has been placed in me."

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 13, IS A LUCKY DAY FOR GRAINGER

J. P. Grainger, traveling representative for Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization" was a visitor in New York last week. He felt so good after selling the Cook County (Chicago) rights to the Amalgamated Theatre Corporation on Friday, October 13, that he couldn't resist the temptation to make a flying trip to the metropolis to spend some of his share of the profits.

NANCY BERRING IS THE STAR OF "PROTECT YOUR DAUGHTERS"

Nancy Berring will shortly be seen on the screen in a new five-part feature, "Protect Your Daughters." Miss Berring, although young, was prominent in the cast of many Broadway productions. She is pretty and well adapted for the part of the daughter which she is playing in this picture. The producers have succeeded in portraying to the public a sincere and powerful message on this timely topic. This feature, produced by the Radio Film company, 1446 Broadway, N. Y., will be released on a states right basis.

FASHIONS SHOWN BY FLORENCE ROSE AT BROADWAY THEATRE ON OCTOBER 26

Florence Rose, the well known fashions expert, is to give a private showing of the fashion motion pictures which she has produced for the Pathe Program, at the Broadway theatre on Thursday, October 26, at 10:30 A. M.

Miss Rose will have present six of the beautiful girls who pose in these films and they will appear upon the stage. Four of the most recent pictures which Miss Rose has made will be shown.

"Battle of Somme" Booked Two Weeks at Strand, New York

The Management of the Theatre Pays Highest Price for Any Picture Ever Put on There—Only Real War Picture, Endorsed by British Government, Packs House to Doors

"THE Battle of the Somme," the first realistic war picture that has come to this country showing the actual fighting from the first line trenches, has been booked at the Strand theatre for two weeks at the highest price ever paid for a picture by this theatre. The price at which the picture was put into the Strand was three hundred and fifty dollars per reel. When a theatre of the class of the Strand pays such an enormous price for a picture it must believe that it is worth it.

At the first showing on Sunday the house was crowded to the doors at every performance. The manager of the Strand said that it was the most enthusiastic audience that ever attended the theatre. At some of the most effective scenes the audience rose out of their seats and cheered. The strange part about it was that though the pictures are the official pictures of the English government there was fully as many present whose sympathies were with the Central Powers as with the Allies. During the showing of the pictures throughout the day there was not one single hiss.

This brings to light a most important fact. Though there are things in these pictures that were they shown in a fictional drama would cause an audience to get up out of its seats and leave the theatre, not one person left the theatre yesterday, which only goes to show that the public is interested in facts properly presented. One scene of the picture shows vast numbers of German dead and even this scene aroused no rancor in the hearts of the Germans present or German sympathizers. The horror of death was overwhelmed in their admiration for them as heroes.

It is scenes like these throughout the whole production that aroused the audience to the tensest pitch of excitement, and though there are horrors innumerable they are forgotten because of the heroism of the men of both sides.

These pictures were taken under the direct supervision of the British War Office. The two cameramen were lieutenants in the British army; their cameras were set up in the first line trenches and they were in the center of every bit of action that transpired during the first days of this the greatest battle of history. Charles Urban has been appointed the official representative of the British War Office to arrange for the showing of the picture in this country.

This is the first time that a war picture has been shown in the Strand theatre. It is the first genuine war picture that has come to this country and the fact that the Strand has booked it for two weeks is a hallmark as to its value.

Country Wide Advisory Committees for National Body

They Will Aid the Executive Committee in Its Work of Determining What Is Best for the Industry—Conference Held by Judge Tugwell and Walter Reynolds

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has put into operation plans for the organization of country-wide advisory committees to aid the executive committee in its work of determining that which is best for the industry. It has also set in motion plans whereby a full and complete census of the industry will be made. Conferences were held during the past week with Judge A. P. Tugwell, of the Exhibitors' Association, and Walter J. Reynolds, secretary of the Exhibitors' Association of Los Angeles and San Francisco, regarding the organization of an advisory committee there.

The legislative committee of the association under the leadership of William M. Seabury is gradually becoming organized so that the vast volume of work which it has ahead of it this winter can be carried on smoothly. As this is one of the most important committees of the association and one whose work will have telling effect it is necessary that this organization be most complete in every detail.

President Wilson is to prepare an expression on censorship a crystalization of his recent informal talk at Shadow Lawn to a committee from the association. Charles Evans Hughes has already done this and slides endorsing his candidacy are already being shown in the theatres. At the last meeting of the executive committee exhibitors were also instructed to indorse the candidacy of Samuel Seabury for Governor of New York state.

The association's active country-wide campaign against censorship calls for ready sinews of war, and it will soon receive substantial aid from the exhibitors, a division which has been successfully active in the field. At the last meeting of the Executive Committtee of the National Association, Lee Ochs, national president of the Exhibitors' League of America, announced that Local No. 1, the big New York group, will divide the profits of the ball to be given at Madison Square Garden on Thanksgiving Eve, giving 15 per cent. of the profits. It is estimated that this will amount to about $1,500 or $2,000. The National Association expressed its appreciation in a hearty vote of thanks.

MEETING IS SET FOR WHITMAN AND CALDER TO ANNOUNCE THEIR STAND ON CENSORSHIP

An enormous political meeting has been arranged for the purpose of permitting Governor Whitman and Congressman Calder, the Republican candidate for U. S. Senator from the state of New York, to address the motion picture exhibitors and definitely make known their position on censorship, local, state, and national.

The meeting will be held at the Rialto theatre, Tuesday morning, October 31, at 10.30. The theatre has been donated for this purpose by S. L. Rothapfel, the manager, as well as the services of the Rialto orchestra.

Lee Ochs, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, will introduce the Governor and Mr. Calder to the exhibitors. Though Governor Whitman is supposed to be against censorship, he has never definitely stated his position on this important question, and this meeting has been arranged for this purpose. Owing to the great importance of the subject it is urged that every motion picture exhibitor in the city and vicinity arrange to be present at this meeting.

INCE INCLUDES PATRIOTIC INSERTS IN "CIVILIZATION"

A large delegation of President Wilson's political supporters visited the Park Theatre, Columbus Circle, New York, on Saturday evening, October 14, where the Thos. H. Ince photo spectacle, "Civilization" is approaching its three hundredth presentation. The object was to inspect important additions to the picture made by Ince, who has incorporated the President's written endorsement of "Civilization" and scenes showing the President addressing the crowds at Shadow Lawn.

The picture ends appropriately with the American flag. These additions were made by Mr. Ince as a personal compliment to President Wilson for having by his policies preserved peace and prosperity.

MIX BEGINS "TWISTED RAIL"

Tom Mix, who has been out of the directorial harness while playing a role in the Selig Western feature "The Light of Western Stars," has again assumed command, beginning work on the three-reel Western drama "Twisted Trails," which is being produced at the Los Angeles studios. Bessie Eyton and Tom Mix will once more be seen as co-stars, this team being supported by a company that includes Eugenie Besserer, Al W. Filson, Vivian Reed, Will Machin and others.

VITAGRAPH'S WESTERN STUDIO IS A PLACE OF HUMMING ACTIVITY

As previously announced, Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno, Greater Vitagraph stars, are now in Hollywood, Cal., at the Western Vitagraph studios, engaged in producing "Money Madness," from the book by Hamlin Garland. This production is to be followed by six other adaptations from famous books and stories.

During the stay of these Vitagraph stars in California, William Wolbert will produce "Aladdin From Broadway," from the book by Fred Isham. "Captain Sunlight," from the novelette by Cyrus Townsend Brady, who wrote "The Isle of Regeneration," and other successes; "The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop," by Paul West; "Cavanaugh, the Forest Ranger," by Hamlin Garland; "The Magnificent Meddler," from the original scenario by Lawrence McCluskey, and "The King of Diamonds," from the story by Edward L. Ballou.

The Western Vitagraph players will be entirely at the disposal of Director Wolbert for the selection of his casts to support Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. William Duncan will be cast in important roles, as will Mary Anderson, Otto Lederer, Geo. Holt, Geo. Kunkel and Jack Moore.

In addition to these large productions, Director David Smith will continue to turn out single reel comedies and Broadway star features.

WILBUR AND MEANY ENTERTAINED BY LOCKWOOD AND MAY ALLISON

Crane Wilbur, accompanied by his personal representative, Don Meany, was entertained last week by Harold Lockwood and May Allison at the Metro-Yorke California studio. This marks the first meeting of the three well-known screen stars, who seem to have enjoyed themselves by recalling some particular picture, in which each of the trio had recently appeared.

During the time Wilbur Crane spent visiting at the Metro-Yorke studio, Henry Otto staged some spectacular scenes from "Big Tremaine."

STUDIO DIRECTORY MAKES COMMENT IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 16.

The arrival of the Studio Directory of Motion Picture News in this city has caused much comment among local photoplay fans. Not only were the newsstands practically sold out on the date of issue, but the local newspapers widely advertised the Directory by their favorable comment on it.

For instance: The Milwaukee Journal on its screen page Sunday devoted considerable space to a review of this issue, the first photoplay magazine to have received a notice of this kind from the Journal.

In part the Journal said:

"For the first time since the cinema industry started, a collection of printing valuable to followers of the screen has been published in the Motion Picture News Studio Directory, which 'tells all about the people of the screen.' The directory, which is issued under separate cover with the Oct. 21 release of the magazine, tells 'fans' all they desire to know about everybody they see on the screen, and a lot more they don't know. The book contains 2,000 biographies, done into 158 pages. The directory is arranged alphabetically, and according to the parts the characters play—leads, comedians, characters, and so on."

GAIL KANE IS UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF SHEER

Gail Kane, who has met with great success in several pictures released by the World Film Corporation, has left that concern and is now under the sole management of William A. Sheer, Inc. Mr. Sheer is now formulating plans for the next appearance of Miss Kane and they will be announced shortly.

"The Scarlet Oath," her latest vehicle, was given a great reception recently at Loew's New York theatre, New York City.

"Panthea" Is Vehicle Chosen for Norma Talmadge

Star Will Be Presented in a Role Different from Anything She Has Appeared in—This Picture Will Be Made Before "The Price She Paid"

"PANTHEA," the drama that created a furore in Europe and America when presented by Mme. Olga Petrova, has been chosen as the vehicle for Norma Talmadge in the first of her Selznick-Picture productions.

It had been announced that Miss Talmadge would be presented at the head of her own producing company in a film version of David Graham Phillips' novel, "The Price She Paid," but Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, succeeded last week in obtaining motion picture rights to "Panthea" and at once decided to use it for his initial presentation of the young film star.

In "Panthea" Miss Talmadge will be presented in a role different from anything she has heretofore attempted. The central character in this drama is that of a young Russian singer, who escapes to England under the surveillance of Russian secret police and an accusation charging her with being a nihilist. She marries an unknown but ambitious composer, and for his sake enters into a liaison with an elderly roue who has great influence in musical circles. The great climax of the story comes when Panthea's lover refuses to live up to his agreement with her and she kills him. The story closes with Panthea's arrest and extradition to Russia, where she is sentenced to Siberia.

The story of "Panthea," while tragic, is of intense dramatic character. Under the direction of Allan Dwan it is expected that Miss Talmadge will make a great success. The play from which this story has been taken was written by Bronckton Hoff.

The rights to "The Price She Paid" were purchased by Lewis J. Selznick from the Phillips estate for Miss Talmadge, and this story will probably be her second Selznick-Picture production.

Miss Talmadge will begin work on "Panthea" next week. Director Dwan has already engaged the greater part of the cast.

Miss Talmadge, the star, has been one of the successful Triangle players during the past year. Prior to her recent starring ventures for that corporation, she was steadily climbing up the ladder of fame for five years with the Vitagraph Company of America.

Among some of her most successful productions were "The Battle Cry of Peace," "Going Straight" and "Social Secretary" and "Fifty-Fifty."

Allan Dwan, who will have complete charge of all Miss Talmadge's future productions, during the past year added greatly to his prestige by being the director of four of the most successful Douglas Fairbanks pictures, namely, "Manhattan Madness," "The Habit of Happiness," "The Half-Breed," "The Good Bad Man."

FRANCES NELSON TO STAR IN METRO FEATURE PLAY BY HOYT

Frances Nelson, Metro star, soon will begin in the Rolfe studio on a new feature play which has been adapted for her by Harry O. Hoyt. The production will deal with a woman's reverie in a police station. John W. Noble will direct the production.

Born in St. Paul, Minn., her childhood spent in Boston, Miss Nelson's first stage experience was with Lew Fields in "The Wife Hunters." Next she appeared in stock in Philadelphia and in Indianapolis. Her last experience on the speaking stage, before going into motion pictures, was with Thomas A. Wise in "The Silver Wedding."

Her first motion picture experience was at the old Biograph in "The Chieftain's Sons," in which she was seen as an Indian girl. Among the pictures in which she has been seen are "Love's Crucible," "The Family Cupboard," "The Revolt," "Human Driftwood," "Sins of Society," "The Stolen Voice," "The Almighty Dollar," "The House of Fear," "Ambition," and "So Runs the Way."

GRAND CENTRAL PALACE FOR ACTORS' FUND FAIR

Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund, and Marc Klaw, chairman of the Finance Committee, have engaged the Grand Central Palace in which to hold a Grand Bazaar in behalf of the Million Dollar Endowment for the Actors' Fund of America. It is to be held there next May. Every interest concerned with the stage and the theatre is to be enlisted in behalf of the event—drama, opera, and moving pictures It is hoped that in connection with the other activities of the season, this sum may be reached. The Fund is spending over $70,000 a year for the relief of sick and disabled professionals. The Actors' Fund benefit performances will take place as usual. The Fair is to be managed by the Trustees of the Fund.

Silver Loving Cup Is Presented to Fox at Premier

Opening Night of "Daughter of the Gods" Is Celebrated by Gift of Wonderful Tiffany Creation About the Size of a Fat Lilliputian

As a tribute of esteem and admiration, a Tiffany silver loving cup standing two feet high and handsomely chased and engraved, was presented to William Fox at the premier presentation of his wonderful production, "A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann, at the Lyric theatre, New York, October 17. The inscription upon the cup ran as follows: "To William Fox—With best wishes for a world-wide success of 'A Daughter of the Gods' from Valeska Suratt, James Vincent, Max Reynolds and all studio employes of the Fox Film Corporation, October 17, 1916."

After seeing the opening performance of "A Daughter of the Gods," Willian Randolph Hearst said: "It is a wonderful picture, bigger than the biggest I have ever seen. Nobody should miss seeing it."

Talcott Williams, Dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, said of the Fox spectacle: "The most remarkable great film I have ever seen."

Among those who sent their best wishes for the success of "A Daughter of the Gods" were the following: Bertha Kalich, Adolph Zukor, Al Woods, Victor Herbert, Aaron Hoffman, Perez Huff, William Beeban, W. H. Tooker, A. Toxen Worm, J. J. McCarthy and Alf. T. Wilton.

Interest in "A Daughter of the Gods" was attested by the brilliant audience that gathered at the Lyric theatre at the premier performance, Tuesday night, October 17. Following are some of the prominent names represented on that occasion: Fire Chief Adamson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McCarter, Mr. and Mrs. Uzal McCarter, Col. Anthony Kuser, Mr. and Mrs. Luigi G. Albertieri, Mr. and Mrs. George Austin Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Church, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Eisele, Judges John R. Davies and John B. McAvoy, Saul Rogers, Gustavus Rogers, Irvin S. Cobb, Ethel Barrymore, J. Stuart Blackton, Charles H. Strong, Henry Alker, Assistant District Attorney James O'Malley, "Diamond" Jim Brady, Oscar Steiner, Joseph I. Green, Annette Kellermann, Norma Talmadge, Theda Bara, Mitchell H. Mark, Frederick Phillips, Alfred J. Talley, Thomas Dixon, the playwright, Amelia Bingham, Marguerite Clark, and many others.

After seeing "A Daughter of the Gods," people of the film world—including actors, directors and producers—will be interested in knowing some of the figures that were involved in its making. The actual cost of the picture was just in excess of $1,100,000. The total number of persons appearing in it was 21,218. There were 200 mermaids, 300 dancing girls and women of the Sultan's harem. The Moorish city cost $350,000 to build, and required three months' time for its construction. This was destroyed to make one of the "big scenes." After the city was built, eight months more were spent in making the picture. A special municipality was created and governed by William Fox on the island of Jamaica for the thousands of employees used in the filming of the production.

Trade Showing of "Witching Hour" in About Two Weeks

Story of the Play Taken by Augustus Thomas from the Novel, "Caleb Powers," Made Dramatic Success Decade Ago—Anthony Kelly Prepared the Picture Scenario

CHARACTERIZED by a cast including C. Aubrey Smith, Marie Shotwell, Jack Sherrill, Robert Conness, Helen Arnold and Etta De Groff, "The Witching Hour," the current Frohman Amusement Corporation's feature, is now complete and will be given a trade showing within the next fortnight.

The story of the play, as taken by Augustus Thomas from the book "Caleb Powers," made an intense dramatic production in its day in stage form, and was a popular hit. When Anthony Kelly was commissioned to construct the scenario, he demanded three weeks in which to complete it.

When the story was turned over to Director Irving, Mr. Kelly called it the very best scenario he had ever written.

For the production, Augustus Thomas was conferred with and watched the making of a number of scenes, and later projected the film. So highly pleased was he that arrangements are going forward for the producing of other Thomas productions by the Frohman Company.

Every effort of George Irving was concentrated upon securing dramatic effects.

Suspenseful situations lead up to a series of thrilling dramatic moments and punctuate the entire seven reels.

Aubrey Smith as Jack Brookfield, Marie Shotwell as Helen, Robert Conness as Hardmuth, and Jack Sherrill as Clay Whipple are burdened with the heavier dramatic work, with the bulk falling to Smith and Miss Shotwell.

The story of "The Witching Hour" contains, in addition to the theme of the hypnotic influence over a weak willed boy, of a cat's eye pin, worn by a nondescript gambler, three distinct romances. One theme consists of the love of the weak willed boy for a girl and her instilling in him the power of strength. The other theme is love of the honorable gambler for the boy's mother, and the third theme is the animal love of the district attorney for the girl, loved by the weak willed boy.

Twenty-eight principal characters are contained in the play. Seventeen elaborate interior sets, in which every care had to be taken to get just the proper effect.

"The Witching Hour" will be state righted by the Frohman Company, and will follow the former production "The Conquest of Canaan." It is thought that those who have secured "The Conquest of Canaan" will also have the control of the "Witching Hour," at least, the intention of Mr. Sherrill is to have one outlet in each territory and to develop and create only big productions of more than extraordinary interest.

SCREEN CLUB OF CHICAGO BUYS TRACT

The Screen Club of Chicago, composed of men and women connected with the motion picture business in all branches from owners of studios to dealers and artists and motion picture actors, has purchased a tract of several acres of land on the banks of Cedar Lake, Lake County, Indiana. The club plans to erect a $50,000 club house next spring, which will be used by members of the organization for a summer home, where they will spend the week-ends and such other times they are not actively at work.

The club house grounds, which extend to the edge of the lake, will be improved and the house and grounds will be used as settings for the taking of many pictures. It is planned to have the building completed as soon as possible next spring, so that it can be used during the summer by the members of the organization.

Morris I. Wohl, proprietor of the Cosmo theatre, Gary, is a member of the Screen Club and is enthusiastic over the Cedar Lake proposition.

LUMBER COMPANY PERMITS SIGNAL TO USE ITS PROPERTY

The Yosemite Valley Lumber Company has granted permission to the Helen Holmes Signal-Mutual Company which is filming "A Lass of the Lumberlands" to use the former's camps in the production of that fifteen-chapter serial. Also to use an inclined timber railway 8,700 feet long and laid on a gradient of 3,400 feet to the top of a range of mountains. Some spectacular and picturesque logging scenes will have this setting for background.

Artcraft Distributes Free Twenty-four-Sheet Stands

They Are Divided Between the Regular Stock Printing, Which Exhibitors Are Encouraged to Use Between Various Features in Pickford Series and Special Posters

FOLLOWING out its policy of co-operation, Aratcraft Pictures Corporation last week ordered the free distribution of several thousand 24-sheet stands to the exhibitors who have already booked the new Mary Pickford productions. These stands are divided between the regular stock printing, which the exhibitors are encouraged to use between the various features in the Pickford series and the special production posters prepared from artistic designs for the first release, "Less Than the Dust," on November 6.

This departure from the usual methods of handling accessories was the result of a chance meeting between Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, and Mary Pickford in Boston. Mr. Greene had just left New York, and was able to give the famous star the latest reports on the bookings obtained through the sixteen Artcraft exchanges. Her enthusiasm took the form of a desire to show some tangible recognition of the enterprising exhibitors, who have revised their policy in order to show the new Pickford productions. Before they separated Miss Pickford and Mr. Greene had agreed to share in a generous contribution of the posters designed to exploit star and production.

New evidence comes every day to the Artcraft offices to show what a campaign the Mary Pickford exhibitors are preparing to wage. James Keough of the Strand theatre, Minneapolis, has ordered one hundred 24-sheet stands, fifty 16-sheet stands and two thousand one-sheets to announce the coming of Mary Pickford and "Less Than the Dust" to the Strand on November 6. He intends also to distribute 50,000 heralds on every release.

Wells Hawks, Mary Pickford's personal representative in charge of publicity, is nearing the end of a trip that has covered practically every large city north of Dallas, and east of Kansas City. His work with the newspapers is expected to prove of valuable assistance to the exhibitor.

Spoor Plans Line of One and Two Reel Comedies

They Will Be Released Through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service—Harry Watson, Jr., Is First Comedian Engaged for the Work

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, is planning a line of one and two-reel comedies to be released on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

Harry Watson, Jr., is the first comedian to be engaged for this work. Negotiations practically have been completed for several other of the best comedians of the world to work for Essanay in putting out comedies for this service.

These comedies will be released through Essanay's new service, in order that exhibitors can readily book a short comedy to go with a feature making a complete program for those who desire it.

Mr. Watson already is at the Essanay studios in Chicago, and will begin work on the floor at once. The "Mishaps of Musty Suffer" will be continued. Mr. Watson has a brand new line of comedy.

Essanay scenario writers are busy working out comedies for this series which will carry definite plots with plenty of situations to be interpreted by Mr. Watson in his characteristically funny style.

Mr. Watson has had a long stage and screen career and needs no introduction to the motion picture public, being known from coast to coast. He was born in West Bay City, Mich., and began his stage career when quite young in "Me, Him and I." He was with Ringling's circus for a time, and later with the "Ziegfeld Follies" and with Anna Held in vaudeville.

He has recently been engaged with George Kleine in the production of the "Mishaps of Musty Suffer."

William Sievers Buys Missouri Rights to "Crisis"

He Will Give Private Showing in St. Louis in Latter Part of the Month—Cook Will Exploit Picture in Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee

WILLIAM SIEVERS, of the New Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, has completed the outright purchase of the William N. Selig ten-reel production, "The Crisis," from Sherman-Elliott, Inc., for the state of Missouri. The deal was closed last week in Chicago by Harry Sherman.

Mr. Sievers is preparing for a private review of the photo drama at St. Louis the latter part of this month, with press correspondents and various organization committees of Missouri. The price paid for "The Crisis" by Mr. Sievers is said to exceed that paid for any production today.

Mr. Sievers will open "The Crisis" at one of the best theatres in St. Louis for an indefinite run.

The State Rights Company of Vicksburg, Mississippi, owned by A. B. Cook, A. H. Gross, and R. E. Kennington, have purchased outright "The Crisis" for the states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Mr. Cook announces he will open shortly in Vicksburg and will show "The Crisis" as a road production with a full orchestra. He is ready to hear from all first-class exhibitors for booking. His address is the State Rights Company, Vicksburg, Mississippi.

CARMEL MYERS IS GRIFFITH PROTEGE, RECENTLY DISCOVERED BY THE PRODUCER

In the person of Carmel Myers it is believed that D. W. Griffith has discovered another potential star of the silent drama.

The daughter of Rabbi and Mrs. Isadore Myers of Los Angeles, Miss Myers met Mr. Griffith during the production of "Intolerance." Her father is an expert on Hebraic archeology and was one of the chief authorities consulted by the famous director for the Jewish historical scenes in the big spectacle. The unusual Oriental beauty of the girl attracted Mr. Griffith's attention, and upon testing her aptitude for dramatic expression, he found her possessed of much latent talent. A recent high school graduate in her early teens, Miss Myers has only had a few months' experience in motion picture work, playing minor roles at another studio.

Carmel Myers (Triangle-Fine Arts)

Her parents have now granted her permission to become a member of the Triangle-Fine Arts Company, under Mr. Griffith's supervision.

INCE DARK ROOMS MAKE LIGHT, CLEAR PICTURES

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

The first week's operation of the mammoth laboratory at the Ince Culver City studios, has brought out the fact that it is in every way up to the expectation of the management. The dark rooms will have a capacity of 100,000 feet of negative, and 300,000 feet of positive per week. There is sufficient storage space for more than a carload of chemicals required for the laboratory work, and Superintendent A. Brandt will have a staff of forty-one people. The big laboratory is divided into seventeen rooms, and almost as many different departments.

The completion of this building marks the end of the building activities at the Kay-Bee studios. All that remains now to complete the big plant is the laying out of lawns, building additional fences and other unimportant work.

Selznick Makes Contracts with Two Winners of Contest

Lucille Zintheo Is from Spokane, Wash., and Aletia Marton Is from Dallas, Texas—Latter Contestant Is Cast for "Panthea," with Norma Talmadge

TWO of the eleven winners of the national "Beauty and Brains" contest, conducted by The Photoplay Magazine, have been engaged on three-year contracts by Lewis J. Selznick, Lucille Zintho of Spokane, Wash., and Aletia Marton, of Dallas, Texas.

The eleven winners of the contest, which was conducted for the purpose of selecting the prettiest and cleverest girl aspirant for laurels as a motion picture actress, in each section of the United States, were escorted recently to New York, where the various film companies tested their abilities and made selections. First choice was naturally given Mr. Selznick, as one of the prime movers in the contest, and after film tests of all the girls taken by Albert Capellani, director general of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, and Herbert Brenon, the two girls from the far Northwest and Texas were decided upon.

Miss Zintheo is a decided brunette with remarkably expressive eyes and a brilliant smile. Although hailing from Spokane, she is a native of Detroit, Mich., having been born there just twenty-one years ago. She has been living in Spokane for eight years, and completed her education in that city.

Several years ago she became interested in motion pictures, and determined to become a film actress. The opportunity came when The Photoplay Magazine's contest began. The test of "beauty" for the contestants lay in their photographs, while the "Brains" part of the contest was supposed to be judged by the character of the letter they wrote the magazine giving their reasons for believing that they would be successful on the screen.

Miss Zintheo was one of the hundred that were selected in this manner. Emissaries from the magazine then went forth and visited each one of these applicants in person, the result of these interviews determining the final selection of the eleven winners and the little brunette from Spokane was among the joyous ones who received the first information of their success.

Miss Zintheo is making her first screen appearance in a minor part of Herbert Brenon's presentation of "War Brides," but will have a more important role in his next production starring Florence Reed in "The Queen Mother."

Miss Marton is the opposite type from Miss Zintheo, being a stately blonde. She is a native of Dallas, Texas.

Miss Marton will make her screen debut in the first of the Norma Talmadge productions, for Selznick pictures, a screen version of the drama, "Panthea."

Griffith Makes "Day with Governor Whitman"

As Testimonial to New York State Executive for Vetoing Cristman-Wheeler Censor Bill, Producer Films at His Own Expense Picture for Campaign Aid

AS a testimonial to Governor Whitman who last spring vetoed the Cristman-Wheeler Motion Picture Censorship Bill, which would have worked untold hardships on producers, distributors and exhibitors of motion pictures in New York State, David W. Griffith at his own expense and gratis, has produced a one-reel film entitled "A Day with Governor Whitman."

In addition to spending several days himself in Albany Mr. Griffith took with him to the state capital his personal artistic staff which he brought on from the West. He also has circularized the exhibitors of the state and sent broadcast free slides for screens in an effort to materially aid the Whitman campaign for reelection. The plan for the distribution of the Griffith-Whitman film was conceived by John C. Flinn of the Famous Players-Yasky Corporation working in co-operation with Thomas Hanley of the Whitman Committee.

It is the purpose of the movement on the part of the motion picture industry represented in New York State, that every exhibitor in the state, numbering about 2,000, should have an opportunity between now and Election Day to show the Griffith picture on his screen one or more days. The presidents of the big distributing companies have notified their exchanges to obtain prints of sufficient number to efficiently cover requests from exhibitors on their books. Fifty one-sheet posters will accompany each print sent to exchanges to be given away free to the exhibitors using the picture. Exhibitors throughout the state are able, under the plan of distribution as outlined, to obtain their prints direct from D. W. Griffith, Room 605, Hotel Manhattan, New York.

In the organization of the plan for printing and distributing, the following film companies, in addition to others, gave their unqualified support and enthusiastic co-operation, including Metro Pictures Corporation, Eclipse Studio, on behalf of Jules Brulatour; International Film Company, Pathe, Paramount Pictures Corporation, Famous Players Film Company, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, Pallas Pictures, Triangle, Universal, Mutual, World, Fox, V-L-S-E and General Film.

Sam Bullock Tells Us What's the Matter with Ohio

Mr. William A. J. Johnston,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
New York City.

Dear Sir: On July 16, 1912, at the State Convention the idea of State Censorship was first broached openly, and discord in our ranks started at once.

On January 21, 1913, a copy of the proposed law was read at the Columbus Convention, and two months later it became a Buckeye statute.

The Cleveland opponents of the idea prophesied two things upon its passage: First, An increase in film service in excess of censorship fee expense. Second, A decline in patronage due to mutilation of pictures. How does the result compare with the prophecies? The answer is that the prophets failed to hit the mark—they could not prophesy the future effects of the censor law upon the Ohio exhibitor's business to be half as disastrous as it has turned out to be. The added expense to the film owners has been a tremendous amount and the exhibitor has paid, and is now paying, every cent of it and more besides. The added expense for censorship fees alone is but a small item of about $65,000 since 1913, and at least three times that amount can be figured in as the price that Ohio exhibitors have paid for the honor of originating this "fool" idea.

What they have paid, due to a decline in patronage, would stagger a mathematician to calculate.

People will not buy books with whole pages torn out, neither will movie fans stand for the Ohio "jumps," such as the writer's patrons had to witness in a three-reel comedy recently where 1,000 feet were missing.

"We must get a censor law and get our friends on the board" was the bait held out in January, 1913, and we have been praying to the Lord to save us from our "friends" ever since, but the politicians are on the job, and Ohio is fast in their clutches, without any hope of relief apparently. Election Day is two weeks' distant; both candidates for governor are ardent advocates of censorship, and nothing, absolutely nothing, has been done to assist us in Ohio.

The way to kill censorship should be to kill it when it started—in Ohio, by applying the "Brady plan" to the few men responsible for its existence. They are again aspirants for political favors. To kill them off would be a fine illustration of the "power of the screen" for the benefit of the Solons who will have the power to repeal the law next winter. Concentrated effort on about three men would have done this under the "Brady plan." The effect of such action would be noted all over the United States. A repudiation of the censorship idea in its birthplace would save incalculable expense in other States; would help repeal the few laws elsewhere and impress Congress so emphatically that the noble art of cinematography would be unmolested for ever.

As the writer stated at the Chicago Convention "censorship is the infantile paralysis of the motion picture business." Knowing where the germ is, why hesitate to apply the remedy, then fumigate all other localities and depend upon your "safety first" patrons to keep the pictures "clean."

As positive proof that censorship produces pictorial filth and disease, I append the following clipping (from "Ohio M. P. Bulletin," October 7) showing the attitude of one of the original advocates of our present censor law. He is the leading exhibitor at Columbus.

"Max Stearn, owner of the Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio, is trying to reform the film business. He has sent out cards of protest against the big star feature distributors and now makes a statement in a Columbus newspaper that he will introduce a resolution at the next exhibitors' meeting to ban unsavory films from that city."

The funny thing about this is that the State censors' chopping block is in Max's building. Another funny thing is that Max is now making speeches in favor of National Legalized Censorship after three years of the "real thing" under his own roof.

Where movie men must pay a tax
To see "Art" butchered with an axe,
Where bathing girls create a shock,
And die upon the chopping block,
Where old Bill Shakespeare, known to fame,
Shares the same fate with poor Mark Twain,
Where heaps of gory corpses lie
Victims of the quick censorious eye,
Where oft is heard, "Lay on Macduff,
And damned be he who cries enough!"

I hope I have answered your query, "What is the situation in Ohio?"

SAM BULLOCK.

Cleveland, October 18.

Officers for St. Louis Exhibitors' League Are Elected—Mogler Is President

THE annual election of officers of the Theatre Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, was held at the weekly meeting of the League last week at the Benoist Building, where the association has its headquarters.

Joseph Mogler was elected president of the association for the ensuing term. Mr. Mogler is proprietor of the Mogler theatre at Ninth and Bremen streets, and has always taken a keen interest in the betterment of the picture business, from an exhibitor's standpoint in running a clean family theatre. He is one of the pioneer exhibitors of St. Louis, starting in business in a tent, and to prove his business ability, he can now claim as his own one of the most modern and prosperous motion picture theatres in his section of the city.

Fred Wehrenberg of the best theatre on South Jefferson avenue, is the new vice-president. Mr. Wehrenberg is the man who recently disposed of a very profitable grocery store and meat market in order that he might devote all his time to the exhibition of pictures.

Frank L. Root is financial secretary. Mr. Root owns the Eagle theatre, a small but profitable house on South Broadway.

John H. Gentner, owner of the Retina theatre, on Market street, is treasurer. Mr. Gentner was one of the promoters of the association, and was the first president of the Exhibitors' League.

O. H. Damon is secretary, and F. A. Klockenbrink sergeant-at-arms. The officers will be installed in their new duties at the next meeting of the League.

JERSEYITES ORGANIZE LEAGUE

On Tuesday, October 17, an Exhibitors League of Passaic County, N. J., was organized by Dr. Hespe, president of the New Jersey State League. The exhibitors of the county believed that by organization among themselves they would be better fitted to enter the State League. At the conclusion of the meeing a banquet was held at the U. S. Hotel, Paterson.

The following exhibitors attended: Max Gold, William Anderson, Hy Fleigh, David Marks, Peter Johnson, Frank Zimmerman, Alfred Murray, and Harry Hecht, and Bernstein and Polack. Anderson was elected president; Zimmerman, vice-president; Marks, secretary; Gold, treasurer; Fleigh, Johnson, Hecht and Murray, membership committee; Anderson, Marks and Zimmerman, by-laws committee.

ALAMEDA, CAL., LEAGUE DISCUSSES DEPARTURE OF STARS FROM REGULAR PROGRAMS

At a recent meeting of the Alameda County Exhibitors League held at Oakland, Cal., all business was shelved for a full discussion of the question arising from the taking of stars from the regular service of releasing companies and releasing productions featuring them through separate concerns. This organization went on record as disapproving this tendency and resolutions indicating its stand on the question were passed and copies sent to leading producers.

It is the plan of the members of this league to refrain from booking productions handled in this manner, although no definite agreement along this line has been made. Another meeting of the organization will be held at an early date when the question will again be discussed. This League is the only one in California, as far as is known, that is holding regular meetings and which has the largest exhibitors in its territory enrolled as members.

SAN FRANCISCO EXHIBITORS ON VERGE OF RAISING PRICES

In case a definite agreement can be reached by the managers of the large moving picture houses in the business district of San Francisco a general advance in admission prices will shortly be announced. This proposition has been seriously discussed and a five-cent raise has been tentatively agreed upon, but no date has been set for placing the new prices in effect.

Exhibitors state that their expenses have increased at an alarming rate during the past year, not alone for service, but for almost everything else used by them. Such items as tickets, carbons, programs, newspaper advertising and general repairs now cost much more than formerly and these increased expenditures, with no increase in receipts, have become a serious matter. Several of the leading exhibitors have met to talk the matter over and other meetings will be held shortly in order that a definite conclusion on the proposition of higher admission prices may be reached.

THE STRAND, COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA., IS OPENED BY GILINSKY

The Strand theatre, Council Bluffs, Ia., opened on Thursday, October 12, with packed houses to see Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law." Secretary Harry Crowl and other officers of the Chamber of Commerce were present at the opening, the special guests of Managers B. Gilinsky and Jake Schlank. The Strand, formerly the Dohany, a "legitimate" house, has been rebuilded, redecorated and re-arranged at a cost of $40,000. A special study was made of the projection, which is now practically perfect. An orchestra of five pieces plays all the time.

Upholstered chairs have been put in place of the regulation narrow seats, which were removed. Seven emergency exits are provided to insure quick emptying of the building. The lobby is lined with beveled mirrors, studded with lights. The theatre seats 1,200 people.

Exhibitor Robinson "Speaks Right Up in Meetin'"

MOTION picture films that are now being furnished to exhibitors are without much of the drawing power that they formerly contained. The people, these latter contend, are anxious to have the manufacturers get away from the impossible scenes that they put in pictures and give them more of real life. A very interesting and timely criticism is contained in a statement furnished for MOTION PICTURE NEWS by H. L. S. Robinson, of Robinson Bros., who operate a theatre bearing their name in Bedford, Va.

"People want something new, and there is nothing new in motion pictures any longer," declares Mr. Robinson, "or," qualifying his first statement, "rather, the producing companies do not produce anything new that has a direct appeal to a universal emotion that is felt by people in their everyday life, or if they do happen to hit on anything of the sort, it is so much overdone that the basic appeal can not be recognized and felt. It is my opinion that people have now reached the point where they would like to be shown the things they look at every day all around them, but which they do not see, not being able to be in more than one place at a time.

"The producers have got to get down to the common, everyday things of life in their plays, because people are tired of looking at nothing but stars, beautiful settings, farmers that habitually have a straw in their mouths and chin whiskers sticking out under the straw, Dutch comedians in impossible costumes, stealthy, furtive-eyed villains; heroines who smoke 'tailor-made' cigarettes and drink cocktails and highballs, and immaculate, virtuous heroes that half the men in the audience want to kick.

"The public will not come back to the motion picture until it is changed so as to be just plain human in its appeal, until there is something in it that reminds a man of his friends, his neighbors, his own life experiences, or himself."

They Are Getting Ready for Another Big "Dancefest" in Boston—Going to Be There?

PREPARATIONS for New England's "greatest indoor event," the ball, are under full headway. The last meeting of the Exhibitors' League resulted in the election of these officers for the event: Samuel Grant, chairman; H. I. Wasserman, secretary; H. A. Gilman, treasurer, and A. F. Washburn, assistant treasurer.

Composing the executive committee, in addition to these, are H. S. Asher, G. M. Clark, H. F. Campbell, R. W. Drown, Leon Dadmun, Jos. Di Pesa, F. J. Howard, E. H. Horstmann, P. F. Lydon, R. D. Marson, S. M. Moscow, H. Rifkin, and T. Spry.

The ball has always been a tremendous attraction in Boston, there being no building here large enough to hold the crowds who would like to attend. The arena, where it is to be held on November 22, holds 6,000, but more than that number were turned away last year. In fact, it has become a New England institution.

The executive committee has limited the number of stars representing any one firm to four, and producing film enterprises are now making arrangements to have favorites appear.

General Manager Samuel Grant may be communicated with at the headquarters of the Exhibitors' League, 127 Pleasant street, phone 56,794 Beach. The New York headquarters are at room 904 Columbia Theatre building, 701 Seventh avenue.

The rooms of the Exhibitors' League, at 127 Pleasant street, will be kept open for the convenience of visiting exhibitors from all over New England, it is planned, and stenographers, trade papers, etc., will be available. President Horstmann of the league will be pleased to meet exhibitors there.

Exhibitors of Cleveland Make Common Cause with Schwartz in Fight with Musicians' Union

AN unusually large and enthusiastic meeting of the Exhibitors' League, Cleveland, Ohio, was held at their rooms in the Republic Building last week, due to the general interest aroused by a trial case which is at present being attacked by the Musicians' Protective Association.

Several years ago when Ernest Schwartz opened the Erie theatre on Woodland avenue, he employed a union orchestra at a very heavy cost, with the understanding that if the expenditure did not prove to be warranted, the union orchestra would be withdrawn in favor of some music less expensive, and more in accord with the receipts of the house. In time it proved necessary to do this.

Now the musicians' union is boycotting the Erie theatre and passing cards urging patrons to seek their entertainment elsewhere. In spite of the fact that the Erie theatre is located in a union section, in the heart of the disrict where the garment makers dwell, Mr. Schwartz has defied the union, and refuses to concede to their demands. The exhibitors all express themselves in sympathy with Mr. Schwartz's attitude, to the extent of passing a motion to the effect that each member of the League be assessed ten dollars to make up a legal fund for the purpose of taking such necessary steps to protect exhibitors against the operators' union, the poster union and the musicians' union.

HERRINGTON SENDS CALL TO WEST VIRGINIA EXHIBITORS—URGES REVIVAL OF LEAGUE INTEREST

Fred J. Herrington, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, will attempt to revive the West Virginia Branch of the organization. He is shortly to leave Pittsburg on a trip through West Virginia and will call a meeting of the Wheeling Motion picture men for the purpose of getting them together and telling them of the advantages of the league and what good will come out of them getting their organization started again.

For some months the interest of the moture men of West Virginia has lagged and they have not taken the interest in the work of the league which they should. They have been lax in attending the meetings and in some instances when meetings were called they paid no attention, with the result that the meetings were not well enough attended to conduct them. The work of the league has gone by default.

He has sent out a call to the exhibitors of Wheeling. The letter sent out reads as follows:—

Fellow Exhibitors of Wheeling and vicinity:

You are urgently requested to attend a meeting of exhibitors of Wheeling and adjacent territory to be held at the McLure House Sunday, October 8, at 2 P. M., for the purpose of reorganizing the West Virginia branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which has for its object the improvement of the picture business generally.

The motion picture exhibitor of to-day is waging a losing battle against a host of enemies worse than any business ever before has ever been called upon to contend with. An unjust censorship, a discriminating quarantine, the low prices of admission, the increased cost of films, these and many other conditions are sapping the life from the theatre business. These are conditions we must contend with, but is that the end of our persecution? We don't know. Only in concerted action may a remedy be found.

What are you doing for help? We are fighting with our backs to the wall. Not for our individual interests but for the good of the industry. Are you going to join us? Are you going to let us help you place your business on a profitable basis? Or are you going to scoff and sneer on account of previous failures of an exhibitors' league? We don't care if your house is a large one or a small one. Our fight is a common one and in order to come out victorious we must stand united.

Come to the meeting and hear and take part in the discussions which will result in improved business conditions.

Yours truly,

(Signed) FRED. J. HERRINGTON.

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

ALABAMA—Ensley: Joe Steed is doing nicely at the Belle theatre. D. S. McEachern reports good business at the Franklin theatre.

ARKANSAS—Stuttgart: The Majestic, formerly the Stuttgart Opera House, is operated by Smith and Longrader. Williams Brothers now own and operate The Wigwam. H. F. McFadden has succeeded E. M. Ahlfeldt at the Dell theatre.

CALIFORNIA—Chico: The Lyric theatre was reopened on the evening of September 29, having been closed for several weeks on account of fire damage. The projection room has been entirely rebuilt, new machines installed, the house painted inside and out, the entrance changed and the ticket booth enlarged.

Modesto: A. A. Berard, of San Francisco, who recently took over the Modesto theatre, is now in personal charge of the house. He plans to present some road shows during the winter season, but moving pictures will be featured most of the time. A. A. Richards, the former owner, plans to take a vacation of several months before engaging in business again.

Colusa: The Popular Gem theatre is now being operated every evening and arrangements for Paramount featured for three nights, and Greater Vitagraph features for three nights a week have been made.

Solinas: The equipment of the Liberty theatre, including four hundred chairs, projection machines and electrical apparatus has been disposed of by Manager Frank Vesely, who recently consummated the deal in San Francisco.

Berkeley: Architect James W. Plachek is working on plans for a large moving picture house to be erected by Williamson and Bradshaw. It will be managed by A. H. Moore when completed.

Lincoln: B. S. Logan is planning to sell the Photoplay theatre, near the Post Office and remove to Portland, Ore.

Santa Cruz: O. K. Westcoatt has enlarged his house, added to the personnel of the company, purchased new machines and changed the name of the theatre, which is now known as the Grand.

Orland: W. R. Claman has opened the Orland theatre. This town is in the heart of the Orland Government Project.

Fresno: The city has purchased a Powers Cameragraph No. 6-B for use in the Longfellow School.

San Francisco: The State Development Board has purchased a Powers Cameragraph No. 6-B for use at the Ferry Building, the machine having been purchased through G. A. Metcalfe.

Modesto: A. Minusa Gold Fiber Screen has been installed at the Star theatre, by its owner. W. B. Martin.

Lindsay: L. W. Willis has opened the new Lyric theatre, and has installed a Powers Cameragraph No. 6-A.

Los Gatos: Two Powers Cameragraphs No. 6-B have been sold by G. A. Metcalfe of San Francisco for installation in the new theatre to be opened by M. Black, in a short time.

Santa Rosa: The splendid new theatre being erected for C. W. Reavis, formerly of Berkeley, will be opened about the first of November.

Grass Valley: The Crystal theatre has had its name changed to the Pavilion. There is also the Auditorium.

Los Gatos: R. A. Edmonds has sold the Feature House to a Mr. Hamilton, and E. L. Chase has sold his Photoplay theatre to R. A. Edmonds.

CANADA—Ontario: A. Giachino, the first man to locate a picture theatre in Cobalt, is now in association with his partners constructing another house in that place. It will be thirty by a hundred feet with a nineteen foot ceiling. The screen will be at the same end as the entrance, an inclined floor running to the rear of the building, where the projection booth will be built. In March, 1910, Mr. Giachino opened the Bijou theatre in Cobalt, and has run it regularly ever since. In 1914, he and his associates built the Grand Opera House in the same municipality. Both these ventures have met with success.

Vancouver: The Cedar Cottage theatre has just been reopened, under the management of J. W. Roberts, who is using Paramount pictures. The opening of the new Broadway theatre has been delayed, owing to the fact that the seats for the house, which were ordered in Eastern Canada, have not yet arrived.

Toronto: Two very interesting pictures have been screened in Toronto during the past week and have caused considerable comment. They are the Official Pictures of the British Government depicting scenes on the Somme front, and "The Common Law," the new Clara Kimball Young feature. The former pictures were shown at the Regent and the latter at Loew's. Widely divergent opinions were expressed on both pictures. It is understood that several bookings have been arranged. The Opera House in Brockville, which has been the scene of many changes of fortune, is finally being offered for lease or sale in the daily papers in Toronto. Brockville is an active little city. Running a picture theatre, in a Military Camp, presents many trials not experienced by an ordinary exhibitor. When the big Camp Borden in Ontario was first started, Stanley Adams, a prominent Toronto musician, secured a concession for a theatre inside the Camp bounds. It was intended to build a house but unfortunately time was so pressing that a large tent had to be erected. This summer has been exceptionally hot in Ontario and with the temperature hovering about 112, the operator in the booth handled his machine clad only in a short bathing suit. Many times the tent blew down and a climb up a fifty-foot pole was necessary to repair damage, but in spite of all these things the showing at the camp was remarkably successful, and Mr. Adams will continue the theatre next summer when the troops are again quartered there. This time, however, in a building properly constructed. Mr. Adams' diplomatic handling of the troops was responsible in a large measure for his success. For instance, men who were hard up were allowed to buy tickets on credit, the various amounts being deducted from their pay by the sergeants of their companies.

Saskatoon: Manager Frank Miley of the Daylight theatre is completing a new house at the cost of $125,000, which will be one of the finest in Western Canada. An exclusive photoplay house, which will seat over 1,200 people. The building is most modern and up-to-date, and as good as anything there is in Canada. They expect to have the opening about the middle of November. The house will be showing Paramount pictures, and Bluebirds at the week end. Business seems to be very good with the exhibitors in Saskatoon, and prospects for the winter trade look good.

Regina: The most popular theatre in Regina is the Rose, and we certainly must give Dalton Fisher, the manager, a lot of credit for being a live-wire exhibitor, as he is running a very nice theatre and is a live-wire in his advertising stunts, and, aside from that, he is running the best theatre in Regina, and knows how to handle it.

North Battleford: Harry Hemmings is the most popular and well-liked manager in Western Canada. Everybody knows Happy Harry from Battleford. He is a live-wire and is running a good house, and also contemplates making big changes very shortly by enlarging his theatre and at the same time has secured bookings on Bluebirds and Universal service.

Prince Albert: The theatres in the northwest civilized city of the world, closest to the Arctic Ocean, are showing Universal programme, including Bluebirds. The new Strand theatre is booking Red Feathers and service, and the Empress theatre is running Bluebirds and reporting good business.

Toronto: Mr. Guest of the Empire theatre, Hamilton, has just put over a unique idea by which means he is enabled to observe the law of Ontario which requires the parents or guardians of children to be present with them at the theatre and yet derive full benefit from his juvenile patronage. Mr. Guest has a printed form which he has distributed among his patronage and which reads to the effect that the bearer of this form is appointed guardian for the child during its stay at the show. The idea is said to be a great boon to busy mothers and as yet there has been no objection made to it in government circles. Mr. Harris of the Broadway theatre, has taken over the management of the Windsor theatre, College street. This makes the third change of management of this house within the last few weeks, but it is expected that Mr. Harris will be very successful if his previous records are anything to judge by.

Timmins: The new theatre at Timmins, owned and operated by Mt. Bordesonno, has been officially opened and is said to be receiving immense and well satisfied patronage. The house, which is exceptionally fine for the north country mining district, is second only to those modern theatres in Toronto.

COLORADO—Boulder: The Y. M. C. A. Picture theatre is now the New Isis and is run by Adrian Diez and Blanche Hickok. Kohn and Fairchild are managers of the Curran theatre. The Empress is owned by Chas. O'Connor.

Colorado City: The Idle Hour theatre is closed; out of business.

Granada is without a motion picture show now, T. C. Tripp having gone away.

FLORIDA—Bradentown: The only theatre is the New Wallace, of which D. B. Sutton is manager. Jack Moore is the local operator. Mrs. K. M. Juran has closed the Manavista, and Harry Wadham the Pandora.

Plant City: The Wonderland has been discontinued, leaving only the Abbott theatre, of which R. W. Cornell is manager.

IDAHO—Oakley: W. E. G. Ellerby is still running the Orpheum theatre.

ILLINOIS—Ashland: J. H. Wilburn has succeeded Dave Hexter with the Lyric theatre.

Canton: Albert Stoll has succeeded A. L. Thielbar at the Dreamland. The Ideal Amusement Company has opened the Varietie theatre; they also run the Princess. Chas. Kuchan has the Idyl Hour, and Joe Ross the Garden theatre.

Irving: Chester P. Killey has moved the Bungalo theatre from Whitehall to Irving.

Mixing Brains with Lobby Displays Gets Results

By M. Kashin

IN MOTION PICTURE NEWS, issue of October 14, I offered an article describing a "front" on "The Count," featuring Charlie Chaplin. In reading it and wondering why such a front would attract patronage, you may no doubt have come to the conclusion that the amusing and ridiculous features of this display had much to do with its success.

That may be true. The ridiculous and amusing always do appeal to people who, to a large extent, are seeking these two qualities in pictures.

Do not think, however, that the serious does not appeal with as much power. This is a fact that I proved to my own satisfaction by the results obtained from the lobby display on "Wanted—A Home," cuts of which appear on these pages.

After viewing the picture I decided that the theme was well expressed in the title. The word "home" struck me forcibly. I reasoned that it would so strike any person, for what is there so close to peace or so near to turmoil as a home? And a winning girl without a home—wanting one! This was certainly an appeal to any man, woman or child.

In every picture there is some "text" which, if properly presented in a lobby display, will appeal. But it must be "presented" in every sense of the word.

In making my "center" to this lobby display I resorted to every device to bring out the thought of "Wanted—A Home." The tramps peering over the fence most certainly have none; their general appearance has a direct bearing on the subject to be developed. The girl has none. This is apparent by her dejected attitude, reinforced by the parcel of clothes in her hand. And the fact that she wants a home is brought out by the reproduction of her "dream" pictured in the upper left-hand corner of the "center."

To support the entire scheme I hit on a rather novel idea. What is more widely advertised than a newspaper itself? Nothing, I decided. A newspaper is about the most common article seen in any walk of life. But seen where? Anywhere but in a theatre lobby. I therefore reproduced an enlarged painting, which is shown in the accompanying cut, of a torn want ad., and to offset this I reproduced an enlargement of the few opening lines of an editorial.

I will now digress a little, with your permission. I want to bring out the fact that psychology is as much a part of a lobby display as it is of human nature. To one class of people the want ad. would appeal powerfully. To another class the heading Editorial would appeal equally as strong. This I did in order to reach, as far as possible, the intellects of the people who would chance to view the display. Psychology is dry. I know it. But it enters so deeply into the science of attracting the public to a moving picture theatre through a lobby display that I, in justice to myself and in order to make myself plain to the reader, must go one step further in the analysis of this particular part of the "front."

The "copy" in the want ad. reads, "Wanted—A Home. A girl, homeless, is looking," etc. In a large painted reproduction of a newspaper clipping you will readily admit that this will attract and will, for an instant, hold a certain class of people. The subtle feeling of sympathy is excited. This is true and was commented on by many critics.

The "copy" in the editorial reads, "Is any girl safe? What a home means to a girl in a big city like New——," etc. Why this? Simply because it excites the passion that is ever present in a majority of picture fans—that of the melodramatic.

I have gone into these details simply in order to show you what subtle possibilities there are, all in the infancy of their development, in making your appeal to the public passing your doors.

For your information, and in justice to Mr. E. Lemieux, the display manager of Goodwin's Department Store of Montreal, I want to say that in working out the secret of this scheme I went to Mr. Lemieux and in conversation with him drew out his general ideas of the subtle psychological effects of window displays. I had noticed his wonderful window displays and the details with which each one was worked out appealed to me greatly. "Why those beautiful and exact Byzantine effects?" I asked him.

His answer confirmed my "suspicions." Primarily, the public are downtown at night looking for something in windows which will draw them inside. They actually want to be attracted and go to the trouble of searching the store fronts for displays that will attract them. You put it there; they will come and find it. In the second place, Mr. Lemieux brought out the idea that you do not need to give the public something which meets with their exact approval. Your primary idea is to excite in them an interest in what is on the inside. They may, to a great extent, not know why they are attracted. And yet they are attracted by the most simple appeals to human nature.

This article may be dry reading, but for the sake of the "game" of advertising through lobby displays I feel it is necessary that the importance of the psychological side of the science be brought forcibly to the exhibitor's attention.

The cost of the "front" herein pictured was remarkably small. Maybe twelve or fifteen dollars. The results obtained were most satisfactory, the house using this particular display being packed to the doors at the supper hour, which is, as a rule, the dullest time of day in the city in which the theatre in question is located.

This is not advice. It is history. The more thought and energy you devote to perfecting your lobby displays the greater will be your results. And yet, on the other hand (and this is not advice either, but rather cautionary), be careful lest your front does not only not appeal to a prospective patron, but on the contrary has a tendency to repel him. Everyone cannot be satisfied, but study and analysis will bring you great results in this pursuit.

EXHIBITOR LECTURES ON HIS PICTURES

I. M. Owens of Barnesville, O., was a Pittsburgh visitor last week and told a number of the exhibitors of a novel stunt he has for arousing the interest of his patrons in the Paramount Service. He delivers short talks to his audience regarding special features contained in the pictures and always has some little stories to tell of members of the cast in the feature picture of the day. He states that in this way he has aroused great interest in the pictures.

In doing this Mr. Owens has made a host of friends and he says that some of the other theatre owners in that part of the country are following his lead with success.

While in Pittsburgh Mr. Owens gathered up a ream of paper containing stories of all of the Paramount stars and says he will have enough material to last him for several months.

MEETS COMPETITION OF A STREET FAIR

There are many ways of solving the question of putting on a picture show when the Street Fair is in progress along "your street." There is the curiosity aroused by the clustered booths, and there is the hilarious feeling inspired by the pleading voice of a "Coney Island" ballyhoo man.

This was the problem of W. P. Pierce, of the New theatre, Salina, Kansas.

One week before Mr. Pierce went to Kansas City with his "big idea" and ordered some film. When the fair week came he played to a record house each night. He showed five single reels of comedies each night, and nothing else, during the week of the fair. He gave the town people all of the hilarity and laughter they wanted, and the large crowds proved his success.

"LIVING ADVERTISEMENT" SENT OUT BY MIDDLE WEST EXCHANGE

How long will it be before the exchanges will send out living advertisements of their pictures?

Accompanying "The Little Girl Next Door" in its tour over the middle west has been a blind man and his dog. In every town where the picture is shown he goes to the exhibitor and gets a job walking the streets with this sign on his back: "I would give $500 to see the Little Girl Next Door at the ——— theatre tonight. 15 and 25 cents"—or whatever the price happened to be.

When the Exclusive Feature Film exchange sent out the picture, "Life of Buffalo Bill," it sent along a full blooded Indian man and woman, both exceptionally good singers. The Indians parade the streets singing and bearing signs advertising the show. They stand in front of the theatre, and they sing from the stage, all the while dressed in feathers, war paint and the rest of the redman's regalia.

PATRONS INFLUENCED BY THE STAR IN A PICTURE, SAYS SHIRLEY, OMAHA EXHIBITOR

R. D. Shirley, proprietor of the Muse, one of the leading theatres of Omaha, Neb., learned a few things and got quite a bit of entertainment out of keeping a record of the many telephone inquiries that came into his office in the course of a day. Recently he has been keeping a record of whether the star or the play is in demand.

The inquiries generally are, "What's on to-night?"

Mr. Shirley asked himself, "What do they want to know? The name of the picture, or the name of the star, or both, or which?"

Anita Stewart was playing at the Muse in "The Combat." People began telephoning as usual—the Muse patronage is made up of residents of the city, people who decide while sitting about the dinner table that they would like to run over to the theatre for the evening.

At the first query he answered, "The Combat."

"Who is playing it?" was the next question. He answered, got the usual "Thank you," and waited for the next call.

"Ninety per cent of them wanted to know the name of the star," he said. "The simple words, 'The Combat,' meant nothing to them. They wanted to know who was playing in it. When they learned it was Anita Stewart, they knew, by the value of the star, just what was the value of the picture.

"A time may come when the play in itself, through proving by high character plays the character of the producer, will determine whether or not a man or woman or boy or girl will attend a motion picture play. But that time is not here yet."

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

HERBERT BRENON has engaged Florence Reed for his next Selznick-Pictures production, following "War Brides," which is now virtually completed. The photodrama in which Miss Reed will appear is "The Queen Mother," a drama of the middle ages.

"The Lone Wolf," a picture play based upon Louis Joseph Vance's popular novel of the same name, which was announced last week as Mr. Brenon's next production, has been postponed temporarily. Mr. Brenon discovered that Miss Reed was available for an immediate engagement, and as he had been looking for a star for "The Queen Mother" for several months, he closed a contract with her.

Meanwhile, Mr. Brenon has received a cablegram from Mary Garden, who has been passing the summer in Paris, stating that she will be returning to America in December. She will fill her engagement with the Chicago Grand Opera Company for the regular season, and in March will begin work under Mr. Brenon's direction in her first photodrama.

In "The Queen Mother," Mr. Brenon has an entirely new theme, so far as the photodrama is concerned. For several months he has been working out for the camera a version of one of the most dramatic stories in all history.

The play deals with the time when the Italian Renaissance influenced all art, literature, life and politics of Europe, especially in the countries along the Mediterranean.

Art Acord Signs with Fox

Art Acord, the hero of the "Buck Parvin Series" of photoplays, has signed with William Fox.

The man who holds championships in almost everything in which a cowboy competes, is at work in one of the Fox studios in New Jersey, playing opposite Gladys Coburn in the latter's second photoplay.

Mr. Acord has won paraphernalia enough in various competitions through the West to stock a caravan load. At the Stampede, recently held at Sheepshead Bay, he took six firsts and one second out of eight events in which he was entered. His prizes totaled four belts, a loving cup, and $1,800.

His ability with the lariat, his feats in "bull-dogging," broncho-busting, and trick-riding, combined with a splendid personality, earned him a moving picture engagement with the Selig Company in 1910. In 1911 he was with Bison, 1912 with Universal, 1914 with Bosworth in support of Elsie Janis and Fritzi Scheff, and in 1915, with American as "Buck Parvin."

In the years in which he worked in the film world, he has won forty-two hand-carved saddles, thirty-six silver mounted bridles, enough revolvers to supply a shooting gallery, twenty-six pairs of "chaps," and silver spurs, hats, and belts by the dozens.

In 1912, Acord won the world's championship for broncho-busting when he broke "Old Steamboat," the maniac of the horse world, and a nightmare even to the hardened cowboys.

Mr. Acord at work betrays his Oklahoman blood, as he was born in Stillwater, Okla., in 1890. He did his first professional stunts with the Dick Stanley Wild West Show in 1910. The next year he was with Buffalo Bill, and rode second to the world's champion at the Pendleton, Ore., Cheyenne, and Salt Lake City round-ups.

War scenes of the Revolution are an interesting feature of the impending World-Brady picture, "The Heart of a Hero," in which Robert Warwick is the star player as Nathan Hale. The primitive military conditions of that struggle are in sharp contrast to what we see in pictures of current European battlefields, but heroism remains unchanged.

Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell have the star parts in "The Madness of Helen," a new World Film Corporation picture for release in November. Miss Clayton plays two sisters, one of whom has lost her reason. In endeavoring to conceal this unhappy condition the sane sister very nearly loses the man she loves—impersonated by Mr. Blackwell.

Gail Kane, Muriel Ostriche, Arthur Ashley and Montagu Love are in the all-star cast of "The Men She Married," a Brady-Made World Film photoplay to be shown presently.

Virginia Pearson began work last week on a new picture for the Fox Films. One of the members of the supporting cast will be Sidney D'Albrook, in the role of a "stool-pigeon." Mr. D'Albrook has been in the silent drama for many years, and did slap-stick work in the leading circuses before that. Kenean Buel is directing the picture.

John Charles Is with Fox

John Charles, who has been chief in support of Tyrone Powers during the past year, has joined the William Fox photoplays. He will portray the heavy in Valeska Suratt's picture. Another member of the Suratt cast will be Joseph Granby.

Mabel Taliaferro, having finished with the Metro-Rolfe production, "The Sunbeam," has begun work in the Rolfe Studio on a motion picture drama, as yet unnamed, which deals with society blackmailers. Miss Taliaferro takes the part of a young Irish girl who, coming to America in search of a fortune, finds herself the means of foiling a huge blackmailing plot.

play which was put into scenario form by June Mathis. John H. Collins is directing the production. Among those who are supporting Miss Taliaferro are Robert Walker, Sally Crute, Fred Jones, and Yale Benner.

One of the most unusual sights ever seen in any moving picture studio might have been observed last Thursday night and Friday morning—in one of William Fox's New Jersey plants, where Joan Sawyer's first photoplay was being filmed.

A scene in the picture calls upon Miss Sawyer to dance in the center of a dinner table, on an illumined glass top. This scene was photographed once some time ago, but the wiring showed in the film, so it was necessary to snap it over.

Just as everything was in readiness, and Miss Sawyer's toes began to twinkle, when out went the lights! Without going into technical details, it is sufficient unto the occasion to say that all that could be done to remedy matters as speedily as possible was to apply to the town of Fort Lee for help. It was 2:30 A. M. when Joan Sawyer started anew on the dance. It was 5:30 when she left.

While the electricians were busily at work, three score of tired supernumeraries, engaged to be present at the dinner table, were soundly asleep—in evening suits.

Despite the fact that she has a sweet disposition, Louise Huff is rapidly becoming a thing to be shunned at the Famous Players Studio. And the fault is not hers, but Booth Tarkington's, though they have never met! It was Tarkington who created Lola Pratt, the Baby Talk Lady, in his novel "Seventeen" in the adaptation of which Miss Huff is co-starring with Jack Pickford. Miss Huff is Lola, who is depicted by Tarkington as continually murmuring baby talk to Flopit, her pet dog. As soon as Miss Huff and Flopit were introduced, the little star cooed appreciatively and, gathering the toy dog up in her arms, began to croon baby talk to it. From that moment on, Miss Huff has been using this same style of talk in all her conversation.

"Aw, ferth'luvamike," growled a stage hand, as he overheard Miss Huff, "if she don't cut that stuff out, we'll all be gettin' this here infantile paralysis."

Marguerite Bertsch has just completed some big scenes in the James Oliver Curwood story, "The Soul Master," with Earle Williams in the lead. One scene calling for nicety of direction was taken in the large No. 5 studio, which had been given over entirely to it. More than two hundred people were engaged to pass in and out of the aisles of the large department store set, which took in a large stairway, rotunda and mezzanine floor, copied from the John Wanamaker store in New York.

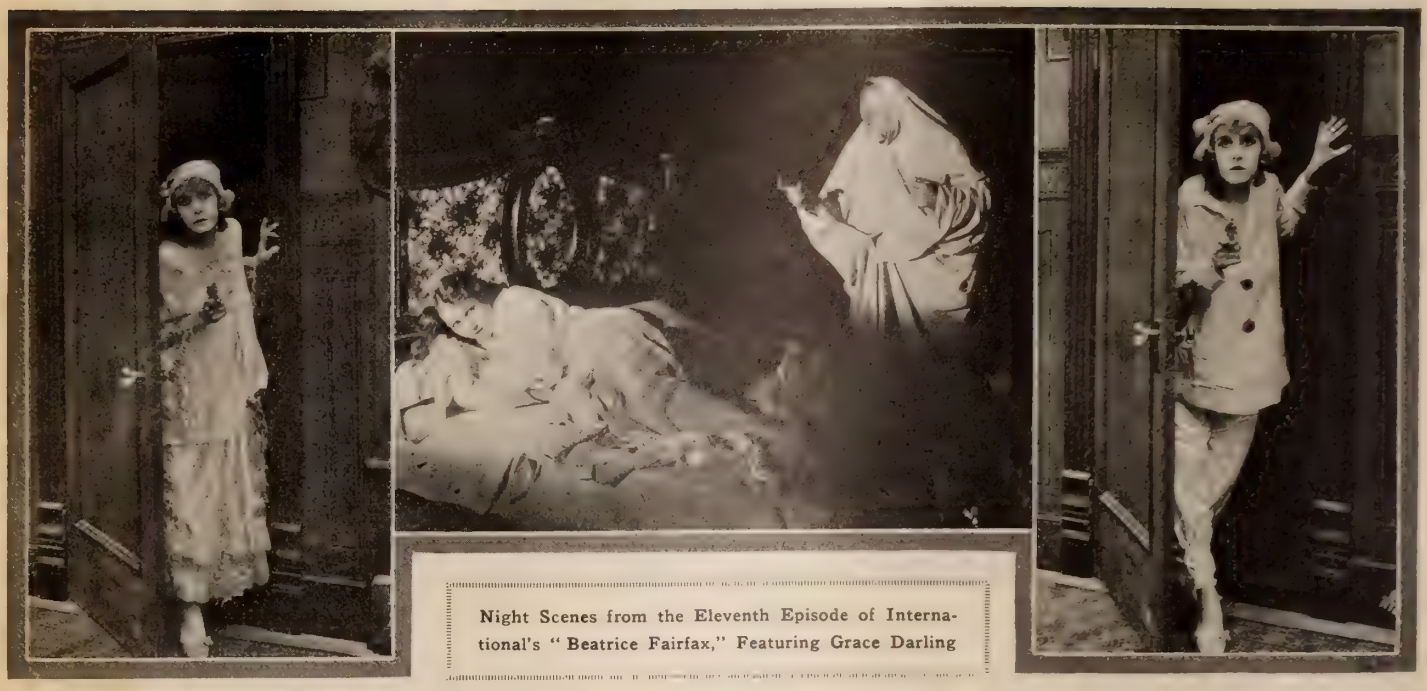
Ralph W. Ince, Huntly Gordon and "Jimmy" Dent, of the Vitagraph Studios, had a simultaneous attack of "strong-arm" down at Brightwaters, Long Island, last week, with the result that they joined forces at a local bowling alley and fairly galloped through a tournament then in progress.

William ("Bill") Dunn has just returned to the studio after an illness which has held up some scenes in "The Secret Kingdom," the Louis Joseph Vance serial that Vitagraph will shortly release. Thanks to prompt treatment, Dunn is able to continue his work with Charles Richman, Dorothy Kelly, Arline Pretty and other members of "The Secret Kingdom" cast.

Colonel Jasper Ewing Brady, in charge of Vitagraph's scenario department, has purchased through Edwin Selwyn the film rights to Will M. Harben's book, "The Desired Woman." This is the novel that sold through several editions. "The Desired Woman" is one of many scripts acquired by the Vitagraph Company within the past few weeks.

Earle Fox Joins Metro

Earle Fox has joined the Metro forces and is supporting Mme. Petrova in her new production at the Popular Plays and Players Studio. In the play now being produced Fox is seen as a weakling, who fails in everything he attempts because he is unable to control a craving for drugs.



Mr. Fox was born in Oxford, Ohio. He attended the Miami Military Academy and Ohio State University, and went on the stage eleven years ago with a stock company in Cincinnati. Next he was seen in stock at the College theatre, Chicago.

William Hawtrey saw him there, was deeply impressed by his acting and engaged him to appear in "Dear Old Billy." He went to London with Mr. Hawtrey and returning, joined the "Third Degee" in Chicago. Afterward he was seen with Annie Russell, Wilton Lackaye and Douglas Fairbanks.

Four years ago Mr. Fox became a motion picture actor, first appearing with the Kalem Company and then with D. W. Griffith, Selig and Lasky. Among the big productions in which he has been seen are "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Alien Souls," "The Dream Girl," "Public Opinion," and "Ashes of Embers," with Pauline Frederick.

As soon as "Her New York" is finished, Gladys Hulette, the Thanhouser star, will begin work on "Kate o' the Kitchen." This play is by Agnes C. Johnston who also wrote for Miss Hulette "Her New York," "Prudence, the Pirate," and "The Shine Girl." In "Kate o' the Kitchen" Miss Hulette will be supported by a notable cast including Doris Grey, Wayne Arey, George Marlo, and Arthur Bauer.

Florence La Badie, Frederic Sullivan, her director, and Philip Lonergan, author of "Enemies of Society,' a Thanhouser production, recently consumed nearly an entire week visiting Sing Sing, the Tombs, the New York district attorney's office and the criminal courts, searching for color to be used in Miss La Badie's next picture.

A Geological Actor

Walter Law thinks so much of this old earth, that his hobby is geology. Someone asked him recently how such a subject can be of such absorbing interest.

"Here's one of the reasons," said Law, pointing to an advertisement in the back of the book he held in his hand.

It read: "Blank and Blank, publishers, take pleasure in announcing a new work called 'Extinct Animals,' illustrated with a portrait of the author."

Jim Farley, now with one of William Fox's western companies, declares that movie actors are not the only brave persons in the world. Before Mr. Farley entered motion pictures he served in the United States army and saw service in many remote corners of the world.

One of Farley's pet stories concerns a sergeant and two troopers in the Philippines, when Aguinaldo was the prize sought, who deliberately braved the fire of the natives, crossed a river by walking on the span of the bridge, and effected a flanking move, with enemy bullets whistling about their ears. Result was that the natives were put to flight. "Yet if this incident had been shown on the screen," says Mr. Farley, "the public would have labelled it 'fake.'"

Regent of Cleveland Will Produce in Jacksonville—Berstein Expects to Take Forty Players There for Vim—'Andsome Man Draws a Prize

Special to Motion Picture News.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 21.

THE Regent Photoplay Company of Cleveland, Ohio, will arrive in Jacksonville, November 9 for the winter months, and have secured commodious studio space in the heart of the city, where they will produce four and five-reel feature pictures. The company is headed by C. H. Weston as director and general manager, and numbers among its directors and officers some of the most influential men of Cleveland, among whom are A. D. Robertson, president; T. L. Evert, secretary; C. H. Weston, vice-president and general manager, and L. P. Otis, of the Otis Elevator Company.

The Regent Company will produce "The Sorrows of Satan" from the famous book of Marie Corelli, as the first picture, and will follow with a number of other famous novel dramatizations. The company is capitalized at $100,000 with $65,000 paid in, and in Mr. Weston and Eugene French, cameraman, they have a director and photographer of known ability.

General Manager Louis Berstein, of the Vim Company, has announced that his company intended bringing forty more players to this city by November 1. The large stage of the Vim Company is now being enlarged to take care of increased productions in the near future. Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby, are expected to reach Jacksonville on November 1, for the purpose of continuing the production of their famous comedies.

The Garrick Studios Company is enlarging and otherwise increasing the capacity of the old Gaumont studio in South Jacksonville, and will have it ready for occupancy in the near future. Richard Garrick, general manager of the company, has already leased stage space to six companies and expects to have as many more using the studio soon. One feature of the Garrick studios is that within two hundred feet an ostrich farm and alligator ranch is located, thereby giving plenty of local color for the productions of numerous pictures.

James Larkin, the Kalem star, who ruptured a blood vessel several weeks ago while doing a jump from the second story of the Chamber of Commerce building into a running automobile, has partly recovered and is again doing his dare-devil stunts in the Kalem newspaper office series. Bob Ellis, Kalem director, was accorded a prize as being the handsomest director or motion picture player who ever visited Jacksonville, at a recent meeting of the Circle A. Club, a woman's society. Bob took the compliment in good part, but declared it would never do for the story to get out. The next day he purchased a Cadillac "8" racer.

Babe Hardy and Kate Price, Vim comedians, are producing "Imagination" under the direction of Bill Lewis. Bill is the author of the script, and declares it took some imagination to get both Kate and Babe in some tight places, as both weigh over 250 pounds.

During the annual Fall Festival to be held in Jacksonville, October 18 to 20 inclusive, and to which thousands of Floridians, Georgians, and Alabamians come every year, prizes aggregating $250 will be given to the man and woman impersonating their favorite famous dramatic motion picture star. The contest states that the star impersonated must be well enough known that in any picture he or she ever played, they must be recognizable.

A contest for the children will also be held in which $25 will be given to the boy or girl that best impersonates Charlie Chaplin.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

AFTER an absence of three months Director J. P. McGowan and the Helen Holmes Signal Company arrived in Los Angeles, Friday the Thirteenth, in an effort to get away from the jinx which has been following them since they went to the northern lumber regions to film the Mutual serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands."

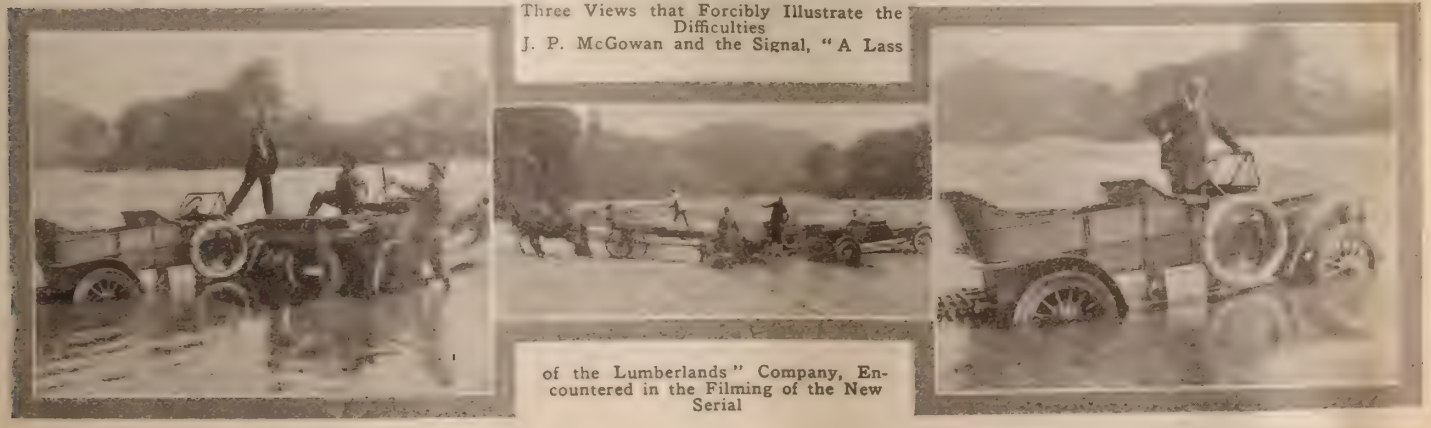
Progress on the filming of this fifteen episode release has been very slow, due to the very bad weather conditions encountered. The company has been unable to work more than one-third of the time, and as exterior locations were shot in the big tree country, it was impossible to photograph by artificial light. The company spent six weeks at Arcata and Eureka, where they encountered foggy and rainy weather most of the time. From there they went to the vicinity of Yosemite Valley, and after a week of good weather were again forced to wait for sunlight. After five weeks of waiting they decided to return to Los Angeles, here to make interiors as the power station at El Portal could not supply them with sufficient electricity for the use of lighting equipment.

Unusual Scenes of Yosemite Valley Lumber Company

Arriving in Los Angeles, Director J. P. McGowan made a change which will materially add to the negative output of the company. Paul C. Hurst, who takes the role of Little Bear in the serial, will direct one part of the company, while McGowan will continue with another. In this way it will cause less waiting. Hurst has been affiliated with McGowan first in the production of the original "Hazards of Helen" serial for the Kalem, and he directed the company for seven weeks. Later Hurst served in the capacity of technical director for the Kalem, and went to the Signal in March of this year. He is a very capable man and understands the McGowan policy. Robert Phelan will be the cameraman of the second company.

In the negative brought to Los Angeles for finishing are some very unusual scenes taken on the incline railway of the Yosemite Valley Lumber Company. The railroad is less than nine thousand feet in length, and rises more than three thousand feet. The cars are hauled to the top by steel cables, and carry logs down to the Yosemite Valley Railroad. The owners of the line refused the company permission to use it until every member who took part in scenes signed an agreement releasing the lumber company of any responsibility in case of accident. The scenes were made without mishap, and some very remarkable action was secured.

Paderewski and Chaplin exchanged courtesies while the former was in Los Angeles during the past week. The pianist sent the comedian a pair of tickets for his concert and an invitation to dinner later. The following day Chaplin entertained the musician at his studio, and there he saw some of the scenes for the coming Chaplin releases, which is a burlesque on scenes at a motion picture studio titled "Behind the Screen." While in conversation Paderewski let the fact be known that he was an ardent screen fan, and never misses seeing a Chaplin release. He also expressed regret that he missed seeing the sixth episode of "The Secret of the Submarine," and has tried ever since to find a place where it is being shown that he may complete the story. The pianist complimented Chaplin very highly on the work he is doing now, especially in making the people laugh in Europe in the face of the troublous times. He spoke frequently of the European war to which he is donating twenty-five per cent. of his receipts, and in this connection said Chaplin films are extremely popular with his people.



The next Chaplin release has been completed and shipped. Chaplin takes the part of an assistant property man at a motion picture studio, and is the principal in a pie throwing contest that musses up a coronation set adjoining. With the bakers of Los Angeles, having recently raising the price on all baked goods, Studio Manager H. P. Caulfield tried to talk the pie-eating contest out of the script, but the comedians, fond of the delicacy, insisted that it should remain. It seems that an attempt is being made to balance up casts, and that Mr. Chaplin is trying to use more people in this picture in order to make up for the number that were lacking in "One A. M.," in which he was the sole and only player. In "Behind the Screen," Edna Purviance, for the first time in her screen career, takes the part of a boy playing that of a country lad who gets on in the movies. This comedy will have more than ten big sets, which is out of the ordinary for Chaplin subjects, and besides this will have many new bits of trick photography, and Chaplin vouches for the fact that he is springing a world of new gags.

"Up the Flue"

"Up the Flue" is the title given a Vogue picture, which has for its excuse the discovering of an abandoned oil refinery by Scenario Editor Fred Palmer. Rube Miller, Harry Huckins and Owen Evans are the anarchists.

The other Vogue Company is making an archery story with Ben Turpin in the featured part of a janitor of an apartment house. One of the residents receives as a prize for his skill, an archery outfit and a medal. Paddy McQuire as the hobo attempts to steal the prize, and being caught in the act, drops it into the janitor's pocket. Most all of the scenes that follow show the attempt of the janitor to return the property. The hobo, angered becaused of the failure, places an explosive back of the bull's-eye, which when hit by an arrow, wrecks the place. Robin E. Williamson is directing this picture, which has Gypsy Abbott as the archer expert's wife, Arthur Moon as the expert, and Marie Templeton as the janitor's wife.

Henry Lehrman has returned to the coast with a franchise to make comedies for the Three Views that Forcibly Illustrate the Difficulties J. P. McGowan and the Signal, "A Lass of the Lumberlands" Company, Encountered in the Filming of the New Serial

Fox program, and is now in search of location for a new studio to begin operations at once. Lehrman has signed Billy Ritchie as leading comedian, and plans to have his first release ready for the Fox Company about January 1. Lehrman was the organizer of the L-Ko Company, and remained with them until June of the past year. He induced Ritchie to leave the vaudeville stage and enter pictures, and it was under his direction that Ritchie's greatest successes were filmed.

"The Honorable Algy" and "The Criminal" are the first completed sample prints from the new laboratories at the Ince Culver City studios. The latter is the first starring vehicle of Clara Williams, produced under the careful direction of Reginald Barker. C. Gardiner Sullivan, head of the Ince scenario department, wrote this photoplay to suit the talents of Miss Williams who appears in the role of Naneta, an Italian girl, who is first seen in sunny Italy, and later becomes one of the principals of a New York ghetto romance in which a yet-to-arrive short story writer claims her as the bride. Miss Williams' beauty is especially suitable for such a role, which is not unlike the featured part she played in "The Italian."

The story is based on the adventures of a beautiful waif and how she found happiness in America. The early part of the photoplay has many very realistic Italian scenes, some of which were taken in the Italian vineyards of Southern California. Robert Brunton, art director at the studio, is responsible for several very remarkable sets used in "The Criminal," and Charles Kauffman was in charge of the photography.

Gertrude Selby (Universal)

Ray Directed by West

The other production completed by the laboratories is that made under the direction of Raymond B. West, and gives Charles Ray the star role. This is spoken of at the studio as a "comedy drama out of the ordinary," written by J. G. Hawks. "The Honorable Algy" refers to Algernon Monteith, the youngest son of an English royal family, who to save the family name, came to America to accumulate wealth. His experiences give this story a swiftly moving plot. The role taken by Ray is different from those in which he has recently been seen, and it points out that the production department has transferred him from the portrayal of weak-will youths, to happier roles in which he can live through the entire play. Margery Wilson and Margaret Thompson are the principal supports, Miss Wilson as the Englishman's sweetheart, and Miss Thompson as an American heiress. Prominent in the cast are Howard Hickman, Charles K. French and Jerome Storm. Papers containing the genealogy of the Ince family together with a number of colored drawings, were supplied by Thomas H. Ince to Art Director Robert Brunton for the preparation of sets for "The Honorable Algy." The colored drawings were of English country homes, and made it possible for the art department to give correct detail in all interiors and exteriors of scenes with an English atmosphere.

The photoplay of the stage with Dorothy Dalton as the actress, Howard Hickman as dramatic critic, and Charles Gunn, recent addition to the Ince staff, playing the part of an author, was put into production by Director Raymond B. West last week at the Thomas H. Ince studios at Culver City. J. G. Hawks is the author of this story which gives Miss Dalton an entirely different role from that taken by her in "The Jungle Child." Director West used the interior of the new administration building for scenes in the new production. It was the first time lights have been installed for photography within the new building.

Walter Edwards is directing a company of fifty-six players from the Culver City studios at Norwalk, California, the trip being made there to stage scenes in and about an old mill which is one of the land marks of the place, and known for miles around. Frank Keenan is to be the star of the production, taking the role of a pessimistic mill owner.

The first play for Enid Bennett, the new Ince star engaged by Mr. Ince while in New York, was put into production last week under the direction of Charles Miller. Jack Gilbert, who has appeared in the juvenile roles of a number of Ince productions, will play opposite Miss Bennett in this drama, the plot of which centers about a blind girl. Mr. Miller, who is the most recent director added to the producing staff at this studio, has signed a contract to remain with the Ince Culver City forces for two years. He is responsible for the production of "Plain Jane" and "A Corner on Colleens."

William S. Hart and organization of players and westerners have returned from the Mojave desert, and are again at work at Inceville. The trip to the desert was made by auto, and every one of the players including Hart himself, expressed a regret that they had not gone through on horseback, for in many instances they found the roads impassable for the machines.

Albert Cowles, eastern scenario writer, has been added by Thomas H. Ince to the staff under C. Gardiner Sullivan at the Culver City studios. Cowles recently aided Producer Ince in the presentation of the prologue to "Civilization" at the Criterion theatre, New York.

Bessie Barriscale arrived home last week from a month's vacation spent in New York, and immediately began work in a new Ince Triangle play. Miss Barriscale reports a very delightful vacation and remarked: "If I were a queen, I could not have been treated more wonderfully."

"The Cage of Iron"

"The Cage of Iron," a short story by William Merrion Rouse, which recently appeared in a national Sunday magazine, has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince, and a screen version is now being prepared.

Producer Thomas H. Ince last week, for the first time in five months, paid a visit to his beautiful summer home, built in the Santa Monica mountains. The construction of the country place was begun just before Mr. Ince departed for New York for the presentation of "Civilization," and it was completed and occupied by his family during his absence.

Douglas Fairbanks and Jewel Carman in "American Aristocracy" (Triangle-Fine Arts)

Business Manager Allen plans to aid the Actors' Fund. A new notice was placed on the bulletin board last week, which informed all players that a fine of ten cents will be levied on every person who finds it necessary to borrow a dressing room pass key. All money thus collected will be sent to the Treasurer of the Actors' Fund.

The Lasky stages are filled with a number of remarkable sets that point out the care taken by the technical department in charge of Wilfred Buckland to secure the better effects. Two sets in particular are those prepared for the adaptation from the Charles Dickens story of "Oliver Twist." The wood-working department has turned out for this production a number of remarkable pieces of furniture which have the appearance of having been worn by constant use for years. Director James Young prepared the screen version, and has as the principals of his cast Marie Doro as Oliver Twist; Hobart Bosworth, Bill Sykes; Tully Marshall, Fagan; Elsie Jane Wilson, Nancy, and Raymond Hatton the artfull dodger.

For interior scenes of "The Plow Girl" now being filmed by Director Robert Leonard from the story by Edward Morris, and scenario by Charles Sarver, a very elaborate interior setting representing an English country home has been built. It shows three entire rooms of the residence besides alcove, hallway and staircase, and every part of the walls has been made of solid wood. The carving has been most elaborately done, and a feature of the library setting is that it contains more than 3,000 real books. Heretofore it has been the practice of film companies to use fronts of books only, and this is probably the first time such a large collection has been seen in one picture where an artificial setting was made.

Mae Murray, who is the star of this subject, will be supported by Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts, Edith Chapman, Horace B. Carpenter, William Elmer, Lillian Leighton, Charles Gerrard, and others. Early last week Director Leonard was making a scene at the Lasky ranch using a yoke of oxen attached to a full sized plow. Miss Murray has been given her first lesson in plowing, and everything was in readiness for the making of a scene, when the oxen came to the conclusion that their driver was an amateur. The director called "action," and the oxen taking him at his word ran away. Miss Murray was not sure but what the animals knew more about it than she did, and she followed pell-mell, clinging to the handles of the plow until the bumps in the rough ground flew past her at too great a speed.

They Said "Let George Do It"—And He Did

"The Yellow Pawn" has a number of scenes which will be shot from above. These show the interior of a New York artist's studio, and the settings for it contain all four walls. The ceiling is completely finished, and includes a large skylight through which scenes of this set will be taken. Director George Melford is in charge of the filming, and has Wallace Reid as the artist, and Cleo Ridgely as the co-star.

George D. Proctor has prepared the screen version of "The Silent Partner" from a story by Edmund Goulding, which is now being produced by Director Marshall Neilan with Blanche Sweet as the star.

Al. E. Christie has completed negotiations for the purchase of the plot of ground occupied by the Christie studios at Gower street and Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, and thereby became owner of the site of the first motion picture studio of Hollywood, opened by Christie on Thanksgiving Day, 1911.

When the Christie Film Company was organized in January, they leased this property, the studio buildings thereon, and effects of the studios, for a period of ten months on condition that additional time could be had at the studio providing the owner, Fred Balshofer decided not to produce in California. In June, however, Mr. Balshofer brought the Yorke Film Corporation producing company, which includes Henry Otto, director, and Harold Lockwood and May Allison as stars, to the coast, and procured temporary quarters at the old Masterpiece studio on Gordon street, Hollywood. Since his arrival, negotiations have been on with the Christie Company which were completed last week.

The property has a very desirable location, being but three blocks from the business district of Hollywood. It has ample buildings for all departments, and sufficient ground for interior stages.

Al. E. Christie has already planned a number of improvements which include the enlargement of the stages to cover the entire area of the several lots. The Christie Company has leased a number of vacant lots adjoining which will be used for sites for exterior stages. This purchase places the Christie Company in a class composed of but few companies that own their own studio sites, the list including Selig, Universal, Ince, Keystone, Morosco-Pallas, Majestic, Signal and Horsley.

It is the plan of the Christie Film Company to conduct a commercial laboratory in connection with their producing plant, and commercial accounts are now being solicited. To properly care for this the laboratory has been enlarged and additional equipment added.

Later it is the intention of the management to build a new laboratory facing on Sunset Boulevard, and a new row of dressing rooms along Gower street. This will permit converting the old laboratory building into carpenter shops, and the use of the present site of the dressing rooms for the new concrete laboratory building.

The Christie Film Company has completed negotiations with several independent exchanges for the marketing of their comedies. F. A. Van Hausen of Omaha, has contracted for the states of Nebraska and Kansas. The Superior Film Company of Sioux City, Iowa, have taken that state, and Ohio and Texas rights have been sold.

"A Brass-Button Romance" is to be the next release of the Christie Film Company. This is of the nature of a detective melodrama with numerous comedy situations. Neal Burns takes the part of a detective, who has Sergeant Flynn as his rival for the hand of the patrolman's, Harry Rattenberry, daughter Betty. Neal is assigned to discover the thieves who stole diamonds, and is told by the sergeant that his job depends upon their apprehension. After numerous hair-breath escapes, he brings about the arrest of the sergeant, while the diamonds are in his possession, they having been placed in the high official's pocket by an adventuress with whom he flirted while on the beach. The story abounds with new situations.

The Christie Company is now filming "Hist! At Six O'Clock," same being a burlesque melodrama by William E. Wing, which will serve to introduce a new vampire, or rather a former Christie player in a vampire role. Ethel Lynn is the brunette who will break hearts in this subject.

Experiments in Waterproofing Canvas

A series of experiments conducted under the supervision of General Manager H. O. Davis, has resulted in the perfection of a preparation to use on canvas that will make it water proof, and also add materially to its qualities as diffusing cloths. The solving of this problem will affect a saving of thousands of dollars in converting the big stage at Universal City into one that may be used the same as if it were glass enclosed. The prepared canvas is placed on frames and hung between the diffusing supports, every other beam serving as the cone for a gable, and at the bottom of every other one are metal gutters to carry off the water in case of rain. It is believed this will make it possible to use the stage throughout the winter, and thus add to the square foot capacity of the enclosed stages. In bright weather the cloths will permit sufficient light for photographing without artificial means, while in dark weather batteries of Cooper-Hewitt lights will be used.

Harry Carey, who left the Universal at the expiration of his contract in August, and has since been with Lasky and Fox, last week entered into a two year contract with the Universal. Carey will be starred in western drama. The contract was signed by General Manager J. O. Davis, Thursday, and a scenario will be ready for the western player in a few days. In some of the pictures he will direct himself.

Included in the troubles which befell an "infant" director in making the first scenes for her initial production, were the handling of a loco horse, two children, a Chinaman who could not understand English, who was working in the scenes, and another Chinaman who owned the property the company wished to use as location, together with changeable light not unusual in the rainy season. The director, or rather directoress, is Ruth Ann Baldwin, who is filming "Bred in the Purple" from story by John Fleming Wilson. Miss Baldwin did not encounter these difficulties singly—they all came at once. But the straw that came near breaking the camel's back was a near riot between the two Chinamen, who happened to be members of rival tongs. The male members of Miss Baldwin's cast including George Pearce and Orrin Jackson, had opportunity to prevent the loss of oriental blood. The difficulties did not dampen the spirits of the new director, and she continued without giving serious consideration to the troubles.

Production has been commenced on a series of twelve two-reel episodes dealing with the adventures of a diplomat in foreign lands. The stories were written by George Bronson-Howard, and will be known as "The Adventures of Yorke Norroy," which role will be taken by Kingsley Benedict. The first episode has been titled "The Adventures of the Last Cigarette," and John MacDermott has been entrusted with the direction of the series. Mr. Benedict is the only player who will appear in all twelve of the episodes. Each episode will be laid in different lands, and there will be twelve separate and distinct casts of players.

Lloyd B. Carleton is at work on a five-reel production known as "Of Much Is the Kingdom" from a scenario prepared by Anthony Caldeway. The theme of the story is the misunderstanding of American laws and customs by two ignorant immigrants, and shows the misfortunes that befall them when they secure happiness for themselves with a child, while they seek to earn sufficient money to buy a home and then be married. Emory Johnston has the featured part as the son, Richard Morris is the foster father, Adele Farrington the foster mother, and Lois Wilson is the youth's sweetheart.

"Mary, Keep Your Feet Still" is the unusual title given a story being produced by Director Jack Conway. It will consist of five reels, and deals with the adventures of a girl who from childhood has an ambition to become a great dancer. Ella Hall has the featured part, and a supporting case of well-known players including Margaret Whistler have been selected for other important roles.

"Little Italy"

Hobart Henley and Gertrude Selby have the featured roles in "Little Italy," the title referring to a pretty supposed Italian girl, who with an elderly violinist and a monkey, secure their livelihood by "entertaining" from the gutter. Hobart Henley takes the role of Tony, the girl's Italian lover, in addition to doing the direction. The scenario was prepared by Willis-Woods.

Director George Cochrane is busy with the filming of a two-reel scenario by Harvey Gates. This is "The Crime Maker," and offers Molly Malone in the role of a stenographer who falls in love with her employer's son. Jack Nellson is the youth, Burton Law the friend, and Daniel Leighton is the father.

George Marshall, who since the filming of the "Liberty" serial was taken up has been co-director with Jacques Jaccard, last week began the making of a two-reel subject of a western type from story and scenario by Scenario Editor E. B. Lewis of the Universal staff. Neil Hart takes the leading role, that of a western bandit who prevents theft of valuable maps by an agent of a foreign country, even though it reveals his identity as a bandit. G. Raymond Nye takes the part of the foreign representative, the heavy. A peculiar feature of the story is that there are no feminine parts. Director Marshall has had a wide experience in producing western subjects, and for a time early this year, was in charge of filming subjects featuring Harry Carey.

How a bully was finally overcome by a straight-forward but timid youth, forms the story for "The Goat," being produced by Fred A. Kelsey. M. K. Wilson takes the role of the timid one, Earl Page the bully, Lou Short the girl's father, and "Brownie" Vernon the heroine. After many insults heaped on the straight-forward lad by the bully, the latter is found to be an aide to a band of crooks.

The "Liberty" serial company will finish shortly as they are now working on the twelfth episode. The cast for the serial remains the same.

"Her Man Friday" is the title of a two-reel farce melodrama from story by Grace Helen Bailey, which is holding the attention of Carter De Haven as director and leading player. Opposite De Haven is Flora Parker De Haven, and other leading parts are taken by H. Richardson and George George.

Peacock Directs "U" Comedies

Captain Lesley T. Peacock now directing comedies at Universal City, has completed the filming of his first "Oh, You Honeymoon," which will show the adventures of the newlyweds at a fashionable hotel, where the young man refuses to tip the bell boys, waiters, and others. The groom thereby gains their ill will, and begets the blunt end of many practical jokes, the last of which is when the bell boys move the bathroom sign to the door of the newlyweds' suite. Unusual complications arise that make laughing situations. Willard Wayne and Alida Hayman are the principals.

Captain Peacock's second story is "Tickled in His Turn," being a joke turned on a husband who tried to make his wife believe it was not he whom she saw flirting with a chorus girl, but another man who resembled him. When he returns home late at night, his wife will not let him in, but instead informs him her husband is home and has retired for the night. Al. McKonnon is the husband, Peggy Coudray the wife, and Mina Cunard the maid.

W. W. Beaudine has the filming of the Harry Wulze comedy, "Their Dark Secret," being the adventures of Gale Henry, who reads from the tea cups that her husband's initials are to be B. V. D.

She finds him, and after a chase or two, a case of mistaken identity, and other trying situations, the man is finally landed. William Franey takes the part of Mr. B. V. D., Milburn Moranti the hotel clerk, and Charles Conklin the negro in the case.

"The Green-eyed Monster" gives to Lee Moran the part of a jealous husband, and Eddie Lyons the role of the college chum who is in love with his friend's wife. Vola Smith takes the part of the rich heiress whom Eddie hopes to win, but because of Old Man Jealousy constantly keeping two couples in a state of misunderstanding, his path of courtship is anything but smooth. Fred Gamble will be seen in the character part of the father of the heiress. The story was prepared by Bess Meredyth, who writes only for this company, and Louis Chaudet is in charge of filming the Nestor.

The "Sally Slopus" series of comedies featuring Jane Bernoudy as the slavey girl, is to be produced by P. T. Hartigan, and the first one "Her Fall to Fame," is now being filmed. It deals with Sally's endeavors to get a position with the Foolum Fillum Company. After she is once cast, her lover breaks in on the scene to save her from a burning building to the chagrin of the made-up people. The lover uses a fire hose, and to save themselves the actors resort to the same weapon. While the water duel is on, the fire burns out, and Sally saves herself but loses her position. Ernie Shields is the director of the Fillum Company, and Ed. Boland the cameraman.

The La Salle Motion Picture Company's first producing organization under the direction of M. de la Parelle, is making the final scenes for their first two-reel subject "The Flight That Failed." Unlike a majority of comedies, it gives a featured part and one of a heroic nature to the character known as the chief of police, played by Jean Otto. Others of the cast are Madge Kirby, late of Universal, and W. B. Scott; Miss Kirby appearing in the ingenue role, and Mr. Scott playing the part of the juvenile.

Reggie Lyons of the Christie Film Company's force is in charge of the photography, and G. E. Jenks, late scenario writer for Vogue, has been engaged to write scenarios. "The Flight That Failed" is the tale of an heiress who attempted to elope disguised as a messenger boy, but before she met her lover, she was caught by the chief of police, who thought she was bent upon robbery, and it develops that they are old sweethearts. The elopement is indefinitely postponed.

"Alice in Microland," by Edwards

A distinctive novelty with unlimited educational qualifications is shortly to be released through independent exchanges by J. T. Edwards, who has been engaged in the production for more than a year. The novelty will consist of a series to be known as "Alice in Microland." Alice in this instance is a little girl tired of the nursery playthings and her dolls, who becomes acquainted with a hermit who lives in seclusion that he may delve into scientific subjects, and be free from molestation. The hermit shows the girl the wonders of the microscope. The first subject will consist of four reels, and the principal objects to be shown are the various members of the fly family. The other five releases will be of two reels each, and will show the mosquito, red ant, and other insects known to every child.

The scientific microscopic feature of the film is made possible by the discovery of Louis H. Tolhurst who has perfected a new way of making motion pictures of microscopic objects.

Mr. Edwards is at this time just completing a five or six-reel subject which has been titled "The Montessori Method.' Dr. Marie Montessori spent considerable time at the San Francisco exposition last year demonstrating her method of child development, and it was at this time that Edwards became interested in making a film which would show this. The entire subject is based on the books by this well-known writer of child development, and shows the Montessori method of educating the child from the age of two and a half years until it becomes old enough to enter school. Orders for this film have been received from the Chinese government, and a number of copies have been booked for release in England and Spain, where Dr. Montessori is better known than in America.

Mabel Normand was the guest of honor at the luncheon of the Ad Club of Los Angeles, held last week at the Clark Hotel, and there served in the role of evangelist in a revival for new members. Monroe Lathrop, director of publicity for the Clune Film Producing Company, was one of the speakers of the day, and spoke of the methods of exploiting the feature film.

Edith Storey and her mother has arrived in Los Angeles on a pleasure trip, during which the well-known Vitagraph star will visit studios and spend two weeks among friends in the coast producing colony. Miss Storey may later be transferred to the coast producing company of the Vitagraph.

Current rumors in film circles are to the effect that Sid Chaplin has been granted a release on the Mutual program, and will shortly begin the making of comedies in Los Angeles. He has been here for the past several months the guest of his brother Charles, spending most of his time at the Lone Star studio. Definite information concerning the release will be given out by Mr. Chaplin shortly.

Helen Holmes as a Huntress in "Lass of the Lumberlands" (Signal)

Phillips Smalley is busy with the making of a two-reel subject titled "Two Rebels," with Roy Stewart as the featured player. The screen story is by Fred Myton of the Universal staff.

"Small Town Romeos"

The Lyons and Moran Company, under the direction of William Louis Chaudet is filming "Small Town Romeos" in which the well-known comedians appear as boobs, who become infatuated with the city cousin of their small town sweetheart. All the popular kid games including post-office, drop the handkerchief, and the dancing of the festive Virginia reel, will appear in the scenes, while Eddie and Lee put over the musicians act with accordian and mouth-organ. Priscilla Dean is the city girl.

This comedy company has just finished filming "The Angelic Trio," the title referring to three regular fellows, each one of which imagines the other to be a devout individual. They have some time in hiding their real characters, but eventually it all comes out, and they have a regular time. Louis Chaudet is the director. Besides Eddie and Lee, Priscilla Dean plays the leading feminine role, with Harry Nolan and Fred Gamble in the character roles.

Last week Lyons and Moran were the hosts of Clarence Oliver and Georgie Olp, who were in Los Angeles as headliners on the Orpheum vaudeville bill.

May Elmore Benson, character woman of the U stock company, who has played important character roles in subjects made in the last four years, died Saturday, September 30, at her Hollywood bungalow after a short illness.

Members of the Southern California Editorial Association, numbering more than one hundred, were guests of General Manager H. O. Davis at U City, September 26. The entire day was spent at the film city, and the many newspaper men who mold public opinion in California, saw the making of motion pictures for the first time in their lives. A reception was given for their honor in which many of the stars participated.

COBE MAKES WESTERN TOUR FOR UNITY

Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation, has been absent from his office in Chicago since the first of last week on a tour of the Western exchanges, which are handling "The Yellow Menace" and other features put out by Unity.

During the latter part of the summer, Mr. Cobe paid a visit to the East, South and Middle West and this trip, which he is now making, will complete the chain. Before Mr. Cobe returns to his office in Chicago, he will have personally visited every exchange handling "The Yellow Menace."

The United Film Service Company, handling "The Yellow Menace" in the Western territory, has exchanges in all the largest cities of the West and reports received by it show that the "Yellow Menace" is being well received in that section.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Paramount's Third Comedy Release, "A Troublesome Trip," Exciting as Well as Thoroughly Amusing

THE third comedy to be released by Paramount, since adding single-reel comedies to its list of "little features," will be "A Troublesome Trip" on October 30.

The story of this comedy has to do with Box Car Bill and Journeying Jim, two typical hoboes, who are seated on the steps of a lunch wagon at the far terminal of a street car line, pining for a meal.

The lone street car of the "Lazy Line" reaches the terminal and the crew, leaving their caps on the car, run into the lunch wagon for a bite before starting back.

A crochety traveling man, in a hurry to catch a train, paces up and down beside the car looking for the crew. The tramps hear him say to himself, "I'd give five dollars to make that 4:30 train." They get an inspiration, sneak into the car, put on the caps of the motorman and conductor, and confront the traveler, saying "Give us the five. We'll get you there!" He produces a bill, they pile him into the car, turn on the current and speed down the track.

People on the street corners flag the car and the boys decide that they might as well get all the fares they can. Follows a "troublesome trip" in which many types of people and several kinds of animals furnish a record amount of difficulties and excitement. Bill, as the conductor, collects a lot of money in fares, while both he and Jim have their hands full with a dog and cat fight, an Irishman with a goat and other things too numerous to mention. When the real car crew find that their car has been stolen, they telephone the car barns and several carmen are sent out with another car to stop the thieves. The two cars meet at full speed and a bad wreck seems inevitable. The tramps, however, jump their car right over the other car and continue on down the track.

A broken bridge looms up ahead, but the tramps fail to see the danger sign and the car crashes through the bridge into the river. As a finish the two tramps float down the river on the broken top of the car, dividing the profits they had realized from the trip.

Second Chapter of "A Lass of the Lumberlands" Will Be Released by Signal Through Mutual on October 30

First-chapter suspense becomes second-chapter thrill in Helen Holmes' new photodrama of the big woods and big business, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," the Signal-made serial released through the Mutual Film Corporation October 23, chapters to succeed each other every Monday for fifteen weeks.

In the second installment, on the screen October 30, "Dollar" Holmes lays the foundation for and then builds upon it the vast power and wealth possible to one who dominates the great lumber industry. Believing that his wife and infant daughter have lost their lives in a river accident, Holmes weds the daughter of Greer, president of the Amalgamated, and a son is born to him.

In reality, the wife and child he had cursed and driven from his cabin in his humble days have been rescued and given permanent home in a logger's cabin.

Twenty years elapse. Holmes' son Stephen finished his university schooling and starts home on the steamship Marathon. Helen has developed into a young woman of beauty and courage. The Marathon runs on a reef in a fog, and Stephen, panic-stricken, leaps overboard and swims out to sea instead of into land. Helen, witnessing his plight from a high cliff, but not knowing he is her own father's son, dives into the ocean and rescues him. In appreciation, the elder Holmes gives her a position in a station on his railroad.

Through that station he sends a telegram ordering his camp foreman to buy the holdings of a small timberman, and thereby ruin a group of his neighbors. Helen goes to the man's cabin and warns him. When Holmes' emissaries come to the cabin he refuses to sell, and they shoot him to death. Then comes a wild race by Holmes' men in an automobile and Helen by locomotive and canoe, each intent on first reaching the recorder's office, miles away, and filing on the dead man's lands.

The automobile crashes through a condemned bridge and falls forty feet into a river. The occupants of the car swim to shore. On a high trestle Helen's locomotive is stopped, and by means of a rope sling she is lowered into a canoe on the surface of the stream far below, and starts paddling along a short cut to the recorder's office. At this point the chapter fades out.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" FROM WORLD, NOVEMBER 13

Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For" will be seen November 13 in motion picture theatres served by the World Film Corporation. In the screen play Miss Brady has the role acted in the oral drama by Julia Dean, while Charles Richman's part is assumed by Montagu Love. Allan Atwell, who originally played the Jap valet so well that a noted New York politician bet fifty dollars he was a real Japanese, retains this character in the picture.

"WITHOUT A SOUL" IS A WORLD RELEASE SET FOR NOVEMBER 13

The second advance of the World Film Corporation's Clara Kimball Young Service is due for November 13. Its title is "Without a Soul," and it is a picturization of the novel "Lola."

The principal role in "Without a Soul" is the charming daughter of an elderly savant whose labors of years have been devoted to the perfection of rays which will create new life in the body of one who has passed beyond. Just when success has crowned his efforts the scientist's beloved daughter is struck by an automobile and killed, and he applies the vivifying rays to her inert body.

The physique responds, and Lola in all her corporeal loveliness is completely reenergized, but, alas, it has not been within the scope of the animating force to summon back her soul. From a girl with every charm of heart and character this radiantly beautiful creature instantly becomes sordid, vain, unscrupulous and wanton.

But the body cannot endure the pace of the appetites which run riot in the absence of a controlling spirit, and Lola goes home to die, while her grief-stricken father realizes that in the height of its success his discovery is a wretched failure.

"UNPROTECTED" IS A LASKY, THROUGH PARAMOUNT, ON NOVEMBER 6

The Lasky Company announces that "Unprotected," the next picture starring Blanche Sweet, has been completed and will be released on the Paramount Program November 6. It is the story of an innocent girl convicted of a crime and sentenced to a long term in jail. She is a Southerner and in accordance with the customs which prevail locally is farmed out by the warden to work on contract in the neighboring turpentine groves.

The story itself is a thrilling drama, detailing the sufferings of this innocent girl, who soon finds that she is in imminent peril of becoming the personal slave of the man to whom she has been leased as a laborer by the state. The rest of the story concerns itself with the rescue of the girl from her perilous position and the ultimate amelioration of the condition of the other prisoners of the camp.

DRA-KO WILL SHOW CHRISTMAS PICTURE ON NOVEMBER 11

The Dra-Ko Film Company, Inc., 1451 Broadway, announces its holiday picture, "A Visit from St. Nicholas" ready for showing on November 11. This is an animated cartoon five hundred feet in length, drawn by Frank A. Nankivell, an artist and cartoonist of international reputation. State right buyers are invited to view this subject.

Irene Castle, Beauty and Dancer, Gives Attractive Glimpses of the Part She Will Play in the Forthcoming International Serial, "Patria" (December 4)

"Patria" Is Serial Vehicle for Mrs. Vernon Castle and Will Be Released by International

"PATRIA," the preparedness photoplay serial of the International, with Mrs. Vernon Castle, famous actress and beauty in the title role, will be released throughout the United States on Monday, December 5. "Patria" has been many months in the making, and now it is about ready for presentation to the public.

Louis Joseph Vance, one of the foremost American authors and playwrights, wrote "Patria." As "Patria" is a serial, it would be unfair to reveal the whole of the plot. But this much of it is announced:

Patria Channing impersonated by Mrs. Castle, is left an orphan early in life, bereft, too, of all other relatives. Her life is moulded by a painstaking guardian, who has instilled in her mind from childhood the idea of patriotism. She knows little about herself, except that she possesses a vast fortune and that she must some day take her place at the head of the great manufacturing industries, including vast munitions plants, that is part of her inheritance.

When she reaches her twenty-first birthday, Patria discovers that in addition to her vast fortune, she has been left to administer an heritage of $100,000,000. This vast fund was created to be used when needed to prepare the nation against attack.

A grand ball is held at her home in Newport to celebrate her anniversary, and at which Patria learns the details of this inheritance. Scarcely has the first surprise passed than she is hurriedly called to the telephone. A message from New York informs her that her town has been entered and her guardian foully assassinated, presumably at the behest of influential Japanese and Mexicans.

Accompanied by Donald Parr, of the U. S. Secret Service, and the best friend she has left, Patria hurries to New York. No sooner has she reached there, than she encounters obstacles that seem almost insurmountable. The origin of most of them she is able to trace to the door of Baron Huroki, a powerful Japanese. Her home is burned, and later she is thrown into the ocean to drown. The fund of $100,000,000 is stolen, but is later recovered. Attempts are made by the Japanese and Mexicans to gain control of the munitions plant, but these are frustrated.

Patria Channing, in fact, goes through fire and water for the defence of her country. But she is made of the stuff of which heroines are made. Eventually her efforts are crowned with success.

The International has surrounded Mrs. Castle with a cast, foremost in which are Milton Sills, one of the foremost American actors, who plays Donald Parr; Warner Oland, who appears as the scheming Baron Huroki, and Dorothy Green, who plays the part of Fannie Adair, an accomplice of the plotters. Mr. Sills is best known in motion pictures for his work in "Deep Purple;" "Under Southern Skies;" "A Woman Who Lied;" "The Rack" and "The Honor System."

Mr. Oland, before he became a screen actor, played "heavies," with Viola Allen, Sothern and Marlowe, Nazimova and in "A Fool There Was" and "The Yellow Ticket." His greatest previous work as a moving picture actor has been with Theda Bara.

Miss Green is famous for her "vampire" characterizations. She has had many successes, the most notable recent ones having been "The Devil at His Elbow," "Souls , Aflame," "Parisian Romance," "The Spirit of the Poppy" and "Women and Wine."

"King Lear," with Frederick Warde, Ready for Release on December 17 by Thanhouser

EDWIN THANHOUSER announces that his production of Shakespeare's "King Lear," starring Frederick Warde, the eminent Shakespearian actor, will be released through the Pathe exchanges on December 17.

Mr. Warde has played "King Lear" and other Shakespearian productions throughout the United States, and is noted as an authority upon the works of the immortal bard.

The Thanhouser "King Lear" is Shakespeare in every detail, except that, of course, it is produced upon a vastly larger scale than ever was possible on the speaking stage. Mr. Thanhouser believes that Shakespeare knew how to write and made no attempts to improve upon the story. He did improve, however, upon the production itself.

Castles were built and thousands of persons were employed in the making of the play. "King Lear," with its pathetic story of the old father who banishes the daughter who loves him and gives his all to the daughters who despise him, lends itself readily to the screen.

Mr. Warde as the king, portrays his transformation, as his mind weakens, into a dottering, persecuted old man.

Ernest Warde, son of Frederick Warde, directed the picture and plays the fool, the same part he played on the speaking stage with his father. J. H. Gilmour, famous for his work with Edmund Booth, is the faithful Earl of Kent. Lorraine Huling is Cordelia and Ina Hammer and Edith Diestel are the faithless daughters. Wayne Arey, as the Duke of Albany, Boyd Marshall as the King of France, Hector Dion as Edmund and Edwin Stanley as Edgar are among the other prominent players in the cast.

FLORENCE TURNER IS CAST AS ITALIAN GIRL IN "REDEEMED"

In "Redeemed," the forthcoming Mutual Star Production, Florence Turner is cast as Marea, a little Italian girl adrift in London.

Under the direction of Larry Trimble, scenes for "Redeemed" were taken in the burning Adelphi theatre with a panic stricken mob trying to escape through blocked doors.

In this story a helpless foreign girl is cast into the hands of villains by her own cousin, a selfish actress, but she holds her own and wins the place her cousin loses in the end.

"Redeemed" has for background London in all its teeming bustle of humanity.

Ask any old line Exhibitor what brought him the most money since moving pictures were first shown and he will tell you—"THE PROGRAM."

Ask him why and he will answer that the program with its short snappy diversified subjects enabled him to give more shows than he can now with features; this program pleased the entire family; the people who patronized his House didn't have to stand in line and wait,—neither did they have to come at any stated time in order to see the whole show, or see the last part of a feature first (as today) and then wait over to see the first part last.

The thought "Let's go to the Movies" always brought and always will bring an instantaneous decision on the part of the whole family to go because the whole family finds something to please them on the UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. Thus, with the tremendous pulling power of the UNIVERSAL PROGRAM plus the

L-KO KOMEDY News

JULIUS STERN, Pres. 6140 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Cal. Nov. 4, 1916

JULIUS STERN,
President and General Manager L-Ko Comedy Co.

THE old adage, "A new broom sweeps clean," seems to have unusual realization in the recent reorganization of the L-Ko Komedy Co's forces at Hollywood, California. Since the advent of Julius Stern at the L-Ko studios things have been happening thick and fast. Now that Mr. Stern has been elected to the office of President and General Manager he has swept aside all the old time methods of comedy productions, surrounded himself with the most capable comedy people in the business, and is headed on the straight road to a huge success. Associated with Mr. Stern at the L-Ko studios in Hollywood are his brother, Abe Stern, as Secretary and Treasurer, and J. G. Blystone as Director General, plus a combination of other clever minds not found in the comedy film field in this or any other country. The old regime has been entirely discarded. Entirely new and cleverer methods have been instituted throughout the entire plant. The vulgar slap stick has been "canned." The old time thread bare "love in the park—brick throwing" picture has also been sent to the scrap heap. L-KO'S from Mr. Stern's advent have taken on a new dress. Newer in idea—newer in props, newer in every detail of production and no expense being spared now to make L-KO the topnotchers in the entire comedy producing field. Mr. Stern can feel complimented by the associates who have surrounded him and thru whose loyalty and brains, plus Mr. Stern's own initiative, augur a huge success for L-KO films and for all Exhibitors who are now showing them or who will show them.

"ALICE IN SOCIETY"

Latest L-Ko Makes Tremendous Hit in New York City

Manager of Mt. Morris Theatre Says It Tops Any Thing in Comedies Ever Shown At His House

WHEN all of us in the film trades get right down to brass tacks and talk plain without the fancy advertising phrases that anyone can use, we all know in our hearts that the acid test for any picture whether drama or comedy is the public. When the public respond so strong as to stand out a block long in line to see a comedy, you can beturesweetlife its got to be a good comedy. Alice Howell in "Alice in Society," one of the latest L-KO releases, stood the crowds out in line for hours, and you can take the theatre manager's word for it as being a good comedy or not just as you wish. Anyhow read what M. Edelstein of the Mount Morris Theatre (one of the largest theatres in Harlem) said about "Alice in Society": "All that you have heard about comedies not being well done in three reels is all a mistake. I write you of my experience, not of my own opinion. My audience, the other night saw your 'Alice in Society' and they screamed and screamed and screamed from the first flicker of the picture till the very last. I have been an Exhibitor many years and played all sorts of comedies and I must admit that I never heard any audience go into such convulsions of laughter as they did on your 'Alice in Society.' I watched it myself and laughed till the tears ran down my face. First time I've done that in many months." Signed M. Edelstein, Mt. Morris Theatre, 116th St. and 5th Ave., New York City. Even the critical reviewers on the trade papers stated that "Alice in Society" was a side splitter.

You simply can't hold 'em back. Every release adds up to a larger total of comedy successes. L-KO growing by leaps and bounds. Reason? Quality—punch—action—superiority in every detail. Book these and watch for the others coming constantly.

All these L-Ko's made exclusively under the direct supervision of J. G. Blystone, since the advent of Mr. Stern as President of L-Ko.:

"Crooked from the Start," "Cold Hearts and Hot Flames," "A Surgeon's Revenge," "Tillie's Terrible Tumble," "A Rural Romance," "Terrors of a Turkish Bath," "Alice in Society," "Murdered by Mistake," "A Mid-Air Mix-up," "Unhand Me, Villain," "Lizzie's Lingering Love,' "Where Is My Husband," "Temper-mental Mother-in-Law," "The Right Car, but the Wrong Berth," "Where Is My Wife," "Pirates of the Air."

Book "ALICE IN SOCIETY." Advertise your head off. Describe it as the funniest picture ever projected on any screen. The picture will make good ten times over. It's a whale. It's a riot. Get it NOW.

COMING

Sensational L-Ko with Alice Howell and great cast

Ss-h-h-h-h, whisper it softly. Keep it dark temporarily. Careful, so on hearing the news that your competitor don't get it away from you. It's coming. On the same day "The Isle of Life" is released the Nestor comedy, "Love and a Liar," featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean will be submitted to an indulgent public. The story of this comedy was written by Tom Gibson and produced by S. Chaudet. Fred Gamble plays an important role in the production.

On October 31, Gretchen Lederer and William Quinn co-star in "The Masked Woman," a three-reel Gold Seal underworld and society drama scenarioized by Harvey Gates from the story by Tom Gibson and produced by A. W. Rice. The principals in the drama are supported by Lloyd Whitlock, George C. Pearce and Jessie Arnold. The Victor comedy, "Victor on the Job," also will be released on October 31. This special one reeler was written by Harry Wulze and produced by Joseph De Grasse. George Felix, Eva Loring, Lon Chaney and Lydia Yeamons Titus play the principal roles.

"Terrors of a Turkish Bath," a two-reel L-Ko comedy featuring Dan Russell will be released on November 1 as the feature of the day. No. 44 of the Universal Animated Weekly and "The Midnight Toll," a one-reel Laemmle drama will also be released on this date, in addition to a Special one-reel Laemmle the title of which has not yet been decided.

On November 2, Douglas Gerrard and Francelia Billington will be seen in "Her Wedding Day," a two-reel Laemmle society drama produced by Mr. Gerrard from the story by I. M. Ingleton which was scenarioized by Harvey Gates. Ruth Clifford and Willard Wayne play important parts in the production. On the same day "Sea Mates," a Big U drama featuring Claire McDowell will be released with Clyde Benson, Harold Sinner and C. H. Mailes appearing in support. The story of "Sea Mates" was written by Francis Powers, scenarioized by F. M. Wiltermood and produced by Francis Powers. The third release on this date is a Powers split reel including "Sammie Johnson Minds the Baby," a comic animated cartoon and "Ceylon," an educational split reel of the Dr. Dorsey series.

Agnes Vernon and Malcolm Blevins co-star on November 3, in "Stumbling," an Imp two-reel underworld drama, the story of which was written by Max Genaske, scenarioized by Harvey Gates and produced by Leo Kent. Jack Livingston, Ray Hanford, Constance Johnson and Edwin Clark appear in support of the principals. "Us Kids," a Powers juvenile comedy, produced by Lule Warrington also will be released on November 3, with Ray Clark, George Hupp, Clara Horton, Dorothy Clark, John Sterling, Elizabeth Janes and Beth Roland, in the juvenile roles. There will be no Rex released on this date. Wallace Reid also will appear on November 3 in "Starlight's Message," a Special Big U one-reel Indian drama with a most exciting plot.

On November 4 Edith Johnson and Edward Hearn will co-star in "For Love and Gold," a Bison two-reel Mexican mining drama. The story of "For Love and Gold," was written by E. M. McCall, scenarioized by William Parker and produced by Henry McRae. L. C. Shumway, Marc Fenton, E. N. Walleck and Charles Dorien play important roles in the picture. "A Shadowed Shadow," a Joker comedy written by Jack Byrne and produced by W. W. Beaudine also will be released on November 4. Gale Henry and William Franey play the principal roles supported by Milburn Moranti, Lillian Peacock, Charles Conklin and Dan Duffy. There will be no Laemmle release on November 4.

Peggy Coudray and Dana Ong will appear in "Her Vanished Youth," a Rex drama, on November 5, with Walter Yant and Virgle Foltz appearing in support. "Her Vanished Youth" was written by Marie Havey and produced by O. C. Kelsey. The feature of November 5, however, will be "The Bandit's Wager," in which Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, most popular of all co-stars, will be presented. This Big U drama was written by Miss Cunard and produced by Mr. Ford. "The Secret Cellar," a two-reel detective drama featuring King Baggot will be released as a special Imp on this date. There will be no L-Ko release on November 5.

Mary Miles Minter and Margarita Fischer Lead Off for Mutual Week of October 30

MARY MILES MINTER and Margarita Fischer will head the release schedule of Mutual Film Corporation the week of October 30.

Miss Minter will appear on Monday, October 30, in "Faith," the third of her series of Mutual Star productions for the Mutual produced at the studios of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, Cal. In it the star appears in the role of a girl in search of mother love. "Faith" was written especially for her by James Kirkwood, her director.

Perry Banks appears in the role of a one time brilliant lawyer degraded by drink, who summons all his past powers together for the supreme effort which saves Faith, the only one who has befriended him, from the dishonor that others would place upon her.

Miss Minter's sister, Margaret Shelby, is also seen in the cast, as is Lizette Thorne, Mrs. Gertrude Le Brandt, Josephine Taylor and Clarence Burton.

Margarita Fischer's role is that of Yulita, a daughter of the South Seas, in the five-part drama, "The Pearl of Paradise," which will mark the actress's first appearance in Mutual Star productions, and her return to the Mutual after an absence of considerably over a year.

"Miss Jackie of the Navy," a drama in which Miss Fischer plays the role of a girl masquerading as a boy, formerly announced as the first of Miss Fischer's five-part pictures made by the Pollard Picture Plays Company, under the direction of Harry Pollard, has been postponed until a later date.

Located in the South Sea Islands, with all the wild beauty of nature unmarred by commerce, "The Pearl of Paradise" is one of the most gorgeously set of any picture seen on the screen. Director Pollard has taken every advantage of the background to make this story of primitive life and passions and of the love story of a naive girl realistic.

As Gomez, the father, appears Joseph Harris. Harry Pollard plays the role of the beloved John Dallow, J. Gordon Russell is the trouble making element as Captain Piete Van Dekken, an uncouth suitor for Yulita's hand. Beatrice Van appears in the role of the fiancee of John Dallow.

There will be three dramas of short length during the week. "Paying the Price," a two-reel Mutual, will appear on Monday, October 30. "Canned Curiosity," will be released on Thursday, November 2, and "The Eternal Challenge" will go out on Saturday, November 4.

Edwin August will appear in his third Mutual short drama release in "Canned Curiosity," a drama with a comedy touch. He is supported in this playlet by Iva Shepard, William Bailey, Ruth Blair and others.

Orral Humphrey, the eccentric American comedian, appears in two diversified comedies released in one reel on Tuesday, October 31.

"The Last Thrust" is purely comedy, being the story of mix ups and funny rivalries, but "Spartan Spleen" contains enough of the dramatic and the real heroic to make it rather a drama with strong comedy element.

"Nearly a Hero," a Cub comedy, will be released on Friday, and on Sunday, November 5, Paddy McQuire, the Vogue's screaming comedy hit, will appear in "Bungling Bill's Bow Wow." Between a mongrel cur which has brains, and Paddy McQuire, this two-reel Vogue is a continual laugh.

The Mutual's usual weekly output of scenic, current news and magazine material produced by the Gaumont Company will appear on Wednesday and Sunday. Mutual Weekly No. 94 and the split reel-scenic-comic "See America First" and "Kartoon Komic" will appear on Wednesday. "Reel Life," the Mutual's magazine in film will appear on Sunday.

DUSTIN FARNUM IN "A SON OF ERIN," FROM PALLAS, NOVEMBER 9

As its next release on the Paramount Program, Pallas Pictures announces "A Son of Erin," starring Dustin Farnum. The subject treats of metropolitan politics and offers Dustin Farnum in the role of an honest young Irishman who succeeds in breaking up a big political machine. In contrast with the complex unseen currents of graft in a big American city, "A Son of Erin" presents also the daily life of the poor farm tenants in Ireland.

The new Dustin Farnum vehicle also presents a big thrill in the way of the spectacular collapse of a poorly built viaduct. It was only after extended search and negotiation that the desired location was secured for this scene, which presents the actual destruction of a portion of a big viaduct now in course of construction near Los Angeles. Five cameramen were used to insure the filming of the scene.

Appearing opposite the star is his well-known leading lady, Winifred Kingston, in the role of the sweet Irish lass. Others in the cast are Jack Livingston, J. Wallace, Winifred McDonald, Wallace Pyke, Lee Willard, Mabel Wiles and Hugh B. Koch.

Staged under the direction of Julia Crawford Ivers, who is also its author, and photographed under the supervision of J. O. Taylor, "A Son of Erin" offers another Pallas Pictures masterpiece as regards detail, thoroughness of settings, together with artistic photographic effects. It will be released on the Paramount Program, November 9.

RELIGIOUS THEME IN "WORLD AND THE WOMAN," THANHOUSER

A subject with a strong religious theme is "The World and the Woman," a Thanhouser feature, starring Jeanne Eagels, and set for release through the Pathe exchanges in November.

Miss Eagels played the leading role on tour in "Outcast" and is to be featured in a play to be produced by Joseph Brooks on Broadway this fall. "The World and the Woman" is the first big picture she has done.

The story is by Philip Lonergan. Supporting Miss Eagels in "The World and the Woman" are Boyd Marshall, Thomas A. Curran, Wayne Arey, Grace De Carlton, Carey Hastings and little Ethelmary Oakland, who is the child under whose influence "the woman" fights her way back to a righteous life. Eugene Moore is the director.

First Mary Pickford Picture to Be Released on November 6 in Eighty Theatres Simultaneously

NOVEMBER 6 has been set by Artcraft Pictures Corporation as the release date for Mary Pickford's first superior production, "Less Than the Dust." On that day eighty theatres in the United States will show this picture simultaneously. This is believed to be a record for a feature of the length of "Less Than the Dust." The list, which is nearly completed, promises to be a formidable one and includes practically all the most prominent circuits in the country.

Among the notable additions made recently to the number of theatres which have booked the new Artcraft productions are the circuits of S. Katz, Ascher Bros. and Lubliner & Trinz in Chicago. Max Goldstine, manager of the Chicago exchange, has already booked Mary Pickford productions in more than thirty theatres in that city. This preliminary chain will keep "Less Than the Dust" in Chicago for exactly 100 days. Jones, Linnick & Schaeffer's Colonial and the Bijou Dream have signed for two weeks for each picture. The Alhambra in Milwaukee is another big first run house and Mr. Goldstine's list includes the most progressive theatres in Illinois, the southern part of Wisconsin and the eastern part of Iowa.

Arthur G. Whyte in the New York exchange has put on the Academy of Music as a companion to the Strand and reports that negotiations for other large and popular houses are approaching a satisfactory conclusion. Every state in New England is well represented in the business obtained by the Boston exchange. Cincinnati, Cleveland, Washington, Baltimore, St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Butte, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle are other centres which are to have Artcraft service for long runs in numerous theatres.

One of the most remarkable examples of enterprise that has yet come to the notice of Artcraft is that displayed by the Majestic theatre in Dayton, Ohio. Gerber & Haas, managers of the Majestic, have ordered thirty-one 24-sheet stands of Mary Pickford which they will cover two weeks before showing, with the special printing prepared for "Less Than the Dust." Their campaign will cover twenty-one towns adjacent to Dayton and seventeen newspapers in that territory will carry advertising of the new Mary Pickford productions.

Mutual Announces Releases on Margarita Fischer Series, Made by the Pollard Company

FROM the Mutual offices comes the announcement of the titles and dates of the Margarita Fischer series of feature dramas to be released beginning in November. The pictures are the product of the Pollard Picture Plays Company, which, under the direction of Harry Pollard, the actor-director long associated with Miss Fischer, are being made at the Exposition grounds at San Diego, Cal.

"The Pearl of Paradise," already announced as Miss Fischer's first release of the series, will appear on Thursday, November 2.

This is a story of the South Sea Islands, picturesque both as to setting, costuming, and to characterization. It is the picturization of a story recently published in the Parisienne magazine.

"Miss Jackie of the Navy" will be the second drama. It is scheduled for release on November 30. In this picture the star masquerades in the clothes of a jolly little tar and gets herself into all sorts of trouble.

On December 28, "The Butterfly Girl" will appear, the third of Miss Fischer's pictures. Then will come "The Knight of Tarquizzi," a drama that is booked for January 25. "Birds of Passage," the fifth picture will go out, it is expected, on February 22. On March 22, "The Light of Heaven," the last picture so far chosen, will make its appearance.

Supporting Miss Fischer, aside from Harry Pollard, are Beatrice Van, Jack Mower, Joseph Harris, John Steppling. Julian Louis Lamothe is the scenario editor for this photoplay company.

WEST TO DIRECT DOROTHY DALTON

Raymond B. West is next to direct Dorothy Dalton and Howard Hickman in a co-starring vehicle, written by J. G. Hawks of the Ince scenario staff. One of the principal supporting players will be Charles Gunn. Miss Dalton and Hickman will be remembered as co-stars in "The Jungle Child" recently released.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Fireproof Film Exchange Building for Washington

AT last Washington, D. C., is to have a fireproof film exchange building. This comes as the latest move of Tom Moore, the original exchangeman in the city and at present its wealthiest exhibitor, with the Strand, Garden, Plaza and other enterprises under his control.

A film building complying with fire regulations and adequately equipped for exchange needs has been long needed in the Capital City, where fifteen separate exchange offices are located. These are scattered in various parts of the motion picture district, in many cases in buildings which are ill-suited to their purposes. Owing to fire regulations, the question of locating a film exchange always presents an extremely bothersome and difficult matter.

In the past, projects have been advanced for a film building, but they have never materialized. The building Mr. Moore contemplates will be located on Eighth street, occupying a piece of ground 51 feet by 100 feet. The height of the edifice will depend upon the exchanges and offices applying for space.

It is proposed that the building will include a large projection room, ample space for lithograph and lobby display, as well as for all theatre equipment and projection machines. There will be a large lobby, commodious elevator service for freight, and other service long desired by exchangemen.

One of the most important features of such a concentration of film men will be the centralizing of express service. This has become a source of annoyance in Washington owing to the fact that the expressman must call at so many offices within a limited time. Already an emergency private express has been established to collect "left-over" and "late" films and packages from exchangemen and theatres, so as to start them on the earliest outgoing trains. It is believed that such calls could be taken care of by the express companies if only one establishment were to be visited.

Already several film exchanges have applied for space in the new building and others are contemplating an application. An early selection of space will have its advantage in that the offices may be constructed according to the needs of the individual tenant. It is stated that the Film Exchange Building will have a height of about eight stories, from the present outlook of occupancy.

Artcraft Branch in Philadelphia, Under Supervision of Cunningham, Is Attracting Attention by Its Artistic Decorations

THAT the Artcraft Picture Corporation deserves its name is shown as far as Philadelphia is concerned. There the branch, now in full swing at 1220 Vine street, has been fixed up in artistic fashion under the supervision of Manager Boyd Cunningham.

Situated on a side of Vine street that had been rather neglected, the new exchange wil give impetus to its immediate neighborhood, while across the street the rapidly ascending Jarvis Building, which will house several prominent exchanges, bids fair to make things hum on that side.

The Artcraft is decorated in artistic tones of soft blues and grays with which the light woodwork harmonizes beautifully. A handsome oil painting of Little Mary adorns the walls.

The window is gay with the Artcraft trade mark border painted in gold and blue and red and black with a large oil painting of Mary Pickford as a centerpiece.

Even amongst the several notable window signs in Film Row, this attracts notice and admiration.

Mr. Cunningham believes in efficient service and with this conviction has paid particular attention to the advertising accessory department which has been so arranged that all publicity helps can go out twenty to thirty days ahead of playing dates.

The Philadelphia Exchange is determined to set new standards in effective service to those exhibitors who will book the Artcraft features.

Another policy of the Philadelphia office is not to employ any solicitors. That this meets with the approval of the trade is shown by the large number of bookings already in, and others on the way.

The first Pickford release, "Less Than the Dust," will have its Philadelphia premiere at the Stanley theatre on November 6. Here it will run a week, followed by a week at the Palace and a week at the Belmont in West Philadelphia.

Other week-long bookings already arranged for in Pennsylvania are: The Arcadia, Reading; Strand, of Scranton; Savoy, of Wilkes-Barre; in New Jersey, one of the Stanley houses in Atlantic City and the Colonial theatre in Camden.

J. H. Blawitz has resigned from the Monarch Film exchange, Kansas City, to work for the Bluebird exchange as traveling salesman.

HATCH IS TRANSFERRED TO CINCINNATI

S. W. Hatch, who has been manager of the V-L-S-E Exchange in St. Louis since the establishment of the office, has been transferred to the Cincinnati branch, and left St. Louis last week for his new headquarters. Mr. Hatch is well known and well liked in St. Louis territory, and takes with him all the good wishes of many friends and business acquaintances. Mr. Hatch went to St. Louis from Buffalo, where he had been affiliated with the Mutual Corporation. A. N. Webster, from New York, has been put in charge of the St. Louis branch of the exchange, at 3530 Olive street.

The Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Exchange has moved from the Empress Theatre building to larger quarters in the Plaza building, at 3315 Olive street. The new office has two entrances, one on Olive street and one on Lindell boulevard. These two entrances are possible because of the triangular shape of the building. New vaults have been built and the office force has been increased.

I. P. Rosenberg, former manager, has been appointed special representative of the organization and Jack E. Burthorn has been put in charge of the exchange. F. H. Craenbrock is assistant manager. Mr. Burthorn has been with Kleine in Indianapolis and was transferred from that office to the St. Louis branch. He has had much experience in the handling of films, and for a time was an actor on the legitimate stage. The K-E-S-E makes the fourth film exchange in the Plaza building.

FRED MURPHY MOVES UP ALL THE TIME—HE CAN'T BE KEPT AT A STANDSTILL

Fred E. Murphy, the new vice-president and general manager of the Unicorn, has been in Boston taking up a few loose ends at the local office. He announced the expansion of the company on December 1 to include six new offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas.

Mr. Murphy is one more addition to the list of New England men who have achieved directorship of national film companies, taking his place with Hiram Abrams of the Paramount, Walter Green of the Pickford Company, and Louis Mayer of the Metro. Mr. Murphy entered the film trade in January, 1913, with the Mutual Boston office at a salary of twenty-five dollars a week. He next opened the New England office of the World Film in Boston. He left them to purchase a half interest in the Boston United office, and within a short time had brought out seven other United offices, subsequently shifting them to the Unicorn, of which company he now has control.

MARSON GETS SELIG BASEBALL PICTURES FOR BOSTON

The prints of the Selig "World Series Baseball" pictures, anxiously awaited, arrived in Boston last week. Manager R. D. Marson of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Exchange immediately telephoned the sporting editors of the Boston papers and a special run-off was given at 5 o'clock for their benefit. Some of the photographers who manoeuvered the eight cameras at the Boston and Brooklyn baseball grounds were present. All were delighted with the results, and said that Selig was justified by the results in paying $25,000 for the exclusive rights for the "World Series."

The pictures, which comprise 5,000 feet of film, were made under the direction of J. C. Wheeler, and were taken from every angle of the field, the camera men perching on top of the grandstands, or crouching in the dugouts, or rushing to third or home to get a close play. The much discussed play in which the Boston catcher puts out a Brooklyn player after the latter's circuit of the bases on a long hit is shown distinctly, the Brooklyn man being blocked off from tagging the base. The parade of the Boston rooters after the games is shown, and the Brooklynites playfully heaving the cushions at them.

Manager Marson is busy booking the prints, which will be shown in practically all the first-class Boston houses. They are a departure from the usual baseball pictures, being exceptionally clear.

MANY CHANGES TAKE PLACE AT GENERAL EXCHANGE IN KANSAS CITY

There have been many changes at the Kansas City, Mo., General Film exchange during the past week. Thomas Dodd, who heretofore has worked as night shipper, but who, during the past summer has been at Nevada with the 3rd Regiment, has been promoted to booker.

William R. Keane, who has been with the firm for some time, has taken the position recently vacated by M. A. Tanner, who went to the Monarch exchange.

S. A. Hamilton, shipper, has been promoted to the position of booker.

One of the first impressions the visitor to the General Film Company exchange gets is that of the "pep" the fellows of the office put into their work. This has resulted in a big business, for enthusiasm always brings success. "The Girl from Frisco" has been the object of many requests reports J. W. Hicks, Jr., the live exchange manager of the General. Mr. Hicks made a trip to Chicago recently, to confer with F. C. Aiken, the district manager.

PATHE IN BUTTE MOVES TO MORE CONVENIENT QUARTERS

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Butte, moved into larger and more convenient quarters last week, from the Silver Bow Block, where they were on the fifth floor, to the ground floor of a fireproof building at 124 West Granite street. Metro and Mutual are also considering moving to the same building, and if they do, the other exchanges will probably follow, making it the exchange center of the town, and a short block and a half from the theatre center.

Many Changes Made in Greater Vitagraph Exchanges on West Coast

A MOST unusual and very appropriate invitation was issued by the Los Angeles Mutual Exchange to exhibitors for the private showing of the first episode of the new Mutual Signal serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," featuring Helen Holmes. This was prepared by Charles Cochard, in charge of the serial booking department, who had the invitation printed on a thin piece of redwood. Upon the opposite side is a picture taken from a still from the first episode of the serial.

Several changes have been made in respect to the Greater Vitagraph coast exchanges. Harry Naugel, who since the organization of the V-L-S-E has been manager of the Los Angeles exchange, has been promoted to the position of Pacific Coast manager of the Greater Vitagraph, and will retain headquarters in Los Angeles. J. A. Ferris, an assistant of Mr. Naugel at the Los Angeles exchange, has been named manager of the Seattle branch, and H. M. Lentz the manager of the Los Angeles exchange.

X. K. Stout, manager of the San Francisco Mutual Exchange, is spending a few days with Manager W. J. Drummond of the Los Angeles branch, conferring with respect to slight changes in the territory to insure more prompt service to theatres.

Dan Markowitz, manager of the San Francisco Universal Exchange, is spending a few days in Los Angeles and at Universal City to get acquainted with production conditions.

The first release of the Clara Kimball Young films, being handled in Southern California and Arizona by Sol L. Lesser's All-Star Feature Distributors, has been booked for two weeks' run at Tally's Broadway theatre, and for the first time in the history of this house the prices are to be increased during the showing of this subject. In the past the Tally theatre has had very exceptional business. This was formerly the home of the Paramount program, and there practically all of the Mary Pickford subjects were shown to big business.

Mr. Tally has anonunced that he has booked the Artcraft releases which are handled in that territory by a San Francisco exchange. The Clara Kimball Young picture has also had successful booking at Graug's theatre, Bakersfield, Cal., for four days; Opera House at San Bernardino, Cal., three days; Regent theatre, Riverside, Cal., three days; New Grand at Anaheim, Cal., for two days; La Petite theatre, Ocean Park, Cal., two days, and a number of other theatres.

The Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley state rights feature, "Where Are My Children?" which deals with the question of birth control, is now having its second downtown run in Los Angeles. When first released this picture ran four weeks at Clune's Broadway to record-breaking business, during this record run for that theatre, and it is now playing to big business at the Garrick, Los Angeles.

Sol Lesser and Leon Netter Acquire Rights to Big Film for Their Pennsylvania Territory

SOL LESSER and Leon Netter, owners of Masterpiece Film Attractions, have just acquired the rights to one of the biggest film features that has been produced this season, the name of which will be announced shortly.

While Mr. Netter was absent from his Philadelphia headquarters several days, engineering the deal, the exchange was in the hands of Assistant Manager Ashcraft.

"Purity," for which the Masterpiece firm has many states, has successfully passed the rigid Ohio and Kansas censors.

In the latter state it was stopped by authorities in two cities, but on appeals to the courts was allowed to proceed and showed to bigger houses than ever.

At the Criterion in Atlantic City "Purity" broke all records of attendance by 1,400 admissions.

Bookings on this release had been unexpectedly large in New Jersey, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia.

This, however, should not be surprising, for exhibitors are getting considerable help in the advertising line.

Entirely new series of paper has been gotten out by the publicity experts, Hagerty and Bell of Phialdelphia, who are handling this end of it for Mr. Netter. Original ideas in posters, heralds and novelties have been designed by Cisar, a well-known Philadelphia artist.

"The Spoilers," another of the Masterpiece features, has proved one of the best pictures ever handled in Philadelphia.

"Neptune's Daughters," which Netter held quiescent for a time, will acquire unusual popularity from now on, owing to the new Annette Kellermann film, "A Daughter of the Gods," showing in Philadelphia this week.

This new picture is only going to big special theatres this season. But the publicity created for the fair Annette will make the public eager to see her in something else. Behold the psychological moment for Neptune's Daughters" to get good booking. Incidentally, the double publicity will do no harm to "A Daughter of the Gods."

"COMMON LAW" IS PICTURE WITH NO COMMON DRAWING POWER

The latest Clara Kimball Young production, "The Common Law," got a flying start in Michigan, and nothing can stop this feature being a tremendous box office attraction wherever it is booked.

The Broadway-Strand Theatre in Detroit played "The Common Law" for two weeks, ending October 21, to the biggest business in its history. During this engagement prices were advanced to twenty-five cents as the lowest admission price, both afternoons and evenings. Harry I. Garson, who has the state rights in Michigan and who has handled other successful features, says that on on no previous feature has he ever received as many voluntary bookings as on "The Common Law."

Business in Dallas, Texas, Pleases Exchangemen and Exhibitors —Unity Sales Offices Opened in Heart of Film District

A. W. PLUES, roadman for the V-L-S-E of Dallas, who has been laid up in Brownsville, Texas, for the past six or eight weeks with a complication of ills, is able to be back "on the job" to a modified extent, at least. Instead of getting back into the "hard road life," Plues is in the Dallas office holding down a mahogany-desk job. Though he has not yet regained his strength, he is making himself useful around the Greater Vitagraph office in Dallas.

The Liberty theatre at Houston, under the guidance of H. C. Norfleet, is one of the first theatres, if not the first, in the Southwest to put on a serial, continued from day to day. On the first of October Mr. Norfleet opened with Billie Burke's "Gloria's Romance," running the first four chapters. A program like this was used for three days; then the next four chapters were put on. When the first episodes were put on a "Billie Burke Serial" ticket book, good for the entire serial, was sold at fifty cents. It is needless to add that the venture was profitable, even though it was second-run.

W. B. Wesley, now with William Eppstein of San Antonio, the exhibitor who grabbed "Unborn" for the Southwest, has been hiking all over Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas with this big picture; and you should listen to Wesley's tales of "prosperity." According to him, the Southwest is enjoying its bumper year—and "Wes" is not far off, even though his vision is from the receipts of "Unborn." Wesley was formerly with Kleine in Dallas and has been a very successful road man. His work with "Unborn" has kept him busy writing contracts in every city in the three states, and numerous return engagements and second-runs.

The Unity Sales Corporation has opened offices in Dallas, in the heart of the film district, at 1911½ Commerce street, with Francis J. Gilbert behind the "mahogany." Mr. Gilbert is well known to Southwestern exhibitors, having been one of the first independent exchangemen in the territory, with the All-Star productions several years ago. He also exploited the world-famous "Cabiria" throughout the Southwest.

In addition to "The Yellow Menace," the Unity will handle a regular weekly program, consisting of five or six reel features, one and two reel comedies, among which will be the "Tweedledum" series.

M. J. Mintz, special representative for the company out of New York, has been in Dallas for the past two weeks organizing the territory, and, in association with Manager Gilbert, a large number of contracts for Unity film have been made.

The Clara Kimball Young productions have started very auspiciously in the Dallas territory, opening at the Washington theatre, Dallas, for first run Sunday, October 8, for a week. The productions are handled in the Southwest by the J. A. Cressey Interest, who recently moved from the Southwestern Life Building to the film district, 1815½ Main street, upstairs over the Southern Theatre Equipment Company, where they have comfortable and roomy quarters. Frank M. Sanford, who opened the World office several years ago in Dallas, is managing the office, and L. C. McHenry is assistant manager and supervisor of sales. Mr. McHenry is also a former World exchange manager. In addition to Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the territory handled by most feature exchanges in Dallas, this office has Louisiana also; and have been directing their attention to the city of New Orleans, with the result that the Pearce interests will run Clara Kimball Young's future releases.

Sometime ago the Southern Cabiria Company started business in Dallas, handling "Cabiria" and a few independent features. The concern has kept "plugging" and now they have a large business on "Mutt and Jeff," "Katzenjammer Kids," "The Unwritten Law," from the California Motion Picture Corporation, and other worth while productions. Almost every town you drop in is plastered with one-sheets of "Mutt and Jeff" or the "Katzenjammers," and Beatriz Michelena's "The Unwritten Law" brought Ray Stinnett at the Jefferson theatre, Dallas, so much business in three days that he has arranged a return engagement.

Warren Shorts went from Atlanta to Dallas last spring to catch a film pirate. He caught the pirate, but he spent some time in doing it. Having been "around" Dallas for several days, he liked it—so well, that he opened an office at 1911½ Commerce street, in Film Row. In addition to his Castle picture, "The Whirl of Life," he is now handling the war release, "How Britain Prepared" for C. E. Tandy of Atlanta. It is a 12-part production, and if Short talks to you five minutes, you'll think like him—that it's some picture—and it is. October 8 began a week's engagement at the Dallas Opera House, with the paste-boards going fast.

J. Charles Groshut, formerly director of sales for the Ambrosia American Company and other producers, in New York is now special representative for the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, featuring Mary Pickford productions, and has been spending the last month in Dallas, getting that office under way. Mr. Groshut has had quite a success with Pickford contracts, and says that there is quite a demand for productions featuring the dainty little star.

While talking with Mr. Groshut, the talk drifted to the exhibitors in the Southwest, and their co-operation with each other and the exchanges. Mr. Groshut was very enthusiastic over the friendly attitude of the exhibitors toward him, and he said that exhibitors in the Southwest territory were of a much higher type than he expected—as good men as any in the country, he added—and who are realizing the benefits to be derived from co-operation between themselves. He called attention to the conditions found in El Paso, where there is practically no friction between the exhibitors and a very friendly spirit prevailing. He said he believed if other towns would pattern after the exhibitors there that there would never be heard "cut-throat" methods, and such slurring remarks by exchangemen or brother exhibitors against any picture theatre manager.

J. W. Sanders, Queen theatre, Crockett, Texas, is trying the film business for a while; but he is "trying" it with such strenuous efforts that there is little question of his "sticking." He is one of the road men covering the Texas territory out of the Mutual offices with the new serial, "The Lass of the Lumberlands," and at present is hiking around Houston vicinity.

BUFFALO, N. Y., SCREEN CLUB PLANS BALL EARLY NEXT YEAR

The Buffalo Screen Club is planning a ball to be held early next year. It is expected that, because of the large attendance last year, the event will be transferred to the Broadway Auditorium, which is twice as large as Elmwood Music hall, where the ball was held last season. "Fatty" Arbuckle, and his wife, Mignon Anderson, Earle Metcalfe, Helen Green, Corrinne Parquette and other stars were the guests of the club at the 1916 dance.

This year the members hope to have many more stars present. It is recalled that Mr. Arbuckle promised he would attend the next ball, if he was in China, if he was only informed of the date in time to get the first train for Buffalo. Elaborate preparations are being worked out by the various committees having the ball in charge.

KIRK IS DEAN OF THE MANAGERS IN OMAHA

Manager J. E. Kirk of the Pathe exchange is Omaha's dean of exchange managers now, since the resignation of Ph. Goldstone, manager of the World exchange. Mr. Kirk has been in Omaha over two years, and shows promise of staying a lot longer, if the wishes of his many friends, including hundreds of exhibitors in the Omaha territory, are respected.

One of the latest feats of the Pathe exchange was the photographing of President Wilson on his visit there, and the historical parade in Omaha. This was shown by Manager Thomas of the Strand and viewed by thousands of people.

Fred Hunt, formerly an exhibitor, is now city salesman in Omaha for the Pathe exchange—the only exclusive city salesman in the city.

RUTLEDGE GOES TO PARAMOUNT IN CHICAGO

Official announcement is made of the resignation of Frank Rutledge as manager of the Detroit office of the Artcraft Film Corporation. Mr. Rutledge has accepted the appointment of manager of the Chicago exchange of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, recently made by D. Leo Denison when in Detroit. Before associating himself with Artcraft Mr. Rutledge was manager of the Detroit office for The Kleine-Edison Company. He is a former vaudevillian, theatre owner and general showman.

UNGER IN CHARGE OF BOOKING FOR GENERAL

I. E. Unger has been appointed manager of the booking department of the General Film exchange in Detroit, going direct from the Twenty-third street office of the General in New York, where he was head booker.

BROWN FILM PEOPLE HANDLE "YELLOW MENACE"

The Brown Film Service Company, which lately took over the handling of "The Yellow Menace" serial for Western New Jersey, reports a large number of early releases of the serial, among the most prominent of which is Proctor's theatre of Newark.

STORY IS K-E-S-E MANAGER IN KANSAS CITY

Jack Story, formerly of the V-L-S-E exchange in Kansas City, has been made manager of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay exchange, in place of Arthur C. Melvin, who had been manager of the George Kleine exchange.

Exchanges in Des Moines Are Active—A. D. Flintom and C. R. Seelye Visit Offices

TWO noted members of the film industry recently visited Des Moines. A. D. Flintom, president of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, distributors of the Paramount productions, was at the office of the Des Moines Film and Supply Company, representatives of the Kansas City firm, for several days. The other visitor was C. R. Seelye, general publicity manager of the Pathe exchange of New York. Mr. Seelye was at the Pathe office. When he departed he left for St. Louis and took L. A. Sheridan, Des Moines manager of the Pathe, with him.

Following a short stay in St. Louis, Mr. Seelye and Mr. Sheridan went to Kansas City. After a couple of days there, the Des Moines executive returned to Des Moines and Mr. Seelye continued on his visit of Pathe exchanges in this territory. Mr. Sheridan, after returning from the trip with Mr. Seelye, reported that his publicity department would be in working order in thirty days.

The latest addition to the traveling force of the Laemmle Film Service, Universal distributors, is R. F. Crawford. Mr. Crawford is at present proprietor of the Isis theatre in East Des Moines. During his absence on the road Mrs. Crawford watches over the theatre. Mr. Crawford was formerly head booker for the General in Des Moines, later being transferred to the Minneapolis office of the same company. He returned from Minneapolis to take a position as assistant booker with the Universal here. He later purchased several theatres, but has but the Isis at present. Mr. Crawford reports an excellent tour.

The recently contemplated trip to New York City of A. H. Blank, president of the Mid-West Photo Play Corporation, failed to materialize, owing to the pressure of business in Des Moines. Mr. Blank announces that J. C. Collins will represent his company in Iowa, handling the Clara Kimball Young productions and other Selznick features. Mr. Collins formerly traveled this territory for himself and later as a representative of the Garden Feature Film Company.

C. H. Stombaugh, Des Moines manager of the General, comments on the demand for the "Stingaree" series. "Although this serial is not especially new, we are having a lot of calls for it and are doing some great business with it. This is, however, not surprising to me, as the picture is really a good one." O. W. Garland, head booker of the General, has made arrangements to be on the road for several days each week. He is planning to get in personal touch with the exhibitors, so that mutual problems may be solved satisfactorily.

William A. Swain, head of the bookkeeping department of the Laemmle Film Service, recently took a trip to Galesburg, Illinois, to attend a home anniversary. When Mr. Swain left Des Moines he gave orders for a year's subscription to Motion Picture News and carried the latest one away with him in his pocket. During his absence M. M. McMekin, assistant, took charge of the work.

L. Shope, manager of the Capital City Mounting Company, which does considerable poster mounting for Des Moines exchanges, says that unless the price of paper comes down and comes down quickly, he is going to have to do something desperate. "As it is now, our firm is operating on an even break. Although paper that formerly cost us four cents a pound has increased to ten cents, our price to our customers has not been changed. You can easily imagine in what a condition we are."

This is the only poster mounting firm this side of Minneapolis, so it is easy to understand just what the condition is.

Pathe Exchange in San Francisco Moves Into New Quarters

THE oft looked for and long heralded move of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., from 67 Turk street, San Francisco, has at last taken place, and while the new quarters at 985 Market street are not in a completed shape, it is easy to see that they are a great improvement over the ones just vacated. The offices are much larger than the former ones, the lighting facilities are vastly superior, and the films will be stored in vaults, insuring their safety.

The fact that the change in location was made within a month after the arrival of the new manager, H. E. Lotz, is taken as an indication that he intends to do his best to make the service the acme of perfection, and that he is confident of a great increase in business. The new location is across the street from that of the Greater Vitagraph, and is within a couple of blocks of the Progressive, the Artcraft, the Atlas, the Nat A. Magner and C. L. Williams film exchanges, and is also near Film Row.

William Citron, who has had charge of the local branch of the Fox Film Corporation since it entered this field, will start for New York shortly to confer with his principals, and to inspect some of the coming releases of this concern. Harry Leonhardt, traveling representative of the Fox interests, visited the local office a few days ago, and has since resumed his trip of inspection.

C. M. Simmons, manager of the local office of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, is making a trip through the territory south of here, while Arthur S. Kane, the district manager, holds down the throne in the quarters recently taken over in the Pacific Building. A downtown run has been arranged for in this city, but no contracts for service has been awarded for theatres in the residence districts.

J. J. Unger, district manager on the Pacific Coast for the Metro Pictures Corporation, arrived back at headquarters from a visit to Salt Lake City in time to witness the opening presentation of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Savoy Theatre, just around the corner from the exchange. This concern is winning a reputation for furnishing opening attractions for big houses in the downtown district, having furnished the program for the new Rialto Theatre, opened a short time ago.

Dame Rumor has been exceedingly busy during the past week in picking owners for the local Triangle Exchange, soon to be acquired by some one, but Manager Ben Simpson only smiles and advises the guessers to wait a few days. Incidentally, Mr. Simpson is wondering whether the new owners will assume active charge, or whether he will be retained in the position he has filled so capably for almost a year.

Work has been commenced on a one-story and basement building at Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street, and several film exchanges are already figuring on acquiring a new home. The Mutual is known to be after a large block of space there, and this will doubtless be taken over in case the home office places its stamp of approval on the terms of the lease.

The Progressive Exchange in the Pacific Building is making good use of the two additional offices recently taken over for the stenographic department and could even use more space, so busy is it at the present time. The new advertising department is doing some great work, and is accomplishing some definite results in interesting country newspapers in motion picture publicity. J. H. Allen, the local assistant manager, made a trip to Superior California points a short time ago and found conditions there improving to a marked degree.

Nat A. Magner, who conducts an exchange in the Pacific Building, is interested in a plan to erect a film exchange building on Golden Gate avenue, and in case this plan materializes will occupy a portion of the structure.

Extensive alterations have been made in the offices of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service on Golden Gate avenue and Manager W. O. Edmonds is now in a position to care for the influx of exhibitors interested in the new productions, several of which have been reviewed of late.

GLASSER MADE "V" MANAGER IN BALTIMORE

N. Glasser has been appointed the Baltimore manager for the Greater Vitagraph Corporation. He has made his headquarters at the Hotel Caswell. Mr. Glasser is not a stranger to Baltimore and he is very popular with the exhibitors there. Prior to joining the Vitagraph forces Mr. Glasser was with the Stanley Company of Philadelphia.

"GLORIANA"
A DRAMA of HAPPINESS
WITH A REMARKABLE CAST,

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, (INC.)

NO star is big enough to be "the whole show." In subordinating the star to the play BLUEBIRDS set two new and higher standards. The policy of "The Play's the Thing" makes for better plays while the adequate filling of all parts greatly improves the acting and the production as a whole.

Thus all BLUEBIRDS are smooth, even performances; made so by choosing perfect types for every part, no matter how small, or seemingly unimportant. If a star fits a part a star fills that part, but the play, the basis of all dramatic entertainment, must come first and the actor or actress must be chosen to fit.

It is easy to find stars to fit plays, but it is not easy always to find plays to suit stars. You can offer BLUEBIRDS in your theatre with the confident assurance that you are presenting perfect moving picture entertainment which will not only please, but which will draw the patrons back to your house to see other BLUEBIRDS.

These facts told to over ten million people every week in the Saturday Evening Post, are packing theatres showing BLUEBIRDS with the very best class of audiences. You can come in for your share of this constantly increasing business by showing BLUEBIRDS in your theatre.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Variety in American Films Pleases British Public

London, Oct. 6.

A GREAT enterprise by the Union Jack Photo Plays, Ltd., said to cost £40,000, is being planned for a British production framed on the lines of the American "The Birth of a Nation" film. Exceptional facilities have been afforded producers of film which, it is expected, will rank amongst the most important of British cinema efforts. Some of the scenes are represented as taking place in the House of Commons, and one leading feature will be a mimic debate on the floor of the House, a replica of the chamber having been built to meet the needs of the producers. The naval authorities have been helpful to the promoters of the enterprise, in which, it has been computed, something like 15,000 people will take part.

Another important panorama series of battle views has been taken under official auspices and shown to the trade this week. This really is supplementary to the Somme battle film, and in 2,500 feet one is shown some of the ruins of devastated Belgium; King George of England viewing the battlefield; His Majesty's arrival in France, his meeting with the Prince of Wales, and glimpses of the great military leaders of the conflict. Interest is added to this historically valuable film by occasional incidents amongst the troops of a sentimental interest.

Never has the cinema received such official recognition of its potency in Great Britain as now. In exemplification of this one has only to instance the several films illustrative of the numerous phases of the great national endeavor Great Britain is making in this European conflict, and than these, revealing actualities, free from embellishment and staging, nothing could be more stimulating to public opinion. The war has certainly given an excellent stimulus to the production of topical pictures. In describing scenes pulsating with real live interest, words are weak to record the numerous sensations one experiences. This gave birth to the illustrated journal, which through the very fact that it portrayed deeds, and not words, commanded the public attention. And now the moving picture—the crowning consummation. That people are moved by the written word, I do not pretend to doubt, but whether that influence, supported by a photographic illustration, is as potent as the moving picture is questionable. My only reason for dealing with this subject at all is because of the important standing and the colossal circulations enjoyed by the Picture Press in this country, and this has more than a remote bearing on the topical film industry. The average reader of the illustrated press through the medium of his halfpenny paper is merely introduced to the passing phases of his daily life; he is given a glimpse of everything—for a daily newspaper is a hotch-potch of cosmopolitanism—the salient features of a story which, as a rule, rarely enable him to view a happening in its proper perspective. The cinema, on the other hand, enables one to take a broader outlook and by virtue of its fidelity to life is the more valuable of the two. The newspaper whets the appetite of the man who wants "more," and the cinema should make it its business to supply him with what he wants and promptly too.

It is only at the first-class cinemas that the latest topical films are shown, and I have seen picture houses showing "the news of the week in pictures" two and three weeks old. Pathes and Gaumonts provide a specialty for this class of trade, and while the facilities may be equal for any exhibitor booking first releases the resources are not so. The consequence is that most exhibitors instead of showing news are showing history.

If topical films are to fulfill all that is possible for them to do, they must first and foremost be up-to-date to win the favor of patrons, otherwise the news of the week in pictures would be better obliterated from the program. The Picture Press is so successful because it is "right up to the minute" with its illustrations (war subjects excepted). There are occasions when the cinema is equally so, but generally taking the places of amusement as a whole. This is not often the case. Topical picture production was showing great promise before the war, and that it may rise fully to the opportunities presented after the conclusion of hostilities must be the wish of everybody interested in the prosperity of industry.

American Films

American films are maintaining their versatility, the multi-reel particularly commanding attention. Exhibitors, however, are thankful for a good selection of one-reelers of the kind which the Trans-Atlantic and other companies are renting on open market. Film versions of popular novels are strong features of the trade just now, and while the names of the individual authors may carry considerable weight with the picture-going public, one is inclined to think that occasional stories of folk-lore, legend and other unusual themes would provide a welcome change. Amongst the most appreciated American films on past few days have been: "The Eternal Question," "The Devil at His Elbow" (Metro); "A Soldier's Oath," "The Love Question" (Fox); "The Dupe" and "The Ten Thousand Dollar Husband" (Jesse L. Lasky); "Husks," "The Two-Edged Sword" and "Tarantala" (Vitagraph); "A Dash of Courage," "The Sorrows of Love" and "Stepping Stones" (Triangle); "The Floorwalker" and "The Fireman" (Mutual-Chaplin); "The Lotus Woman" (M. P. Sales Agency); "The Fate of Dolphin" (Flying A), and "Havoc" and "A Daughter of the City" (Essanay). The Trans-Atlantic Company's new serial, "Liberty," has a very promising field.

In view of the big patronage which children give to the picture theatres, it is disappointing that more essentially children's subjects are not produced. It is estimated that in the city of Liverpool alone 13,000 youngsters under the age of sixteen years visit the picture houses daily.

The Kodak Company, which a week or two ago announced a reduction in the price of film stock, promising to give three-tenths of a penny rebate on every foot of raw positive film base purchased, provided that ninety per cent of the total footage of film used during the previous month was of Kodak manufacture, have decided in view of the feeling of trade to withdraw this condition and in future will sell at one penny per foot all round.

British Films

"Comin' Thro' the Rye," the Hepworth film which had the noted distinction of a "command performance" before Queen Alexandra and other members of the Royal Family, has been shown for trade and has had a most gratifying reception. This subject is a five-reeler of the first quality, and is a superb piece of British workmanship. Alma Taylor and Stewart Rome both achieve histrionic triumph.

The Charles Urban Trading Company are building a new factory in London, which will provide for a handsome studio. Both printing and producing will be done under the same roof.

The Samuelson Film Manufacturing Company, Ltd., is to be congratulated upon their choice of the leading vaudeville artistes for the "movies." As previously announced, they had secured the services of Miss Vesta Tilley. Now they give notice of a new production entitled "Dr. Wake's Patient."

Homeland Studios are engaged on a 3,000 foot subject of six episodes to be known as "Truth and Justice," visualizing Mr. Horatio Bottomley.

The London Film Company is engaged on a version of Hall Caine's famous novel, "The Manxman," showing Mr. Herbert Ainley. One of the principal scenes takes place at Tynwald Hill (where every year in accordance with the ancient custom the Manx laws every year are promulgated in public), for the use of which permission had been obtained from the Manx Government, and some 8,000 people witnessed the camera scenes enacted there.

The British Empire Films are working on the drama, "The Pleydell Mystery."

The Ideal Company announce a new film—"The Vicar of Wakefield"—a delightful tale of a benevolent clergyman who lost a fortune, and for a time his daughter through the trickery of less scrupulous men. The trials and sorrows of the vicar form many a delightful scene. A rare charm pervades the story, and its successive incidents—the fair, the motley prison scene, etc., are brought out in the film in the most telling fashion, and are the true essence of drama. The cast includes Sir John Hare, Miss Marie Illington, Miss Laura Cowie (who was in Sir Herbert Tree's Company at His Majesty's Theatre, and leading lady of Sir J. Forbes Robertson's Company on his farewell tour in America), and other distinguished artistes.

Leading British Films of the Week Are:

"Sealed Lips (Ideal film), based on "The Silence of Dean Maitland"; novel by Maxwell Gray. A virile story forcibly demonstrating the irresistibility of conscience.

"The Campbells Are Coming" (Samson film). A stirring drama of the Indian mutiny. Miss Grace Cunard's acting adds to the delightful charm of the story.

"Drama and Destiny" (Windsor Film Company). Five-reel drama of a locksmith's burglary, a crime and its startling sequel.

The first "allied trade show" of Broadwest Company and Eclair Film Company (Paris) has taken place, and prior to the exhibition of the films—"Honor in Pawn" (Broadwest) and "The Trial" (Eclair), the orchestra played "Rule Britannia" and "The Marseillaise." The British film is a four-reel drama of a girl compelled by professional thieves to steal from a nobleman's residence. The nobleman having an affection for the girl prevents her and saving her from cruel fate secures the conviction of the ringleaders.

BIG "V" COMEDIES BOOKED FOR STRAND

Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand Theatre, New York, has just booked several of Big "V" comedies after seeing them projected in the exhibition room of the home office at 1600 Broadway.

"Don't Make South America Your Backyard"

"The Continent South of Us Can Be Developed Into a Market for the Best Pictures," Says Albert M. Beatty, Just Back from a Tour with "Birth of Nation"

"DON'T make South America your back yard," is the protest registered by Albert M. Beatty to American producers, "develop it, give it as good pictures as you tender to the better theatres of North America," he continues. Mr. Beatty has just returned to this continent from a tour of the Republic of Argentine with "The Birth of a Nation." Among other things he said that the Griffith spectacle went well in that country the other side of the equator, but this wasn't his main idea in speaking with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"I refer to Argentine," said he, "when I say that the people there want good, clean pictures, as good as the best of the houses get in the United States. With Brazil the case is different. The Brazilians like the racy production. But the people of Argentine are even more discriminating than those of the United States. They don't want the slightest bit of suggestiveness included in their entertainment.

"It is peculiar," continued Mr. Beatty, "that most of us up here have the mistaken idea that the population of the Argentine Republic is totally Latin, and low Latin at that. Such is not the case. There are British there in a plenty. And it is the better class of Britishers who have made the republic as advanced as it is today. And so they want their entertainment to be as advanced as they are, or else no entertainment.

"The field in Argentine is tremendous but tremendously neglected, possibly because it is so far away from the home base. Buenos Ayres, the capital of the State with its population of a million and a quarter and with its two hundred and fifteen theatres, has only two exchanges to meet the demand of the exhibitors. The few companies who have become established down there ship their poorest stuff to these exchanges. They are the recipients of worn out prints, or perfect prints in such a condition because the pictures on them were too bad for home consumption. Of accessories they have practically none.

Lots to Learn About the Business

"During my tour with the 'Birth of a Nation,' I encountered more ignorant operators and managers than ever before in my life. They wanted to learn the ins and outs of projection and theatre management, but there was no one there to teach them. When I set up two projecting machines in the theatres we played, they were aghast. There isn't a theatre there that has more than one machine, and that one is usually of antiquated model and make.

"If someone was farsighted enough to establish a general exchange in South America, where a full line of good pictures and all sorts of accessories were handled that fellow would be working a boon to South America and incidentally to himself. He would have to be an expert exchangeman and an expert accessory man rolled in one, and if such was the case he would find himself with more work on his hands than he could handle.

"On the whole Argentine is about six years behind time in the picture business and not because it wants to be. Previous to the war in Europe, numerous foreign films were distributed throughout the republic, but even these found little applause in Argentine. Brazil like them, but the people of Brazil and the people of Argentine are as far removed in tastes as those of First and Fifth avenue, New York.

"There are no news weaklies there, there is a dearth of exchanges and a horde of people eager for good shows. In each of the twelve States of the country there is a magnificent municipal theatre located in the capital. Those houses are dark half the year and more. And if those won't do, there is plenty of space and plenty of ready money for new houses. In fact they're ready for everything in the high-class line that the North American market can supply."

"SNOW WHITE" FROM EDUCATIONAL ON NOVEMBER 1ST

"Snow White," a four-part fairy tale, will be released by the Educational Films Corporation of America November 1, on a States right basis. As yet no territory has been sold, but the company announces that it has many inquiries regarding the release. Mr. Hammons, manager and vice-president, states that there has been an increasing demand for children's pictures, to be shown at special matinees, and he feels that "Snow White" will not only meet this demand, but will be appreciated by the grown-up folks as well.

New Laws and Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

Censorship Situation in British Columbia Is Again Assuming Unfavorable Aspect

THE censorship situation in British Columbia is again assuming an unfavorable aspect, and some of the Vancouver exchanges have experienced a great deal of trouble and financial loss through rejections which have been made during the past few weeks.

Following the rejection of the Selig nine-reeler, "The Spoilers," about a year ago, when Attorney-General W. J. Bowser passed the picture over the censor board's veto, the industry entered upon a new era as far as censorship was concerned, and although cuts were still made profusely and indiscriminately, the censoring department evidently perceived that to condemn a picture like "The Spoilers," because it was "immoral" showed a fantical narrowness that was the height of absurdity.

It was recently disclosed, however, that many features are being condemned, and that within the past ten or eleven weeks the following films have been rejected as unfit for exhibition: "Fear," a Thanhouser production in three reels, which was condemned as "immoral and gruesome;" "The Love Liar," Centaur feature in five reels—"immoral;" "A Law Unto Himself" (five-reel Centaur) for which the official reason was "nothing but gun-play, robbery, violence and gruesome scenes; no redeeming features." Also considered as too immoral were "Four Months," a three-reel American; "Ghosts," five-reel N. Y. M. P.; "The Miracle of Life," five-reel American; "The Reward," four-reel N. Y. M. P.; "The Profligate," three-reel American; "The Quality of Faith," five-reel Thanhouser; while "The Heart of Tara," a five-reel Horsley, was condemned as being a "story of Hindu intrigue, and against public policy."

This, it will be seen, gives an average of more than four reels per week from a single exchange, rejected at this rate for a period of ten weeks, and to make the situation still more unbearable, it is stated the rejected subjects are no more objectionable than many other features which are continually being passed by the same board of censors. Some of the subjects recently condemned are pictures which have been submitted and condemned before, but have now been re-submitted for further consideration. The fact that they were all rejected for the second time furnishes one of the best arguments for an appeal board, as under the present system an exchange is placed in the position of asking a court to pass on the correctness of its own decisions. It is hardly likely that they would reverse themselves in many instances.

With the reins of government about to be handed over to the Liberal party, as the result of the recent elections, an opportunity is offered to exhibitors and exchangemen to demand an appeal board, and the installation of a new board of censors. It might also not come amiss to demand ordinary business courtesy, without discrimination, from the public servants who are being supported solely by the moving picture industry.

WANT NO INTERFERENCE FROM POLICE

Fred S. Wolfe and J. D. Callicot, who have been showing a picture at a theatre on Market street, to which objections have been made, have petitioned the Superior Court for an injunction to prevent Chief of Police White of San Francisco, from interfering with its exhibition. The picture deals with the so-called white slave traffic, and they declare that it is not objectionable. Most of the protests that have been filed of late regarding the presentation of moving pictures have been on account of the lurid manner in which lobbies have been decorated, rather than against the pictures themselves.

Interstate Commerce Commission Is Petitioned by Express Companies

THE various express companies of the United States engaged in interstate commerce have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for an order authorizing the maintenance of express rates dependent upon the value declared or agreed upon in writing by the shipper as the released value of the property, and it has been ordered that a hearing concerning the propriety of the issuance of such an order, to be limited and confined to the presentation and consideration of this petition, be held in this city Oct. 23.

This request from the express companies follows the passage of the amendment to the so-called Cummins Amendment to the Act to Regulate Commerce, which provides that the provisions of the original amendment respecting liability for full actual loss, damage or injury, shall not apply to merchandise received for transportation, concerning which the carrier shall be expressly authorized by order of the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish and maintain rates dependent upon the value declared or agreed upon in writing by the shipper as the released value of the property.

Before the enactment of the Cummins Amendment, the express companies made rates for the transportation of merchandise dependent upon the declared value, irrespective of actual value, the liability being $50, or 50 cents per pound. The passage of the original Cummins Amendment did away with such practice, but the matter now reverts to its original status by reason of the second amendment, except as to ordinary livestock. As the law now reads, the express companies can go back to their former practices and agreements with shippers as to value in case of loss, irrespective of actual value, and make rates dependent upon the same.

SOLVE THIS MYSTERY—HOW DOES THE MIND OF A CENSOR WORK?

The Pennsylvania State Board of Censors have gone themselves one better. They have condemned a one sheet on the current Ivan release, "Her Surrender," handled by the Liberty Film Company.

The poster bears an excellent likeness of Anna Nilsson, the heroine of the picture, in evening dress.

It is the opinion of all those who have seen the picture that it is the most unwarranted act recently perpetrated by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, as there is nothing whatever objectionable in the picture.

Some of the rules laid down by this board are considered the biggest jokes in the censorship line possible and it is the enforcement of these absurd rules that will soon awaken the motion picture men of that section to a realization of the damage done them by the board.

ARGUE "NATION" SUIT IN OHIO

Oral arguments were presented to the Ohio supreme court in the "Birth of a Nation" suit last week. The Griffith Company wishes the court to reverse the state censor's ruling, prohibiting its exhibition in Ohio.

Film Men of Minneapolis Endeavoring to Prevent Official Censorship from Obtaining a Foothold

IN the hope of obtaining a better working understanding between the film exchanges and the Minneapolis city administration, Mayor Wallace G. Nye has temporariy rescinded his order requiring the film men to register in his office all films for release in Minneapolis. The order requires this registration to be made at least one week before the film is shown so the motion picture censor committee may have time to review any questioned film.

Minneapolis exchange men were notified by the film manufacturers that the latter would back them in any move to prevent official censorship from gaining a foothold in Minneapolis, and said also that the registration plan was a step toward official censorship. They, however, said that a heart to heart talk over the differences would be better thaon open warfare, and when this word was sent to the Mayor he gave the film men time to prepare a plan which they believe will be satisfactory to everyone.

The unofficial volunteer censorship committee is at sea just at present. They have an arrangement with the Mayor whereby they view films unsanctioned by the National Board and report to him. He has in most cases followed their advice even when they have stepped in and ordered cuts in films passed by the National Board of Review.

A new Mayor, however, will come into office January 1 and neither of the candidates have indicated whether they will work with the censorship committee. The committee is working to strengthen its position so that it can make its position secure.

Film men believe that if the thirty members of the censorship committee do not have the facilities for the private viewing of the films they now have and are compelled to go to the shows on the first nights along with everyone else, that much of the joy will be taken out of censoring and taht the committee will die a natural death.

Under the present arrangement the films are shown privately in the City Hall on request. Those who see a film that is later rejected are looked upon with certain awe by the curious just as though they had been on a great slumming tour and had seen the things the eyes of the world generally cannot see.

IF THERE IS ANYTHING LEFT THE BOSS GETS IT

Every amusement house in Butte, Mont., having met the new wage scale adopted two weeks ago, theatrical employes in that city receive probably the best pay for their work. The new scale is said to provide for forty-two dollars per seven days week for moving picture machine operators, stage manager thirty-five dollars, grips twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents, props thirty-one dollars and fifty cents, orchestra leaders forty-five dollars to fifty-two dollars and fifty cents, and musicians forty dollars. The results obtained appear to bear out Henry Ford's assertion that better paid men are more efficient and economical. Butte can boast of well nigh perfect projection in every house; ghosts and brown edges are practically unknown, and there is a noticeable lack of petty annoyances that generally accompany projection put on by less competent men. All but two smaller houses have orchestras made up of real artists in their line, and the musical accompanient to the pictures is an attraction of itself.

"PURITY" IS PURE, SAYS THE LAW

When is purity not purity? This question was left to a jury in the court of Justice T. Ernest Maholm, of Indianapolis, to decide recently. Manager Leonard of the Rialto theatre, Indianapolis, was arrested by a constable from the justice court, charging that "Purity," featuring Audrey Munson, was a vulgar and indecent production. In order to facilitate a verdict the jury, which was composed of business men, resolved to see the performance.

After seeing the picture a special session of court was held on the stage of the theatre and fifteen minutes later the management of the theatre was vindicated. When the picture was pronounced decent the doors of the theatre were reopened and business was resumed with a rush. The picture was booked for one week at the Rialto theatre, but was held over for a second week.

COURT STOPS THEATRE PLACARDING BY OPERATORS

William C. Francke and other officers and members of the Moving Picture Operators' Protective Union of Boston, I. A. T. S. E., 182, were restrained last week by Judge Jenney in the Superior Court from displaying banners, signs or cards declaring that the Apollo theatre or its owners, Raymond T. Gammon and Theresa Harkins, are unfair to the A. F. of L. or refuse to employ members of that organization.

They are also restrained from interfering with the employment of Harry Martin or Leo Wellbrook by the owners by representing that the latter will suffer by employing them.

Martin and Wellbrook, operators, are members of the Knights of Labor. The defendants are members of the American Federation of Labor.

PARALYSIS BAN LIFTED IN PHILADELPHIA

Every Philadelphia manager had new business to report since the ban against children had been lifted from the theatres a few days ago by the Health Board authorities.

As predicted in these columns recently, a rush for the nearest picture house was made by the neighborhood as soon as the kiddies were allowed in most of the houses getting more than they could handle.

"Yes, indeed, things are picking up," said one; "this looks like old times again, when the picture houses really made money. And we look for even better results next month when the parents get over their fright."

NEW INCORPORATIONS

The Corporation Trust Company, 37 Wall street, New York, reports the following new corporations:

In Delaware:

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE COMPANY OF WASHINGTON, D. C.; operating places of amusement; capitalized at $150,000 in Wilmington; incorporators are: Harry M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.; Barry Bulkley, Washington, D. C.; Fred S. Swindell, Washington, D. C., and George T. Smallwood, Washington, D. C.

In Illinois:

LANE COURT THEATRE COMPANY; operate a place of amusement; capitalized at $24,000 in Chicago; incorporators are: Nathan Ascher, 220 S. State St., Chicago, Ill.; Max Ascher, Lewis F. Jacobson.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

"I WISH," said June Caprice, after watching her latest picture run off at the Academy of Music, "that I could take you all in my arms," thereby establishing an original remark in the way of curtain speeches.

Eggs and potatoes are again coming into vogue for admission fee to picture theatres. —News Item.

Dan, the manager was starving
The b. o. receipts were bad;
His film exchange was hollering
For cash it should have had.

But Dan was of great intellect
And he hit upon a way
With which to soothe his stomach
And keep pictures in his 6A.

He advertised to farmers
Throughout the country side;
And he advertised to gardeners
Round about the country wide.

Quoth he in letters bold,
"Bring me a chick, a grouse,
A cabbage or an onion,
For admission to my house.

A rose, a bean, a violet,
Each represents two nickles;
A box is for the giving
Of a quart of sour pickles."

Next day the film ex-manager
Received from out the fields,
A load of farmers' produce
In payment for his reels.

Said he in accents wild,
At the shipment from old Dan,
"The open market has its merits,
But I'm a fillum man."

There is no end of inconveniences that these picture stars are put to. Think of Harold Lockwood and May Allison being forced to learn how to fish, just because Harold Macgrath, the author of their next picture chose to put a few fishing scenes in it. The next thing you know some star will be forced to learn how to paddle a canoe or swing a tennis racquet.

The date of the Reel Fellows Club Ball —November 10—is rapidly approaching, so says an announcement, which begins with the fact that it will be held in Chicago's Hotel Morrison. But this line at the bottom sort of procures our angora as you might or might not say, "several speakers will be on hand (More Entertainment)." Is it possible that those speakers will entertain? If they do we will even go so far as to mention their names on this page.

Yes, he is in captivity now—confined in a padded cell. Eugene Gaudio who filmed "Ten Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," met an old acquaintance recently. "Wot 'af you been doing zees year?" questioned the friend. "I've been filming 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea,'" answered Gaudio. And the next line was "Twent' t'ousand legs? Sapristi! And where did you geta de ten t'ousand girls?"

We beg to correct an error that occurred when credit was given the wrong person for the authorship of "Main 4400," on page 2559 of the October 21 issue. Willard Bradley is the author of the picture.

It seems after all as though scenario writers have just as hard a time of it as reviewers. William Wing, who for some reason is to be seen about "hocking th' Kaiser," (P. 162, M. P. Studio Directory), is so beset by interviewers that he runs off the following dialogue on the talking machine whenever they come around:

"Br-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r-r"

"Mr. Wing, how did you happen to turn to playwriting?"

"I didn't turn, my foot slipped."

"What are some of your best plays?"

"They haven't been produced yet."

"What kind of pictures, in your opinion, does the public demand?"

"Two dollar features for five cents."

"Do you believe motion pictures have come to stay?"

"Not if 'legitimate' interviews can kill them."

"Do you believe in censorship?"

"Are you inquiring regarding bare-leg acts on the stage, smutty monthly magazines, newspaper crime whoopers or the pictures?"

"I refer to motion pictures."

"Undoubtedly they should be suppressed in favor of the other income sources I have mentioned."

"Would you advise other writers to get into the photoplay game?"

"Not if there is insanity in the family."

"Do you love your art?"

"I certainly do if the chef is a good one."

"Are you satisfied with your advancement?"

"Well, I landed the office of janitor in the Scream Club."

"What is your favorite recreation?"

"Looking behind for speed cops."

Herewith we begin a crusade against the actor who throws his cigarette butt on the carpet. This genus homi is growing smaller picture by picture, but a few of it are still roaming about at large. This paper believes they should be hanged by the neck until dead, dead, dead, or else forced to look at themselves on the screen. Just to satisfy our own curiosity we would like to glimpse the carpet on the floor of this actor's hall room. It must be so perforated that he gets his feet full of splinters at night or in the morning, whenever he goes to bed. But it is the actor's business to act. When he is playing the part of a gentleman of intellect, education and what not, he should remember that there are such things as ash trays and that they are made to use and not to look pretty. The only place where it is etiquette to deposit butts on the floor is in a newspaper office. In such a place ash trays are not ash trays but paper weights.

We always sympathized with advertising men, because theirs is a hard lot. However, we never really believed that the work affected the brain. Poor old Red Jessen, who sent in a lot of ad copy for the Studio Directory has been hit quite hard. Along with other items, he sends this in:

"Hugh Fay, Keystone comedian, claims to have the only dog in the world entitled to a Carnegie medal. The fox terrior recently attended the circus, and children were there feeding the elephants peanuts. One child had a pet field mouse and it escaped from her pocket and leaped toward the elephant which immediately became angry and snapping the chain which bound it to a stake, started for the children. It was at this instance that the dog became a hero, for he immediately ruined the field mouse. Fay vouches for the truth of this story, and agrees to prove it to any one who will bring him an elephant."

Al Ray, late of Vim and Ray, is the latest addition to the Keystone staff of scenario writers.

It was late one night at the Morosco studio. It was dark, of course, because it was in the night. Vivian Martin softly entered her dressing room for a forgotten powder puff. She switched on the light, and oh horrors, there was a man lying on her little couch! (Cut). Vivian ran and ran for Dan, the poor but honest night watchman. Dan seized his trusty six-shooter and crept over all the ground that Vivian had run until at last he came to the fatal spot, knee sore and quivering for the fray. Dan, his college training standing him in good stead, made a leap for the man on the couch and closed his fingers over the ruffian's throat in a vice-like grip and the fight was on. Here, however, Pete Schmid spoils a wonderful story by disclosing the fact that the man was not a man but a dummy. Evidently trying to boom the realism of the Morosco properties, hey Pete?

Ike Schlank Will Produce Billy West Comedies for Exhibitors

Three-Reeler Made by Norbig Is Also Coming; Several Two-Reelers as Well, and Further Important Announcements May Be Expected

THE newly elected president of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, Ike Schlank announced to a representative of this publication last week, that he has had the good fortune to discover a good comedian who is entirely different in rank and file from the screen fun-makers. The personage in question is Billy West. According to Mr. Schlank, Billy West is destined to make a distinct impression upon exhibitors and patrons of the Unicorn program.

"The Billy West pictures," said Mr. Schlank, "are each in two reels, and what metropolitan critics have pronounced to be a screaming comedy. There will be released every other Monday, beginning November 9, when the first Billy West picture entitled "His Married Life," will be offered to exhibitors through Unicorn's twenty-eight exchanges."

Among Unicorn's announcements is a three-reel drama, "The Path of Darkness," which was produced by the Norbig Film Co., and which deals with a topic of present day interest.

Yet another of the novelties on the Unicorn program is the new two-reel society drama "When Hands Are Idle," in which Barbara Castleton, one of the best known of the younger stage emotional actresses, is introduced to the picture-loving public. "When Hands Are Idle" shows the dangers into which a neglected married woman may be drawn, owing to the engrossment of her husband's business.

"The Vengeance of Dan McGrew" is another production up to the Unicorn standard. An interesting feature for the present week is entitled "The Honor of the Tribe." This is a two-reel feature which describes the love story of a rough western trapper who was redeemed from the consequences of a careless life by a beautiful Indian maiden.

Just by way of variety, Unicorn also offers another comedy, "Disposing of a Lover." Other features which the concern says are worthy of the exhibitors attention are "An Indian Maid's Vengeance" in two reels, "The Lost Ring" and "U. S. Fighting Craft."

Mr. Schlank states that within the next few days he will have further announcements of interest to make directly to the exhibitors.

"LASH OF DESTINY" FROM ART DRAMAS, INC., IN NOVEMBER

The first production of the Van Dyck Film Production Company to be released through the newly formed Art Dramas, Inc., will be "The Lash of Destiny," which will be completed and ready for release about the latter part of November. Gertrude McCoy has been signed for the leading role, while Jean Southern, who made a favorable impression in support of Theda Bara and in "The Mysteries of Myra," will have one of the important supporting parts. Mabel Julienne Scott, who co-starred in "The Barrier," under the direction of Edgar Lewis has been engaged for another one of the important supporting parts. The picture is now in the course of production under the direction of George Terwilliger.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

A. P. Tugwell, vice president of the M. P. E. L. of America and member of the executive committee was in town from Los Angeles last week. Other executive committeemen in town were Alfred Hamburger, Chicago, and E. H. Horstman, Boston.

C. R. Coulter, prominent "states rights" buyer of Seattle, Washington, has been in town and left Tuesday for the west.

Marcus Loew left for Chicago last week. He will stop at Hotel Sherman, and make his headquarters at the offices of Jones, Linick and Schaefer, 110 S. State Street.

Sidney B. Lust, president of Famous Players Feature Co., 903 E. Street, Washington, D. C., was in town last week.

Jay Elmont, technical and art director, has gone to Los Angeles to join the Triangle forces.

D. Leo Dennison, personal representative for James Steele's Paramount exchanges in the middle west, is making an extended visit to this city.

Frank L. Greenwald, of the Exclusive Photoplay Company, Cleveland, Ohio, was a visitor in town last week.

M. Gottlieb of Minneapolis was in town last week.

PECK, SCENARIO MAN, IS ON HIS WAY EAST

Charles Mortimer Peck, especially engaged by the Essanay Company six months ago to write a number of original features for Henry B. Walthall, has finished his task and will soon leave Chicago for other fields of endeavor—probably New York; or he may return to the Pacific Coast where he scored a large number of pronounced successes.

Mr. Peck, who was a newspaper man of note, began his motion picture career with William Fox, in New York, four years ago. He was next associated with the Balboa Company, Long Beach, Calif., where he remained nearly a year. For a few months he successfully free lanced among the companies operating in and near Los Angeles. He then joined the staff of the American Company of Santa Barbara where he attracted the attention of Essanay.

Mr. Peck is a prolific writer of strong dramatic features and one of the foremost experts in the country in the matter of continuity. Directors who have produced his plays say his manuscripts are so nearly perfect that they can be put on without change of scene or substitute. During the coming months Mr. Walthall will interpret the leading roles in a number of original features written by Mr. Peck.

Charles Mortimer Peck

Mr. Peck has had seventy-two dramas on the screen and is the author of a series of twelve three-reel plays which he expects to market when he reaches New York. It will be two or three weeks before Mr. Peck will be at liberty, after which he will take a short rest and then jump into his writing harness again.

THE ETCHER AND HIS ART SHOWN IN PICTOGRAPHS

Walter Raymond Duff, one of the most skillful etchers in the world consented recently to pose for motion pictures and give the public a more intimate knowledge of the more mechanical details required to produce a finished etching. These pictures were taken by Paramount and will be released in a forthcoming edition of the magazine-on-the-screen the Paramount Pictographs.

Mollie King, Star of "Kick In," Began Stage Career Early

One of the Latest Screen Players to Join Astra for Pathe Releases Appeared in Important Child Part with Maxine Elliott in "Her Own Way"

ONE of the latest screen stars engaged for the Pathe Gold Rooster productions is Mollie King, who is featured in "Kick In," which has just been produced by the Astra Film Corporation. Miss King also plays the lead in a serial now being made for Pathe.

Mollie King

"Kick In" is a famous Woods' success, which will be released in a short time, and in which Miss King was co-starred with William Courtney.

Mollie King was born in New York City on April 18, 1898. She attended the New York Public schools, graduating from Wadleigh High School. Her first stage appearance was at the age of eight months, and she has been on the stage ever since. She played in several Broadway successes, and was a feature at the Winter Garden after a two-year tour of the Orpheum Vaudeville Circus, where she and her sister Nellie did a sister act. She has been starred in several of the productions of the World Film Corporation, and is well known to the motion picture audience throughout the country.

She is of fair complexion with reddish blond hair and hazel eyes. Miss King can sing and dance charmingly as millions of vaudeville fans throughout the country can attest.

Mollie King's first actual stage engagement after she had passed the infant age, was an important child part she played with Maxime Elliott in "Her Own Way." She was then seven years old, and made a hit both in New York and in London. As a child actress she also played in "The Royal Family" and "The Little Princess" as well as with the leading Denman Thompson in his vaudeville sketch "Joshua Whitcomb."

After leaving school, Miss King acted as an understudy for Elizabeth Brice, in the musical comedy "The Winsome Widow," playing the star's part on many occasions. She was then fifteen years old. Afterwards she played a season in vaudeville with her sister Nellie, then filled an engagement with the Passing Show at the Winter Garden, and then supported Sam Bernard in "The Belle of Bond Street."

Miss King comes from a theatrical family. Her brother Charlie King is known through the world as a member of the famous team of Brice and King, and her sister Nellie is a vaudeville artist.

Little Zoe Rae Featured in "Gloriana," a Bluebird

"A Stranger from Somewhere" Is Scheduled for November 13, "The Measure of a Man" Is Set for the 20th, and "The Bugler of Algiers" Comes on the 27th

BLUEBIRD exhibitors will be concerned in the statement that the releases on that program for November are considered by the manufacturer to comprise the best attractions they have released in any month since the series started.

Little Zoe Rae will be featured among a company of children and grown-ups in "Gloriana," to be released the day before election.

"A Stranger from Somewhere," scheduled for November 13, will advance a novelty in photoplay construction. Franklyn Farnum and Agnes Vernon will be the featured ones, in a company otherwise including Arthur Hoyt, Helen Wright, Barney Furey and Claire MacDowell. Willis Woods provided the scenario, and William Worthington directed. The play starts as a drama, and when everything is ready for serious business the complications run into comedy finishing with a surprise.

"The Measure of a Man" will be the release for November 20, with J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely playing the leading roles. These players were individual stars in earlier Bluebirds, but recently joined forces in "The Social Buccaneer." Jack Conway, who has been Mr. Kerrigan's director for a long time, produced the feature from a story by Norman Duncan. The scenes are located in the Sierra Nevadas, and a new type of rugged drama is pictured.

On November 27 "The Bugler of Algiers" will be released, and in this feature Bluebird believes it will have the most widely discussed feature since "Shoes." While totally different in theme than the last-named feature, "The Bugler of Algiers" is such a remarkable photoplay that it will surely cause comment, in the opinion of its manufacturers. Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, in collaboration with Perley Poore Sheehan, wrote the story, "We Are French," upon which the picture is based. Rupert Julian directed the production, and will be featured, along with Ella Hall and Kingsley Benedict.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS SPECIALS ARE IN DEMAND

The Selig Polyscope Company reports popularity of Kathlyn Williams Specials released as Selig Red Seal Plays through Kleine - Edison - Selig - Essanay exchanges. These productions, five or more reels in length, include "The Rosary," "The Carpet from Bagdad," "Thou Shalt Not Covet," "Sweet Alyssum" and "Into the Primitive." "The Rosary" presents Miss Williams supported by an all-star cast, including Wheeler Oakman, Frank Clark and Charles Clary. "The Carpet from Bagdad" is a story by Harold MacGrath featuring Miss Williams. "Thou Shalt Not Covet," founded on the Biblical commandment, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife," was written by James Oliver Curwood. "Sweet Alyssum" and "Into the Primitive" recently enjoyed extended runs in a Seattle, Wash., theatre.

Lasky Lets Contract for Administration Building

Many Other Improvements Are Contemplated by the Company for Its Hollywood Plant—Studio Enlargement Will Mean 200,000 More Square Feet

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

CONTRACT for the erection of a new administration building for the Jesse L. Lasky Hollywood Studio was let last week, and in connection with the announcement came the news that many other improvements are to be made at this film plant.

Perhaps the most important change will be the enlargement of the studio, the company having secured a lease on the entire city block immediately east of the present plant, which adds more than 200,000 square feet to the ground floor space of the property, giving the studio two entire city blocks, each 350 feet wide by 650 feet in length. Negotiations are now pending with the city council of Hollywood to close the street which divides the two blocks, which will materially add to the value of the property for studio purposes.

Plans for the enlargement of the Lasky studio laboratories are now being made. This department has been completed by six months, and is now found to be inadequate to meet the needs of the company, even with two shifts of help working at the laboratories sixteen hours each day. When the laboratory was completed, less than six months ago, it was the belief of officials that it would have sufficient capacity to accommodate the making of all prints for the Paramount program, but additional orders of prints from Lasky subjects, which increase the number to more than fifty, has made it necessary to enlarge the plant. The building will be made almost twice as wide, and the additional space used for projecting and drying rooms.

All dressing rooms at the studio are to be torn down in order to make room ror the enlargement of the open air stage located at the extreme north of the present plant, and also for the erection of two additional stages, each to be 60 by 250 feet in size. One of these will be enclosed with glass, while the other will be used only for open air sets.

A new dressing room building is to be built along the south side of the plant, which will consist of three floors, and contain in all about ninety dressing rooms. A feature will be a green room in connection. This building will be connected by telephone with all stages, making it possible for the players to remain in their rooms until the directors are ready for work on the stage. The telephones will be installed to serve as a call system.

When proposed improvements are made it will give the Lasky Company one entire city block to be used for the erection of exterior sets, a new property and wardrobe department, and materially increase the output of the plant.

Director General Cecil B. deMille of the Lasky Company plans to leave for New York shortly to personally supervise the presentation of the Geraldine Farrar subject of ten or twelve reels based on the life of "Joan of Arc." On this trip Mr. deMille will be accompanied by the author, Jeanie McPherson, and her mother; Alvin Wyckoff, director of photography; Howard Ewing, in charge of lighting effects at the studio, and probably others of the company. It is stated at the studio that all of these people worked with Mr. deMille many hours each day during the making of this big picture, and the trip East will serve as a brief vacation for all.

Efficiency Reduces Time at "U" 50 Per Cent

Filming So Planned That Producing Company Works Alternately at Studio and on Exterior Locations—Features Made in Eighteen Days

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

THE efficiency plan inaugurated at Universal City in the past nine months under the supervision of General Manager H. O. Davis, has made possible a reduction of approximately fifty per cent. of the time needed for the making of pictures. At the present time eighteen days is required for the making of a five-reel photoplay, while previous to the inauguration of the efficiency system, it required from four to six weeks.

When Mr. Davis assumed charge at the film city, he immediately made plans for the reduction of time wasted by producing companies for waiting for sets, costumes and stories. Now when the photoplay is turned over to the director for production, complete scene plots have been prepared by the production department in charge of O. L. Sellers. The filming is so planned that the producing company will work alternately at the studio and on exterior locations.

This gives the technical department time to prepare one set while the players are absent from the studio. A big night shift of stage help is employed, and all sets required for the following day are ready when the players and director arrive at the studio. This arrangement has other advantages. It relieves the director of looking after the preparation of sets, as this is taken care of by the art department, in charge of Frank Ormston.

The efficiency system has been inaugurated step by step, with every new feature thoroughly tried out before being adopted permanently. No effort has been made to cheapen the quality of pictures made, but on the other hand, it is the aim of the management to cut out waste, and add what has been lost in the past to the productions now being made.

Captain Lesley T. Peacock, who did his first scenario writing in Los Angeles for the Universal, is again with the company, but now engaged as director. He is now at work on his first subject, a one-reel comedy.

Al Ray and Robin E. Williamson Join Vogue Company

Several Changes Made in Casting at Studio in Last Two Weeks—Ben Turpin Will Appear with Paddy McQuire—Rube Miller to Head His Company Alone

TWO additions have been made to the directing and scenario staff of the Vogue Comedy Company at Los Angeles. Al Ray, magazine writer, actor and director has become scenario editor for this company, whose output is released through the Mutual. Robin E. Williamson, formerly director with the Vim Company at Jacksonville, Fla., has just agreed to give his services exclusively to Vogue.

During the last two weeks there have been several changes in the casting at the Vogue studios. Ben Turpin, who has been playing for the past few months in comedies with Rube Miller, will appear with "Bungling Bill," as Paddy McQuire is known. Robin Williamson will direct this company.

Rube Miller will head his company alone. He will direct as formerly, with the assistance of Henry Kernan.

In the studios supporting cast, members of which are chosen to play with either Paddy McQuire and Ben Turpin or with Rube Miller, as occasion demands, are Lillian Hamilton, Gypsy Abbott, Linna Templeton, Arthur Moon, Owen Evans, and Larry Bowes and E. J. Laurie.

Aside from the players, a trained dog belonging to Paddy McQuire is gaining many honors for his work as an intelligent actor.

Paddy, with a company consisting of Gypsy Abbott and Arthur Moon, is now at work on Al Ray's first scenario, which finds its setting in a restaurant. Paddy himself is cast as the restaurant keeper.

The Vogue studios are situated in the center of the beautiful grounds that formerly surrounded the mansion of ex-Senator Cole of California. J. R. Crone is the general manager of the company.

PACIFIC LABORATORIES IN TEMPORARY QUARTERS

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

The Pacific Film Laboratories, whose plant at 5813 Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood, was recently destroyed by fire, has opened temporary quarters in connection with the Vogue studios.

ENLARGING OF STAGE SPACE AT FOX-HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS IS PLANNED

Los Angeles, Oct. 21.

Additional plans for the enlarging of the stage space for the William Fox Hollywood studios are now being made, and shortly additional stages are to be built. Another producing company is soon to be added, and the new stage will be ready by the time this company begins work.

As General Western Representative A. Carlos has made contracts with Violet Radcliffe, Francis Carpenter, George Stone, Joey Jacobs and Carmen deRue, it is believed the next company to be added will devote its time to the making of pictures with numerous child parts. Practically all of the children engaged have been playing in Fine Arts Productions where they have become known as "the Fine Arts kiddies."

William Farnum is to work under two directors alternately, at least that is the present plan. He is cast for the star role in a photoplay to be made under the direction of Frank Lloyd, and with the beginning of work in this subject he will cast aside any plans for appearing in open air drama or melodrama. Within a few days Farnum will start work in a production to be made by R. A. Walsh.

FOX FILM, "ROMEO AND JULIET," SEEN IN PHILADELPHIA ON OCTOBER 23

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.

George Dembow, Fox manager in Philadelphia, has just returned from a trip around his territory in the interest of the Fox "Romeo and Juliet," with Theda Bara, which has been released here October 23.

Every exhibitor having a contract either doubled or tripled his time for this picture. Everywhere eager interest was shown in the film and all were confident of big business on it.

C. L. Worthington, district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, after a trip around his exchanges stopped off in Philadelphia for the opening of "The Daughter of the Gods."

Mr. Worthington reports that things were never better than right now in pictures. He found the biggest business in the history of his company during this trip.

BROOKLYN'S SHOWING OF METRO'S "ROMEO AND JULIET" IS SET FOR OCTOBER 26-27-28

The Metro Production of "Romeo and Juliet" with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, will receive it's initial Brooklyn presentation at the Cumberland theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 26, 27, and 28.

An orchestra of sixteen soloists with the combined effects of the pipe organ will render the specially arranged musical score. Manager Francis A. Mangan has caused the interior of the theatre to be tastefully decorated to harmonize with the time in which the play is supposed to have taken place.

Storey Visits to "V" Theatres Promote Publicity

Good Will Is Created Through Interest of Patrons Attending Shows to See the Star in Person—Her Itinerary Results in Increased Business for Exchanges

The Kansas City Screen Club on the Night of the Reception to Edith Storey, the Greater Vitagraph Star

WHEN the executives of the Greater Vitagraph decided to send Edith Storey on to the studio at Hollywood, they also made out an itinerary for her so that she might stop over in the principal cities of the country and appear personally in some of the houses using Vitagraph productions.

How well this has worked out both from the publicity standpoint and from the standpoint of good-will created and new business secured is revealed by the letters received at the home office from the branch managers who were fortunate enough to entertain Miss Storey and her mother on their transcontinental trip.

Sidney Abel, Chicago Vitagraph-V-L-S-E manager, reports that he has secured ten new customers for Vitagraph productions, two of them for first-runs and, by arranging the schedule of appearances for Miss Storey and her mother in Chicago, he has won the good-will of the theatres this Vitagraph star and her mother visited. The Chicago newspapers were very good to Miss Storey, carrying interviews and pictures in a way calculated to let the people of Chicago know that she was in their midst.

S. W. Hatch, St. Louis manager, who is now in charge of the Cincinnati office, reported a fifty per cent. increase in current bookings during Miss Storey's visit to the Missouri metropolis.

E. R. Pearson, Kansas manager, arranged twenty-five appearances—some of them repeats for Miss Storey in his territory—and secured over twenty days' booking for the two days she was in Kansas City. He also signed two of the downtown houses for long-term agreements on the strength of her appearances. Summing up, he says that Miss Storey's visit to Kansas City enabled him to sign up ten new local accounts.

J. B. Dugger, Dallas manager, has written to the home office that Miss Storey appeared before 7,000 people in Hulsey's Old Mill theatre, the largest house in the Southwest, the record being broken.

The Cadillac Automobile Company, in Dallas, furnished Mr. Dugger with an automobile decorated with "Scarlet Runner" banners in honor of Miss Storey's appearance.

A number of the business houses, such as the Field-Lippman Piano Company, tied up their large display advertisements with Miss Storey's visit, and the Dallas papers spread themselves with interviews, pictures and articles about the famous star. Mr. Dugger reports the opening of several new accounts and an increase in bookings on "The Scarlet Runner," through Miss Storey's visit to Dallas and to San Antonio, which was a side trip for her.

The co-operation of the Vitagraph-V-L-S-E managers with the plans outlined at the home office for receptions to Miss Storey and her mother on her way to Los Angeles has naturally met with the hearty approval of President Albert E. Smith, Commodore Blackton, Walter W. Irwin, and all the other executives of the Greater Vitagraph.

BABY JOSE GETS SILVER SET

Little Helene Jose, the new baby daughter of Edward Jose, the well-known director, may be said to have been born with a silver spoon in her mouth. The Astra Film Corporation has presented her with a magnificent solid silver service suitably engraved. Baby Jose is described as "a new release on the Pathe program, directed by Edward Jose."

PATRICA HANNA LEAVES "VODE" FOR PICTURES

Patrica Hanna, who has had a number of years' experience in vaudeville and musical comedy, has been engaged to play second leads in the Parrott-Mann Fox comedy company on the west coast.

"CODE LETTER" FROM KALEM ON GENERAL PROGRAM, OCTOBER 20

October 20 saw the release of "The Code Letter," the first episode of Kalem's new series, "Grant, Police Reporter." The order of prints on the first and succeeding episodes by the General Film exchanges sets a new record for the one-reel General Film releases, while early reports of the first run bookings indicate that in this respect the new feature will also equal the exchange marks.

In the Greater New York territory alone eight prints of the initial episode of the series featuring Dare-Devil Larkin and Ollie Kirkby are at work. Forty-seven theatres ran the one-reeler as a first-run attraction for one or more days.

Kalem officials are also enthusiastic over the co-operation shown by the exhibitors in the use of the various publicity aids. The line includes a stock half-sheet, one and three sheets on each episode, slides, newspaper cuts and fictionizations of the stories in newspaper mat form.

George Beban Signs Long Time Contract with Morosco

Well-Known Delineator of Italian Character Parts Whose Work in "The Italian," "An Alien" and "Pasquale" Made Hits, Is on Way to Los Angeles Studios

GEORGE BEBAN, the delineator of Italian character roles, has signed a long term contract with Morosco-Pallas and recently left New York for the studios of these companies in Los Angeles.

The engagement of Mr. Beban was effected by Jesse L. Lasky, Vice-President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and marks the first stellar addition to the Famous Players - Lasky - Morosco - Pallas companies since their combination announced recently.

Since Mr. Beban's last appearance on the screen in the Oliver Morosco subject, "Pasquale," many requests have been received from Paramount exhibitors and patrons throughout the country for his reappearance on the program, which resulted in a new contract of long duration between the producers and the star. Among his other screen triumphs which are being booked through Paramount exchanges in this country are "The Italian" and "An Alien."

The initial Beban production under the new contract will be an Italian character subject written by himself in collaboration with Lawrence McClosky. Other subjects of different Latin types will follow.

Shortly after Mr. Beban signed his name on the dotted line, Donald Crisp, who had been connected with D. W. Griffith in an advisory capacity for many years, was engaged to supervise the production of all the Beban photoplays. Mr. Crisp is prominently known as director of many big subjects, including "Ramona."

Accompanying the star on his transcontinental trip is John Clymer, photoplay author, who has been engaged to collaborate exclusively with Mr. Beban on all his future productions. Just before departing, Mr. Beban lowered the blinds of his drawing room windows and advised his friends that there would be no scenery gazing during the trip, as he and Mr. Clymer would immediately commence to work on ideas for his forthcoming plays for the Paramount Program.

A notable gathering of motion picture and theatrical celebrities was at the Grand Central depot to see him off, including Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Pierce, Lawrence McClosky, J. Parker Reed, Jr., and a delegation from the Friars Club who sang the Friars' anthem as the train pulled out. Mrs. Beban also accompanied her husband.

Essanay Reports Gratifying Reception of "Return of Eve"

Picture Will Be Followed by "The Prince of Graustark," for Release Through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service on November 6

ESSANAY reports that the reception of its feature "The Return of Eve," second Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay release, by exhibitors and public has been most gratifying and that the film is now experiencing first runs in practically every large city of the country.

This hit, followed by "The Prince of Graustark," will get the new distributing agency away to an excellent start. Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service reports to Essanay that its branch offices are deluged with inquiries concerning "The Prince of Graustark."

This play will be obtainable November 6. It featured Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton with Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth. President George K. Spoor believes it a high comedy of decidedly unusual merit and attractiveness. It possesses box office possibilities from more than one angle. The book is a sequel to a great novel and a highly successful photoplay. It has sold upward of ten million copies. The author is a popular one. The stars are extremely well known everywhere on the screen.

It is such stories as "The Prince of Graustark" that exhibitors and public may expect from Essanay henceforth, according to Mr. Spoor. Only stage plays of superior grade and successful novels will be adapted by that company.

"The Chaperon," from the stage hit of Marion Fairfax, and "The Breakers," from Arthur Stringer's story in The Saturday Evening Post are examples of this policy. These will follow "The Prince of Graustark" on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service.

The Essanay-Chaplin Revue of 1916 is off to a great start. Exhibitors everywhere are after this feature, Essanay reports. General Film Service has already notified Essanay that the first estimate on copies of the film was inadequate.

President George K. Spoor believes that the unusual idea coupled with the grade of the comedies which go to make up the revue guarantee this to be a box office attraction with few rivals.

The revue has been taken from three Essanay-Chaplin successes, "The Tramp," "His New Job" and "A Night Out." All new posters and other advertising material have been arranged.

Two-Page Spread for "Patria" in Cosmopolitan Magazine

First Time Monthly Publication Will Be Used to Exploit a Single Picture—Other Publicity Methods Are to Be Used for International Serial

FOR the first time, monthly magazine advertising will be used to exploit a moving picture. The International has just signed a contract for a two-page spread in the December Cosmopolitan. The entire space will be used to tell of the wonders of "Patria," the serial of the International in which Mrs. Vernon Castle has the star part. It is probable that other monthly magazines will also be used in the gigantic advertising campaign the International is laying out for "Patria."

The Cosmopolitan was selected because of its circulation of more than 1,200,000 copies. The International believes that this circulation will reach many readers to whom a direct appeal for motion pictures has never been made. The fact that Mrs. Castle is a national figure, that "Patria" is a patriotic picture, and that it will eventually be shown in every large city and town in the United States, makes of it a national advertising proposition.

Magazine advertising, however, will be only a small part of the campaign for "Patria." The motion picture trade publications will be used more extensively than ever and the leading newspapers in practically every large city will carry "Patria" advertisements.

ATTRACTIVE ADVERTISING MATTER IS ISSUED FOR "SNOW WHITE" BY EDUCATIONAL

As a help to the exhibitor in making the showing of "Snow White" successful, The Educational Films Corporation of America, which is releasing this picture, has prepared some extraordinary advertising matter to attract patrons. It consists of one and three sheets, window display cards and window display cut-outs printed in four colors. The company has also issued illustrated booklets which the exhibitor can give in advance of the showing. These booklets contain a brief story of "Snow White" and the seven dwarfs and will be read by the children with interest, who in turn will want to see it played on the screen.

MILLIMAN IS PUT IN CHARGE OF "U" IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Although it was decided that J. A. Lavelle would remain at the Washington, D. C., Universal Exchange as manager after the death of the former manager, J. L. Yates, a change has just been made by the home office and C. R. Milliman has been placed at the head of the office.

Mr. Lavelle, who has been acting manager since Mr. Yates was taken ill in August, has left for Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, where he will take charge of the Universal forces. Mr. Lavelle goes to a city where he is thoroughly familiar with conditions and exhibitors.

Dustin Farnum and Winifred Kingston as They Will be Seen in the Forthcoming Pallas-Paramount Production, "A Son of Erin"

"HIDDEN VALLEY" RELEASED BY THANHOUSER IN NOVEMBER

Valkyrien in "Hidden Valley" and Jeanne Eagels in "The World and the Woman," are featured by Thanhouser in five-reelers for release through the Pathe exchange in November.

"Hidden Valley,' a South African drama, was made by Ernest Warde from a story by Emmett Mixx. Valkyrien appears as an explorer's daughter who is captured by savages and hailed as their white goddess. The tribe is on the point of sacrificing her to the god of water when a young divinity student, played by Boyd Marshall, appears and by clever and adroit tactics rescues her.

Ernest Warde, the director, himself plays the part of the villainous high priest of the African tribe. Arthur Bauer is the feather importer who sends the young man to Africa.

"Hidden Valley" is to be released on November 5.

"The World and the Woman" was directed by Eugene Moore, from a story by Philip Lonergan. Miss Eagels, famous for her work on the legitimate stage in "Outcast" and "The Great Pursuit," plays the part of a girl of the streets who, through the influence of a child, is spiritually regenerated and becomes a faith healer.

It is to be released on November 19.

Miss Eagels is supported by Boyd Marshall, Thomas A. Curran, Wayne Aray, Grace De Carlton, Carey Hastings and Ethelmary Oakland.

FREDERICK WARDE IN "THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD"

Frederick Warde, has completed his lecture tour, and has begun playing in "The Vicar of Wakefield," a five-reel feature, directed by his son Ernest Warde. "The Vicar" is expected to be as fine a picture as Mr. Warde's "King Lear," which will be released through the Pathe exchanges in December.

Hawkins Expects to Handle Cream of Independents

He Is Now on the Way to the West Coast to Establish a Branch and Pick Releases for Early Exploitation—Good Pictures at Low Cost Is Aim

F. J. HAWKINS, vice-president of the Hawkins and Heaney Company, general distributors of the Christie comedy films, the productions of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company and the releases of other independent manufacturers, left New York City on October 13 for Los Angeles where he will attend to the business of establishing a Western office. Mr. Hawkins when interviewed by MOTION PICTURE NEWS before his departure told of future plans and important deals of the Hawkins and Heaney Company, that will be of great interest to the independent exchanges.

"Our success with the Christie and E. and R. comedies," said Mr. Hawkins, "has led us to develop along broader lines. So we have contracted to handle the feature productions of the Dixie Film Company of Chicago, the first of which will be 'Tempest and Sunshine,' already completed. It is our plan to secure more independent features, perhaps until we are able to offer to our exchanges two features a month, besides the small stuff we are already marketing.

"In a word, it will be our aim to supply exchanges with carefully selected productions at a price that will enable the exchange men to furnish the smaller as well as the larger exhibitor with good pictures within his financial reach.

"That the necessity of this plan is self evident is shown by the success which we have so far had in securing exchanges throughout the United States, Canada and foreign countries for the distribution of the various productions we handle.

"Now, take your independent manufacturer who produces only one, two or perhaps half a dozen pictures in the course of a year. He doesn't know his market well enough to sell his product and so he comes to us. We look over his film. If we believe that it is a money making proposition we undertake to sell it for him, assuring him a profit of at least twenty-five per cent on a percentage basis over the cost of his production, providing of course that his picture was made within a nominal sum.

"We have an exchange in each territory that has signified its willingness to cooperate with us along these lines. And so as a first step we have contracted with the Dixie Film Company for their productions. 'Tempest and Sunshine,' the first, by Mary Jane Holmes, pictures life in the South. The direction of this is of a high order and the story sufficiently strong.

"When I arrive in Los Angeles," continued Mr. Hawkins, "I will immediately go about the establishment of an office there. The board of directors of the company believe that it will be necessary for me to spend a good deal of my time there. That being the production center, I will be in a position to look over the independent market and take the cream of it for distribution. You will hear from us again shortly."

TWEEDLEDUM COMEDIES NOW BOOKING

The Unity Sales Corporation are releasing this week the second Tweedledum comedy, under the title of "A Scrambled Honeymoon," featuring the eccentric acrobatic comedian Perez.

The Unity Sales Corporation have added, during the past week, additional independent exchanges, who will handle the "Tweedledum" comedies. Among the new exchanges, which have booked these comedies are Koppin Film Company, Detroit, Mich., Unity Pictures Corporation, Minneapolis, Minn., Unity Photoplays Co., Denver, Colo., Unity Pictures Corporation, Dallas, Texas.

Metro Makes "Romeo and Juliet" Strong Film Play

Spirit of Shakespeare's Immortal Love Story Is Successfully Transformed to the Screen by Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Assisted by Company of Clever Players—Picture Is Destined to Promote Appreciation of the Bard's Classic

TO convert the spirit of Shakespeare into a silent form that will register clear and true, without seemingly missing a single important line in the brief, would seem next to impossible—yet it has been done, and in our present generation, the tercentenary of Shakespeare's fame.

To make of the world's greatest classic love story and tragedy so powerful a silent drama that the masses, as well as the classes, can be counted on to give it their highest stamp of approval, is what has been accomplished by John Arthur, Rudolph de Cordova, and John W. Noble, with the assistance of Leander de Cordova, Edward Powers, and Harry Sothern, in the financing and costuming, and Francis X. Bushman in the assistance of the directing of himself, Miss Bayne and the many prominent characters which all helped to give a seemingly perfect harmony to a production which will not soon be duplicated.

The premier of "Romeo and Juliet" took place at the Broadway theatre, New York, Thursday morning, October 19. Much was expected. Irene Berge, pupil of Massenet in Paris, and Samuel Berg, of G. Schirmer, Inc., had made selections from both the Gounod opera and Tschaikowsky's symphony of music which would fit in perfect harmony every scene and incident. Titles, usually a mere incident, had been trimmed and rearranged, perhaps a score of times, so that the story might flow on in the smoothest possible manner to convey clearly by pictured incident and necessary written explanation Shakespeare's every thought. Everything possible had been done to attain perfection, but not until the big audience drew a free breath at the end of two hours of absorbing plot and counterplot to break into applause that came direct from the heart, could it be said for certain that "Romeo and Juliet" was a realization in pictures fully entitled to rank with Shakespeare's own immortal lines.

The important fact in this review which we want to bring out is that Metro's "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne and a score of dramatic celebrities in the important roles, is first and foremost a moving picture of great force and as near perfection as our lights will enable us to see. If there are flaws, no ordinary audiences will see them. We cannot doubt that even the lavish expense of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was justified and will be returned to the Metro Corporation through return bookings.

For they have produced a picture with a universal appeal and that the multitudes can appreciate. From a spectacular standpoint, the rich costumes of "Romeo and Juliet," the seemingly perfect reproduction of the streets and homes and monastery of old Verona, and the grand funeral procession, back up the claims to great cost of production. But "Romeo and Juliet" is first a big, compelling drama; second, a true reproduction of the world's greatest love classic, and last a spectacle. This is as it should be. William Shakespeare, as a modern scenario writer for motion pictures, made good in this Metro masterpiece.

As lovers, Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne could not help filling satisfactorily the roles of Romeo and Juliet. We have seen them before, as dignified lovers, who can register sincere emotion without spreading it all over the screen. It seems to us that the biggest single asset of this production is the restrained dignity with which these lovers show the depth of their emotion in ways as expressive as one could ask, but entirely in keeping with the rank and breeding of the great families they represent.

Nor was the good acting confined alone to the principal stars in this play. We are told actual lines were spoken, and weeks of preparation taken by every single player who appeared on the screen. We can easily believe this from the harmonious result attained. No character was allowed to draw attention from the main theme, but the picture was replete with detail always in keeping with the theme.

W. Lawson Butt as Tybalt was the most conspicuous character, next to the principals. His was the role to simulate the daring blade whose sword made him feared of all. Robert Cummings as Friar Laurence fitted this principal role exactly. Eric Hudson and Edmund Elton as Montague and Capulet seniors, Horace Vinton as Prince Escalus, Helen Dunbar and Genevieve Reynolds as Lady Capulet and Lady Montague carried their parts equally well. Adella Barker as the nurse added the chief character role to the play. And Ethel Mantell, niece of the eminent tragedian, was a splendid selection for Rosaline, Romeo's first love. Alexandro Herbert took the role of Friar John, while such well known names as Sothern (Harry Sothern as Abram), Booth, Kemble, Davenport, Hall-Caine, and many others added to the painstaking correctness of even the minor roles.

The story of "Romeo and Juliet," like all good stories, is not too complex. The Montagues and the Capulets, two noble houses of Verona, are at enmity with one another. This is well shown in the introductory scenes, in which, too, Romeo's passion for the pale Rosaline introduces his friends Benvolio and Mercutio as scheming to shift his affection, by getting him to attend the

Fox Marine Spectacle Presented in New York

"A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann, Calls Out Big Crowd at the Lyric on October 17, and Is Made the Subject of Much Comment by the Dailies—Picture Is a Wonderful Fairy Story with Many Imaginative Effects

Some of the Mass Scenes in "A Daughter of the Gods" and the Little Lee Children Who are Members of the Big Cast

WILLIAM FOX presented "A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann, at the Lyric theatre, New York, on Tuesday, October 17. The spectacle attracted much comment in the New York dailies, the majority of them speaking favorably of it, and from the way the public has received it, a run of many weeks has been predicted. The picture must measure over ten thousand feet, as on the opening night it took a full two hours and a half to run it off, including a five-minute intermission.

Written and produced by Herbert Brenon down in Jamaica, "A Daughter of the Gods" commences with a delightful little allegorical bit, in which two song birds are the central figures. One of them is killed by a cat, and the other left without its mate, throws itself into the water. Thus they both become creatures of the sea. In after years the male bird takes the form of a man, and is mistaken for the long-lost son of a rich Sultan. The female appears as a girl (Miss Kellermann), who is ever under the spell of a witch, although a good fairy does her best to put the witch to rout.

The film then follows Anitia's wanderings. The Sultan goaded by the witch, tries in divers ways to kill her, but the supposed son refutes many of his plans. She drifts into the kingdom of the gnomes, and when the Sultan's troops revolt against him she leads the gnomes, who suddenly change to armed men against the revolutionists. The Sultan's kingdom, however, becomes united at the approach of the invaders, and, instead of aiding her beloved, Anitia is forced to fight against him. Both meet death, but in spirit they again become united.

A Wealth of Setting

Mr. Brenon has set his story in a wealth of beautiful settings. His Turkish city peopled with vast hordes of supers is a marvel of itself. The kingdom of the gnomes is a fantastic and pleasing creation. And then there are mermaid scenes in abundance similar to those in the former Brenon-Kellermann picture. The photography in most of the scenes is very good, others are tinted in a highly pleasing manner.

The scenes of the picture, which will, without doubt, meet with the greatest approval, are strange enough, quite apart from the story. They are injected here and there during the course of the unreeling, and they show Miss Kellermann doing all sorts of diving and swimming stunts. She doesn't bother over the formality of a bathing suit or even a pair of tights, but dives and swims unincumbered. You see her dive from the top of a high tower into a dashing sea, and then swim for what seems to be miles and miles, pursued by a dozen or so natives of Jamaica.

And it also behooves us to tell of numerous scenes in the old Sultan's harem, with equally numerous young ladies sitting, dancing or swimming about. As we understand the matter, inmates of harems don't wear an awful lot as a rule. And Mr. Brenon is realistic to a minute degree.

Of course, "A Daughter of the Gods" does not pretend to be dramatic. A leader tells you it's a fairy story, and you can take it or leave it at that. Children always enjoy fairy stories, and they certainly will enjoy. "A Daughter of the Gods," for what little story there is will entertain them, and then there are little Jane and Katherine Lee, who swim about as mermaids, as well as the scores and scores of little people who play as gnomes.

As for grown-ups, that is quite another proposition. An evening of watching a fairy story minus anything resembling good, strong drama will hardly appeal to the general run of theatre-going and motion picture-going folk. In other words, "The Daughter of the Gods" is a big thing, but it doesn't grip.

Fight Between Gnomes and Sultan's Army

Mr. Brenon has attempted to build to a climax in the attack of the grown-up gnomes on the Sultan's army. He flashes the gnomes turning into armed men as they approach the city, and then the opposing forces meet in a few encounters. But the thrill that should be isn't there. The battle is fought well enough, but it doesn't get under the skin, possibly because the armies are not real, and that it is all because of a misunderstanding that they are indulging in the fight. And there are a few glimpses of a wall siege of which the same may be said.

The city constructed in Jamaica specially for the picture, about which the Fox press department has been saying so much since last winter, is an impressive sight. It looks massive, firm, and permanent. Its main buildings and its smaller structures are respectively gorgeous and neat. The interiors are equally impressive. The city, in truth, looks as if it were made of some sort of stone, perhaps marble, and so it seems somewhat of a shock when the whole thing burns up. The walls of the palaces fall in like flimsy lathe. The fire scenes taken from the distance are fine, particularly those taken with the water between the city and the camera.

Supporting Miss Kellermann appear William Shay, Hal de Forest, Mlle. Marcelle, Stuart Holmes, Violet Horner, Ricca Allen, Henrietta Gilbert, and others. Their work is pleasing, although there is no special scene calculated to grip because of its acting.

"ROMEO AND JULIET"

(Fox—Seven Parts)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

TWO productions, of more than ordinary magnificence, from Shakespeare's immortal theme have presented themselves this week for review. Direct comparison would be impossible for each reaches by different means, and with totally different personnel, a similar goal. Both are sincere efforts to interpret a classic story, which all know, and both are magnificently staged and lavishly, nay extravagantly portrayed. Theda Bara, Mr. Fox's greatest leading woman, gives an interpretation of Juliet so far removed from the vampire type in which this actress is accustomed to be cast, that she has scored a signal triumph in versatility.

She is the bewitching, girlish, impulsive Juliet that students of Shakespeare say the real Juliet was, and in the earlier scenes of the play quite makes one forget the strong roles she can assume so well. As misfortune begins to come upon the two lovers this girlishness naturally gives way to a more serious and ardent nature, which one may well imagine the fiery love of a Romeo would produce, even in the immature child Juliet.

Harry Hilliard as Romeo plays a strong lead to the passionate Juliet, who finds in his wooing the inspiration of a burning passion that leads her to sacrifice life itself to be with him through all eternity. Walter Law as Friar Laurence, John Webb Dillion as Tybalt the quarrelsome nephew of Lady Capulet, Einar Linden as Paris, Glen White as Mercutio, Edwin Eaton as Montague, senior, and Edwin Holt as Capulet, senior, give excellent interpretation to the supporting roles. Alice Gale as the Nurse of Juliet, Victory Bateman as Lady Montague, and Helen Tracy as Lady Capulet, complete a well selected cast.

Several scenes of more than usual magnificence punctuate the action of "Romeo and Juliet." The bal masque of the Capulets, the funeral cortege, and the scenes showing the two families fighting in the streets of Verona, show the quality of direction throughout. We are told that in this production four hundred and thirteen scenes were required by the scenario, and we think this estimate is not far from a correct one.

If any criticism were to be offered it would be the cutting short of several scenes which might well have been held on the screen longer. Full of constantly changing action as Shakespeare's story is, it would seem to have been necessary to include in this production more than the usual number of distinct settings, and Mr. Fox has spared neither pains nor expense in this respect.

Elaborate and handsome costumes predominate in scene after scene, and big sets, where required, add to the realistic depiction of ancient Verona and the wealth of the two families presented in this story.

The great banquet hall of the Capulets was an impressive place. The street scenes showed thoughtful building. The tomb of the Capulets, and the cloister of the friars, breathed the dignity of ancient origin which the camera is so wonderful in simulating, and in general sumptuous mounting characterizes William Fox's "Romeo and Juliet." Several touches characteristics of Fox thoroughness in spelling atmosphere also mark the play, such as the introduction of Juliet's feathered pets and the two attractive Capulet children (Jane and Katherine Lee).

The fencing scenes were splendidly realistic. An excellent scene was Capulet's wrath at Juliet's refusal to obey his mandate to marry Paris.

The most impressive scenes in the play commence with Juliet's struggle with herself before she musters sufficient courage to take Friar Laurence's potion, which shall place her in a trance simulating death. She sees visions of awakening to find herself alone in the death chamber, and the horror all but overcomes her will. The double death of Romeo and Juliet beside the bier was convincingly handled by both principals, and fittingly closed an entirely successful filming of this immortal play.

Of Theda Bara as Juliet, opinions may be counted on to widely differ. To those who prefer her exclusively in vampire roles, her Juliet will seem tame, for strong as Shakespeare's story is in its dramatic heights, only in the last scenes is Miss Bara called upon for tremendous emotional expression such as is her forte. And largely on this point will hinge the success of this film. That Miss Bara makes an acceptable Juliet none will gainsay, but does she reach the heights of greatness of her most popular plays? We are sure there will be wide differences of opinion on this point. But Mr. Fox has given us a big production, well handled.

ELABORATE NEW THEATRE FOR BERKELEY, CAL.

San Francisco, Oct. 21.

NEGOTIATIONS have been completed for the erection of a fine new moving picture theatre on University Avenue, just west of Shattuck, Berkeley, Cal., to cost in the neighborhood of $130,000. The house will have a seating capacity of about two thousand and will be the property of L. M. Williamson and R. H. Bradshaw. It will be controlled and operated by A. H. Moore and J. P. Dean, the former having at one time been manager of the local house of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit. Plans for the theatre are being prepared by Architect James W. Plachek and provide for an auditorium about ninety by one hundred and fifty feet in size. The exterior of the building will be of tapestry brick, with terra cotta trimmings.

The furnishings of the house are to be rich, but not elaborate. Fine spring edge theatre chairs will be installed and there will be a pipe organ to cost about $15,000. The interior illumination will be of the flood order, similar to the effects obtained at the recent Exposition at San Francisco. All the seats will be on one floor and there will be no obstructions in the form of posts. The location of the house is regarded as being ideal, many car lines passing the site, with suburban trains having their terminus a half a block away. The house will probably be called the U. C. Theatre, after the University of California.

"THE BRAND OF COWARDICE"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

CHARLES MAIGNE is the author of this latest from the Rolfe Studios and under the direction of John W. Noble it loses nothing in the telling. Lionel Barrymore, as Cyril Van Cortlandt Hamilton, the spoiled son of a wealthy widow who finds himself when the great test comes, makes the ideal type for the part.

With his love for Marcia West, the daughter of his commanding officer, for an incentive he enlists in an Irish regiment after being branded a coward for resigning from his own regiment at the outbreak of the Mexican hostilities.

Navarette, posing as a wealthy Mexican, on a visit to the United States, is in reality a bandit chief on the lookout for a couple of rapid-fire machine guns that he can sneak away to his retreat on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.

Through bribery he manages to secure a gun from one Mallin, a corporal of the company of which Cyril is a member. To save himself, Mallin accuses Cyril and a Mexican Indian whom he has befriended, and both are arrested and ordered to the guardhouse. Cyril and the Indian escape across the river and on the way are just in time to see Marcia captured by Navarette's men as she is taking a horseback ride along the border.

Telling the Indian to make his way to the American camp and notify Colonel West, Cyril follows the bandits. The Indian is bitten by a snake, but gamely continues on his way.

Marcia is taken to the bandit's stronghold, but by setting a house on fire at the other end of the town, Cyril draws all the men to that end and is enabled to rescue Marcia from the clutches at Navarette, and kills the bandit with his bare hands.

Pursued by the Mexicans, Cyril makes a last stand, and with his last cartridge promised Marcia, that she will not fall in the hands of the Mexicans alive, is about to shoot her when a stray bullet finds him.

As he falls to the ground the Colonel arrives in an automobile filled with soldiers, just as the cavalry surround the Mexicans and cut off their escape. The brand of cowardice removed, Cyril make a quick recovery from his wound, and he and Marcia are happily married.

Grace Valentine makes a bewitching Marcia and does credit to her part, while Tula Belle as Rana, the Mexican's daughter was a revelation in child parts.

There are two good hand to hand combats that are realistic in the extreme. Cyril and Mallin have a fist fight in which the former comes out victor, and the struggle in which Navarette is strangled by Cyril is bound to stir the blood of any audience. There is not a lagging moment and the suspense is sustained throughout.

This number will be well received, especially so, as the latest unpleasantness with Mexico—with its thousands of troops on the border and "Villa—dead or alive"—is fresh in the memory of every American.

"THE MAN WHO STOOD STILL"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE picture version of Jules Eckert Goodman's play follows the original very closely, and for that reason alone it becomes an interesting and entertaining offering. In addition to this, it contains two big stars in the leading roles, Lew Fields and Doris Kenyon, and it is hard to tell which pleases the most. Lew Fields will always be Lew Fields, but he is not nearly as funny on the screen as on the speaking stage. This is largely a matter of his excruciatingly funny dialect, which of course it is impossible for the screen to transpose. The lack of it is a distinct loss in a Lew Fields picture.

There were moments in the picture when Mr. Fields reached the heights of acting ability, when merely by the expression of his whole being he was able to depict, so that it could be felt, great sorrow and pathos. Doris Kenyon is possessed of a fresh, clean, young, beauty that even though she were not a clever actress would be sufficient reason for incorporating her in the cast of the picture. As it is she accentuates this great beauty by her really meritorious work throughout the whole production, being especially effective in those scenes in which she mothers her illegitimate child.

Owing to the success of the original play only the briefest outline of the story is necessary. Herman Krauss is an old fashioned, unprogressive German, the owner of a small jewelry store. He is greatly desirous that his daughter, Marie, marry the son of his old friend Otto Spiegal. Marie runs away and believes that she marries Frank MacPherson. Later her husband deserts her and she learns that she only went through a mock ceremony. With no place to go, she turns to the Spiegals and is taken in by them until they learn that the child is illegitimate. Turned out of the house by Otto Spiegal, she becomes reconciled with her father, and the picture closes with Fred Spiegal coming to the front and convincing Marie of his undying love wins her consent to their marriage.

Though the plot of this story is simple and seemingly trite in synopsis form, the manner in which it has been treated and worked out leaves little to be desired. The picture has been given a most excellent production at the hands of Frank Crane with settings, lighting and photography well up to standard. The supporting cast was made up of George Trimble, Viola Trent, Harry Fraser, Edward O'Connor, John Powers, Dave Ferguson and Augusta Burmester.

Considered from the box office standpoint, this is a picture on which the exhibitor can go the limit on advertising and general methods of exploitation. It is a picture in which there can be no come back. Emphasis should be laid on the acting ability of Lew Fields rather than on his humor, for although there are numerous scenes which tickle the risibles, it is his general ability which pleases most. The rare beauty of Doris Kenyon and the general merit of her work is another feature that should offer great opportunities for advance advertising. Taken as a whole, the picture contains all of the elements of a good box office attraction as well as an artistically meritorious production.

"THE END OF THE RAINBOW"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE end of the Rainbow" may or may not be a pot of gold —that all depends of course on whether the exhibitor's patronage likes it. We are certain that the patronage of many exhibitors will like it. In the first place it is a Lynn Reynolds picture. That much about it ought to serve to fix its quality in the exhibitor's mind. Mr. Reynolds stands for pictorial cleanliness and he adheres strictly to that rule, refusing to allow that which is pointedly suggestive to enter into his work. And he accentuates the value of his clean story by selecting settings of unusual beauty and interest for his backgrounds. His staging in "The End of the Rainbow" with the exception of a few settings is "all outdoors," high up in the mountains of California. And his photographer, Clyde R. Cook, has left nothing to be desired in his end of the work.

Mr. Reynolds also wrote "The End of the Rainbow." His story is strong in suspense and contains a wealth of comedy, some of which is highly original. Take, for instance,, the scenes in which Jerry Simpson, son of a backwoodsman, who has ambitions to be a lawyer, delivers his maiden speeches to the tree stumps in the forest. Or the various flashes of the sheriff of the mountain county who is in a wild hurry to get home from San Francisco. He takes automibile, horse and wagon and horseback and meets with some disaster each time. And finally he ends up walking. These flashes come as a relief from the tenser part of the main story and are so arranged as to cause the observer to believe that the sheriff has an important arrest to make on reaching home. But he hasn't. His all important telegram is finally flashed on the screen which tells him to come home because "it's a boy."

One touch of comedy does much to help out a picture. Many touches might put it over even though the story was mediocre. Mr. Reynolds' story is not mediocre, neither is it superb or wonderful, but it is good. It shows the manner in which the daughter of a wealthy timber owner, came to his lumber camp incog. to make the discovery that her father's manager was not on the level and also to find out what a fine fellow Jerry Simpson would make, looking at him from a matrimonial angle. The climax of the picture is effective and there is a good thrill registered when the villain comes to grief while shooting down the flume on a log.

Myrtle Gonzalez and Val Paul fit the leading roles very well and Fred Church is a good villain. George Hernandez, a sterling character actor, is the girl's father while others are Jack Curtis, Jack Connelly and Joe Ryan.

"DOMESTIC DIFFICULTIES"

(Mutt and Jeff—Half Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BUD FISHER unearthed a most humorous story on which to base his latest "Mutt and Jeff" cartoon. It has many laughs in it and the animation runs very smoothly.

Mutt wants to get out when his wife has told him to go to bed, and finally, with the assistance of Jeff, he escapes via the water pipe. During the rest of the evening he collects a healthy "bun" and, arriving home, is afraid to go upstairs and face the music. He gets Jeff to go up first to see if all is well and he, poor fellow, gets a rap on the head with a rolling pin. He comes down to tell Mutt to go right up—his wife is fast asleep. Then he stands outside musing of the beating up that Mutt will get, and in a little while the long fellow is seen coming out the window followed by a rain of bricks. The worst of it is the whole pile lands on Jeff.

METRO MAKES "ROMEO AND JULIET" A STRONG FILM PLAY

great Capulet feast, where he may see other beauties. But alas! his affection now attaches itself to the daughter of none other than Capulet himself, and so this love begins with Tybalt, Lady Capulet's nephew, on a still hunt for the life of the bold stranger who would dare invade the very Capulet household itself.

The famous balcony scene takes place with the ever-present peril of interruption by a blood-seeking Capulet, and the secret marriage at Friar Laurence's preceded and followed by the street brawls in which Mercutio, Romeo's best friend, is killed by Tybalt, and Tybalt, the Capulet, is himself slain by Romeo, result in Romeo's banishment forever by the Prince.

Scarcely has Romeo departed, after bidding his love a dangerous farewell, than Juliet is told that Paris, a friend of her father's, is to have her hand almost immediately. Friar Laurence suggests to Juliet a feigned death, to be created by a powerful potion, which Romeo shall be told of but none other. Juliet takes the potion, and with great pomp and abject grief all mourn her demise. Father Laurence's message to Romeo fails of delivery and Romeo, hearing of Juliet's death, returns and the final scenes of Romeo's grief, his taking of poison and Juliet's awakening and joining him in death reach a climax of emotional pantomime which will be forever remembered by those who see this production. It can be seen from the foregoing what a powerful theme is developed, and why we say that this picture will live forever as both a classic masterpiece and a triumph of dramatic screen construction.

MALL THEATRE, ANOTHER METRO HOUSE, SOON READY IN CLEVELAND

Announcement has been made that the new Mall theatre, Cleveland, which will open in November, is to be linked with the Alhambra. According to contracts signed, these theatres will be the home of Metro pictures in Cleveland. Although the completion of the new Mall is over a month off, the picture service, it is understood, willl be started in the present Mall Sunday.

"FIFTY-FIFTY"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"FIFTY-FIFTY," with Norma Talmadge in the leading role, was selected by Mr. Rothapfel as the piece de resistance of the bill at the Rialto theatre during the week of October 15. It was directed by Allen Dwan from a story by Robert Shirley and possesses the usual fine production of Fine Arts subjects. The story is melodramatic and elemental, although it has strength and more than the usual amount of suspense.

The story tells of a marriage of a girl of New York's Bohemia to a business man. After the birth of her child she so neglects her husband in favor of the infant that he wanders away from home ties and enters upon an affair with an adventuress. He asks his wife to divorce him and she refuses, so he puts matters into the hands of the adventuress. She, with the assistance of her confederates, compromises the wife by means of an old badger trick. She is lured to a room and there a man seizes her in his arms just as a photographer steps into the room and catches the scenes on his tell-tale film.

Then we have several scenes in the divorce court. The picture is produced by the husband's attorney. He demands custody of the child, and the mother, to save it for herself, says that her husband is not its father. The divorce proceedings are held in mid-air just long enough to allow the husband to discover what sort of a woman the adventuress really is, and then the kindly judge manages to effect a reunion between husband and wife after he has received a confession from the latter that her words on the witness stand regarding the parentage of her child were false.

There are some things in this which will create rather a disagreeable impression on the average audience—that is, judging from the manner in which the Rialto audience took them. The drawn out episode in which the wife is compromised and photographed is a little too broad for family consumption, while the sudden announcement of the wife, asserting that her child is not her husband's, comes out of a clear sky and is merely astonishing of itself instead of being dramatically forceful.

Miss Talmadge does some excellent emotional work in the role of the wife and J. W. Johnston as the husband fares equally well. Mr. Johnston is truly one of the best leading men on the screen. The work of the supporting cast is praiseworthy in every instance. It includes Marie Chambers, Ruth Darling, Harry Northrop, Frank Currier, Dodson Mitchell and W. P. Richmond.

"THE ISLE OF LIFE"

(Red-Feather—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

STEPHEN WHITMAN, whose brain is responsible for the theme of this play, in novel form, painted a never-to-be-forgotten picture of a man with no respect for God, man or devil, yet who, because he was, after all, human, finally softened to the all-powerful call of nature, with a woman's love as his reward. In transferring this dramatic word-painting to its visualized form on the screen, Director Burton George has given us some very strong scenes, and Frank Whitson, Roberta Wilson, and Hayward Mack, have very satisfactorily filled the important roles of Sebastian, Ghirlaine Bellamy, and Lieut. Pamfort.

If the audience will have patience to wait through two preliminary reels until the action really gets started, this will be voted a good picture. The opening scenes, designed to show the incorrigible character of the hero, are largely explanatory, and even the violent kidnapping of the heroine, and her subjection to the man in the lonely villa on "The Isle of Life," do not catch the interest thoroughly, until the awakening of the father instinct, caused by the birth of the babe to the servant in the house, starts the better nature of the man into being.

Conscience Being Awakened

From this point on, beautiful scenes, combined with heart interest, amply repay the patient waiting for the plot to develop. The ending is novel and forceful, too. On the whole this picture is quite acceptable and we should say would have a general appeal.

"AMERICAN ARISTOCRACY"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE exhibitor knows the value of Douglas Fairbanks. As a fifty-fifty combination of a comedian and athlete he has no equals. In "American Aristocracy," he does a lot of amazing stunts such as vaulting a fence as high as his head, riding aloft an automobile and jumping off to hang on a wire and flying in a "hydro." Aside from that he uncovers a plot to furnish gunpowder to Mexico by packing it in Malted Milk bottles.

We sincerely believe that Mr. Fairbanks can put this picture over with any audience whatsoever. It mixes comedy and thrills superbly. However, in the matter of construction it is not up to the standard of the best of his former pictures. It starts off with such a bang and with such a rattling selection of uproarious subtitles that it can not keep up the pace and as a consequence the action slows up for a while during the middle of the picture. In the end, however, the thrills start again and takes the picture through to a glorious finish.

It is hardly necessary to dwell on the merit of the subtitles written by Anita Loos. Written in a free, easy and highly humorous style they are responsible for almost as many laughs as the comedian himself—perhaps more in the case of the present picture. Miss Loos also wrote the scenario for "American Aristocracy," and while she has not done as good work in this line, judging it from a constructive standpoint as she has in the matter of the subtitles, hers is on the whole no ordinary or mean piece of work.

Opposite the irresistible Fairbanks is Jewell Carmen, a ravishing young lady if there ever was one. Charles DeLima, Albert Parker and Arthur Ortiego make up the principal support, while a whole troupe of society people appear as extras. Lloyd Ingraham directed.

"THE CRIMINAL"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MR. INCE here presents Clara Williams in an Italian role in a picture possessing a strong vein of sympathy but little else. While the production tendered it by Reginald Barker would in every way do justice to a superb story, it is regretable that C. Gardner Sullivan's current offering falls considerably far below his usual work. Briefly "The Criminal" can be summed up by saying the story is lacking in strong dramatic qualities. The main plot is forced to carry the whole picture and it is under a strain to do so, as there are no sub-plots.

Miss Williams is first seen as Naneta, a native of Italy, lacking the formality of a second name and so an outcast. The entire first reel is spent in presenting her dismal plight. In the second reel her departure for America comes, followed by her introduction to an Italian restaurant as slavey. In the third she meets Donald White, and there is love. In the fourth and fifth there is the denouement. Naneta finds a baby and she learns it is a cast off like herself. To save its name she says she stole it but Donald makes her confess and also confess regarding the shadow shrouding her own birth. That doesn't make any difference to him and so they are married.

Naneta in Prison

Miss Williams is an actress of skill and when the occasion demands she is able to rise to emotional heights, but her whole performance in "The Criminal" is handicapped owing to the fact that the observer is obliged to see so much of her. She is skilful but she can't carry a scene with the wonderful strength of George Beban, for instance. William Desmond is seen as Donald White. He acts well but to our mind he is absolutely miscast. It is unconvincing to watch a love scene between him and the Italian girl. For the sake of congruity an Italian type could have been picked for the role. Joseph Dowling, Gertrude Claire, Charles French, Walt Whitman, to say nothing of Enid Willis, the baby, are cast in the supporting parts.

Mr. Barker's production is excellent. His cameraman has aided with some fine light effects, while the sepia tinting of some of the exteriors greatly enhances their beauty.

"COMMON SENSE BRACKETT"

(Monarch Photo Play—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THE exhibitor that goes into the open market for a change from the program might do well to book this latest of the state rights productions from the studios of the Monarch Photo Play Company.

"Common Sense Brackett" is another "Way Down East," and is a beautiful story of the "Old Folks at Home" or down on the farm. Comedy situations galore, good rural atmosphere, splendid photography, good acting on the part of a competent cast, a clever plot interestingly told, and quite a few tense moments, all help to make this number a good investment from a box office standpoint.

The Long-Lost Daughter Is Found

Bruce Brackett, the proprietor of a small country hotel, marries the leading woman of a road show, who in a fit of longing for the sight of the white lights of Broadway once more, leaves him, taking their only child with her. Brackett after a fruitless search for his wife and daughter, comes back and adopts an orphan girl of his home town.

Sixteen years later this girl discovers, by an interesting chain of developments, that a new arrival in the town who is giving dancing lessons, is the long lost daughter of her adopted father. Fearing that she will lose the love of the man she has called "father" as long as she can remember she keeps her discovery a secret.

Brackett, with the tragedy of his own life ever before him, warns a neighbor against making a drudge of his wife and neglecting her. Through his efforts another scandal is averted and for a reward is reunited with his daughter.

The story runs along smoothly and is bound to please any audience. Those in the cast deserving of special mention are: William Frederic as Brackett, William J. Sorrille as Newton Offertt, his neighbor, and Baby Joan as Little Marion.

"A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS"

(Signal-Mutual Serial—First Chapter)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

AFTER viewing the first chapter of this new Mutual serial, it doesn't require much imagination to foresee the many interesting and intense episodes that can, and undoubtedly will, be built up from the auspicious opening. Indications point to a really original and entertaining continued photoplay.

The scenes of this serial are laid in the timber lands of the Northwest. Great pains were evidently taken in selecting the locations. These locations are a joy, showing forests of gigantic redwoods, the wonderful scenery being excellently photographed.

The first chapter not only introduces most of the principal characters, but also brings in several ultra-dramatic incidents. "Dollar" Holmes, a common logging boss, has two ambitions: to become a lumber king, and to have a son who will inherit his title. Holmes is under contract to deliver ten million feet of felled timber by a certain date, but a forest fire wipes out most of the trees at his disposal, and he cannot fulfill his contract. His only salvation is to get the lands of a nearby tribe of Indians, When he cannot obtain these by fair means, he sends a "boot-legger" to sell liquor to the Indians, and then he obtains deeds from the drunken redmen. This coup causes the lumber barons to make Holmes one of their number.

Having realized his material ambitions, Holmes anxiously awaits the birth of his son. When his child proves to be a girl, Holmes is insane with disappointment, and drives the mother and infant from the house. The mother attempts to cross the river on a log jam, but is caught in a dynamite explosion. She is saved by a logger, but Holmes believes she is dead, and decides to marry the daughter of the lumber trust president.

Helen Holmes, the heroine of the serial, does not appear in the first installment, since she takes the part of Holmes' daughter twenty years later. To give some idea of the thrills that are in store, the second chapter shows that Holmes married again, and has a son just back from college. In a terrific race to register some timber deeds, Helen Holmes pits herself against this son. This race involves trains, automobiles, shooting rapids in a canoe, etc. The heroine saves the life of her half-brother, and the end of the second chapter points to an unnatural romance between the two.

When Helen Holmes gets started on the material of the second chapter, the fans will doubtless hang onto their chairs and follow the girl's fortunes for twenty weeks. The unusualness of the film's locale, the intenseness of the plot, and the popularity and daring of Helen Holmes certainly ought to make this serial a sure winner.

Others who take part in the picture are: Thomas Lingham, Katherine Goodrich, William Behrens, Will Chapman, Paul Hurst, George Wischussen, William Brunton, Florence Holmes, and Leo Maloney. The directing was done by J. P. McGowan.

"THE CRIMSON STAIN"

(Episodes Five, Six and Seven—Consolidated-Metro—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE fifth episode of this mystery serial of crime and murder is called "The Figure in Black," and tells of the arrest by the police of Robert Clayton accused of the murder of Truxton Lambert. Dr. Montrose realizing the awful horror that he has created with his invention thinks that he has an opportunity to destroy Pierre, but for some unexplainable reason he nearly kills another member of the gang. Stanley goes to Robert's studio to look for clues, and there discovers two members of the gang. He conceals himself behind some portieres and learns of an attempt that is to be made to kidnap Florence. A fight in the studio follows. Florence is kidnapped and taken to a lonely house, but when the police arrive Stanley is discovered to be one of the kidnappers having overcome one of the gang and assumed his disguise. Pierre is in a closet but escapes the clutches of the police by means of a smoke bomb.

The sixth episode is called "The Phantom Image," and contains some exceedingly good double exposure photography showing the image of Pierre reflected in the pupil of Vanya's eye. The episode is taken up largely with an account of Vanya's early life and her meeting with Pierre. Just as she is about to make an important disclosure to Stanley, Pierre, the arch criminal, appears in an aperture of the wall and hypnotizes her. Pierre tries to murder Florence and Stanley, while they are in a dark room, with poisonous gas. They break down the door, pursue him, and shoot him in the forearm. He escapes by jumping from the roof of the house to a tree. Later Felix enters the laboratory from the secret room and dresses a wound in his forearm. In examining the photographic plate containing the image of Pierre in Vanya's eye Parrish drops and breaks it.

"The Devil's Symphony" is the title of the seventh episode, and it tells how Pierre and his gang tttempt to rob Mrs. Clayton of a valuable necklace at a masked ball at her house. There are some exceedingly beautiful settings in this episode. Stanley finds a cipher that makes him believe that Parrish is actively connected with the gang. The attempt of Pierre and his cohorts at robbery and murder is frustrated by Stanley. One of the gang is thrown into the river by Clayton, after an exciting chase between an automobile and motor cycle, and Florence is saved from death in the nick of time by Stanley. The episode is exciting throughout.

Excitement and mystery, however, seem to be the keynotes of the whole serial, and though there are times when the action is not quite clear, still this only adds to the mystery, and it is probable that these events will be cleared up in later episodes.

Maurice Costello and Ethel Grandin please in the leading roles. The supporting cast is made up of T. J. McGrane, Eugene Strong, Olga Olonova, who is extremely good by the way, William H. Cavanaugh, John Milton, and N. J. Thompson.

"THE RAINBOW PRINCESS"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NO ordinary picture is "The Rainbow Princess." Perhaps if it were a little more ordinary in respect to some things, such for instance, the development of the story, it would be ultimately better. But on the other hand witness the realistic circus scenes, realistic, because laid round and about a real circus, the presence of Ann Pennington at the head of the cast and the introduction of the wriggly Hula Hula dance that the dainty little actress did in a recent edition of the "Follies."

Hope Meets Warren After the Trial

The circus scenes, particularly those in which the fat lady and her minute husband and the skeleton man appear are delightfully humorous. Hope, the little dancer, who is really none other than Miss Pennington, is adopted by a family of high estate, but that doesn't make any difference to her and when the whole troupe of freaks from the circus comes calling, they are royally entertained, to the great grief of the staid old family servants, and to the general disaster of the dining room table and its contents. The comedy scenes dominate "The Rainbow Princess."

The scenario was written by Shannon Fife; the direction in charge of J. Searle Dawley. Mr. Fife's work is just a little too laborious for good effect. He takes a long time to get into his story, to reach his big situation and then it isn't very dramatic. Hope, who ascends in a balloon daily at the circus, and who also does the Hula Hula, is adopted by a judge, who is led to believe her his grand daughter. A love story with the judge's nephew is brought in, but it is not very prominent. And then the judge discovers he has been duped, that Hope is not his granddaughter at all. That night she starts to leave, but encounters the two sons of the circus owner robbing the family safe. They are caught, she believes the judge thinks her in league with the crooks and she goes back to the tent sadly. But the judge and his nephew want her after all and she comes back to a happy home.

Miss Pennington is not the conventional actress. She isn't given many real opportunities, but creates a favorable impression nevertheless. Evidently she preferred to work with little or no makeup on and as a consequence she really looks like the Hula Hula girl she is supposed to be in some few scenes. William Courtleigh, Jr., is the nephew and Grant Stewart the judge.

"TO THE RAINBOW"

(Educational Films Corp. of America—One Reel)

THIS is another excellent scenic, made by Robert C. Bruce, and, like its predecessors, given its initial showing at the Rialto theatre, New York.

Mr. Bruce takes the spectator along the trail of the Rainbow River deep in the Cascade Mountains. The journey ends at Rainbow Falls, which Mr. Bruce "shot" from many different angles, thus catching a wealth of scenic beauty. The photography is sharp and clear throughout.

Throughout, there is a pleasing vein of light comedy, based upon incidents of camp-life. Rialto audiences were distinctly pleased.

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

"Borrowed Sunshine." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Oct. 24.)—This short length subject is full of the kind of heart interest that most audiences delight in. While not characterized by dramatic climaxes of any kind, it is full of interesting touches. Richard Travers and Marguerite Clayton, both of whom have considerable followings, have parts well suited to their abilities. Mary McAlister, a new child actress, is really excellent. This picture will make a very good filler for almost any program.

Helen Grant lives in a wretched tenement with her six year old sister Goldie. The child's chief delight is her flower pot, on which the sun shines for a few fleeting moments in the afternoon. Even this bit of sunshine is lost when a huge chewing gum sign is erected on the building opposite. Goldie goes to the owner of the building to complain of this act, and meets Glenarm, a young architect, who works in the building across the way. By a system of mirrors, Glenarm contrives to send sunshine down to the little tenement room all day long. Glenarm falls in love with Goldie's sister, but does not have enough money to marry her. When he wins a $5,000 prize competition, he is able to marry the girl.

"The Fable of the Throbbing Genius of a Tank Town Who Was Encouraged by Her Folks Who Were Prominent." (Essanay. Wed., Oct. 25.)—This George Ade comedy not shown for review; the story follows: Lila, daughter of an egg and poultry king, scores a knockout in the charity benefit theatricals. Her friends advise her to go into the movies. Thereafter, when Lila moved from one room to another, the portieres had to be spread the entire length of the pole so as to make room for her head. She spurned the local haberdasher, who longed to surround her with a new bungalow and a lot of mission furniture. Lila finally got a part in the movies as the maid who enters with her back to the camera in the early part of Reel Two. When Lila saw the first run, and found her scene had been cut out, she got the first train for the home town. The next day she had a strip of red carpet spread for the haberdasher, and was learning to cook on a fireless cooker. Moral: The true friend to talent is one who goes to the benefit and hisses all the evening.

"It Never Could Happen." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Oct. 28.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Incensed at Bob Prandor's escapdes, his father tells him to leave home until he has earned one hundred dollars. Bob gets a job as a waiter and then is hired to butle for Wyman, a broker. Wyman's daughter, Thrya, is in love with a man opposed by her father. To throw her father off the scent, she pretends to be in love with Prandor. In trying to escape the girl's demonstrations, Prandor falls out of a window. By the time his wounds have recovered, he has fallen in love with his nurse. Later Prandor is arrested by Wyman, charged with forgery. Bob's father proves that he is not guilty, makes him a partner, and the boy marries his nurse. The cast consists of Richard C. Travers, John Cossar, Anna Mae Walthall, Thomas Commerford and Frances Benedict.

"The Beach Comber." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Oct. 31.)—This is an unusually good comedy of the polite kind, sure to please the majority of audiences. It is right up-to-date, involving, among other things, the modern ukelele craze. The scenes on a bathing beach, with numbers of comely maidens in swimming attire, will not be displeasing to anyone. More chuckles than guffaws will be caused by the action. Harry Dunkinson, Virginia Bowker and Roy L. Douglas take the leads. When Andy, a traveling salesman, arrives at Rest Haven a summer resort, he decides to take a vacation. Andy makes a big hit with the girls by teaching them classic dancing and ukelele playing. The other men at the resort naturally eye the intruder with disfavor. Andy's firm fires him, and he finds himself unable to pay his hotel bill. Although unable to swim, he gets a job as a life guard. In this new position he is idolized stilll more by the summer girls. The other men fake a drowning, which shows up the life guard. The girls quit him in disgust, but he gets his old job back and figures that selling neck-ties is better business than fussing susceptible girls.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 17." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Nov. 1.)—Wallace Carlson's latest animated cartoon burlesque of the news weeklies shares the reel with 500 feet of scenic taken around Crater Lake, Oregon.

"The Heart of Virginia Keep." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Nov. 4.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Virginia Keep's father is accused of a murder committed twenty-five years before. Virginia determines to secure evidence to prove his innocence. Arnold Trude, a young millionaire, who is acting as a reporter, keeping his identity a secret, promises to help Virginia. Together they go to the slums to secure evidence, and having found Virginia's father innocent, they dash to the Governor's office to find that the man has already been pardoned. Trude and Virginia fall into each other's arms. Marguerite Clayton, John Cossar, Edward Arnold and Thomas Commerford are in the cast.

"The Merry Motor Menders." (Kalem. Tues., Oct. 31.)—This single reel Ham comedy is absurdly ridiculous from start to finish, and for that reason is more or less amusing. Ham and Bud take a garage and when business is slack sprinkle tacks, nails and glass in the road. They also evolve what they call a speed cocktail out of gasoline which causes some wonderful effects. As a finale Bud drives an automobile through the back wall of the garage, later the machine explodes and they are shown making a trip through the clouds.

"Out of the Shadows." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Oct. 23.)—This release is rather elementary in its theme, acting and production. The high moral note sounded by the plot, and the high flown sub-titles, do not seem to be in accord with present-day taste. The picture will get by with unsophisticated audiences. A short comedy, entitled "Paradise for a Day," is on the same reel. Since the characters of this slapstick farce are the same that appear a few moments before in a heavy drama, the effect is somewhat ludicrous. In the cast are Robyn Adair, Eugenie Forde, Leo Pierson, Virginia Kirtley, Louella Maxam and E. J. Brady. Burton L. King directed.

The wife of Frank Lord, a successful broker, is concerned because her husband spends so little time at home. Her suspicions lead her to hire a detective to watch his movements. This sleuth finds Lord in a road-house with a notorious vampire. Mrs. Lord arrives on the scene to reproach her husband, but finds that he has been consorting with a woman to show their son Paul, whom the vampire has infatuated, the worthlessness of the woman. A happy family reunion takes place.

In the comedy, Percy, an unwelcome suitor, disguises himself as a tramp in order to get in the house of his loved one. His girl mistakes a real tramp for the masquerader, and the hobo is given the time of his life until the mistake is discovered.

"A Close Call." (Selig. Sat., Oct. 28.)—This Western does not have much of a plot, but the riding stunts introduced are unusual and well done. Like all of the Tom Mix pictures this one ought to get across well in any audience that appreciates Westerns. Supporting Tom Mix are Victoria Forde, Joe Ryan, Pat Chrisman and Sid Jordan. Masters, a ranch foreman, rides to a nearby town to cash a check. He is attacked by a gang of bandits and robbed, but he rides after the desperadoes, getting back the money, and winning the rancher's daughter by his bravery.

"Small Town Stuff." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Oct. 30.)—This is an echo from the "Bloom Center" series of rural comedies released by Selig sometime ago. The scenes of the comedy are laid in a country hamlet, offering many opportunities for legitimate and slapstick humor. This number will moderately please most audiences. The fact that the main idea of the picture was taken bodily from Mark Twain will probably not be noticed by many. In the cast are William Hutchinson, John Lancaster, Lee Morris, Ralph McCombs, William Chapman, Harold Howard, Martha Mattox, Lyllian Leighton and Irene Wallace. Othello Boothe, a ham barnstormer, goes to Bloom Center to produce some amateur theatricals. In making love to the village belle, he finds much competition, and so tries to terrorize his rivals by making up as a ghost. This fails and the village constable does not try to find the perpetrator of the deed, because he is busy looking for an escaped crook called Micky. After the performance of the theatricals, the proceeds disappear. One of Boothe's rivals lowers a blindfolded cat from the attic, and the cat's claws fastening in the actor's hair proves that the hair is only a wig. The great tragedian stands revealed as Micky, the crook.

"Tom's Sacrifice." (Selig. Sat., Nov. 4.)—This is a Western of the usual Mix type, introducing excellent feats of horsemanship and other cowboy stunts. The story and acting are elementary. Tom Miller shoulders the blame of a robbery committed by his brother, and goes West to become a cowboy. Tom makes good at his new profession, and falls in love with Maud, the daughter of the ranch owner. Sid Jackson, another cowboy, is also in love with Maud, and intense rivalry ensues. Jack is outwitted and Tom and Maud decide on their wedding day. The cast is composed of Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Sid Jordan, Joe Ryan, Joe Simkins and Howard Farrell.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Bungling Bill's Bow-Wow." (Mutual. Two reels. Sunday, Nov. 5.)—There are many good spots in this slap-stick comedy, and many that drag. Trick photography and new comedy "business" create quite a number of laughs, and the very grotesqueness of the plot wil amuse many. A burlesque of the Sherlock Holmes school of detecting is not a new thing in comedy, but is well done in this instance. Among others in the cast are Paddy McQuire, Arthur Moon and Alice Neice. The stern father refuses to allow his daughter to marry until the suitor produces the almost extinct "wampus." The manly hero finally secures this extraordinary animal, and is blessed by the father. Meantime, two villains have stolen the animal. A detective is put on the case, and many slap-stick complications ensue until the creature is finally recovered. Then the "wampus" disappears before the eyes of the owners. The suitor says "there ain't no such animal," and is given a good beating by the irate father.

Mutual Weekly, No. 95.—U.S.S. Arizona goes into commission, Brooklyn Navy Yard, New York City; U. S. sailors hold circus, Newport, R. I.; New York police who have trained for army at camp parade; steamer Antilla arrives at Norfolk, Va. with fire in hold; Episcopalians in convention, St. Louis, Mo.; Ambassador Sato from Japan, at Washington, D. C.; Cubs christened in Central Park, New York City; Firemen's field day, Bridgeport, Conn.; Fashions posed by Betty Brown.

Reel Life, No. 26.—The timely news dealt on this week embraces: Operating a submarine minelayer in animated drawings; Training a hunting dog; Making potash from sea weed; Developing truant boys.

See America First, No. 60.—The field of the battle of Gettysburg comprises the greater part of this release. Various views of interest are shown. An animated cartoon by Harry Palmer comes on the same reel.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

"A Scratch of the Pen." (Pathe. Two reels.)—Another two-reel melodramatic number in which the actors stop at no sort of artificiality to put their points across. The hero is arrested on circumstantial evidence, and a thrilling escape and a series of hot hand-to-hand fights comprise the rest of the film. Exciting but just a little too crude to compare favorably with preesnt-day films.

"Historic New Orleans." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Views of the ancient city of Louisiana are shown in this half-reel on the same spool with "Fowls and Game Birds." It makes an interesting travelogue.

"Fowls and Game Birds." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Chickens, pheasants, quails and other birds are shown on this half-reel, which is very well colored. On the same reel with "Historic New Orleans."

"Luke's Preparedness Preparations." (Rolin.)—Lacking the story that is usually present in the Rolin release, this Lonesome Luke comedy with its rough and tumble tricks can hardly rank with other releases in which this comedian has appeared. The gags are mostly old, and there is much kicking and falling resorted to as a means for comedy.

"The Shielding Shadow." (Astra. Two reels. Episode Seven.)—The action continues highly melodramatic and mysterious in this number of the serial, and besides there is present a thrill of the genuine sort. Ravengar and Leontine are high in the air in a balloon when it catches afire owing to the machinations of One Lamp Louie. Leontine is obliged to escape via the parachute route, while Ravengar falls the whole way into the water. This is, perhaps, the best number of the serial to date.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"The Masked Woman." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Oct. 31.)—An underworld melodrama with a strong mystery strain running through it. It tells the manner in which a kindly doctor, in trying to save the brother of his fiancee from the coils of an adventuress, gets accused of theft. After a hot fight both the brother and the doctor emerge triumphant. The interest never lags in this, and the suspense is kept at a high pitch throughout. Tom Gibson is the author, while in the cast appear Gretchen Lederer, Lloyd Whitlock, William Quinn, Jessie Arnold and George Pearce.

"Terrors of a Turkish Bath." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Nov. 1.)—The fun suggested by the title is not entirely realized in the body of this comedy, which is rather slow compared to the general run of L-Kos. The action takes place in a Turkish bath parlor, and while there is a good lot of comedy business done, one is continually looking for something that never arrives—perhaps its the customary dare-devil finish. Dan Russell has the star part.

"Sea Mates." (Big U. Thurs., Nov. 2.)—A swift moving drama laid by the sea, that is well produced and enacted, but which is based on a story that hardly has enough in it to arouse the average amount of interest. Its basis is rivalry between two fishermen for the hand of a girl, and the fact that the characters are somewhat originally drawn does not counterbalance the shortcomings of the story. Claire McDowell is featured. Francis Powers wrote and directed.

"Us Kids." (Powers. Fri., Nov. 3.)—A comedy, entirely played by juveniles and directed by Lule Warrenton. Its appeal is centralized altogether in children, although a better and more airtight story might have been chosen with which to amuse to the youngsters.

"For Love and Gold." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Nov. 4.)—One of Henry McRae's thrillers, in which the villain does his best to ruin the prospects of an American with mining interests in Mexico when he learns that his case is hopeless with the fair daughter of the miner. Naturally there is a hero who safely puts the villain to rout, but not until many thrilling situations have been introduced. E. M. McCall wrote the story, and in the cast appear L. C. Shumway, Edith Johnson and Ed Hearn.

"A Shadowed Shadow." (Joker. Sat., Nov. 4.)—One of the very best of the recent Jokers written by Jack Byrne. The plotting housekeepers play ghosts in order to scare away the heir that they themselves may have the property. But there are two other sets of ghosts in the form of an amateur detective and a group of burglars. The usual Joker cast appears in this and every scene in a laugh.

"Lucille, the Waitress." (Special Laemmle. Wed., Oct. 25.)—Really, one expects much more originality and real comedy when such a writer as Bide Dudley turns to the motion picture. But instead of offering something worthy of his name, Mr. Dudley has resorted to the old situation of having a living person take the place of a statue and the resulting situations are of equal mustiness. No doubt some will find humor in the reel, but hardly enough to warrant it being termed a good comedy. Jeannie Nelson, Paul Panzer and Howard Crampton have parts of some importance.

"Felix on the Job." (Special Victor. Tues., Oct. 31.)—There is no story here, simply a lot of gags which are worked one after another. They are all on the practical joke order, and while some of them succeed in getting a laugh there are too many of them for real enjoyment. Among other things a house is completely wrecked. George Felix directed and heads the cast himself, cavorting about in what is termed a scenario by Harry Wulze.

"Love and a Liar." (Nestor. Mon., Oct. 30.)—The complications that arise after a quiet marriage of two students in a co-educational college are here dwelt on with a good deal of snap and plenty of humor by the Nestor Comedy Company. Tom Gibson prepared the scenario for Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Priscilla Dean, Fred Gemble and Martha Mattox.

"Her Wedding Day." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., Nov. 2.)—After her marriage the wife learns that all has not been just right with her husband's past, from the woman in the case. The wife who doesn't love her husband at all is rather glad when the woman in the case puts him out of the way, so that she may then marry the man she really cares for. This subject is quite far from pleasing, and has somewhat of a demoralizing effect. E. M. Ingleton wrote the scenario for Douglas Gerrard, Francelia Billington and Ruth Clifford.

"Stumbling." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Nov. 3.)—A melodrama in which a society man is restored to his fiancee by a denizen of the underworld. Ray Hanford playing a gangster is quite the individual star of the picture, as his actions are typical and at times furnish not a little humor. Jack Livingston, Malcolm Blevins and Agnes Vernon all have important parts which they handle effectively. This is one of the best melodramas filmed under the direction of Leon Kent.

"Her Vanished Youth." (Rex. Sun., Nov. 5.)—This story by Maie Havey of the break between husband and wife because of another woman and of its healing by the innocent meddling of a little child has nothing creditable about it to hide its conventionality. Neither the acting nor the handling of the subject merits any praise. Dana Ong, Virginia Folz, Walter Yant and Peggy Coudray are the leads.

"The Bandit's Wager." (Big U. Sun., Nov. 5.)—Francis Ford and Grace Cunard appear in this comedy-drama, which is too foolish to merit much attention. Miss Cunard's chief method of expressing violent emotion is to wreck an entire setting and such stuff is too elementary to convey any idea at all. Jack Ford also appears.

INTERNATIONAL

"Play Ball." (Beatrice Fairfax. Episode 10. International.)—As usual Grace Darling as Beatrice Fairfax, and Harry Fox in the character of Jimmy Barton, the reporter, carry off the honors. But in addition we have some clever work by Olive Thomas (who, by the way, is very good to look upon) in her characterization of Rita Malone, sweetheart of Bert Kerrigan (Nigel Barrie), a baseball pitcher. The ball game between the Giants and the Yankee baseball teams furnishes the setting for the story, and the Polo Grounds, with the game in progress, is shown from different angles with unusually clear photography. Kerrigan is kidnapped by a professional gambler so as to prevent his pitching for the Giants, and thus insure the Yankee's winning. His sweetheart gets Miss Fairfax interested and with the assistance of Jimmy, Kerrigan is rescued and rushed to the Polo Grounds just in time to beat the Yankees and win the game for the Giants. A very timely number with a good plot and well acted and put on. Two reels on a par with the forerunners of the series.

"The Wages of Sin." (Beatrice Fairfax. Episode 11. International.)—A new invention in the shape of a deadly infernal machine is left in a safe by the inventor who dies without revealing the secret. His daughter in going over his effects finds a letter addressed to herself instructing her to open the safe and see that the invention is thrown in the river, with the admonition "Do not touch the Third Button." A band of anarchists who know of the invention, try to steal it and succeed in winning the girl's lover over to their side. She, in desperation, goes to Miss Fairfax with her troubles and is fortunate in enlisting her help. Miss Fairfax, in company with the indefatigable Jimmy, frustrates the gang and Jimmy succeeds in pressing the "third button" in time to blow the gang and their den to the four winds. A clever story with Grace Darling and Harry Fox at their best, with Betty Howe as the girl in trouble. Two reels of thoroughly enjoyable melodrama with good acting and photography.

La Salle: The Family theatre has been changed to the Colonial; Clara Gedye is running it. Brown and Pierard now have the New La-Salle; W. H. Taylor has succeeded Chas. A. Conley at the New Majestic. E. C. Zimmerman has the Opera House. The Colonial is the newest show. The Photoplay theatre is out of business, as is also the Royal, which was burned out.

Minonk: Hann Heindrichs of the Royal has nearly a clean field—the Rose theatre closed with the death of C. D. Coster; R. B. Witte gave up the Schlitz Opera House and has left town.

Olney: J. R. Van Almen is running the Alco.

Roanoke: The only picture show in town is the Palace, managed by Badhaine and Sands.

Rockford: The Orpheum managed by H. Gramp; Dreamland managed by C. B. Anderson, and the Princess managed by J. Morrison, are running along as usual. Johnson Bros. have succeeded John F. Walsh at the Royal. The Majestic and the Rockford motion picture parlor have gone out of business.

Roseville: J. N. Lammey has changed the Rose to the Isis theatre. The Palace has gone out of business.

Savanna: J. D. Fubrath has succeeded Ed. Hendricks at the Web theatre, and M. A. Law J. E. Gorman, at the Orpheum. The Star theatre is closed.

Victoria: T. Crane is now running the Victoria theatre.

Vienna: Gray Bros. are doing well with the Theatorium.

Watseka: C. L. Eastburn is the manager of the Star theatre. The Princess theatre has been out of business for some time.

Windsor: J. V. Kirk's Electric theatre has the field. Wm. Nolting sold out the Lyric and has gone.

INDIANA—Elkhart: Harry Lerner is now managing the Opera House and W. Ormsby the Orpheum. The Venetian by Angelo Pecorelli and the Family theatre by Peter Sarantos are new houses. The Jefferson and the Airdome are out of business.

Hobart: Harry Coons is now managing the Gem theatre, which succeeded the Colonial.

Mishawaka: The Century and the Lincoln theatres are now under the same management. Mr. Lambiotte is running the Temple theatre.

Rosedale: Frank Straughan's Star is the only theatre now, the Isis having moved.

Salem is well taken care of through the Opera House (Sante Davidson), and Switow's Dream theatre.

Waveland: Alex Moore has opened a motion picture show. G. D. Gregory is managing the Rex.

MARYLAND—St. Michaels: Lee and Wrighston, proprietors of the Electric Rainbow theatre, have solved the problem of getting crowded houses, by showing high-grade pictures.

OHIO—Massillon: The Dreamland theatre under the management of D. G. Dunham (who bought out Thomas Davis), is enjoying a very prosperous season. Its 400 capacity is frequently taxed to the limit. F. A. Kelley is manager of the Lincoln, Mrs. M. F. Frank of the Grand, and Charles Shearer of the Lyric.

CALIFORNIA—San Francisco: The Savoy theatre, resplendent in new decorations, a splendid stage set, new screen and other marked improvements, was opened recently as a home of motion pictures. M. E. Cory, a national figure in the industry, is the manager.

MONTHLY INDEX OF REVIEWS

ISSUES OF OCTOBER 7-OCTOBER 28 (INCLUSIVE)

All pictures are listed both by titles and by brand names. In the index, C. stands for "Comedy"; Cart., for "Cartoon"; C-D., "Comedy-Drama"; D., "Drama"; Juv., "Juvenile"; Sc., "Scenic"; Top., "Topical." The figure before the abbreviation is the number of reels. The date is the date of the issue of Motion Picture News in which the review appeared. The second page number refers to the music chart for the picture

The Highest Price Ever Paid For A Picture!

The management of the Strand Theatre Knows pictures and the PUBLIC
They have topped all previous price records
They have waited for two years for a genuine

War Picture

"KITCHENER'S GREAT ARMY in The Battle of the Somme"

is the first war picture that the Strand has ever shown—
For two weeks this fact will be emblazoned in the brightest part of Broadway—
Is the Strand the only live theatre in America?

Any Staterights Man who isn't dead from the shoulders up, must realize what this means to HIM.

ARE YOU ONE

OF THE MANY EXHIBITORS WHO ARE GOING TO DISCARD THEIR MACHINES SHORTLY BECAUSE THEIR PARTS ARE MADE OF SOFT METAL AND THE RESULTS OF THE PROJECTOR HAVE BECOME VERY UNSATISFACTORY?

A great many of these exhibitors are placing the LATE MODEL MOTIOGRAPH in their booths because of its record for long life, satisfactory results and small cost of up-keep.

If you are skeptical as to the quality of material used in the MOTIOGRAPH, read the following:

Mr. Carl Pearson of Rushville, Ill., says, "I was using a 1916 Model MOTIOGRAPH and a ———— in the booth of my theatre. On October 4th I had a fire which burned the theatre to the ground and I never did find the ———— machine, but am returning to you the mechanism of the MOTIOGRAPH, which I believe you can put in good condition. Nothing but MOTIOGRAPHS for me in the future, as they are surely made of good material."

Ventilation

NEXT in importance to the projection room, and something on which the prospective builder must keep his eye, is the ventilating system.

The picture on the screen may be perfect, but unless the patrons are comfortable and their health protected in every way, there is but little chance that the house will be a success.

THE local authorities in the various towns and cities all over the country are becoming more and more strict, and it is only right that they should.

There is absolutely no excuse for a theatre being a public menace—either because of poor ventilation, fire protection or from any other cause.

THERE was a case cited recently which was criminal. The theatre in question had a large fan in the roof which was never used except for effect until the inspectors were actually in the building, when by turning a switch it was set in motion, thus complying with the law—until the inspection was over.

AS ventilation is another essential in theatre building which is not visible to the eye of the casual patron, it is one of the essentials which the architect seldom considers until he has his theatre plans completed.

Then it is found that either there is insufficient space for the installation of the necessary apparatus, with its attendant duct work, or the arrangement is such as to prohibit a good installation.

MANY times it will be preferable to lay out the ventilation system first and then design the rest of the theatre to accommodate it, just as in the olden days our forefathers built their large square fireplaces first and then built the house around them.

UNFORTUNATELY it is the exception, rather than the rule, to find a motion picture theatre, except the large new ones, which are really properly ventilated, this being due chiefly to the reluctance of the proprietors to spend the necessary amount to obtain good ventilation.

It is common to find that the average motion picture theatre proprietor has absolutely no conception of what constitutes proper ventilation, or the expense necessary to obtain proper results.

HE usually expects to buy a few desk fans at a price of anywhere from five dollars to twenty dollars apiece, place them in the theatre on the walls and make no provision either for the removal of foul air or the admission of fresh.

EVEN when he did consider the latter he expected to accomplish it with a device which would cost one hundred dollars or less. Extreme cases are found down in Texas where an attempt has been made to ventilate theatres by the use of a wheel appropriated from a windmill out of commission.

IT must always be borne in mind that every ventilating system must be so planned as to take in the operating room. Ducts near the floor entering the room on the various sides through which fresh air is forced keep the air in constant motion and insure its being pure at all times, providing only that a proper exhaust is employed.

ONE method which seems to be considered sufficient is to put in a blower to force the air out without planning for the intake, which usually is obtained through the portholes through which the pictures are shown.

This is a fine makeshift ventilation for the theatre, but again the operator is made to suffer.

WHY this condition exists is hard to say, and the only way to avoid it in future is to have the local authorities enforce their laws to the letter, so that all new theatres will be built with systems sufficient to give each patron the required amount of fresh air each minute.

In this way both the architect and the theatre owner are brought face to face with conditions which must be lived up to and which in being lived up to help improve the whole industry.

Detail Instruction for the Installation and Care of Motor Generator Sets Is Presented for the New Operator and to Jog the Memory of the Old-Timer in the Business—Fuse Tables for the Motor Side of Various Machines Is Included

SINCE starting this series of articles several operators have requested me to give more detailed instruction on the installation and care of motor generator sets, and as this is as good a time as any to begin, I will through the courtesy of the Fort Wayne branch of the General Electric Company, set forth the instructions as given by them.

Both the A.C. to D.C. and D.C. Compensarcs are what are commonly known as motor-generator sets, that is, two machines coupled together, one machine being the motor and the other the generator. In the A.C. to D.C. Compensarc the motor and generator are mounted on a common base, but in the D.C. Compensarc the motor and generator frames are coupled together by a common bonnet so that no sub-base is required. In both cases the sets are shipped completely assembled and require only proper installation, filling of the bearings with oil and proper connection to the supply and lamp circuits before putting in service. It should be remembered that these compensarcs are special machines for use only on motion picture projection arcs and cannot be used for ordinary constant voltage purposes.

These A.C. to D.C. Compensarcs should be installed in a clean, dry, well ventilated location, and if possible near the lamps which they are to operate. Sometimes a small room adjoining the operating room is provided for the compensarc or other current changing device and a very good provision it is too, for the practice of placing a device of this kind in the basement of a building, as many do, is bad practice. Inaccessible locations should be avoided as such locations will cause the operator to neglect the machine, when it will become dirty and perhaps damaged.

It is not necessary to furnish foundations for these compensarcs but the floor on which they are placed should be firm and free from vibration.

The machines are shipped clamped to a pair of wooden skids which form a foundation for the boxing. The machine should, if possible, be left attached to these skids until it has been carried right to the location which it is to finally occupy. It is preferable that all wiring should be done before the boxing is removed from the machine as the boxing will be effective in keeping the machine clean.

As soon as the machine is unboxed the name plate should be inspected to see, if a D.C. Compensarc, that the volts marked on the nameplate, and if an A.C. to D.C. Compensarc, the volts cycles and phases marked on the nameplate agree with those of the circuit on which the machine is to be used. The nameplate marking also indicates the volts and amperes for the arc lamp and this rating should agree with that specified in the order. It should be remembered that the direct current arc for motion picture projection requires less current than the alternating current arc, 25 to 35 amperes at 55 volts being usually used for the direct current arc and 40 to 60 amperes at 35 volts for the alternating current arc.

If for any reason the generator or motor must be taken from the sub-base in order to install the compensarc, great care must be exercised so that the machines are properly lined up to give a uniform air gap when the compensarc is reassembled. If this is not done bearing trouble will occur due to the set being out of line. Dowel pins are provided on the generator end. To remove these hold the squared head of the pin with a wrench and tighten up the nut which will pull out the pin. Be careful that any liners found under the feet are carefully replaced. Should the coupling be taken apart it must be assembled carefully, making sure that the original chisel marks on the rim correspond.

The A.C. to D.C. Compensarc should be run only on circuits where the variation of either frequency or voltage from normal does not exceed five per cent. Where both frequency and voltage vary, the sum of the variations must not exceed eight per cent.

Before starting the set see that it is perfectly clean, and that the brushes move freely in their holders and make good contact with the commutator. See that the armature turns freely in the bearings, and that the machine is level.

When oiling the machine open the covers on the oil gauges and pour in only enough oil to show in these gauges. The thin oil furnished for the motion picture machine, sewing machine oil or similar light oils are not heavy enough; it is better to purchase a can of "light dynamo oil" and keep it for the compensarc.

When the machine is set up be sure that the oil wells are clean and filled. In those machines which have overflow gauges with hinged caps, the oil wells should be replenished through the overflow gauges rather than through the hinged covers in the bearings. This precaution will prevent undue waste and annoyance from overfilling of the oil reservoirs.

Immediately after starting, see that the oil rings revolve freely and carry the oil up to the shaft. Always keep the oil at the proper level in the well, that is, nearly to the lip of the overflow gauge.

Before starting up make sure that all connections are tight and agree with the diagram of connections for the outfit supplied.

The wiring should be of sufficient size so that the line drop from the machine to the lamp will not exceed one volt, or two per cent. of the voltage when the machine is delivering full load current to the lamp. If too small a wire is used the lamp will be robbed of some of its voltage and give poor light.

The lamp side of these machines does not require fuses as the generators are so constructed that they will protect themselves against overload current when the arcs are short circuited.

The motor side of the various machines should be fused as follows:

	35-Amp. 1-Lamp.	50-Amp. 1-Lamp and 35-Amp. 2-Lamp Alternately.	75-Amp. 1-Lamp and 50-Amp. 2-Lamp Alternately.
D. C. Compensarcs.
115-volt.....	30-amp fuses	60-amp fuses	90-amp fuses
230-volt.....	20-amp fuses	40-amp fuses	60-amp fuses
550-volt.....	10-amp fuses	20-amp fuses	30-amp fuses
A. C. to D. C. Compensarcs.
Single-phase 110-volt.....	35-amp fuses	80-amp fuses	100-amp fuses
Single-phase 220-volt.....	20-amp fuses	40-amp fuses	50-amp fuses
Two-phase 110-volt.....	20-amp fuses	40-amp fuses	50-amp fuses
Two-phase 220-volt.....	10-amp fuses	20-amp fuses	30-amp fuses
Three-phase 110-volt.....	20-amp fuses	50-amp fuses	80-amp fuses
Three-phase 220-volt.....	12-amp fuses	25-amp fuses	40-amp fuses

The wiring connections were shown last week, but it is recommended that one of the Cabinet Panels be purchased with and installed at the same time as the compensarc. It will not only facilitate the wiring of the set but because of the very convenient arrangement of the voltmeter and ammeter the operator can at all times know just how much current he is using and secure maximum illumination with minimum current consumption.

PIERCE IS SALES MANAGER FOR WESTERN AUTOMATIC MUSIC COMPANY, DALLAS

PHIL H. PIERCE, sales agent for the past two years at Kansas City for the Wurlitzer Company, will soon remove to Dallas, Texas, where he becomes sales manager for the Western Automatic Music Company, a company handling Wurlitzer instruments.

Mr. Pierce has been identified with the moving picture business in Kansas and Missouri through his sales of automatic musical instruments to theatres. He is an active member of the Amusement Association of Kansas and of the Kansas City Screen Club.

OLD SEATING FIRM IN HOUSTON ENTERS THEATRE FIELD

THE old established firm of C. H. Myers & Company, 614 Milam street, Houston, Texas, until recently directing their sales campaign for school seating has now entered the theatre seating fold with a big line of veneer and upholstered chairs.

C. A. Walker, formerly with the Dallas Seating Company and the United Theatre Chair Company, and recently editor of Motion Picture Journal, is in charge of the opera chair business for the Myers concern.

Color Cinematography

Additive Methods of Color Cinematography—The Lee Turner Patent—Jumeaux, Davidson and Greene Pioneers—Two-Color Methods Using Prisms—Kinemacolor—The Kinemacolor Taking and Projecting Filters

SO desirable are motion pictures showing natural color effects and so apparent is the commercial value of a process whereby this end may be attained that it is not surprising to find that almost from the earliest days of cinematography various inventors have endeavored to produce film subjects which, when projected, would convey to the spectator the impression of the colors seen in nature.

The additive methods of color synthesis, which we were considering last week, have seemed to many workers the most feasible, and we will now review the more significant of the various attempts made toward securing natural color cinematographic projections by additive methods. In view of the value which would undoubtedly attach to a successful system of color cinematography, our survey of the various efforts to attain this desirable goal naturally resolves itself into a question of patents, for the first move made by all inventors along this line seems to have been that of securing a patent, in many instances preliminary experiments not having even been undertaken.

The First Patent

The first patent which appears to bear directly upon our subject seems to be that of Isensee of Berlin, Germany. Secured in 1897 this patent clearly foreshadows some processes which followed for it describes a rotating filter having red, green and blue segments designed to produce, red, green and blue sensation records in succession on a film strip, the positive to be projected, presumably, through a similar filter.

W. Friese-Greene of England, the inventor of the first cinematographic film camera, conceived and patented in 1898 the idea of rapidly rotating a disc composed of red, green and blue segments before each image at the time of exposure and of rotating (at high speed of course) a similar colored disc before the positive when projected. Although this looked promising to Greene, it would not seem very plausible to the average color photographer and upon trial it was found to produce negative results insofar as the appearance of any color was concerned.

The Lee-Turner Patent

The year 1899 saw the filing of the Lee-Turner patent to which several subsequent processes can be traced. Lee and Turner proposed the use of a rotating filter similar to that shown at A, Fig. 12 in photographing the negative color sensation records. A study of the illustration shows that between the three colored sections of this taking filter there were opaque spaces which served the purpose of a shutter to cover the travel of the film between exposures. The records secured through the three sectors succeeded one another on the film strip as shown by B, Fig. 12. An impractical method of superimposing these successive images upon the screen—by the use of three projecting lenses and a specially designed rotary projecting filter—was responsible for the failure of Lee and Turner to secure satisfactory results, but at Mr. Chas. Urban's request, Mr. G. Albert Smith, a capable worker, undertook to continue their work in 1902. The results secured by Smith are history now, and we will shortly consider them in detail.

The next inventors to bring forth a system of color cinematography were Jumeaux and Davidson who in 1903-4 exhibited in Paris and at Brighton, England, some results secured by a two-color additive system. Briefly described their procedure (shown diagrammatically by C, Fig. 12) was as follows. In front of the camera lens L were two prisms PP mounted base to base and partitioned in front by a shield S. Two refracted images of the view embraced by the lens were formed, side by side, on the film strip, as indicated by II in C, Fig. 12. The filters used by Jumeaux and Davidson were of an orange and blue-green color, respectively, and were either placed between the lens and the film as at FF, Fig. 12, or between the prisms and the lens. In projecting the results an arrangement similar to that illustrated was also used.

Friese-Greene's Method

These two workers also tried placing the two prisms (apex to apex) between the lens and the film but a simpler method of securing pairs of images, side by side on the film (E, Fig. 12) was patented by Friese-Greene in April, 1905. In Greene's method only one prism was used, this being mounted behind the lens as shown by D, Fig. 12, where L is the lens, P is a prism, FF are the color filters (orange and blue-green here also) and II are the adjacent images, one a refracted image (cast by the prism) and the other proceeding direct from the lens.

It is almost needless to state that with the orange and blue-green filter combinations chosen by Jumeaux, Davidson and Friese-Greene exceedingly "unnatural" color effects were secured on the screen although colors were apparent in some degree in the results shown by these workers. The most serious drawback in working with prisms, however, is the fact that a refracted image suffers a considerable falling off in definition from one side to the other due to the increased dispersion of light of short wavelength. While this could, as Professor Wall suggests, be remedied by the use of achromatic prisms, this idea did not occur to any of these early workers and samples of Greene's film which we have seen are, indeed, very faulty as regards definition, the falling off not being restricted solely to the refracted image as an imperfect streak is also to be seen running down the center of the images cast by the lens. This latter imperfection is no doubt caused by interposing the prism in the path of the rays proceeding direct from the lens.

Smith Perfects Kinemacolor

After four years of painstaking experiment by G. Albert Smith, a patent was granted in December, 1906, to this worker and Mr. Charles Urban on an ingenious process of natural color cinematography which is now universally known as Kinemacolor. Many of our readers are no doubt familiar in a general way with the principles upon which the Kinemacolor process is worked, but as the results of Smith's work have been far reaching and as the basic principles of this process are being incorporated into the experiments of many present workers on color cinematography, we believe that a description of the process will not be amiss. Kinemacolor is photographed on color sensitive film with a camera similar in most respects to the regular Urban Bioscope instrument with which many readers are familiar. The camera used with this process is geared, however, to make 16 exposures per crank revolution or 32 exposures per second when cranked at normal taking speed (2 turns per second).

HOSFORD WILL SEND SHUTTERS LATER

SEVERAL days ago I received the following letter from James Wilson, Elmhurst, L. I.:

"There was printed in the NEWS of September 2, a letter written by one named Charles A. Hosford of Fort Wayne, Ind., a projection operator, who claimed to work at the Lyric theatre of that city.

"He sympathizes with the operator who could not get a steady light on the screen as he put it and offered to help those that needed advice on the subject. I am always on the alert to improve conditions in projection by making and keeping a good light on the screen, and my belief is that an operator should get all the knowledge he can in this respect if he is to continue to earn his daily bread in this line of business.

"I wrote to Mr. Hosford, the day after I received the NEWS, and asked him to send me an exact drawing of his highly satisfactory shutter, which he claimed was the ideal shutter to steady the light and dissolve one picture into another. I enclosed postage, asking him to mail the drawing at as early a date as possible. Of course, I am aware that an operator has not the time that an individual would have to answer correspondence, but I assumed that two weeks' time was sufficient to receive a reply from him, and when I did not I again wrote him, reminding him of my former letter and that I had enclosed postage, and suggested that he send me the drawing, and if necessary I would send him more postage. Now it is about a week since my last letter to him, and I am still without a reply to it. I wish to ask you if you know Mr. Hosford well enough so that I can depend on him to meet my request. I am sorry that I have to write you concerning this incident, but I presume you are as much interested as myself since Hr. Hosford was given space to print his letter in the NEWS.

Immediately on receipt of the above letter I wrote to brother Hosford, asking him what he had to say for himself, though I was sure in my own mind that he was a pretty busy boy, and the following is his reply:

"Your letter of the 10th inst., received and in reply would say that I certainly have been a busy fellow, and I am sorry that Mr. Wilson has not received his shutter. Others also have been delayed for which I am very sorry, but the truth of the matter is that I have hardly had time to turn around, being kept busy in my spare time, making shutters, but Mr. Wilson will receive his shutter as soon as possible as I have made up a number of them and they will be mailed on Monday.

"I am stealing time now to answer your letter, but you may state that I have been delayed in making these shutters, and that everyone will receive theirs as soon as I can get them out.

"I am sorry that you were put to this bother, and assure you that it was not my fault; you know how it is.

"Sincerely yours, CHARLES A. HOSFORD."

I think the above letter from Mr. Hosford will explain to those who wrote for his shutter the difficulty which he has been laboring under and the seeming delay in getting them out. You must remember that an operator is but human, and after working all day he must get some sleep, and believe me it is no fun to sit up half the night making shutters, especially when there is no money in it. It is something to be commended in an operator who will do so, and I knew Hosford to be an operator who is wide awake, and always on the job when projection is under discussion. The reason I give publicity to these letters is that I do not want anyone to feel that an injustice has been done him, and I hope this explanation will set at rest any doubts as to the integrity of Charles A. Hosford.

BROWNISH YELLOW SPOT IN CENTRE OF SCREEN

W. W. Brumberg, Tucson, Arizona, writes: Am following your department in the NEWS, and as you are ready to give a helping hand in case of need, I am submitting to you for your kind consideration a little difficulty that confronts me.

My equipment consists of two Powers' 6-B and two G. E. Mercury arc rectifiers, 30 ampere type.

My trouble is in the light on the screen. I know that I have my carbons set CORRECTLY. When my crater is proper I have a brownish yellow spot in the center of my screen. I have moved my lamp-house backward and forward to see if I could eliminate that peculiar spot, but to no avail. I have spaced my condensers and everything to my knowledge, but I am "switched" if I can do anything. Is it in my condensers? My experience is 6 years in the operating room and two years in a film laboratory, and with the knowledge gained there I must admit that I have never had anything get me as this has.

Answer.—The writer of the above was very explicit in setting forth all details as to his line up, something that others might emulate when writing in for information. In answer to your qestion, to my mind your trouble does lay in the condensers, and if you will try two 7½-inch condensers, with the apex of the front condensers at a distance of approximately 20 inches from the aperture plate you will probably find that Mr. "Brownspot" will disappear. I would also advise you to try cored carbons, both top and bottom; some operators claim that they will give a better light although as for myself I always preferred the set you are using, and if the carbons are set correctly you should, by following the above instructions get the result you desire.

MENISCUS-BI-CONVEX CONDENSERS

Ira N. Brown, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: I notice quite a deal of advertising in the NEWS regarding Meniscus-Bi-Convex condensers, and I am taking the liberty of writing you to ask what you know as well as think of these condensers.

I am operator at the Sibley and am a strong believer in perfect projection and especially good light. Do you think the Meniscus-Bi-Convex condensers improve the light much, and do you recommend them for betterment of conditions?

Answer.—Evidently the brother reads only the advertising columns, for if he had read the projection department, page 2730, issue of October 28, he would have read what I had to say regarding these condensers.

I am glad to know that you are also one of these who believe in perfect projection, but it is not "good light" alone that makes for better projection; there are many other important things to be considered, and if you will read the department carefully as we go along week by week taking up the different points to be considered, you will probably find there much to your advantage.

I can and do most heartily recommend these condensers, for there is no doubt but what they do materially increase the light giving power of the arc and give greater illumination with less current consumption.

SIZE OF PICTURE FOR HOUSE 50 BY 60 FEET

Harry Robertson, Decatur, Ill., writes: My employer expects to open a new theatre shortly, the auditorium is only 50 by 60 feet. The height is 12 feet at the rear and 18 feet where the screen is to be. Can you advise me as to the proper size of picture and the best make of screen to use?

Answer: A picture anywhere from 12 to 15 feet will meet your requirements, although one about 14 feet will fill the bill nicely.

I have always held that a small picture is more to be preferred than a large one, and where the distance from the last row of seats is not over 60 feet there is no necessity for putting on a large picture. It not only takes a greater amount of current to illuminate the screen, but it has a sort of unnatural effect in making the actors appear of Gargantuan proportions.

As to my recommending a screen, I could but I won't. If I were to recommend any one make of screen the other screen manufacturers would be after me hammer and tongs. Look in the advertising columns of the News and you will find what you want.

PRACTICAL EXAMINATION FOR OPERATOR CANDIDATES IS URGED

A PRACTICAL examination for motion picture operators is recommended by Fire Marshal P. W. Nicholson, Washington, D. C., in his annual report to the District Commissioners for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916. He states that a bill is now pending in Congress providing for a board of three examiners and also appropriating funds for the purchase of a motion picture machine for the use of the board. He states that the examination would provide only proficient operators and there would not result the condition which now exists, where it is an easy matter for the applicant for a license to prime himself with material that will prove to be the answers to the questions that may be asked him when he goes up for examination.

Mr. Nicholson points out that the present method is highly unsatisfactory inasmuch as the applicant is called upon to pass a written examination to questions given him in writing. It is an easy matter to make copies of these questions, and it is said that this has been done in several instances, the questions thereafter being furnished to other prospective applicants for a small fee. Some of these men have later been found to be very incompetent.

Daniel Thompson, colored, manager of the Chelsea theatre, according to the fire marshal's report, was the only violator of the regulations applying to motion picture theatres during the year; he having been charged with operating a projection machine without a license; and despite the fact that he was confined to a hospital for nearly six weeks with injuries resulting from a fire in the projection room, he was allowed to forfeit $5 as a warning to others.

LENS CLEANING COMPOUND

CHARLES A. HOSFORD, Fort Wayne, Ind., sends in the following recipe for a lens cleaner:

½ oz. Aqua Ammonia,
2 oz. Denatured Alcohol,
2 oz. of Water, soft water is the best (the brother means rain water) mix thoroughly and apply to the lens, allowing it to dry on the lens and then polish with a soft chamois skin.

I would like to hear from any operator using this formula just how good it is, for it is of the utmost importance to have clean lenses, and of the many hints Hosford has given he has never yet pulled a "flivver." He has promised to send the department a new idea for operating room portholes, and we are awaiting his suggestion with pleasure.

BAREN JOINS ATMOSPHERIC SCREEN COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY

LAWRENCE BAREN, formerly manager of the David Kessler theatre on Second avenue, New York City, has severed his connection with that playhouse and has accepted the position of general sales manager of the Atmospheric Screen Company of 220 West Forty-second Street.

Mr. Baren has succeeded in placing screens in some of the motion picture theatres in New York City, Philadelphia, New Haven, Washington, D. C., and Pittsburgh.

OPERATORS ATTEND ONTARIO LABOR CONFERENCE

THE Labor Congress which is being held in Toronto this week has drawn many operators from different towns in Ontario. Many important questions are being settled at this meeting, which is one of the biggest and most successful conventions held yet. It is said that one of the contentions to be discussed at the Congress is whether or not places of amusement should close on Christmas Day, thereby giving the employees a well merited rest.

TYPHOON FAN ATTRACTS CROWDS TO THEATRE

THE huge multi-blade blower here shown was mounted in front of the new City Hall theatre and made an interesting part of a novel outdoor sign. The fan, mounted on ball bearings, required but a slight breeze to keep it revolving, and oftentimes large crowds gathered, wondering what kept it in motion.

This fan formed part of the Typhoon Cooling System now installed in this theatre, which is one of the most completely appointed in the country. It occupies a site said to be the most expensive of any theatre in the country with a seating capacity of but 500, the annual ground rental is $35,000. David Weinstock, the managing director, realizes the theatre must be filled during the summer to assure an adequate return on so large an investment. He is depending mainly upon the Typhoon Cooling System to please his patrons and attract business during the hot weather.

The Typhoon Cooling and Ventilating System is used in the Rialto and Strand theatres in New York, and in other large theatres over the country.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

BROTHERS H. S. Morton and John Upton, members of Local No. 199, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. of Detroit, Michigan, were in the city the early part of last week, stopping off for a few hours to visit the home of the Simplex Projector. Both of the boys traveled from Detroit to Canada and then to New York City on motor cycles.

After an inspection of the Precision Machine Company's plant, the boys again mounted their "gas hoppers" and headed for the city of culture—Boston.

They experienced very little difficulty en route from Detroit to New York, and with few exceptions found the roads in excellent condition. They were very enthusiastic over their trip, and it would be interesting to learn all the details.

BING'S HOME ENTERTAINER

Here's a little machine, simple in its construction, and easy of operation, for which there is a place in every home.

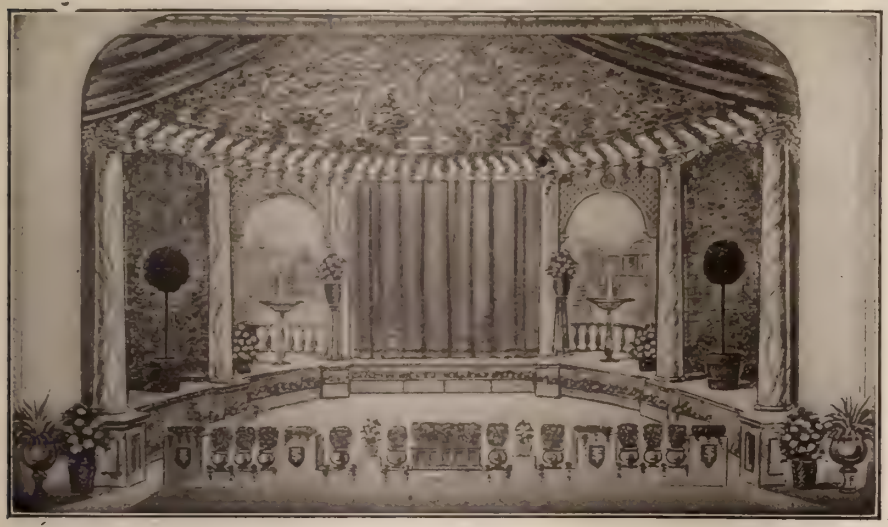
It projects motion picture film as perfectly in the home as is possible in the average theater.

Light is provided by a baby arc, supplied with current from the ordinary electric light socket, controlled through a special rheostat.

The baby arc develops 800 candle power, with about six amperes of current. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Pictures projected are about 6 x 8 feet in size and splendid results are possible with a throw up to twenty-five feet.

Standard size film is used, making every film exchange in the country a constant source of supply for subjects. Reel boxes are of 1,000 feet capacity.



Set up and ready for use, the machine measures 31 inches long, 31 inches high, and 10 inches broad. The lamphouse is 10 x 6. Weight of machine, complete with arc and rheostat is 24 pounds. Packed for shipment, the weight is 55 pounds.

There is absolutely no fire risk—"Safety First" has been the watchword in construction

MOSS BREAKS GROUND FOR HIS MILLION DOLLAR THEATRE IN NEW YORK

CONSTRUCTION of the new million-dollar B. S. Moss theatre, at Broadway and 181st street, New York, started last Monday, and at the same time the old Wadsworth theatre, less than a stone's throw away, will be transformed into a department store.

It is expected that the building will be completed and open by next September. It will be two stories high, situated on a plot of land, 150 feet on Broadway, 200 feet on 181st street, 178 feet on Bennett avenue, and 201 feet on the north. The area is thirteen city lots.

Two entrances on Broadway and another on West 181st street, will enable the building to disperse its patrons quickly. These 3,500 persons will have the advantage of extraordinary fire exits, enabling the house to empty in record time. The exits are said to be 30 per cent. in excess of the building law requirements.

It will have many new and novel features for the comfort and convenience of its patrons. No draughts will cause colds to the audience. The draughts are avoided by a new system of ventilation. The air within the house will be changed every minute.

Several special lighting schemes will be tried, as it is sought to avoid light errors. Diffused light, or indirect rays, behind thick toned glass will prevent any light from straining the eyes of the audience.

There are many other mechanical features making it the last word in theatre construction. The stage depth will be 45 feet, whereas there is usually only 30 feet. A steel curtain will be used instead of asbestos. The audience will sit in chairs, fashioned after those in use in the Metropolitan Opera House.

Latecomers will not annoy the patrons under the seating plan, for the seats are divided into three sections, with three aisles and one cross-over on the orchestra floor. The same plan will be used in the balcony.

The artistic scheme of the theatre will be in French Renaissance throughout, with an exterior of stucco and polished granite. The exterior will be colored in old rose, French gray, ivory and gold.

Everything will be finished in an elaborate manner, making it possible to produce screen, vaudeville, opera or stage spectacles.

OPENING OF THE COURT THEATRE, AUBURN, IND., IS POSTPONED UNTIL NOVEMBER 10

UNAVOIDABLE delay has caused the postponement of the opening of the New Court theatre, Auburn, Ind., until about November 10. Work on remodeling and redecorating the old Henry opera house is being pushed with all possible haste to get the theatre finished as soon as possible.

Harry Long, of Fort Wayne, who did the decorative plaster work in the court house at Fort Wayne, is in charge of the decorating. The entrance to the new building will be on the north side of the theatre and the box office will be in the new lobby. The entrance will cost approximately $2,500. A large exit, which will run down to the new sidewalk to be constructed along the north side of East Eighth street, will be on the south side of the building. The street will be filled in and raised to a height of about four feet. The exit was necessary to comply with the fire laws and also will aid in emptying the theater.

There will be but one stairway to the balcony, and that will be on the south side of the building. The floor at the front of the building has been lowered so that the persons coming in may get a full view of the stage and auditorium. It also is possible that several loges may be built at the rear of the seats in the theatre.

The Court theatre plans to run motion pictures every night the house is not booked with road shows. The company has bought two motion picture machines of the latest type. The theatre plans to run only feature pictures.

The theatre will have a regular house orchestra, of which Dr. G. R. Nimmons will be the leader. The orchestra will play for the picture shows as well as the road attractions. W. A. Thomas is manager of the theatre.

The Camera

Smith decided on a two-color process, so there is installed in the Kinemacolor taking instrument (A Fig. 13) an aluminum filter frame F, situated between the shutter S and the exposure aperture of the camera. In this filter frame are mounted two gelatine segments, one being of an orange red color and the other being green. In his earlier experiments Smith used a greenish blue colored filter for securing the green sensation record, but the falsity of color rendition of green objects led to the preparation of a green filter transmitting just a little pure blue. This was done after taking into account the fact that a synthetic white (such as is produced by additive 3-color projection) is composed, roughly speaking, of the following amounts of light of the primary colors—red 39 parts, green 60 parts, blue 1 part. It is therefore seen that only a small amount of blue is needed to produce whites by additive synthesis and a correct Kinemacolor green taking filter will be green with a narrow transmission band of blue. The red Kinemacolor filter is not difficult mission band of blue. The red taking filter is not difficult According to advanced workers with this process, red taking filters for Kinemacolor should not transmit anything past the E line in the spectrum.

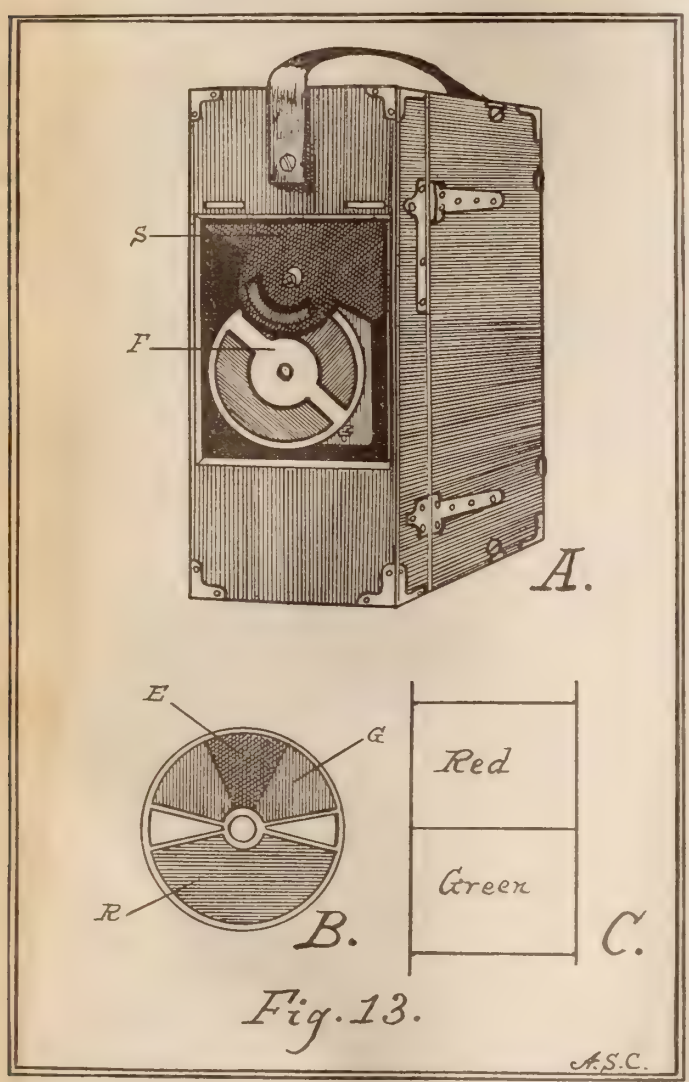

Fig. 13.

These red and green taking filters are so geared that they revolve only half as fast as the camera shutter, so that when the camera shutter exposes two pictures, one is photographed through the red filter and the other through the green. These red and green sensation images therefore alternate on the film strip (which is of standard size) as is shown at C, Fig. 13. In projecting the Kinemacolor positive (at 32 pictures per second, as in taking) another rotary color screen is used similar in design to that shown at B, Fig. 13. This projecting filter is placed in the path of the light rays between the condensers and the aperture of the projector, and consists of a circular brass frame fitted with a thick red gelatine segment, R, and a green segment, F. The correct colors for the projection filters should be—for the red filter a pure red (scarlet, and for the green filter a true minus red or blue green). In order to balance the amounts of colors transmitted by the filters in projecting, so that accurate effects will be apparent on the screen, it is found necessary to adjust over the green filter an extra piece of green gelatine, E, as shown in B, Fig. 13. The exact width of this extra green element must be determined by test and the gelatine cut to the proper width. If it is too narrow, green will be in excess upon the screen and the yellows will appear greenish also, while if the strip is too wide the reds will be too much in evidence and yellows will exhibit a deep orange hue. When the filter is correctly balanced the screen illumination should be a neutral white in appearance when the projector light is thrown upon the screen and the filter rotated at projecting speed.

NEW CAMERA CLUB FORMED IN JACKSONVILLE

CAMERAMEN representing the various motion picture studios in Jacksonville have organized a Cinema Camera Club, with temporary hearquarters with the Motion Picture Exchange at No. 309 West Forsythe street. This is the first attempt to bring the camera men together in this city, and from the plans of the organization discussed at their first meeting, visiting handle-grinders to the Orange Blossom State this fall and winter will be entertained extensively and made honorary members during their stay.

George Mason of the Hotel Mason has offered the Cinema Camera Club members the use of quarters near the beautiful chamber being fitted up for the Screen Club, but no definite action has been taken on a permanent location. The members plan to hold weekly dinners at one of the large hotels where they will discuss various matters pertaining to the filming end of the game. The following officers were elected: O. A. Zangrilli, of Kalem Company, president; G. A. Walker, of the Motion Picture Exchange, vice-president; J. Melvin Andrews, Eagle Film Company, secretary. E. T. Hollingsworth, Jr., motion picture editor of the Florida Metropolis was elected an honorary member. Among those present at the meeting were: O. A. Zangrilli, J. Melvin Andrews, Fred Henderson, Leland Coutant, Howard Green, A. A. Pouchet, Gary Hotalling, G. A. Walker.

Gary Hotalling, cameraman for the Pokes & Jabbs Vim Company will go to New York next week, where he has secured a position with Pathe. Howard Green, laboratory man for the Vim will go on the camera for that company.

The career of the National Film Company of Tampa, Florida, has been full of ups and downs since it was organized last year by Paul Gilmore, and arrangements by which it is hoped that all differences between William Parsons and stockholders of the company will be adjusted, and which it is hoped will result in the studio being reopened shortly, were entered into last week between Harry J. Kosch, of New York, attorney for Mr. Parsons, and the special committee named by stockholders to represent them.

HEMRICH, HEAD OF INTERNATIONAL THEATRICAL MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION, VISITS TORONTO

LEWIS M. HEMRICH, grand president of the International Theatrical Mechanical Association, with headquarters in Chicago, was in Toronto during the past week and addressed a large meeting of the Toronto lodge in the Labor Temple. Mr. Hemrich stated that he was much pleased with the progress made by the Canadian lodges and expressed satisfaction at the excellent showing made by the members of the Toronto lodge in recruiting for the front.

On Saturday Mr. Hemrich was entertained to dinner by Messrs. Robert C. Newman, Charles Leak, Dan Pierce and Jacob Levine. Before returning to Chicago Mr. Hemrich will visit branches of the Association in Ottawa and Hamilton.

ROY SHELTON IS AGAIN IN CONTROL OF THE STRAND IN NASHVILLE

THE Strand theatre, which has been controlled by the Wasshelton Operating Company since April 15, 1916, with W. H. Wassman handling the bookings of the shows, has recently passed back into the hands of Roy Shelton, who will manage and attend to the bookings of shows presented at his theatre. Manager Shelton has just returned from a trip to Atlanta, Ga., and when seen by a representative of the "News" had the following to say: "I have closed contracts with the Fox Film Corporation and Metro for first run productions. I have arrived at the conclusion that it is features that the public of Nashville want and I intend to give them features of the highest standard." This is an outgrowth of the Wassman and Sudekum shows in Nashville, he said.

Orchestra Interpretation for Motion Pictures

Whether the Leader Has an Orchestra of Forty or Four, Much Detail Work Is Necessary as Well as Much Time and Expense, All of Which Is Shared by the Leader Alone—He Must Have a Suitable and Comprehensive Library

THE orchestra leader who endeavors to interpret motion pictures successfully is confronted with a serious as well as an exacting problem and one that can be solved only by conscientious study and patience. To arrange a musical setting for film, once or twice a week, is a task, requiring more mental and manual labor than the average person may realize.

Whether the archestra leader has an orchestra of forty or four, much detail work is necessary as well as much time and expense, all which must be shared by the leader alone. Musicians playing for pictures share to a certain extent much responsibility, and it is only by their support and efforts that the leader can hope to obtain the desired results.

The first problem that a leader is confronted with is a suitable and comprehensive library. Unless he possesses a library embracing many numbers from the various publishers he can do little towards satisfying an audience or a manager. Nearly every leader is familiar more or less with the standard overtures and many popular concert numbers. If the leader has been playing in a hotel he should have a library of music that is well suited to the demands of a theatre audience.

Many leaders consider the popular songs received gratis from the publishers as numbers suitable for their library and catalogue them as such. Numbers of a popular nature soon lose their value as well as many production numbers, and these should not be included when cataloguing a practical library. The picture leader's library should include only those numbers that are recognized as standard and those that are always appreciated by a critical and discriminating audience.

Of late many publishers are making a feature of music for motion pictures, and inquiries from the various music houses will bring a classified catalogue containing a list of suitable music for the film.

Before attempting to interpret pictures with an orchestra, the leader should have a library embracing much characteristic and descriptive music, such as Japanese, Oriental, Mexican, Spanish and Indian. He should have a varied number of novelettes and light intermezzos, a number of overtures, a large number of suites, as well as waltzes, marches, two-steps, mazurkas, minuets, gavottes, polonaises, etc.

What Is Best Instrumentation?

The next serious question that confronts the leader is: "What is the best instrumentation I can use? What is the best combination for me to employ in order to get the most satisfactory results?" For the average orchestra interpreting pictures we suggest the following: Two first violins, piano, cello, bass, clarinet, flute, trombone, cornet, tympani and drums. This of course can be enlarged ad lib. by the addition of oboe, bassoon and extra violins.

The minimum number of men in a small orchestra should be four and the following instrumentation should be employed: Piano, violin, cello. Another violin would be very effective and the addition of clarinet and drums makes them desirable at times.

On each member of the orchestra devolves a certain amount of responsibility and the selection of conscientious and artistic musicians cannot be too strongly emphasized if the best results are to be expected.

In many of the small cities members of the orchestra are employed at some other vocation during the day, and they depend upon their musical ability to earn a few extra dollars. It stands to reason that musicians who do not devote their entire time to music are not as proficient in technic or style as those who do. In cases of this kind the best results can be obtained by the leader who must arrange an interesting musical program.

He must endeavor to arouse the players' interest in their work, and often the serious and ambitious musician will take his part home to practise during his spare hours. The leader working under such conditions must select music that is not too difficult for his players. It would be disastrous for three or four men to try and play the overture from "The Flying Dutchman." Such blunders are being made by many leaders, as well as by many musicians, that of selecting and trying to play music that is beyond them, both in artistic conception as well as in technical difficulties.

With a small combination of instruments, leaders can get surprising results if they exercise a little ingenuity and discretion. Many times a cornet part will have more melody or be much more effective than a clarinet part. The parts can be exchanged and often a cello part will have more suitable harmonic treatment than a trombone part. The leader can use the best judgment in cases like this and change parts when they will be more effective if played by another instrument.

Some drummers are versatile and have little trouble reading and playing bell solos from a first violin part. These are pleasing but the leader must not permit bell solos to dominate the program. A xylophone solo is often acceptable to many audiences, especially if the soloist is a clean-cut performer.

Of late, many of the new orchestra arrangements will be found to be well adapted for small combinations, many pieces arranged with this view in mind. More work falls on the performers of a small orchestra and it is necessary for each musician to play all "cued-in" notes as well as his own part. The pianist and violinist are also required to do extra work, but much difficulty can be avoided if each member of the orchestra will study and, if possible, practise his part before playing it in public.

Many musicians take pride in boasting that they never have to look at their part before playing it. Some are conceited enough to think that they can play "anything." This is a mistake, as the real musician knows; the simplest piece will stand critical analysis and attention to its details and important points. Often musicians will find certain features in pieces that they never dreamed of when before the meritorious and musical beauties were over looked in a hurried and careless rendition of the number.

Do Not Let Orchestra Play Too Loud

The leader must not allow his orchestra to play too loud. Particular attention must be paid to the brass section and it must

12. Inter-One-Step, X	"Army Blues" (Jos. W. Stern)	Pirates row away from ship.
13. Galop (Open P), X	"High Stepper" (W. Jacobs)	Connects 3 and 4.
14. Nautical Neutral, XXXXX	"Nautical Overture" (Chappell & Co.)	Prisoners brought aboard pirate ship.
15. Desc. (Rom), XXX	"Prudence" (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	"By the light of the moon."
16. Waltz Lento (Leg), XX	"Amoureuse" (Ricordi & Co.)	Connects 4 and 5.
17. Desc. (Hy-Rom), XXX	"Wings of Love" (M. Witmark)	After Prudence in ship cabin scratches dog's head.
18. Waltz Lento (Hy-Leg), XX	"Song D'Antonine" (E. Ascher)	Twice.
19. Galop, XXX	"Ringmaster" (W. Jacobs)
20. Andte Romantic,	"A. B. C. Dr. Set No. 16"—C. 3 (Jos. W. Stern)	Red fire scene in cabin. Life buoy on screen after Prudence rescued. To End.

Note.—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "——" it means that the Cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes. When the time of each 1,000 ft. of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Notes.—During No. 2 an imitation when Prudence whistles with two fingers in mouth simultaneously with the action on the screen will create very good comedy. During No. 12 a soft bell in imitation of a life buoy on the water will also be good. All other effects are ad lib and not essential.

Music Notes.—The action during reels 3, 4 and 5 occurs on boats and on the water. Consequently numbers of nautical suggestion can be well placed. The music throughout should not be of a very dramatic nature. You should, therefore, select numbers that will play well and be interesting in spite of the fact that most of them are of light character. Nos. 16, 17 and 18 must be numbers of a somewhat serious nature. No. 1 should be a lively 2-4 number of polka style. Must play about five minutes. No. 2 should be a light 4-4 number and must also play about five minutes. No. 3 should be a concert waltz with a non-serious introduction. No. 4 must be a lively 2-4 number. No. 5 must be a light legato 4-4 number. No. 6 is similar to 4. No. 7 is similar to 3. Nos. 8 and 9 must be two light 2-4 numbers suggestive of sailing o'er the ocean. Two numbers are suggested here as the playing time is too long and one number might become tiresome. No. 11 must be a concert waltz with a medium slow introduction. No. 12 must be a modern dance number. No. 14 can be a selection of nautical songs playing about eight minutes. No. 15 must be a medium slow number of romantic suggestion. No. 16 must be a slow melodious waltz lento movement played legato. No. 17 must be a very slow number of romantic appeal and of slight dramatic suggestion. No. 18 is similar to 16 but must have some minor key strains predominant. No. 19 must be a rather long galop of hurried effect. No. 20 is a short andante movement suggesting the romantic.

THE BROADWAY IS A NEW YORK THEATRE WITH A MAILING LIST OF TEN THOUSAND

THE Broadway, at Forty-first street and Broadway, New York City, is a motion picture house rivaling the "better class of theatres." Hoffman and Company were the architects and the Boder Company built the place. The building and land is valued at two million five hundred thousand dollars. The Broadway is in the theatrical district of New York City and many thousands of people pass the place daily. The exterior of the theatre is of an excellent design. A large iron and glass marquis adds "tone" to the entrance.

Several electric signs and many arc lights illuminate the Broadway at night. The building is absolutely fire proof. The entrance is inviting. Many scenes of the leading features are displayed in neat picture frames and frame stands are used to good advantage. The outside lobby measures seventeen by twenty-one. Its decorations are the best. Marble wainscoting about eight feet high is used on the walls above which are hand painted subjects in gold frames. Portrait paintings of Paramount's leading stars in gold frames are seen on the walls. Special lighting fixtures are used to light each portrait separately. Their size is about four by eight feet.

The lobby flooring is marble tiling. The ceiling is plaster. A large drop lamp hangs from it. The box office is to the left upon entering. Automatic ticket selling machines are contained for "service." The office is to the rear of this box office and is very spacious. Through metal doors we reach the inner lobby and the decorations denote discretion. Two large cast iron stairways lead to the balconies. A large artistic drop lamp hangs overhead between these stairways. To the right telephone booths are installed for the convenience of the patrons. The theatre has a seating capacity of eighteen hundred and contains two semi-circular balconies, the first seating five hundred and the second or gallery seats three hundred.

Plush upholstered seats are found on the main floor. Manufactured by the American Seating Company they are the "real thing" for comfort. The first balcony seats are also plush upholstered. The gallery contains leather upholstered seats manufactured by the same concern. This house contains two lower and three upper boxes on either side of the screen for the smoker. Smoking is also permitted in the balcony. The general interior illumination is of a soft amber color very pleasing to the eye. The boxes are illuminated by red lights. This theatre contains a Day and Night screen which measures seventeen feet three inches by thirteen feet. A wonderful stage setting is contained in this theatre which is one of the Lee Lash Studio's best. The projection booth sets the pace for equipment, two Simplex machines, motor driven, a Mestrum slide machine (motion) and a motor film rewinder include the equipment.

A machine switch is also installed and James Ambrosia, the operator, claims this to be a real as well as "reel" thing. It saves many a carbon, he says. The throw from this booth is one hundred and ten feet. Mr. Stantely Mastbaum is the owner of this theatre and has selected a competent manager in L. D. Lansfeld. The management employs one hundred in all to run the Broadway. Girl ushers are seen dressed in gray. The indirect lighting system is used in this building. Steam heat is maintained in the winter. Exhaust fans and electric fans are used for ventilation. The Broadway has "real" ideas in advertising. An advertisement of the Broadway is seen in the leading New York newspapers and magazines. Hotel booklets and trade papers also remind the readers of the excellent "show" at the Broadway. This house originated the "mailing list" idea and has ten thousand people who receive their weekly program. In addition to a symphony orchestra of fifteen talented musicians a Kimball organ is installed, costing twenty-five thousand dollars, which assures good music.

ELABORATE NEW THEATRE FOR MYSTIC, IOWA

ELABORATE is the word that might be used to describe the new Strand theatre recently opened at Mystic, Iowa, by Charles Fuller. Situated in a city of about 2,500 inhabitants, Mr. Fuller has erected a moving picture theatre that would do credit to a place five times as large.

New equipment has been installed throughout the house and it is modern in every respect. The projection room boasts of the most up-to-date machinery. The building itself is fire-proof, with the first story of brick and the upper part of cement. Lights across the front of the theatre cause it to be the bright spot of the city at night.

The new house seats a trifle over five hundred and will be able to handle the crowds that would attend it. At first Mr. Fuller decided he would run features, but after a two weeks' tryout he changed and is now running a regular program.

This is by no means Mr. Fuller's first venture into the field of motion pictures, as he is a well known exhibitor of the state, having operated picture shows in other towns previous to this.

BAD ACOUSTICS MAKES MUSIC AN AGONY

F. W. S., Rolla, Mo.—I have a building especially built for a picture show, but the acoustics are so bad that even the piano closed, and soft pedal down, when played, vibrates so badly that it makes music an agony. When speaking or singing the voice comes right back to you and one cannot be understood fifteen feet away. Can you give me any information as to how I can improve this, so I can put on vaudeville occasionally? If you cannot give me the information, can you refer me to anyone? Any advice you can impart will be greatly appreciated.

Answer.—In reply to the request from F. W. S., Rolla, Mo., we wish to say it is rather difficult for us to give you a proper solution without knowing full particulars of the building. It is necessary to know whether it is of concrete, brick, plaster or wooden structure. It is also desirable to know the material the floor is made of; the kind of chairs used; whether there are any boxes or balcony; also if there is any kind of covering on the floor such as carpets; also the depth of the orchestral pit.

It is rather probable that the building is very low and the architect perhaps did not know that it was necessary to construct it at a certain height compared with its length and width.

We would suggest, however ,that Mr. S. give consideration to the question of putting down carpet strips in the aisles, if he does not already use them. It also might be well to try lowering the piano a foot or six inches and putting velvet or some other thick curtain around the orchestra pit. He should also try having the singer or speaker stand back further from the front of the stage. It also might be necessary to move the piano to the right or left a few feet and if he has boxes and they are not draped it would be well to drape them. If neither of these would answer the purpose, we would suggest that he consider hanging some thick material along the sides of the entire house. When the tone strikes the sides if it hits the material it will throw back a good deal of the tone which will be absorbed, and this should overcome the difficulty.

If we had further particulars regarding the equipment and furnishings, we might be able to give a more definite answer, but we sincerely trust that Mr. S. will be able to experiment along the lines we have suggested until he overcomes the annoying difficulty.

PANTAGES PLANS $300,000 THEATRE IN VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA

THE city Building Department has just issued the permit for the construction of the new Pantages theatre at Vancouver, B. C., and actual work on the building is about to commence. The work of razing the buildings which formerly occupied the site has been completed, and Skene and Christie, who have been awarded the contract, expect to rush matters until the completion of the house.

The building is to cost $300,000, and will have a seating capacity of 1,800. The building material will be steel and concrete, and the structure will have brick facings and terra cotta trimmings. Dimensions are given as 103 feet depth and 120 feet width.

Alexander Pantages is paying $1,000 per month rent for the ground.

NEWMAN'S LACQUER COMPANY ISSUES LITERATURE DESCRIBING ITS PRODUCT

THE Newman Lacquer Company, 3317 Hackberry street, Cincinnati, Ohio, has issued new literature describing its transparent lacquer, which it furnishes to theatres and banks throughout the country. This lacquer is a transparent liquid which prevents brass poster frames and railings from tarnishing, and is easily applied with a brush similar to varnishing.

It can easily be brushed on metal and is quickly air dried, sets fast and becomes hard. This lacquer will stand lots of year and can occasionally be washed off with water. This lacquer prevents the metal from tarnishing and considerable labor is saved in keeping brass work polished.

It comes in half pint, pint and quart size cans.

never be permitted to become distracting. Muted brass will often be found very pleasing in playing certain numbers where soft and quiet music is required.

Some leaders, regardless of a scene requiring soft music, insist on playing a number exactly as written. Some liberties may be taken with nearly every piece and it is a wise leader who knows when to demand loud or soft music from his men to get the desired result.

With the advancement that music has made in relation to the film it seems almost impossible that any leader would be guilty of selecting and playing a number that is not completely suited to the action on the screen. But a few weeks ago, in a small city I happened to attend a theater where the orchestra was featured. The music was well selected and capably played by an orchestra of five men. To a person with a sense of humor, and there are many in a theater audience who are ready to see the funny side of sad scenes, the following incident spoiled the musical program as well as furnished a good laugh for those who know what is suitable in music for the film. It was during the last few minutes of action. As a fitting closing number the orchestra played "The End of a Perfect Day." Perhaps the leader had not seen the picture before. We will give him the benefit of the doubt, but before the picture ended there was about three or four minutes of a scene laid in the death chamber, showing an electric chair. The doomed man was led to his death and softly from the orchestra pit came the strains of "The End of a Perfect Day." To many in the audience this was decidedly funny and many laughed outright at the incident.

End Picture with a Love Song, if Possible

It is advisable to end a picture with a love song when possible, or a popular number that the audience knows, but there are scenes, when, in order to carry out the action, a minor number is more effective, and that is true in this case. A slow 4-4 number, one that the audience does not know, would have been better in a scene of this kind.

With the great strides the producers are making in the scenic features of pictures, the orchestra leader, to hold his own, must be alert and progressive in relation to his musical settings, but he can find consolation in the fact that a well selected program is bound to bring him just rewards, for the public more and more are demanding the best in musical selections for the film.

ALABAMA

Catching fire from a picture machine in a picture show on the first floor, a three-story building, Huntsville, belonging to Dan Brandon, a negro contractor, was gutted by fire and flooded by water on the night of September 23, causing a loss of about $4,000. The building was insured for about $3,000. The picture show was crowded when the operating room caught fire, but all escaped without injury.

CANADA

The Strand is to be the name of a new theatre to be erected in St. John, N. B., by F. G. Spencer, owner of the Lyric and Unique there, and a string of other houses in the Maritime Provinces. The plans call for a building 80 by 145 feet, to be erected on the north side of King Square, directly opposite the big, new Keith-Albee house, the Imperial.

Mr. Spencer states that the proposition which will involve at least $100,000, provides for a "ground floor house," with a seating capacity of 1,500, and that construction work will begin as soon as spring weather opens.

The policy of the new house will be pictures and vaudeville on a large scale, but as theatrical conditions improve after the war, the Strand, it is said, will put on the biggest and best in drama, opera and musical attractions.

The Empire theatre, Ottawa, which has been closed for some time, is now being reopened after being completely remodeled both inside and out. Mr. H. Sherwood, a prominent Ottawa man, is the manager, and was in Toronto during the past week arranging for a Universal program.

INDIANA

Harry Kornbloom, part owner of the Franklin theatre, Evansville, has bought the Criterion theatre, Main street, Evansville, from J. R. Brannen.

The Strand theatre, South Bend, was closed recently by deputy sheriffs. The closing was the result of a complaint filed in the St. Joseph County Circuit Court by Gabriel Summers which brought an attachment into the hands of Sheriff Charles Bailey. The theatre was recently changed from musical comedy to motion pictures and was under the management of Julius Winegardner. Only six patrons were in the theatre at the time it was closed. Mr. Summers, lessor, seeks to recover $300 alleged to be due him for back rent.

E. H. Crowell has been awarded the contract for building the Cyrus Hayden theatre, at Hammond. The building will cost approximately $10,000, exclusive of plumbing and wiring. Work will be rushed on the structure, so as to have it completed before January.

IOWA

Messrs. Julian and Awe, who are erecting the new Empire theatre in Fort Dodge, are making preparations to open their house about the middle or last of October. When completed the Empire will be one of the most attractive houses in that part of Iowa. The seating capacity will be 500. The addition of the Empire to Fort Dodge's theatres will bring the list up to four, all of which are exceptionally attractive ones.

Albert Lafrentz has purchased two lots in a prominent part of Ute, and will begin at once the erection of a brick building to be used as a moving picture theatre and opera house.

According to reports emanating from Burlington, negotiations for the erection of a first-class up-to-date picture house are under way, and the proposition will be on a substantial basis in a very short time.

Robert Miller, who has had charge of the Orpheum theatre, at Centerville, for some time past, recently sold out to the Orpheum Theatre Company, of the same city.

MAINE

The Bijou theatre has opened up in Bangor for its winter season, giving a vaudeville and motion picture program every afternoon and evening.

H. M. Wilshire, of Freeport, has taken over the old Little Hip theatre in that place, had it remodeled, and will soon be ready for business. He has changed the name of the theatre to the Nordica, for Freeport is the home of the famous singer by the same name. The house is well laid out, and has full accommodations for the motion picture enthusiasts of the town.

MICHIGAN

The Isis theatre, one of the newest houses in Grand Rapids, has been leased for term of years to Harry I. Garson, who also operates the Broadway-Strand theatre in Detroit. The Isis is now undergoing many alterations and improvements are being made in the way of stage setting, interior decoration, fixtures and equipment. Another new feature will be the installation of a Wurlizter pipe organ. It is the intention of Mr. Garson to make the Isis a big feature house, playing all of the attractions that come to the Broadway-Strand.

MISSISSIPPI

F. F. Kidwell on September 10 purchased the Azelie theatre, an airdome, from William Hirschal, in Poplarville. The Azelie is running six days a week, and has been remodeled by the new owner, who will also build a new show in Poplarville for winter patrons.

An important ownership change occurred at Laurel on September 1. R. R. Akers, a Laurel capitalist, purchased the Lomo theatre from Charles Dolive and W. N. Joyner. The Lomo is being completely refitted, and in addition to a mixed program, will run a number of big features.

J. A. R. Goodwin, a merchant of Forest, opened Goodwin's theatre in that city a few weeks ago. In spite of the fact that the Goodwin seats only 150, it has been a paying proposition from the start.

R. G. Davison is the new owner of the Majestic theatre in Newton, having purchased it from Norman and Harris.

"Dick" Bell is now the sole owner of the Alamo theatre, a paying colored show in Jackson, the State Capital.

The moving picture theatre at Picayune was closed some time ago after a disastrous wind storm that blew it down, but rumors persist that there will be a new show for the town shortly.

Professor Hubbard, of the Agricultural School at Ellisville, has inaugurated an impromptu moving picture theatre for his students. He runs once a week, with amateur talent as operators, and is receiving good patronage from the towns people.

NEW YORK

With the coming of the regular theatre season, the Family theatre, Rochester, a combination vaudeville and picture house, has returned to its policy of showing all-comedy programs on Sunday. The management of this house claims to have been the first in the field with the all-comedy programs, and is making a big card out of it. When this plan was started last season, a series of startling advertisements were used in the newspapers, and the plan proved a success. Good Sunday business was done in spite of the severe competition of the big houses downtown devoted exclusively to pictures. The house picks out a number of short comedies, and a longer picture with a comedy touch, running them continuously.

PENNSYLVANIA

Peter Magaro, proprietor of the Regent Motion Picture theatre, 410 Market street, Harrisburg, has announced that he has obtained a long term lease on the property No. 412 Market street, adpoining the theatre and now occupied by the Smith Clothing Company. Mr. Magaro will take possession April 1, 1917, and begin at once building operations by which the Smith property and the present theatre will be converted into a theatre with twice the present seating capacity of the Regent. The Regent was rebuilt less than two years ago into one of the most ornate theatres in Central Pennsylvania, and with the proposed extension of its seating capacity from 1,050 to 2,000, it will be one of the largest. The improvements include the installation of a bigger screen surface and interior decorations in conformity with those of the present auditorium. The contract for the architectural work has been awarded to Thomas W. Lamb, 644 Eighth avenue, New York City. Extensive changes will be made to the exterior of the front of the building. The property is owned by the William Jennings estate, from whom the lease was obtained.

T. Saul, proprietor and manager of the Hippodrome, at Sixth and South streets, Philadelphia, also the Hamilton at Sixtieth and Lansdowne avenue, opened the full season at the latter house on October 2 by the addition of a good orchestra. The house before used only a piano. The admission is ten cents.

J. Fred Zimmerman has received bids from a number of contractors on a theatre, stores, and dance hall to be erected at Fourth and Edgemont streets, Chester. The Hoffman Company, of Philadelphia, are the architects. The buildings will be one and two stories of stone brick and hollow tile. The theatre will have a capacity of about 1,800.

A bank, stores, offices and theatre are to be erected at Hanover for Shippard & Myers. Charles M. Anderson, of Baltimore, Md., is the architect. The building will be four stories of brick, 100 x 155 feet, with a seating capacity of 450.

The Imperial theatre, at Second and Poplar streets, Philadelphia, J. Rosenthal, proprietor, which was closed for alterations, has reopened in its new dress. The walls were redecorated, a Kimball organ installed, a mirror screen put in, and other improvements made. An advance in price for three nights a week is being tried with success.

The Poplar theatre, at Sixth and Poplar streets, Philadelphia, Nathan Stietel, manager, was torn down, and is being entirely rebuilt. Abraham Stiefel is owner of the new house, which will now have a 1,500 seating capacity, trebling its former size. Carl Berger is the architect, and Charles Freund Company the builders for the new edifice. A gold fiber screen and two new Powers 6 B projection machines have been placed. When the theatre opens in October, a full orchestra under the leadership of Loyd Crew will furnish the music.

JESSE L. LASKY MAKES STRONG PLEA FOR BETTER MUSIC

THAT the procuring of the proper musical setting for feature plays is a vital step in the advancement of their exhibition is the opinion of Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who cites the work of Schirmer, Inc., for the Paramount releases as an example of what can be done in improving photoplay presentations in theatres.

In an open letter to the trade, the first of its kind ever written, Mr. Lasky advocates that every motion picture theatre manager take council with himself on this important subject, and that he take definite steps toward making some arrangement which will make the arrival of fitting music scores for each production as much a matter of routine as the arrival of the picture itself.

The letter reads as follows:

"To the Exhibitors of the United States:

"The day when the exhibitor's greatest problem was one of projection has passed. The time when his greatest worries were centered in the mechanics of his theatre is no more. The demand for perfect projection was met by perfect and improved equipment. Big and small, the theatres of the United States present a standard of exceptional excellence in the successful appeal to the eye of the patron.

"But what of the ear? The motion picture no longer is the 'silent drama,' nor are the motion picture theatres which strive to appear to the better audiences dark, gloomy, silent halls. It is true that the figures on the screen do not speak, but months ago a plan, at first an experiment and since a positive necessity, has been adopted by thousands of theatres to meet the public's demand that the sense of hearing as well as the sense of seeing be satisfied. Music has met the call of the ear.

"Appreciating these requirements, in the adjustment of which to fit the particular needs of his audience an exhibitor is best serving himself and the photoplay art, the producers generally have striven to aid to the best of their ability. I have in mind, particularly, the propaganda to raise the standard of projection, which had its origin among the producers who were experimenting with improved photography. More recently I have watched and participated enthusiastically in the constructive and artistic effort to aid the exhibitor with his music.

"Some time ago Paramount Pictures Corporation and the producers for the Paramount Program entered into an arrangement with Schirmer, Inc., one of the oldest and best established music publishing houses in the United States, for the distribution of George Beynon's music scores, especially written to suit particular photoplay productions. Here was a mighty step forward in the art—a step which gave to exhibitors complete music scores, not mere suggestions—and I have heard all of these scores rendered in conjunction with projection.

"Permit me to express the opinion that at the moment when music of the highest grade was introduced into the motion picture theatre, the photoplay ceased to be movies, and became the entertainment of the best people in any community.

"With this fact in mind I recently investigated the attitude of the motion picture theatres towards the published music scores and found that a great many of them were not taking advantage of same. Instead of subscribing for and using these scores they were following the older method of depending on their orchestra leaders to arrange appropriate music for each picture. While I do not wish to criticize this method, there can be no question but that the published scores as issued by Schirmer are a big step in advance of the older method, and I therefore appeal to the Exhibitors to investigate these scores and urge their early adoption.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA INSTALLED AT IMPERIAL

THE great interest that is now being taken by the amusement seeking public in the music offered at various theaters has led manager Partington of the Imperial Theatre to secure the services of a symphony orchestra, directed by Maurice Lawrence, an organization so well known here that it is in itself a great attraction. Paramount pictures and the best music obtainable is a combination that manager Partington figures will be difficult to beat.

When Your Banker Asks Questions

When your banker asks a lot of searching questions about yourself and your business, he is only doing what you ought to do before you extend credit to one of your customers.

Your banker "sells" money or credit, at a profit, just as you sell goods.

And he is as eager to get new credit customers, as you are.

But he must know that his customers will pay him on the date due, just as you should know, in handling your credit customers.

If your attitude and your answers show your banker that you are "at sea" on important facts in your business, you can't blame him for hesitating to extend the credit you ask.

By adopting the latest N C R System, you put yourself in a strong position with your banker.

You are able to show him daily, weekly and monthly records of your cash and credit sales, your receipts-on-account, and your items of cash paid out.

Your Cash Register Summary Sheet enables you to make a "bank statement" that is proved by printed unchangeable cash register records.

It shows the banker that you know the exact state of your own business.

It assures him that you are safeguarding yourself against leaks and losses.

It gives you a confidence that inspires his confidence.

It will help you to borrow the money that you need for earning cash discounts, making advantageous cash purchases, and otherwise conducting your business along modern, money-making lines.

You may not be able to do these things with your old Register, but you can make your old National Cash Register pay part of the cost of the New-And-Better System.

Please accept my heartiest congratulations on the splendid picture you have made of "Bought and Paid For." The central story is directly and dramatically told and the comedy element is admirably handled.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS
November 4th

The picture version of Jules Eckert Goodman's play follows the original very closely, and for that reason alone it becomes an interesting and entertaining offering In addition to this, it contains two big stars in the leading roles, Lew Fields and Doris Kenyon, and it is hard to tell which pleases the most Considered from the box office standpoint, this is a picture on which the exhibitor can go the limit on advertising and general methods of exploitation

THE COSSACK WHIP

(Coming, Week of November 13)

Romance and Tragedy of Life in the Russian Empire Revealed!

This five-reel super-feature presents a faithful reflection of the conditions that exist in the semi-civilization of the vast and far-reaching Muscovite Empire, and is a high-class production containing elements of the most absorbing and dramatic nature.

"The Cossack Whip" is an original dramatization, created for Thomas A. Edison, Inc., by James Oppenheim, the widely-renowned novelist, and it features the young and beautiful emotional star who won her renown in Edison productions.

"The Cossack Whip" is a story of Russia—an Empire that has been the stage of the greatest romances and tragedies of history. It reveals life in all classes of Russian society—from the wild horsemen of the steppes to the inner circles of the terrible secret police organization.

Always artistic, "The Cossack Whip" is swift and draamtic, contains all of the elements essential to a high-class screen story, and exhibits lavish staging and perfect direction.

This is the second of the new series of five-reel Edison feature productions to be placed on the market, the first being the widely-lauded "Heart of the Hills." The art and beauty of this newly announced release make it an ideal feature for high-class exhibitors, while the story is one that is so universal in its appeal that it will find favor with any audience.

YOUR PATRONS WILL REMEMBER THE PICTURE—YOU WILL REMEMBER THE PROFITS.

Write or wire our office nearest you about "The Cossack Whip" and "The Heart of the Hills," the latter released October 30th.

Bessie Barriscale in "A Corner in Colleens"
Kay Bee

You and your patrons will be amused—and delighted—when you see Bessie Barriscale try to impersonate a man in "A Corner in Colleens," her latest TRIANGLE PLAY.

Never did a daintier bit of femininity try to wear trousers, and the comedy of the whole situation is immense.

In fact the entire piece is just one big rollicking piece of fun and frolic throughout—the story of a bright, happy, Irish maid, who plays all manner of jokes on her ardent lover. She never gives him a moment's peace, and your patrons won't have a moment to take their eye from the screen.

Dorothy Gish in "Atta Boy's Last Race"
Fine Arts

Everybody loves a snappy, racing tale—an exciting picture of adventure on the turf—and when this is coupled with a pretty love story it's a combination that can't be beaten.

"Atta Boy's Last Race," the latest TRIANGLE offering with Dorothy Gish as the star, is a rushing, exciting racing story and it's expectations are more than lived up to. There's the "peppy" little jockey, the sweetheart who hated racing, and the villain. Then there's the real horse race that makes the boy's fortune and the corking climax.

Keystone Comedies

Then, too, there are two tearing half miles of Keystone fun and frolic.

Dorothy Gish in "Atta Boy's Last Race"

Neck and neck down the track the horses tore. For a moment it looked as though the race was lost, but with a terrific spurt " Atta Boy " won by a nose.

When your patrons see "Atta Boy's Last Race," the latest TRIANGLE PLAY in which Dorothy Gish is starred, they'll be just as excited as if they were at Belmont Park. It's a thrilling racing story that shouldnt' be missed.

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

NOVEMBER 11, 1916

Margarita Fischer Series Is Latest Mutual Offering

THE first of the Margarita Fischer Series of Mutual Star Productions has just been released. "The Pearl of Paradise" has been warmly welcomed by exhibitors. Many of them recall the big business they did with such former Mutual productions as "The Miracle of Life," "Infatuation," "The Quest," "The Girl From His Town," and others. Miss Fischer was the star of all these pictures. And now Miss Fischer is again back with Mutual. Her return is signalized by the release of "The Pearl of Paradise." But this is only the first of the Fischer Series. There are many others to come.

On November 30, the second Margarita Fischer picture will be released. It is another Mutual Star Production made by the Pollard Picture Plays Company and bears the title "Miss Jackie of the Navy." In it Miss Fischer appears as a jolly little tar and gets herself into all sorts of trouble. A charming love story runs through the production. "The Butterfly Girl," the third of the Fischer Series, is scheduled for release on December 28. The story was carefully selected and is splendidly adapted to Miss Fischer's ability.

The fourth Fischer Mutual Star Production is entitled "The Knight of Tarquizzi," and is booked for January 25. After this comes "Birds of Passage," a story with a tremendous punch, due on Mutual screens on and after February 22, and a few weeks later "The Light of Heaven," the last picture so far chosen, will make its appearance. March 22 is the date of its release. Hundreds of exhibitors who made big profits on the earlier Margarita Fischer productions released by Mutual have hastened to book this entire new series of Fischer pictures. They feel confident that this new series will be even better and make them more money than did the original releases. Bookings can now be made at any of the sixty-eight Mutual Film Exchanges.

Huge Schooner Wrecked

In one of the early installments of the new Helen Holmes chapter-play, entitled "A Lass of the Lumberlands," a full-rigged schooner is seen driven ashore on a rock bound coast. This scene was taken off the California coast at a point where a real ship was actually battered to pieces on the jagged rocks that line the shore. Players in the new chapter-play actually took their lives in their hands to enact the thrilling scenes that mark this portion of the story.

CHAPLIN'S NEWEST IS

Expose of Secrets of the Picture Studios Entitled

"BEHIND THE SCREEN"

November 13 will be a red letter day for hundreds of motion picture exhibitors. On that day Mutual releases the seventh and newest of the Chaplin-Mutual Specials, entitled "Behind the Screen." This is the picture in which Chaplin exposes studio secrets and makes fun of the motion picture studios and the methods of production. The whole world has marveled at and laughed over his satires on other themes. He has ridiculed the humble floorwalker. He has kidded the fireman. He has parodied the nobility. He has made fun of the pawnbroker. But now he is going to play hors with the motion picture industry. Surely there is no one more competent to undertake such a task. Surely there is no one who can so skillfully hold up to laughter the serious work of picture making as Chaplin. Everyone who has been privileged to obtain an advance glance at "Behind the Screen" is ready to concede that Charlie has made a thorough job of it. Hundreds of exhibitors are awaiting this subject. Bookings can be arranged at any of the Mutual film exchanges. Many exhibitors are finding it profitable to play return dates on the earlier Mutual-Chaplin Specials. They are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count" and "The Pawnshop."

Mary Miles Minter in "Youth's Endearing Charm" was the feature offering at the opening of the Fairyfield theater, a big new house just opened in Detroit, Mich.

2nd Bennett Mutual Star Production Released This Week

THIS week Richard Bennett, who scored such a tremendous success in "Philip Holden—Waster," makes his appearance in another Mutual Star Production. This is the second of the series of Bennett Star Productions. Its title is "And the Law Says." It is powerfully dramatic. Richard Bennett appears in one of the strongest roles in which he has ever been cast either in pictures or on the speaking stage. The other Mutual Star Production is a Turner Feature, the fifth of the Turner Series, entitled "East Is East." It features, of course, the former famous Vitagraph star, Florence Turner, who is known and loved by thousands of motion picture fans.

"And the Law Says."

Tensely dramatic is every scene in "And the Law Says," the Bennett Feature offered this week. Mr. Bennett appears in the role of a judge at the trial of his own son. Previously he had strongly advocated capital punishment as a cure for crime. He had even publicly stated that he believed circumstantial evidence strong enough in most cases to convict. His charge to the jury is one of the most bitter arraignments of a criminal ever shown on the screen. The jury brings in a verdict of guilty. The judge sentences the convicted man to be electrocuted. A week later he discovers the prisoner at the bar was his own son. His struggle between love and duty is one that will bring tears to the eyes of any audience. Eventually he yields and seeks a pardon for the condemned man. The pardon is delayed. The current is turned on and the prisoner pays his debt to society. The father is naturally well-nigh heart broken. To tell you more of the story would spoil the picture for you, since this drama has one of the biggest surprise endings ever portrayed. Mr. Bennett's role is sure to be proclaimed a triumph of character work.

"East Is East."

Florence Turner is too well known to exhibitors and picture-goers to make comment on her ability necessary. "East Is East" is a grimly powerful story of East Indian life, and the beautiful star makes the most of every situation. The photography is excellent. The picture is most capably produced, well acted and a feature attraction of real worth. Bookings on both these subjects can now be made at any of the Mutual film exchanges.

Al Ray, writer, and Robin Williamson, director, have recently joined the Vogue Comedy Company.

"More thrills than have ever before been given in two reels!"

Read what prominent newspapers say of Pathé's Greatest Serial

The Shielding Shadow

The Denver News says: "'The Shielding Shadow' features Grace Darmond, one of the prettiest stars in filmdom. The story is replete with thrills bound to interest."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: "The Shielding Shadow' loses no time in controlling its plot of mystery, adventure and romance."

The Montreal Herald says: "The second episode of 'The Shielding Shadow', Pathe's Master Serial gives more thrills than has ever before been given in two reels."

The Cleveland Plain Dealerof Oct. 9th says: "This scene with the octopus in the second episode of "The Shielding Shadow' is quite the most thrilling and amazing stunt of a picture. The octopus or devilfish is not a studio contrivance; it is the real thing. The action takes place close to the camera. If it is a fixed scene, it is the most clever thing managed for a camera. If it isn't and you are positive it is not, then Ralph Kellard has taken the greatest risk of any other screen daredevil."

The Des Moines Tribune of Oct. 4th says: "You will find yourself truly interested in "The Shielding Shadow" without being spellbound by bloodshed and mystery. The cast is fine, the settings are superb and the story so far seems to be one that will grow on one. This new serial is one that you will like for many reasons. 1. Pathe has been putting serials out so long that they have been able to guage the public's desire to a nicety. 2. They have gone about "The Shielding Shadow" with the idea of producing the best serial they have ever put out, and to do this, they have employed a fine cast, placed them in the most elaborate setting and the task of telling a real story in the very best manner possible."

My Dear Mr. Shurtleff:

We opened with the "SHIELDING SHADOW" Wednesday, Oct. 4th. As you know, we are using this two days each week .

I take great pleasure in saying that on my opening night I broke all of my house records for box office receipts by $26. Considering that my house is an exclusive feature house and that I run nothing but the very best that the market affords, I think this is a wonderful recommendation for the "SHIELDING SHADOW." My audience was delighted with the picture and I confidently look forward to two unusually good days every week while I am using the SHADOW. My house being an an exclusive residential district of the highest class and being one of the largest residential theatres in Cleveland, I feel that the picture is worthy of great praise for the splendid showing. I seat a little over a thousand.

Wishing you the best of success in booking this wonderful picture, I am,

Very truly yours,

Ten Years from Now Motion Picture Conditions

will be different: "Features" and "Spectacles" will be different. New demands will come.

¶ Good Comedies will probably be an exception. Mind you, we say Good Comedies. The purely slap-stick jumble is doomed. But the element of fun will be popular as long as human nature remains the same — and it has not changed much in two thousand years.

¶ We anticipate changing conditions. We make Good Comedies. We will continue to make one each week. The personal supervision of Al. E. Christie insures this.

ART DRAMAS
EXECUTIVE OFFICES

Out of the chaotic, wasteful conditions of the past and present, a new organization is born, with a sane, waste-eliminating, business-like policy of high-grade production.

Art Dramas, Inc., announces the association of five producing organizations of sterling standard, for the production and distribution of seat-filling feature pictures.

Fifty-two pictures a year are to be released — one each week. The productions will feature none of the so-called "stars" whose ruinous salaries make profits prohibitive, nor will they be made by directors whose sole aim it is to spend more money on a production than it can legitimately earn.

Art Dramas features will be well-rounded picturizations of strong and well-known stories, dominated by action, and acted by players whose past work has been of an excellent standard. They will be satisfying, patron-gaining entertainments. This we promise you; and our names guarantee it.

The Art Dramas producers will distribute their pictures directly through the foremost independent exchanges everywhere. There will be no tremendous waste in distribution, as has been the case heretofore. The middleman's charge of from 15% to 30%, which has always been added to the rental price of a picture, will be entirely eliminated.

Reputable Exhibitors and Exchanges of New York City—

Next Thursday evening, November 2nd, at eight o'clock, you are requested to attend a meeting to be held at Wurlitzer Hall, No. 113 West 40th street, New York City.

Every person connected directly with the motion picture exchange business, doing business in Greater New York, New Jersey, Conencticut and New York state, including Albany and Buffalo, is invited to meet with us.

We are going to put into operation a practical and feasible plan that will eliminate and rid the industry, among others, of the following evils, that have been and are rampant in this territory:

Thievery and dishonest employes; inadequate express facilities between upper New York state. Connecticut and Manhattan; exhibitors holding over films without extra payment; exhibitors returning films C.O.D. to the exchange to collect fancied damages, knowing the necessity of prompt delivery to the next customer; switching or railroading films between two and more houses, illegally and without payment; films and features booked and contracted and left laying on the shelf uncalled for and unpaid; written contracts violated and broken; due notice not given on cancellations; enforced deductions from the face of invoices; excessive credits and non-payment of accounts; bad checks: no recourse against dead beats and fly-by-night exhibitors, or exhibitors who are judgment proof; no protection for legitimate exchanges against illegitimate exchanges and pirates, and for honest exhibitors against exchanges who are guilty of many crooked deals against them.

We are also going to submit a proposition to the Exhibitors' League that will undoubtedly bring their membership up to 100% for New York and adjacent territory.

If you want honest and honorable dealings to be enforced in the interdealings of the motion picture industry meet with us, Mr. Exhibitor and Mr. Exchangeman.

Circusing the Motion Picture

"WE believe that the picture-play will never be at its best till it discards the superlatives. We believe that even in cases where superlatives are justified by the facts, they will not be believed and are therefore injurious."

The above words are taken from the last issue of the house organ of the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland's new photoplay theatre.

These are words worth weighing—by the exhibitor, by the producer. They seem so important to us, indeed, that we have substituted this editorial for another already prepared.

WE agree thoroughly with the above statement. We believe that the truth has not half been stated.

We believe that until we stop advertising pictures with circus language, until we in fact completely disassociate this art and business from all circus methods, the motion picture will remain far behind its true development. We will continue to deal, with amazing effort but blindly, with something, the true function of which we don't seem to grasp. We will, in other words, go on muddling the motion picture.

AT present we are still, quite largely in the circus era. It's astounding: but it's true.

From a late issue of a trade paper—probably MOTION PICTURE NEWS—the Stillman editor culls an array of phrases and adjectives which would do credit to Tony Hamilton or any lesser light of circus press agentry.

"Mighty," "magnificent," "super," "spectacle," "greatest ever," "preeminent," "most novel and daring," "greatest stars on earth," "eclipses the spoken drama," "King and Queen of motion pictures," "greatest box office success," "biggest and safest," etc. The list is alarming and confusing—or rather it would be to the mind of a novice. Of course no one within the trade takes it seriously—or at all—least of any the seasoned exhibitor.

WE have spoken before, on this page, about the utter futility of advertising exaggerations in a trade paper, pointing to the fact that the exhibitor did not, of course, believe them; that they simply wasted space; and most importantly, that they destroyed instead of building up a trademark confidence.

We cited the instance of a department store advertising manager in Chicago who—when all the stores in that city were feverishly competing in an effort to delude the buying public, using much newspaper space and many superlatives,—suddenly reversed the situation by announcing that his store would tell the truth; how he consistently followed out this policy in detail; and how he thereby not only made his store lead immediately in sales but also built up for it a reputation for values that endures today.

WE stated then that in our belief someone sometime would take the same clever advantage of the film advertising situation.

This trade advertising situation, it is true, has changed considerably. As better pictures have consistently been made the trade advertising has in proportion grown in restraint. So, too, have the posters and other advertising matter directed at the public. All of which shows definite and commendable progress.

BUT we are still circusing pictures to an astounding degree. With respect to the trade this is futile, as we have said. The exhibitor simply laughs at it—or curses it. With regard to the public it is positively injurious, lowering the picture in the public eye, and inviting the satire of the public press—a satire by the way we can ill afford.

But the evil goes deeper than advertising futility and injurious representation. It is much more than an advertising situation.

THE point is this: this circus conception of the motion picture by the producer will positively prevent the production of better pictures. It will hold back the proper production and also the full distribution of the true motion picture. It is contrariwise to the full path of progress directly before us.

The motion picture is not a circus; not vaudeville; nor the stage. It is not a competitor, strictly, of any or all of these branches of the show world. It is wholly different and new in concept and function.

THE motion picture is a new mode of expression; it is modern day type. It expresses drama, art, news, stories, fashions, travels, romance, adventure.

The motion picture theatre is a community centre, like a reading room in principle, where people gather daily to see what the screen has to show them of life as it is and should be.

VOL. XIV November 11, 1916 No. 19

This community theatre, as we have pointed out, is eighty per cent. numerous. It is the main motion picture outlet. It is the backbone of the business.

ARE we producing for this steady voluminous outlet? Are we giving these thousands of theatres a program, diversified to suit the wants and tastes of the community, to meet a steady ten cents admission price, and at a cost from which the gambling, spectacular, circus waste has been so eliminated that the exhibitor can meet it and make money fifty-two weeks in a year?

THEN, are we telling these theatres just what these pictures are, so that they will believe each weekly announcement and so they in turn can definitely tell the public, so that the public in turn will believe the theatre's next weekly announcements? Or are we striving to advertise all pictures—and thereby drive deep in the public mind the impression that the motion picture is a yellow backed novel, or a daring play, or a one-night stand circus—or a cheap, fakir's catch-money device?

WE leave these quotations to be answered by the producer—as eventually they must be.

We are content with driving home, if we have, the broad basic fact that the motion picture, in concept and fulfilment, is not a circus.

William A. Johnston.

The Popular Screen Story

NORMAN HAPGOOD, one of the keenest and most successful judges of fiction for the public, has these true words to say of stories for the screen:

"The mistake should not be made of expecting information or direction from the average picture. The majority of the films will always be mere entertainment, and all we can ask of that majority is that they shall not be harmful. Compare the situation in the regular theatres. There are always some plays that are intended as food for the intelligence. In a few playhouses such productions are the rule, but these theatres are an extremely small minority of the whole. Numberless dramas are mere pastime to one that in any way strengthens or enlightens. Regarding fiction, also, the analogy to the moving picture is equally close. How many stories are there, making for culture or character building, compared to the number without depth, originality or strength, made on standardized formulae to fill our magazines and take millions of unenterprising readers into the world of love, mystery, heroism and success? In this field of sheer heart-satisfying fiction the movie has some marked advantages as a medium over the periodical and the book. The species of minds that form the largest fiction market are not looking for subtleties. It is the story they want, and if the material is properly written the screen gives a story stripped of all else. It gives it at a small price. It gives it in a sociable environment, where the average struggling being can escape from the hall bedroom or the tenement and enjoy human intercourse. Jack and Jill, or the whole Jill family, can enjoy it all together. Certainly there will be distinct assistances to culture also, but the bulk of the product, like the bulk of current drama and fiction, must inevitably feed the universal craving for adventure and romance."

Dr. Oberholtzer Rampant

THE strengthening and further development of the new National Association of the Motion Picture Industry as evidenced in the movement now under way in Chicago, could not well come at a more opportune moment.

Those who doubt this would do well to consider the remarks of Dr. E. P. Oberholtzer, of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors before the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women at the latter's convention in Philadelphia last week.

"THERE is a glut of pictures depicting immorality, scenes of dens of vice, drunkenness, and other phases that have no place in a public place of amusement," said the doctor. "The board of censors has a continual fight to prevent these pictures being shown. Even the titles are often an insult to public morals, and on one occasion a film company had to change a suggestive title three times before it met our requirements.

"We are literally fighting all the time with our backs to the wall against the efforts of film producers to put across impossible pictures. But we are in this fight to stay."

DR. OBERHOLTZER concluded by saying he had known nothing of pictures, being a writer, dramatic critic and director of pageants until his friend Governor Brumbaugh put him on the board thinking he would accomplish some good; he also said he was a friend of pictures. And on the board he declared he would stay until put out and assured the delegates that while he was there they could feel satisfied that the women and children of this state would be protected.

Many of the women, never having heard the other side of the story, went home firmly convinced that all that stood between the contamination of themselves, their children and the community at large was the Pennsylvania Board of Censors.

Lee Ochs Brings Libel Suit for $100,000

Action of President of National Association Follows Publication of Story in Variety, Charging Him with Using His Position in League to Further His Own Interests—Exhibitors in New York Hold Indignation Meeting and Declare Accusation Is Attack on League

IN answer to the story published in the last issue of Variety charging that he has used his position as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League to further his own interests, Lee Ochs has started a civil libel suit demanding one hundred thousand dollars damages. The suit has been filed against Variety as a corporation, Sime Silverman, the publisher, Joseph Lowe, and Fleischman and Goldreyer, the two exhibitors making the charges. The papers were served last Friday afternoon by Goldsmith, Rosenthal, Mork and Baum.

When seen by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Ochs made an unqualified denial of all of the charges. He visited the offices of the various exchanges and distributing companies mentioned in the charges, and received their assurances of their falsity. He said, "I absolutely deny in their entirety these charges that have been made against me, and will prove their falsity in the courts. The two exhibitors making the charges have only been members of the association for about three weeks. At the time they applied for admission to the league the membership committee acted adversely on their applications, but I insisted that they be admitted, as it is my desire to get every exhibitor possible into the organization. I insist that personal feeling shall not enter into the business of the league. I made it possible for these two men to become members, and I can only look upon their attack against me as an attack against the league."

Indignation Meeting Held by Exhibitors

Last Friday night an indignation meeting was held at the headquarters of the league at 218 West Forty-second street, in which a throng of indignant exhibitors indorsed Mr. Ochs and the manner in which he had conducted the affairs of the association. The general trend of opinion was to the effect that this personal attack was in reality an attack against the league.

Several of the members expressed wonder as to who it could have possibly been who wrote the letter which Variety published containing the charges of misconduct. They made the assertion that it could not have been the two exhibitors who signed their names to the communication. It was the general belief that some outsider, who wished the league no good, was behind the whole trouble and had formulated the letter containing the charges. The whole league has rallied to the support of its president, and will do everything in its power to see that he is vindicated.

Letter Containing the Charges

Following is the letter containing the charges of alleged misconduct in office:

"In response to inquiries which have been made us as to the reason we were among the exhibitors that did not carry out the cancellation plan inaugurated and inspired by Mr. Ochs against the Mutual Film corporation, but which failed to receive the support intended from the exhibitors, we wish to make an honest statement of facts with the reasons we did not feel that we could afford to entrust such exclusive power of attorney to Lee A. Ochs:

"In the first place we believe fully and heartily in organization—especially do we need organization in the different branches of the motion picture business, exhibitors, exchangemen, producers and manufacturers. We are ready to support any measure agreed upon by a majority membership of any organization we belong to, provided such measure is made for the remedying of existing wrongs, evils, laws or policies that are harmful to the community or to the organization. We will not support any measure that is contrary to law, nor will we follow the leadership of anyone who advocates such procedures and neither will we follow the leadership of anyone who does not by their own individual acts show the proper spirit of co-operation and loyalty to fellow members—who has not the courage of his convictions and the ability to present the organization's viewpoint straightforwardly to the opponent—who lurks in the rear when supposed to lead in the advocation of any issue—or who preaches co-operation, clean competition, union of exhibitors and members and who secretly practices just the opposite:

"In our various theatres we realize that we must have competition—we have always had competition and always expect it—we realize that to succeed in our business we must be able to meet competition, good clean competition, or give way to our competitor—we ask no odds in our favor and never expect anything more than an even break. It so happens that Mr. Ochs is one of our new competitors—we do not object to his competition but we do object to his using his position as president of our organization to further his personal interests, as below enumerated, to our financial loss. If he is not using the influence of his office to further his private ends insofar as his dealings with exchanges for service for his Concourse theatre is concerned, let him answer the following:

"1. Why did such prominent exchanges as the Paramount, Metro, World and Pathe cancel their service at our Garden and University theatres where we had same for a long period with pleasant relations, for his Concourse theatre, in some instances for less money than we were paying?

"2. Why did Mr. Saunders of the Metro state to us that while our dealings had always been the most pleasant and agreeable he felt that he should favor Mr. Ochs, as he was president of Exhibitors' League? Why should Mr. Ochs tell us point blank that these different exchanges owed it to him to favor him, even though we might offer more money for service—that he was personally responsible for seventy-five per cent. of the business on the Metro books in N. Y. City?

Third Question

"3. Why did the Paramount Film Company return to us a deposit check of six hundred dollars and a contract calling for one hundred and fifty dollars per week, and accept the contract of Mr. Ochs for the same neighborhood calling for fifty dollars per week and a deposit of two hundred dollars? This is the exact fact of the matter told to us by Mr. Ochs personally and the deposit and contract were listed by him to us as assets, when we were contemplating the purchase of his theatre.

"4. Why did Mr. Ochs insist that the World Film Corporation allow him to use their pictures in both his houses for the same price, after the erection of his second house in our neighborhood, when the reason given for the cancellation of this same priced service for our two houses, was because Mr. Ochs was to pay the same money, but use in one house only?

"5. The Mutual Film Corporation refused to favor Mr. Ochs in the slightest degree over ourselves, their old customers, and he was forced to accede to the using of the 'Charlie Chaplin Specials' on exactly an even break, day and date the same money. Could this be any reason why Mr. Ochs insisted upon the retaliatory cancellation being directed against the Mutual Exchange, and would not listen to such procedure being enacted against exchanges which had favored him. The Paramount Company has always charged Mr. Ochs return express and he signed his contract accordingly and their ruling to that effect has always been in force—the Metro is one of the new exchanges to enforce that ruling. Is the reason for Mr. Ochs' opposition to action against these exchanges in favor of action against the Mutual Exchange, merely because Mr. Beck, manager of the Mutual Exchange, is chairman of the New York Exchanges?

"6. Did the Exhibitors' League know that Mr. Ochs was not a user of Mutual Service and that his opposition, our houses, were users of Mutual film service, Masterpictures, Star Series and specials—that because of the cancellation being only directed at the Mutual Exchange not one portion of Mr. Ochs' service was affected, excepting the 'Charlie Chaplin Specials' which he was compelled to use on the same day with us?

"7. Why did Mr. Ochs complain to us that as he was not receiving one cent salary from the Exhibitors' League he had to protect his houses as far as possible, and therefore could not meet with us on an even basis of 'live and let live,' and that the different exchanges were obligated and owed it to him to extend him all the favors they were doing?

"All we want is fair play and fair dealings—we do insist that any leader of an organization to which we belong and who has been designated a standard bearer to present a grievance of the members be able to go before any body of exchanges or manufacturers and be able to look each and every one straight in the eye and be under obligations to none and have none under obligations to him.

"THE SOUL OF KURA SAN" FROM LASKY IN WEEK OF NOVEMBER 13

"The Soul of Kura San," is the Lasky contribution to the Paramount Program for the week of November 13. The cast contains two well known stars in the persons of Sessue Hayakawa and Myrtle Stedman, the Morosco star who was loaned to the Lasky Company for this one picture. The story tells of a young Japanese whose impoverished condition makes him an undesirable suitor for the hand of Kura San.

He comes to this country where he acquires great wealth, but on returning to Japan to claim his bride finds that she has fallen in love with an American artist. She commits suicide. The Japanese ferrets out the artist and resolves to kill him but finds a greater revenge in enticing his fiancee to his rooms. He is about to violate her when he glances up at the picture of his lost bride and the expression on its face causes him to relent. The artist enters at that moment, but the girl intercedes for the Japanese and he is spared with the result that he commits suicide.

BARONESS VAN RAVEN WILL HAVE CHARGE OF BAZAAR

Baroness Dorothy Van Raven, an American by birth, who appeared in the Metro production of "Romeo and Juliet" is to have charge of the motion picture booth at the bazaar to be held in the armory of the 69th regiment, New York City. The proceeds of the bazaar are to be held as a fund for the members of the 69th, who are now on the Mexican border, and their families. Various producing companies will be represented by their stars on each night of the bazaar, and all of the Metro players have been urged to present themselves at the booth.

Autographed photographs of the stars of each producing company will be sold and life-sized portraits of some of the stars will be sold on shares. Baroness Van Raven was formerly Dorothy Kingdon of Auburn, N. Y. Her husband belongs to the Dutch nobility. Before joining Metro the actress appeared with a number of other motion picture companies.

NEW STYLE SINGLE REEL POSTERS ISSUED BY PARAMOUNT

Realizing that the exhibitors' feature picture on his program naturally attracts the larger part of his audience, but that a great percentage of attractiveness to a well rounded performance is due solely to the single-reel features that surround the program picture, the Paramount Pictures Corporation is issuing with its single-reel "little features" a new style poster.

J. Albert Thorne has been placed in charge of this work in this organization and during the past month has changed the style of one, three and six sheet posters considerably, having paid particular attention to the one sheets that are distributed in connection with the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount-Burton Holmes-Travel Pictures, the Paramount-Bray Cartoons and the Paramount single-reel comedies.

METRO SPENDS $1,000 IN INITIAL ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN IN THE DOMINION

J. R. Muir, president of the Dominion Theatre Company of Vancouver, B. C., recently informed the News correspondent that $1,000 has already been spent in the publicity campaign ushering in the Metro program in the Dominion. Newspapers have been used almost exclusively, and the space used has ranged from a two-inch advertisement, one column width, on every page of a newspaper, up to a full two-page spread. Mr. Muir states that the Dominion is now doing the heaviest business in its career, and gives the newspaper advertising due credit for the big start he has gotten with the new program.

"SALVATION JOAN," NO LONGER A SPECIAL, IS IN V-L-S-E SERVICE AS A BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

All of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchange managers have been notified that Salvation Joan," which has heretofore been handled as a Special, has been removed from that classification and may now be booked and handled as a Blue Ribbon Feature.

Because of the expense incurred when this production was made and the worthy charity aided (the Red Cross) through the generosity of the star, Edna May, who in private life is the wife of the millionaire copper magnate, Oscar Lewisohn, the production has up to this time been handled as a Special, with all bookings subject to the approval of the home office.

With this restriction removed, it is now possible for exhibitors to readily book this production; or, if they are taking regularly a certain number of Vitagraph pictures, the exchange managers will gladly include it in their service as they would any other Blue Ribbon Feature.

The widespread interest of the public in Miss May's recent illness, from which she is now recovering, has greatly increased the publicity that this production has received.

GAUMONT ISSUES FOUR SINGLE-REELS A WEEK

The time has gone by when the exhibitor used single-reels merely as fillers. To his appreciation of the value of these shorter lengths of film the Gaumont Company has largely contributed by the excellence of its product. Now the company is reaping the reward of its insistence upon quality.

It has developed a program of single reels, giving the exhibitor four a week. The latest addition to this program is "Mutual Tours Around the World." The other Gaumont single reels are The Mutual Weekly, "See America First" and "Reel Life."

STEDMAN TAKES VACATION AFTER THIRTEEN YEARS

H. O. Davis, vice-president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has granted Marshall Stedman, engaging director at Universal City, a month's leave of absence, and Stedman is spending it with his father, Captain E. M. Stedman of the United States Navy, retired.

Captain Stedman lives in Denver, and with his son will visit Apex, Colorado, where Marshall Stedman has mining interests. It is Stedman's first vacation in thirteen years.

Selznick Will Use Biograph Studios for His Films

Within Next Three Weeks Four Companies Will Be Producing Under One Roof—Other Companies Will Continue to Work at the Two Studios Already in Use on the Palisades of the Hudson—Giblyn to Direct Third Young Production

TO accommodate the ever-increasing number of producing companies whose output is being marketed under the trade name, Selznick-Pictures, Lewis J. Selznick closed negotiations last week for the lease of the Biograph Studio and plant on East 175th street, New York.

Within the next three weeks, four Selznick-Pictures companies will be producing under the Biograph roof, while other companies continue their operations at the two studios already in use on the Palisades of the Hudson.

By taking over the Biograph Studio, Mr. Selznick has made possible the realization of one of his original plans, that of making use of Clara Kimball Young's services in two productions simultaneously.

For the past three weeks Director-General Albert Capellani of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation has been producing at the Solax Studio in Fort Lee, N. J., the successor to "The Common Law." This, the second of the new producing company's features, is an adaptation of Thomas Dixon's noted novel, "The Foolish Virgin."

While Miss Young and her company were on a trip to the Catskills last week taking exterior scenes, Mr. Capellani's assistants headed by Studio Manager Thomas Persons, moved all their paraphernalia from Fort Lee to the Biograph plant and this production will be finished in the new quarter.

Giblyn in Charge of Third Young Production

At the same time, Charles Giblyn, the Fine Arts director, who has just joined the Selznick forces, will take charge of Miss Young's third production, a version of "The Price She Paid" by the late David Graham Phillips. Work on the two productions will be so synchronized as to make it possible for Miss Young, without overtaxing her energies, to devote herself to each production alternately, and thus the output of her pictures will be doubled.

Allan Dwan, the director engaged by Joseph M. Schenck, president of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, another Selznick-Pictures producing ally, began work this week at the Biograph on Miss Talmadge's first production under her management. This will be a screen version of Monckton Hoffe's notable drama, "Panthea," which created a furore when played in the capitals of Europe and in London, and was produced in America with success by Madame Olga Petrova.

Kitty Gordon, who has just finished the first of her own company's productions, an adaptation of the novel, "Vera, the Medium," by the late Richard Harding Davis, will also begin producing her second Selznick-Picture offering at the Biograph plant, as will the producing companies of two additional stars of the first magnitude, whose names will be announced within a few days.

Herbert Brenon will continue to produce his Selznick-Pictures at the Ideal Studios on Hudson Heights, where he has just completed his first great offering, Nazimova in "War Brides." The Herbert Brenon Film Corporation has a five year lease on this studio and will occupy it alone, as the plant is perfectly adapted for the productions of any one director.

The Biograph plant is admirably adapted to Mr. Selznick's needs, as it offers ample room for at least six companies working simultaneously in the production of feature photoplays. The main studio building gives floor space, 80 by 120 feet, and is really two studios of that size in one. The ground floor is occupied by the various workshops. The second floor is the artificial light studio, in which are installed walls of one thousand Cooper-Hewitt lights. The third floor holds the commodious dressing rooms with their marvel shower baths and their up to date conveniences, while the fourth floor serves as the daylight studio, being glassed in.

The plant has its own developing and printing facilities, its own electric lighting system, and is equipped to the last notch of perfection, even to the extent of having its own restaurant conducted by a caterer, who formerly managed one of the big resorts at Coney Island.

Series of Daniels Comedies Beginning in November

Greater Vitagraph Will Release "The Captain Jinks" Pictures, the Third Series Made for the Company by the Comedian

BEGINNING November 27, Greater Vitagraph will release through its own exchanges a series of Frank Daniels' comedies which will be called "The Captain Jink's Series."

This will be the third series of comedies that the inimitable Mr. Daniels has made for Vitagraph; the other two series were called "The Escapades of Mr. Jack" and "Kernel Nutt." The titles and release dates for the first ten productions (in which Mr. Daniels introduces a new style of comedy acting) are as follows: November 27, "Captain Jinks Should Worry;" December 4, "Captain Jinks' Evolution;" December 11, "Captain Jinks' Hidden Treasure;" December 18, "Captain Jinks' Sprained Ankle;" December 25, "Captain Jinks' Get-away;" January 1, "Captain Jinks' Love Insurance;" January 8, "Captain Jinks and Himself;" January 15, "Captain Jinks' Stingy Spirit;" January 22, "Captain Jinks' Trial Balance," and January 29, "Captain Jinks' Better Half."

The addition of these comedies to Greater Vitagraph's program brings the total releases of that organization up to nine reels per week, making it convenient for exhibitors to book an entire program of Vitagraph pictures with plenty of variety, inasmuch as the nine reels comprise a five-part Blue Ribbon feature, a two-part serial with each episode complete in itself; a "Big V Comedy" of the slapstick variety, and a new-style Frank Daniels' "Captain Jinks Comedy."

Van Dyke Brooke is directing Mr. Daniels; he is an experienced director, whose specialty has been one and three-reel productions.

Cecil B. de Mille Is Made President of Morosco Company

Man Who Was One of the Four Organizers of Lasky Company Is Also Made Vice-President of Pallas Pictures—Garbutt Is General Manager of West Coast Studios

THE most interesting official move following the recent combination of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures, is the election of Cecil B. de Mille, director-general of the Lasky Studios, to the presidency of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and the vice-presidency of Pallas Pictures.

Mr. de Mille was one of the four organizers of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and as director-general has had charge of all producing at the Hollywood Studios since the inception of the company. The work he has evidenced on the screen during this time has established him throughout the world as a master of photoplay production.

Mr. de Mille's exceptional ability in stage-craft and dramatic construction may be considered in the light of an inheritance, for he is the son of the late Henry G. de Mille, the famous dramatist, much of whose work was done in association with David Belasco, and of Beatrice de Mille, who is widely known in the theatrical world as one of the foremost authors' representatives. Mr. Cecil de Mille is also the brother of William C. de Mille, the noted playwright, who is at present associated with the scenario department of the Lasky Company.

Prior to his connection with filmdom, Cecil B. de Mille was highly successful as a dramatist, actor and stage director. In collaboration with his brother William, he wrote "The Genius" and "The Royal Mounted." As an actor, he made his first appearance in "Hearts Are Trumps" in February, 1900, and continued acting for about a decade, subsequently devoting his time to play management and producing. Since his entrance in the motion picture field, he has produced the most ambitious Lasky offerings, including notably his superb photodramatic rendition of the great Belasco dramas, such as "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Warrens of Virginia," as well as "Carmen," in which the celebrated prima donna made her photoplay debut, and through which she became a conspicuous screen favorite over night. Mr. de Mille has just completed an elaborate production of "Joan of Arc," starring Geraldine Farrar, which will shortly be presented to the public under his own supervision.

In addition to taking personal charge of the more pretentious and important Lasky productions, Mr. de Mille has attained a rare success in supervising the work of other directors and in building a studio and stock company which are, without doubt, the ultimate examples of combined screen art and efficiency. This supervision of all artistic activities at the Lasky studio Mr. de Mille will retain together with his new official duties of the Pallas and Morosco companies.

It is now also revealed that as a result of the recent meeting held in New York City, at which the combination of the four companies that produce the Paramount Program was accomplished, Frank A. Garbutt, of the Morosco and Pallas companies, has assumed the general executive management of all the West Coast studios of the Famous Players-Lasky-Morosco-Pallas companies.

ASK AUTHORITIES TO SUPPRESS "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

Asking the state authorities to keep "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in film form, out of Ohio, the Daughters of the Confederacy, in session at Dayton, Ohio, passed a resolution. The three-day session closed October 12. Delegates declared the Harriet Beecher Stowe story is being prepared for the screen and will have a disquieting effect upon the minds of the patrons.

QUILL IS MADE MANAGER OF THE TELEGRAM MOTION PICTURE SECTION

L. A. Quill has been appointed manager of the motion picture section of The Evening Telegram, of New York City, which will on Sunday, November 5, issue the first full-fledged motion picture page in any New York newspaper, and this feature will become a regular department of its Sunday issue.

The page will be devoted to plays and players, will be well illustrated, and will cater especially to the "fan" element.

Owing to a typographical error the address of The Artcraft Picture Corporation, in its advertisement in the last issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, was given as 29 Seventh avenue. As nearly every one knows, the correct address is 729 Seventh avenue, the Godfrey building, corner of Forty-ninth Street, N. Y.

Bushman and Bayne Get Ovation at Metro Premiere

Stars of "Romeo and Juliet" Appear in Person at Broadway, New York, and Deliver Speech—Crowds Practically Carry Them to Auto After Show

Crowd of Prospective Patrons Anxiously Awaiting the Doors to Open at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y. City During the Run of Metro's "Romeo and Juliet"

DURING the second night of the run of the Metro picture "Romeo and Juliet" at the Broadway theatre, New York City, both Francis X. Bushman, who played Romeo and Beverly Bayne who carried the role of Juliet, appeared in person. It had been advertised that the stars would appear on the stage, and as a consequence the Broadway was crowded to the doors.

The two stars appeared shortly after nine o'clock. Escorted by half a dozen attaches of the theatre they made their way to the box with difficulty. Helen Dunbar, who plays the role of Lady Capulet in the production, came with the stars. The spectators immediately recognized the players and applauded them with such vigor that Samuel M. Berg, composer of the musical setting for the picture, who was conducting the orchestra, dragged them out on the stage.

Speeches were made by both the leads. Mr. Bushman in his address complimented all concerned in the production of the picture, particularly Miss Bayne, and those who were concerned in the building of the scenario and the direction, respectively, Rudolph de Cordova and John W. Noble.

At the conclusion of the performance Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were literally mobbed by the crowds. Floral tributes sent them by friends and admirers were carried out to the automobile first.

All Los Angeles Wanted to See "Intolerance" at Once

Three Thousand People, Including Leaders of Society, Witness Premier of Griffith Picture at Clune's Auditorium —That Number Turned Away—House Is Sold Out for the Next Two Weeks—Three Copies of the Subject Are Showing—San Francisco Opening Was October 9

Special to Motion Picture News.
Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

THREE thousand Los Angeles people, including practically every star in filmdom, and many of the leaders of society, witnessed the premier of David Wark Griffith's "Intolerance," Tuesday evening, October 17, at Clune's Auditorium. Fully more than that number were turned away. The house is practically sold out for the next two weeks. The prices here are the same as those charged at the Liberty Theatre, New York. With this opening there are three copies of the master subject being shown, the second opening having been at San Francisco October 9.

With the presentation here, Mr. Griffith was given the most enthusiastic ovation of his career. Perhaps the greatest outburst was at the intermission. Before the last scene faded away, a great applause started, and mingled with this were cries of "Mr. Griffith, speech"! After two minutes of this enthusiasm rampant, he appeared on the stage. The applause continued for several minutes before he could speak, and then when it was quiet he began with a very shaky voice:

"I had something to say, but you have taken it all away from me. This is the red letter moment of my life. If you enjoy the little play, I ask you to remember that its success is due greatly to the people who worked in the dark room and factory, and by the players who had long hours and many discouraging moments, many due to the intolerance of their poor director."

The music was the same as that at the New York premier. The direction here was by Albert Pesce, and the orchestra consisted of forty pieces with a chorus of sixteen. All ushers and floor managers were in costume of the three early periods of "Intolerance."

Society Turns Out to See Picture

This was the first time that Los Angeles society ever gathered for a motion picture, and the attendance of the elite was as great, or greater than at any grand opera first night of the west coast city. Every newspaper had a staff of photographers and society writers present, and William E. Keefe, personal representative of Mr. Griffith, who is entitled to much credit for the society attendance, was the center of a riot on the part of the reporters for exclusive names of Los Angeles society people who were present.

The prominence of the scores of stage celebrities gave the premier a New York first night atmosphere, and to enumerate the celebrities present would almost mean the compilation of the west coast section of another edition of the Motion Picture News Studio Directory.

Harry Carr, in the Los Angeles Times, said in part:

With "Intolerance," David Wark Griffith has made his place secure as one of the towering geniuses of the world.

As a medium for expressing art, moving pictures may not stand the test of time, but "Intolerance" is greater than any medium. It is one of the mile posts on the long road of art, where painting and sculpture and literature and music go jostling eagerly along together.

When Griffith produced the "Clansman," we all felt that the ultimate of motion pictures had been reached. There could be nothing greater or finer. After numerous and frantic attempts, most of the rival producers also decided ruefully that the last word had been spoken with the "Clansman."

It remained for Griffith himself to make the "Clansman" seem poor and shabby and crude. "Intolerance," which was produced at Clune's Auditorium last night for the first time in Los Angeles, makes the "Clansman" look like a fishing smack when a dreadnought sweeps into a harbor, dashing the water in foam from her bow, her great guns scowling and her giant stacks belching volcanoes of smoke. Griffith, the producer of "Intolerance," has pushed Griffith, the producer of the "Clansman," off the map.

Maitland Davies in the Morning Tribune said:

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "Intolerance," better known to the people of Los Angeles as "The Mother and the Law," was presented at Clune's Auditorium last night, and repeated the triumphs it had already scored in New York and San Francisco. An audience that filled every nook and cranny in the theatre was simply swept off its feet, and, at the end of the first act, tendered Mr. Griffith an ovation such as falls to the lot of few men. It was a genuine heartfelt and well earned tribute and it came from every portion of the audience.

There has never been anything presented in the drama, in opera, or on the screen of such tremendous scope, and it would not be possible to present such a story by any other means than the motion picture. It justifies every claim that the believers in the future of the silent drama have made and opens up new vistas, new possibilities, which have heretofore been unthought of.

Otheman Stevens in The Examiner summarized the production as follows:

"Intolerance," the Griffith picture shown last night at Clune's Auditorium, is something that defeats a writer at the start; it is like being told to write a report of Niagara, or a review of the Odyssey, or a pen picture of the battle of the Marne.

All I can do is to repeat the words of the staidest, coldest dramative reviewer in the land; he was never known to use an adjective or to use a sloppy phrase; "one is tempted to use hyperbole," he began his review of this picture.

And one must; this picture is a true epic in motion; for it denudes humanity of its sheltering apparel of bogus virtue and humbug and self-deceit and smug docility to traitorous conventions, and its soul, "your soul," stands naked and convicted before your eyes.

Four Leads with Nance O'Neil in "Greed," a McClure

Elliott Was in Margaret Illington's Company, Northrup Appeared in "The Test," Hickman Is an Irving Player, and Le Guere Was with Metro

A NOTABLE feature of the forthcoming McClure series, "Seven Deadly Sins," is that each McClure star, as she appears in her particular play of the series, is supported by several leading men.

In "Greed," the third play of this series, Nance O'Neil, is acting with Robert Elliott, whose work with Margaret Illington in "Within the Law" helped largely to make that play. Mr. Elliott was the featured lead opposite such well-known legitimate and screen stars as Ethel Barrymore, Alice Brady, Marguerite Snow and Irene Hawley.

The heavy part has been entrusted to the care of Harry Northrup, who was one of the first legitimate stars to recognize the possibilities of the motion picture field. Some of his most recent pictures were "The Test," "The Christian," "My Lady's Slipper" and "The Painted World."

Alfred Hickman, Nance O'Neil's husband, is also in the cast of "Greed." Mr. Hickman began his work with Sir Henry Irving and came to America with Augustin Daly. He played the young Count in Belasco's "The Lily" in which Miss O'Neil achieved her greatest success. He will be remembered for his recent work in "The Witch," "A Woman's Past" and "The Iron Woman." For the past three years Mr. Hickman has been Miss O'Neil's leading man and producer of her plays.

George Le Guere forms the last member of this quartet of actors; his work for Metro, Famous Players, Kleine, Essanay, and on the legitimate stage has made him a favorite with the amusement-loving public.

In "Envy," the first play of the series, the same policy has been pursued. Its star, Ann Murdock, is supported by Lumsden Hare (related to Sir John Hare) an actor who did notable work with Maude Adams when she appeared as Joan of Arc in the Harvard Stadium; Robert Cain, of the famous Drew family, and George Le Guere.

Essanay Releasing Plans Completed Year in Advance

"While They Are in a Way Tentative," Says President Spoor, "There Will Be Little Alteration in Dates of the Features Scheduled for That Period"

PLANS for feature releases on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay program now practically have been completed for a year in advance," said George K. Spoor, president of Essanay. "While these plans are in a way tentative, there will be little alteration except an elasticity in release dates of features scheduled for next year. These will depend on the completion of productions. It is not intended to force releases.

"Features must be completed and pronounced good before definite releases are announced. Quality must always be the main point in view and quantity very secondary. This is one of the reasons for planning so far ahead, so that we may be sure of good productions and yet announce the release dates far enough in advance to be of advantage to exhibitors.

"The schedule provides for approximately forty feature releases during the year. This means three releases a month with the exception of December and probably January, April, July and September, during which months four releases are planned.

"This does not include the release of one and two-reel comedies. There probably will be a number of these presented before long. Essanay is planning in the near future to release the one-reel 'Musty Suffer' comedies on this program. These will harmonize well with features of five or more reels.

"Harry Watson, Jr., is already working on a new line of 'Musty Suffer' comedies and the first will be announced shortly. Comedies by other comedians also are being planned. It is the aim of this service to make it as complete as possible, and while operating strictly on the open booking system, it yet will be possible to book a complete program if desired. This will save the exhibitor the trouble of rushing from one exchange to another to book a complete night's entertainment.

"In stating that the schedule for the year practically is complete, I do not mean that all plays have been decided upon. A tentative schedule of release has been worked out and features booked in far enough ahead so that exhibitors will have every advantage of advance showings and advance advertising on the photoplay he wishes to run.

"Essanay plays practically are completed up to the first of January. This includes five Essanay plays in this new service up to the end of the year. They are 'The Return of Eve,' 'The Prince of Graustark,' 'The Chaperon,' 'The Breaker' and 'The Truant Soul.' The latter play is the only one not yet completed. Henry B. Walthall, who is featured in this play, supported by Mary Charleson, has been at work on this seven-act feature for some time and it will be completed shortly.

"Essanay plays for the first quarter of next year have been mapped out. After that other features will be taken under consideration and booked from time to time, but always far in advance.

Nine Stars a Week from Kalem Through General Film

"I Doubt If the Company Ever Presented a Stronger Program of Pictures Than It Is Offering Now," Says Wright, Who Has Adopted the Policy of "Concentration"

CONTINUING along the lines of the policy of concentration recently declared, the Kalem Company announces that exhibitors booking the four releases issued weekly through the General Film Service are now in a position to present nine widely featured stars to their patrons. George Larkin, True Boardman, Marin Sais, Ollie Kirkby, Helen Gibson, Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch constitute the roster of players, who have for years been featured individually in screen productions and are now found in the Kalem weekly quartette.

In outlining the concentration policy to a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, declared, "We are aiming with all our resources and strength at the exhibitors who complain that they are unable to book short features with stars and advertising value. Nine stars in four productions each week is considerable of an achievement, but we feel that the heavy expenditure is justified by the reception exhibitors are according our productions.

"I doubt if Kalem has ever presented a stronger program of pictures than we are now offering each week. There is the 'Girl from 'Frisco' series, which we have had to extend ten episodes to meet the demand. There is the one-reel 'Grant' series that has already scored a bull's-eye hit. And then there are the 'Ham Comedies' and the 'Hazards of Helen,' two of the most popular releases listed by any manufacturer."

Kalem's list of releases for the week of October 30, presents the nine stars in an unusual variety of subjects. The week starts with the release on Tuesday, October 31, of "The Merry Motor Menders," a "Ham Comedy," in which Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch are the principal fun-makers.

On Wednesday, November 1, Kalem will issue "The Son of Cain," thirteenth episode in "The Girl from 'Frisco," two-reel series. Marin Sais and True Boardman are seen solving a puzzling murder mystery in this release of the series by Robert Welles Ritchie. In one scene of this episode a stage-coach plunges over a two hundred foot cliff, providing a thoroughly stirring thrill.

"The Pencil Clue," third episode of the new "Grant, Police Reporter," series is issued on Friday, November 3. George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby are the stars in this series of one-reel melodramatic "thrillers."

For "The Gate of Death," the "Hazard of Helen" release scheduled for Saturday, November 4, Kalem found it necessary to construct a gigantic "cut-out," a four hundred foot chute down a mountain side and over the railroad tracks. The structure required over three weeks to complete and enough timber to erect a good-sized house. It is used to smashing effect when Helen Gibson, in one of the thrilling scenes of the picture, makes the four hundred foot slide down the monster chute and misses death under the wheels of a train speeding along the track below by a matter of inches.

PATRONS INSISTED ON STAYING FOR THE SECOND SHOWING OF "SHIELDING SHADOW," AND EXHIBITOR LOST MONEY

Business manager Seelye of Pathe was speaking the other day of odd film endorsements and recalled the recent case of a certain backward exhibitor. This exhibitor wrote he was going to cancel "The Shielding Shadow" because it ruined his business the second night he ran it, owing to the fact that all those who came for the first show refused to go out.

They wanted to see the famous octopus over again, and therefore all the people waiting for the second show couldn't get in and were angry at the exhibitor.

Mr. Seelye said, "One of our salesmen suggested that he run this episode over again the next week, together with the succeeding episode, and advertise it big. All he put on in addition to those four reels was a Lonesome Luke comedy and a Pathe News, yet he broke his house record. Now that man thinks it some octopus and he's rooting hard for the 'Shadow.'"

TWO FIVE-PART V-L-S-E FEATURES LOST WHEN LINER IS TORPEDOED

Vitagraph V-L-S-E announces the loss of two five-part feature films, which were destroyed when the liner Stephano was torpedoed off Newfoundland by the German submarine, U-53, recently.

These films, "The Climbers" and "The Badge of Courage," were coming back from the manager of the Nickel theatre in St. Johns, Nova Scotia, when the submersible appeared and ordered the crew and passengers into the boats, then fired the shot that sank the vessel in a few minutes.

Open Booking or the Program—Which?—V

"The Entire Photoplay Booking Proposition Will Eventually Simmer Down to Wide Open Market and Every Screen House Booked by Its Manager," Says Otto Meister, of Vaudette Theatre, Milwaukee—"It Is Impossible to Run a String of Houses and Put in Managers, Not Better Than Head Janitors"

"THE entire photoplay booking proposition will eventually simmer itself down to a wide open market and every photoplay house booked by its own manager," says Otto Meister, manager of the Vaudette theatre, of Milwaukee, Wis., without a doubt the most successful five cent photoplay manager in the country.

Mr. Meister long ago gained fame for himself with his unusual and unique lobby displays, and the views he holds upon the booking situation are equally out of the ordinary.

"It stands to reason," says Mr. Meister, "that no man sitting in a New York or a Chicago office can successfully book a theatre situated anywhere from three hundred to a thousand miles away from him. This is one of the great faults of the photoplay business at the present time. Too many men think that it is possible to open up a string of houses, put each one of them in charge of a man that is little better than a head janitor, and proceed to have them booked from some out-of-town office.

Must Be Run According to Its Own Requirements

"The photoplay business is primarily show business, not dry goods or grocery business, and a theatre cannot be run in the same manner a man could run a string of meat markets. For this reason, I believe that you will find that the photoplay theatres will gradually get back to the proposition of booking in the same manner as does the manager of the combination legitimate houses book his road attractions at the present time. Every so often your house manager should go in to the distributing center and book up his program irrespective of companies or producers, merely looking for something to please his patrons. In this manner he will know exactly what he is getting and knowing his audience from long association, he can't go very far wrong.

"I believe that the day of the long term contract for photoplay productions signed for even before they are produced, is gradually passing and that it will not be long before the producers will be producing and marketing their productions in the same way that the legitimate producer does today.

"In my own case I am playing a certain well known program under a contract that contains a four weeks' cancellation clause. In this manner I can immediately eliminate it if it does not come up to the standard for my audiences. Then I have three serials that I am playing at different times during the week, and these, with whatever I pick up in the open market, constitute my week's bookings.

"Managers must not forget that what is good for one house may be all wrong for the other. In my case, my audiences require sensational stuff and in order that I get business it is necessary that I have plenty of sensational paper; without it the best picture in the world is absolutely valueless. On the other hand, the productions that I play would have little or no value for the high-priced house, which caters to a different class of people.

"I make a specialty of the five cent photoplay fan and for this reason I require a different program than do some of the so-called high class houses. In fact, so unusual is the class of audience that I cater to that I can practically book a picture by looking at the paper. I have very often done this and have never gone wrong. It is for this reason that I am firmly convinced that the open market is an approaching fact and that within the next year or so we will find that the long term contract program is practically a thing of the past."

OPEN BOOKING AND STRONG EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION

The views of Harry Crandall, president of the Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia, and manager of Crandall's theatre, the Savoy, Avenue Grand, and Apollo, will be interesting. The open booking will be an excellent thing for the exhibitor only when and where there is a strong exhibitors' organization, an organization with the combined interests of the exhibitors at heart. Without this strong organization each exhibitor will bid against his competitor for a popular star or picture, which will result in a "cut-throat" existence to the benefit of the producer and the deteriment of the exhibitor.

"On the other hand, with exhibitors working together selecting only stars and productions which will be 'money-getters,' the producers will be compelled to put out consistently good pictures with equally as good players to meet the demands of the exhibitors. The mediocre product will be idle films and wasted material.

"In this way the exhibitors, who are the backbone of the motion picture industry, will, in a measure, control the output of the manufacturer; that is, in quality; and the exhibitor will be surer of his box-office receipts.

"The program, as we have it, with the feature companies with big productions, comedies, scenics and cartoon goes along very well so long as the productions maintain a high standard; but it is being compelled to pay the same price for a mediocre picture wherein the exhibitor almost foresees a financial loss that makes the exhibitor rebel.

"I believe an open booking system will be established in the near future; not the open booking that has already been tried and has only partially succeeded. Some other factors are necessary, and perhaps even these will have to be tried and readjusted to meet requirements.

"A booking system wherein the exhibitor has a large latitude of selecting his productions and selecting them in advance, too; a system wherein the united interests of the exhibitors will play a conspicuous part in its own community will go a long way toward standardizing the industry. Of course, I feel best able to speak on the big features, as it is these with which I have dealing in the large houses under my control."

Success Is Attained by Metro's "Romeo and Juliet"

The Public, Critics and Shakespearian Scholars All Over the Country Are Enthusiastic Over the Vehicle for Talents of Bushman and Beverly Bayne

GREAT success has been attained in all parts of the country by the Metro special feature production "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the title roles. The majority of the critics everywhere it has been shown are enthusiastic in their praise of the production; its splendid lighting effects; its wonderful photography; the gorgeous costumes and elaborate settings and the incomparable acting of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne.

Thousands of letters have been received from Shakespearian scholars commending the film and expressing the belief that "Romeo and Juliet" on the screen as presented by Metro, marks a new era in moving pictures and sets a standard for all producers.

When "Romeo and Juliet" was presented for the first time at the Broadway theatre, New York City, throngs filled the lobby for hours before the doors were opened, and the line from the box office extended for more than a block.

The success attained in New York has been duplicated over the entire country. At the Rialto theatre, Denver, Colo., the presentation was received with such acclaim that the manager booked "Romeo and Juliet" for an indefinite engagement.

In Pittsburgh, at the Schenley theatre, one of the largest houses in the country where moving pictures are shown, the Metro "Romeo and Juliet" played to capacity for an entire week. The manager of the New theatre, Baltimore, Md., saw the picture before it was released and immediately booked it for two weeks where the reports indicate it will be the biggest box office attraction in the history of the theatre.

Reports from the Strand, Washington, D. C.; the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia; the Alcazar, Chattanooga, Tenn.; the Trianon theatre, Birmingham, Ala.; Palace, Des Moines; Regent theatre, Indianapolis; Alhambra, Toledo, and the Walnut Street theatre, Cincinnati, indicate tremendous business and unstinted praise. At the latter theatre after the first showing the picture was booked for a sesond week.

The same condition prevails in the smaller cities where the film has been presented and the demands for booking are pouring in daily to the Metro exchanges.

JUANITA HANSEN BECOMES TRIANGLE STAR ON FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH

Juanita Hansen is the latest addition to the Triangle-Mack Sennett-Keystone studios. Miss Hansen signed her contract Friday, the 13th of October, and declares that unlucky days and dates mean nothing in her life.

The pretty golden haired, blue eyed Juanita received her first comedy experience under the direction of Mack Sennett and has been engaged to appear in a series of light comedies.

She has resided in Los Angeles most of her life and entered the moving picture field about two years ago. Her last picture before going to the Keystone studios was "The Secret of the Submarine," a serial in which she played the leading role.

Juanita Hansen (Triangle-Keystone)

Miss Hansen will head a company directed by Harry Williams, the well known song writer, who received his initial experience in the scenario department of the Keystone plant. Of late Mr. Williams has been co-directing with William Campbell in the company headed by Chester Conklin.

Playing across from Miss Hansen in the light comedies will be Lew Cody, who has been appearing in the Mabel Normand picture, now nearing completion.

BUFFALO UNICORN MOVES

Chas. H. Barolet, manager of the Syracuse branch of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, announces that the Buffalo headquarters of the company has moved from the third floor of 39 Erie street, to 23 West Swan street. The new headquarters are in the heart of the film district, and elaborately designed to meet the requirements of visiting exhibitors.

The fact that the Buffalo headquarters is now on the ground floor of the new building is an added convenience, as most of the other exchanges in Buffalo are "walk-ups." Harry Sonnerville, known to practically everyone in the industry, will be in charge of the headquarters. Mr. Sonnerville has been an exhibitor himself.

Best Houses Book Pathe Florence Rose Fashion Films

Reports from the Thirty Exchanges of the Company Indicate an Increasing Demand for These Pictures—The Strand, New York, Is Among Theatres Using Them

Some of the Stunning Gowns as Shown in No. 6 of Pathe's "Florence Rose Fashions"

PATHE'S Florence Rose fashion pictures, showing what the women will wear this winter, are being booked in the best houses of the country. Reports from Pathe's thirty offices show an increasing demand for these pictures on the part of all exhibitors. In New York, they are being shown at the Strand theatre among a number.

Manager Shurtleff of the Cleveland Exchange has just closed the Metropolitan, one of the finest houses in Cleveland on these fashion pictures.

Manager C. S. Edwards in St. Louis is also achieving great success with them and reports that it is only necessary for exhibitors to see them to recognize the difference between them and any other fashion pictures heretofore released.

Miss Florence Rose, the fashion expert, who originated the new idea of fashion films, is greatly gratified at these reports. "I spent a year on this proposition," she said, "and in my trips about the country I met many exhibitors. After having talked to them I was confident that I was on the right track.

"Our pictures are made by people who understand the problems of the exhibitor and of the woman who wants to be well-dressed.

"We are proving every day that we are carrying out our ideals."

What the women will wear this winter is shown in the Florence Rose pictures. In the sixth release, there are many dainty dresses of chiffon and crepe de chene. Morning dresses in serge with an unusual combination of satin. Luncheon frocks particularly remarkable for the original way in which fur is introduced. Dressy afternoon hats, a beautiful wedding gown showing many new features originated by Miss Florence Rose.

Volume 4, shows Betty and her school chums and Volume 5, shows Betty and the bride selecting costumes for the wedding day.

J. E. Brady Closes Deal for Material for Use by "V"

One Is Purchase of Screen Rights to "Arsene Lupin," as Dramatized by Paul Potter—Earle Williams Is Picked for the Lead—"Apartment 29" Also Bought

SOME notable releases are coming from Vitagraph in the next six months in addition to those recently announced in the list of newly acquired plays. Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, scenario editor, has just closed deals for several more high-quality film subjects.

One purchase is the film rights to "Arsene Lupin," as dramatized by Paul Potter. This deal takes over the Frohman rights for the screen. The lead chosen for this production is Earle Williams, who has just finished a Blue Ribbon feature as a James Oliver Curwood hero.

Another play just purchased for Mr. Williams is "Apartment 29," an original scenario by Edward J. Montagne of the Vitagraph staff, author of many successes.

A success of the stage, "The Hawk," has also been acquired. This is the play by Frances de Croisset, in which William Faversham made a Broadway sensation and played it with extended success.

This does not conclude the bag brought home by Col. Brady in his gunning for big game. Two plays by Rufus Steele, the brilliant Pacific Coast author, have been obtained. One is "The Simpson Sapphire," a mystery story with a romantic element. The other is "The Pretender," a Reno divorce story in comedy-drama form that will present the divorce question with a new twist. Mr. Steele is the author of the screen success of three years ago, "Rule G." Other announcements of importance are likely soon to emanate.

LESTER CUNEO AND LILLIAN HAYWARD HEAD CAST FOR "PIDGIN ISLAND"

Lester Cuneo and Lillian Hayward head the supporting cast by Producer Fred J. Balshofer to appear with Harold Lockwood and May Allison in their new Metro-Yorke starring vehicle "Pidgin Island," from the book by Harold MacGrath, celebrated for his many fiction successes.

Philip Gastrock of "The Fall of a Nation" fame, plays a prominent part and Elizah Zerr, who played with Ida Schnall in "Undine," is cast for the part of Harold Lockwood's fishing guide. Unusual care is being exercised by Fred J. Balshofer in the selection of the cast.

R. E. TAYLOR ARRESTED BY TORONTO POLICE

Toronto, Oct. 28.

"Motion-picture director from New York, organizing new picture company in Toronto, wants clever individuals—amateurs—to work in pictures immediately."

An investigation by the police of the above advertisement, which appeared in an evening paper last week, has resulted in the arrest of one R. E. Taylor of Chicago, alias T. R. E. Woodward of New York, on a charge of fraud. Detectives Levitt and Taylor have arrested the man and it is their allegation that they have exposed a "flim-flam" game which has depended for its success upon the desire which lurks in the hearts of many business girls to become artists of the screen.

Taylor's plan, it is alleged, was to hire a room in a downtown hotel and then invite all applicants for the positions to meet him there. He would then demand a retaining fee of six dollars, the police say, to insure the sincerity of the applicant, and for this he would give a typewritten contract agreeing to pay from three dollars to five dollars per day and giving a date some time in the future stating when the applicant was to report for duty.

Among the articles found in his possession were prospectuses of the company stating that it was capitalized at a million dollars, and was known as the Dominion Films, Limited.

H. B. WARNER JOINS McCLURE

McClure Publications announces that H. B. Warner, who has recently finished six pictures on the West Coast for the Triangle Film Corporation, has signed a contract to appear in McClure Pictures, and will be the star of "Wrath," one of the series of seven five-reel feature plays McClure Publications will soon release under the title, "Seven Deadly Sins."

H. B. Warner, newest of the McClure stars, is the son of Charles Warner, the great English actor, whose powerful acting left a lasting impression on the American theatre-going public.

H. B. Warner's greatest stage success was as Jimmy Valentine in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." His work is well known to the motion picture public, for he has appeared in "The Raiders," "The Market of Vain Desire," "Shell 43" and "The Vagabond Prince."

Mr. Warner is the fifth eminent star to join the McClure forces.

Rita Stanwood, Mr. Warner's wife, will play opposite him in "Wrath."

"A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS," WITH HELEN HOLMES, OPENS IN CHIEF CITIES

In many theatres of the country, Helen Holmes' new fifteen-chapter thrill picture, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," released by Signal, had its first-chapter showing Monday of the week of October 23, and managers report it was given "a critical and flattering reception." The Pantages Circuit of vaudeville and moving picture houses opened its new Minneapolis theatre, Saturday, October 28 with "A Lass of the Lumberlands."

Ralph W. Ince Leaves Vitagraph to "Go on His Own"

Director Who Was with the Company for Over Ten Years Plans Novel Screen Attractions, with Lucille Lee Stewart and Huntly Gordon as Stars

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made of the retirement of Ralph W. Ince from his post as producing director of the Vitagraph Company of America, and his intention to form, at once, a company of his own, in order to carry out some plans which he has long had under consideration.

Ralph W. Ince

With Mr. Ince will go Lucille Lee Stewart and Huntly Gordon, who will lead the new company and share the starring privileges of future "R. W. I." productions.

There has (Mr. Ince emphatically declares) been no change whatever in the pleasant relations which have always existed between the Vitagraph Company and himself. The cause of the dissolution is merely the latter's desire "to go it alone," and to attempt some novelties which were not quite in line with the policy of the big Brooklyn concern.

Mr. Ince is leaving his "mother company" after many mutual expressions of appreciation for the past and good wishes for the future.

For a matter of ten years or so the retiring producer-director has been with the Flatbush organization, half of which he has spent in the supervision of productions and the development of performers.

Mr. Ince is still a young man having been born in 1887, in Boston. Both of his parents were stage folk and he himself has done some noteworthy character studies, among them one of Abraham Lincoln (before the camera) which was particularly well received. He also served a stage apprenticeship in the company of the late Richard Mansfield, and was also in the original production of "Ben Hur" and "The College Widow."

He produced the first three and the first five-reel pictures put out by the Vitagraph Company. When Mr. Ince first commenced work for this company a three-reel film was unknown, and much credit for the advanced development of the industry is attributed to him.

Mr. Ince announces that he has several surprises in the silent drama, some of which will shortly appear at leading American theatres.

Frank McIntyre in "The Traveling Salesman" for Famous

Star of the Comedy Success on the Speaking Stage Is Remembered for His Triumphs in "Captain Malley," "A Poor Man," "My Wife's Husband" and "Major Andre"

BY an arrangement effected last week, Frank McIntyre, the celebrated comedian, will make his debut on the screen under the auspices of the Famous Players Film company, in a picturization of his greatest stage success, "The Traveling Salesman," by James Forbes.

This typical American comedy created a sensation during its engagement at the Liberty theatre, New York, a few years ago, when under the management of the late Henry B. Harris, Mr. McIntyre's interpretaion of the funny drummer was received as one of the most humorous character creations ever contributed to the stage.

Mr. McIntyre has had an interesting stage history, having traversed all the theatrical paths that lead to stardom, including stock and one night stand engagements in the earlier years of his career. After his success in "The Traveling Salesman" he toured the country with it, repeating his metropolitan hit in all the cities, towns and hamlets in which he had formerly appeared under far more trying circumstances as a struggling artist. Among the plays in which he has won personal triumphs are, "Captain Malley," "A Poor Man," "My Wife's Husband," "Major Andre," and "The Hat Salesman."

As in his equally famous play "The Chorus Lady," James Forbes succeeded in "The Traveling Salesman" in holding a faithful mirror to natural types. For the human material of his excrutiating comedy he selected a quartette of traveling salesmen and the natives of a one horse railroad town in the interior of Indiana. And then he has woven around two of these widely diversified characters a little love story so true and sweet that every audience that has watched the play has loved these lovers almost as much as the lovers loved each other.

The plot, in brief, has to do with the romance which develops from the first meeting of the traveling salesman and the girlish telephone operator at Grand Crossing. The girl has some property that two schemers plan to get away from her by bidding for it when it is up for sale for taxes. The traveling salesman learns of the plot, foils it and finally wins out after undergoing all the conditions of misery because the girl mistrusts and believes in her enemies.

This photoplay comedy will appear on the Paramount program during the next few weeks.

"Hazards of Helen" Enters Its Third Year

Kalem Starts Another Company in the Production of the One Hundred and Fifth Episode of One-Reel Railroad Series—No Release Skipped

NOVEMBER is being celebrated at the Kalem studio in Hollywood, California, as the second birthday of the "Hazards of Helen." For this month the company starts work on the production of the one hundred and fifth episode of the one-reel railroad series, and takes the first step on its third year of life.

"Starting the third year and going stronger than ever. Do you know of any other photoplay series that can approach such a record?" asked William Wright of a NEWS representative last week. "A single reel release every week for a hundred and four weeks is the mark reached by the 'Hazards' this month. Not a release has been skipped.

"You might expect that after a long run like that the popularity of a series would begin to wane, but of the hundreds of letters which Kalem receives every week from exhibitors on all sorts of business scarcely any one ever fails to insert a word of praise for the Helen Gibson pictures. Here is a letter right before me on my desk that has just been forwarded from the San Francisco office of the General Film. It is from W. F. Sheibley, of the Star theatre, Reedley, California, and he says, 'I notice that for this week you have not sent me a 'Hazard of Helen.' Can understand that you did not have one available owing to my doubling up, but please do not omit Helen Gibson again, for my show is not complete without her.'

"With dozens of letters like that coming every few days can you wonder that we look upon the 'Hazards' as a perennial feature? Such success is only the result of continuous concentrated effort at keeping at a high quality level, for if we had set back on our laurels at any time after the series established its popularity we would not now be starting the third year with such bright prospects."

Kalem's celebration of the second "Hazards" birthday is taking concrete form in the expenditure of close to $30,000 on elaborate additions to the Salt Lake Railway studio-station and the purchase of much additional railroad equipment. Interiors are being taken now in the actual station so that through the windows the activity of the railroad yards may be seen.

Helen Gibson declares that her part in the celebration will consist of crowding as many thrills as possible into the second anniversary month. "I started with 'The Lone Point Mystery,'" she says. "For in that episode which will be released November 11, there is not one big thrill but three. The first comes when I am run down by a runaway box car and, grabbing the brake beam, swing under the car as it drags me along. The second finds me helpless before an oncoming express train. I fall into a culvert between the railroad ties just in the nick of time, and then have to stay there while the director takes close-ups of the train whizzing along above me. And then for good measure I have to jump from the pilot of a speeding train to an automobile. If that isn't celebrating I'd like to know what is."

Fox Intends to Make People Laugh as Well as Weep

Lehrmann, the L-Ko Comedy Man, Is on His Way to Los Angeles to Engage Actors and Directors for Anti-Grouch Pictures

AFTER making a thorough canvass of the field and preparing a comprehensive plan of work, William Fox has decided to produce comedies in addition to his other photodramas.

Details have been carefully mapped out for this newest branch of the Fox Film Corporation's activities, and the project will be developed rapidly.

The comedies will be released to moving picture exhibitors on the regular Fox program.

Henry R. Lehrmann, former president and supervising director of the L-Ko Comedies, has already gone to Los Angeles to negotiate with actors, directors and a large corps of technical workers for this purpose. He left for the West Coast immediately after a protracted conference with Mr. Fox and General Manager W. R. Sheehan.

William Fox intends that this important addition to his organization shall become as strong immediately upon its inception, as the firmly based dramatic release each week.

Mr. Fox is also determined that the comedies made by Mr. Lehrmann and other members of a highly competent and well-trained directorial staff, shall take rank at once as among the very best producible, in story, in acting, in photography.

To this end, Mr. Lehrmann has been instructed to engage scores of the silent drama's best known and most capable photoplayers in the laugh-making films.

"I can assure exhibitors and motion picturegoers everywhere," Mr. Fox said, "that the comedies will set a new mark in the field. Each of the manuscripts which I have already selected for screening is literally a mine of laughs, and I will not release a single comedy which does not show clearly that it is an uproarious success."

Mr. Lehrmann himself is a noted figure in the photoplay. He began his screen career as an extra with one of the pioneer companies in the new art and soon rose to a directorship with Kinemacolor. With two others, he organized the L-Ko Company.

He has written dozens of scenarios. A few of his productions are "Love and Surgery," "September Morn," and "After a Million."

EDWARDS DEVELOPING PLANT DESTROYED BY FIRE

The developing plant of J. T. Edwards on Webster street, Alameda, Cal., was destroyed recently with a loss of $6,500. No one was in the film room when the blaze started and it is not known how it originated. The building is a brick structure and was formerly used as a car barn.

CAST OF WELL-KNOWN PLAYERS WILL BE SEEN IN THANHOUSER'S "KING LEAR"

Edwin Thanhouser has announced the cast that will support Frederick Warde in the Thanhouser production of "King Lear" that will be released through the Pathe exchanges on December 17. Every effort was made by Mr. Thanhouser, Mr. Warde and Ernest Warde, his son, who directed the production, to make "King Lear," a notable Shakespearian event.

J. H. Gilmour, who plays the Earl of Kent, is a famous Shakespearian actor whose early career—as did Mr. Warde's—included engagements in Shakespearian productions of Edmund Booth and Lawrence Barrett.

Ernest Warde, the director, is the King's Fool, a part he played with his father on the speaking stage.

These three men, lovers of Shakespeare, scholars who understood every detail of "King Lear" were the leaders in the task of seeing that the Thanhouser production was just the sort of a play Shakespeare himself would want it to be. They made it Shakespeare's "King Lear," not a modern version of the play.

The remainder of the cast includes Ina Hammer as Goneril, Wayne Arey as the Duke of Albany, Edith Diestal as Ragan, Charles Brooks as the Duke of Cornwall, Lorraine Huling as Cordelia, Boyd Marshall as the King of France, Hector Dion as Edmund, Edwin Stanley as Edgar and Robert Whittier as Oswald.

ROBERT WARWICK DENIES INTERVIEW IN THEATRICAL PAPER

Robert Warwick wishes to deny the remarks attributed to him in an article recently published in a certain theatrical paper, and states that he has not been interviewed by the representative of any paper for at least six months.

He further states that while there may have been some slight misunderstandings at times in regard to his work at the World Film studios—as happen frequently in any studio—he holds in the highest esteem, William A. Brady and the other officials of the World Film Corporation, as well as all the players with whom he comes in contact at the studio, and further flatly denies having walked out of a picture at any time, as alleged.

Mr. Warwick also desires to make it plain to every one in the industry that he entertains only the most sincere feelings toward all his associates and co-workers.

SLADDIN ON FOUR-WEEK TRIP FOR CONSOLIDATED

S. G. Sladdin, general representative of the Consolidated Film Corporation, presenting "The Crimson Stain Mystery," left New York last week for Chicago as his first stop on a four-week tour of the United States, in the interests of Consolidated Film Corporation and "The Crimson Stain Mystery."

Mr. Sladdin's itinerary includes Chicago, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Kansas City, Louisville, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Dallas, Chattanooga, etc.

Arthur M. Brilant is acting director of publicity.

"CIVILIZATION" SOLD FOR GREATER NEW YORK TO NATHAN HIRSH

"Civilization" territory is gradually being disposed of. Greater New York has been acquired by Nathan Hirsh of 130 West 46th street, New York, who has formed the Civilization Feature Company for the purpose of exploiting the picture in the territory of greater New York, all of Long Island and the upper section of Westchester County, as far as White Plains.

Ten prints of "Civilization" go with the Greater New York rights, and more will be released if necessary.

Nathan Hirsh, the general manager of the Civilization Feature Company is well-known to exhibitors as president of the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation.

ARPER FURNISHES COMEDY RELIEF IN "PASSION FLOWER"

In an announcement of the cast that plays important roles in "The Passion Flower," the most recently completed Michelena feature, the California Motion Picture Corporation, advises that the comedy relief for the seven-part picture is largely furnished by Clarence Arper, the Colonel Starbottle of "Salomy Jane."

Chief support to Beatriz Michelena in this production is furnished by Andrew Robson, William Pike and Albert Morrison, of which trio the first two also appeared with her in "Salomy Jane," as Yuba Bill, the stage driver, and Red Pete, the stage robber, respectively.

Other members of the cast receiving prominent mention are James Leslie, D. Mitsoras and Irene Outrim.

THRILLING AUTO ACCIDENT FILMED FOR "REDEEMING LOVE"

For "Redeeming Love," a forthcoming Morosco-Paramount feature a thrilling automobile accident was filmed at Long Beach, Cal. The automobile containing Thomas Holding and "Daredevil" Thompson, was run over a high bluff into the Pacific below. Several thousand persons were on hand to witness the daring feat, which will have a prominent place in the feature in which Kathlyn Williams is star.

Gardner Hunting, who collaborated on the scenario for "Redeeming Love" with L. V. Jefferson, was an eye witness of the thrill, describing it as the most daring and realistic piece of daredeviltry he had ever seen. The scene depicted the two men fighting in the automobile when it went over the bluff.

Famous Players $100,000 Script Offer Comes to a Close

"While We Do Not Feel Obligated to Pay $1,000 for All Stories Accepted in Future," Says Lasky, "We Will Remunerate Authors According to Value of a Story"

THE $100,000 offer for one hundred suitable scripts, at the rate of $1,000 for thousand word synopsis, the announcement of which was made by the Famous Players Film Company last July, was terminated by the acceptance of the hundredth script last Monday.

In commenting upon the success of the offer, Adolph Zukor, under whose personal auspices this unusual attempt was made to induce the most important writers of the country to devote their ideas to the screen, said:

"The cries of a dearth of screen material which have arisen from various photoplay producers for the past two years are now entirely hushed by the amazing response to the Famous Players' $1,000 offer, and the pessimistic belief that screen plots had been utterly exhausted is exploded by the interesting, novel and well-constructed themes which have been received.

"We are justified in believing, from the thousands of scripts submitted, and the prominent authors who have manifested an interest in the offer, that the foremost authors of the day are now giving serious thought to the screen, and that this new form of dramatic expression is considered by them to be a sufficiently important medium of communication with the public to receive their first and best efforts."

This statement was accompanied by one from Jesse L. Lasky, who since the formation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation had had direct supervision of the producing departments of both companies. Mr. Lasky explains that while the hundred scripts will furnish a plentitude and variety of material for some time to come, the companies are anxious to receive more photoplays which reach the standard of their output. The statement follows:

"Due to the recent combination of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, we now require more screen material than ever to fill the producing requirements of these four concerns.

"While we do not feel obligated to pay $1,000 for all stories accepted in the future under the Famous Players offer or, $1,500 which is the maximum amount in the Oliver Morosco offer for scenarios, we will in every case remunerate the author in a degree entirely commensurate with the value of his work, and if unusual or extraordinary plots are submitted, will pay more than the above mentioned sums as cheerfully as did the Famous Players for the hundred $1,000 scripts sought through its offer.

"Hector Turnbull, the head of the scenario department of these companies, is sincere in his desire to co-operate with novelists, short story writers or dramatic authors who have not yet become associated with the motion picture, and will be glad to indicate to them the artistic and financial opportunities for creative work on the screen."

World Film Directors Working Simultaneously on Three Plays

They Are "A Law Unto Herself," "The Parasites," and "The Bondage of Fear"—Last Picture Will Star Robert Warwick, with Gail Kane in Opposite Role

IN addition to the list of picture plays already published, to be released between the present time and the end of May, 1917, the World Film Corporation's production directors are actively at work upon three dramas simultaneously. These are "A Law Unto Herself," with Travers Vale in charge, "The Parasites," directed by Harley Knoles and "The Bondage of Fear," which is being "put on" by Harry Davenport:

In the last mentioned piece, Robert Warwick is the star, with Gail Kane in the opposite role. In "A Law Unto Herself," the cast is headed by Ethel Clayton and includes Arthur Ashley, John Bowers, Montagu Love, Edward Kimball and others. Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Muriel Ostriche, Charlotte Granville and Henry Hull are acting the big roles in "The Parasites."

"Frou, Frou," the last of the World-Brady plays previously bulletined, is completed, under the direction of Emile Chautard. Alice Brady is the star, and the support embraces Gerda Holmes, George McQuarrie, Edward Langford and Alec B. Francis.

This drama was a very great success when produced on the speaking stage by the late Augustin Daly.

It will be released May 29, and the entire schedule will be maintained as officially announced three weeks ago.

RICKSECKER WINS AGAINST CENSORS

T. L. Ricksecker, an exhibitor in Rosedale, Kan., has won his case in the district court of Wyandotte county, being vindicated by a jury of the charge of running a picture that had not received the eliminations ordered by the Kansas board of censors. The judge's instructions to the jury were that if the jury was satisfied that the film had the stamp of the censors, Mr. Ricksecker could not be held responsible for any variation in it from the orders of the censors.

The picture was shown to the jurors, and they could see that the stamp was there in its proper place. They could see too that the smoking complained of by the Parent Teachers Association of Rosedale was not extended—Theda Bara, in this picture, "The Trail of the Tigress," having been reduced to the limited display of clouds of smoke waving over her turned head. Carrie Simpson, a member of the board, testified that the picture complied fairly well with her recollection of eliminations ordered.

Mr. Ricksecker would have had to pay a fine of twenty-five dollars if convicted of running a picture that did not comply with the board's instructions as to eliminations. The judge's instructions, however, and the verdict, rather leave a further responsibility on the board to see that the films, after they have been censored, have been made to comply with the orders given. At present the board does not reinspect the pictures after censoring, but it is supposed to retain the parts ordered eliminated.

RECOMMENDS PICTURES IN SCHOOLS

Motion pictures in the Sunday schools to counteract the influence of the motion picture theatres was recommended by the Rev. Charles M. Fillmore of Indianapolis, Ind., in an address before three thousand delegates to the national convention of the Disciples of Christ held in Des Moines recently. This convention was attended by persons from all parts of the United States, and the Rev. Fillmore's talk was listened to with eagerness. He is the author of "Tell Mother I'll Be There" and other gospel songs.

"Nothing else is drawing the people, boys and girls, as well as women, like the motion picture shows," said this noted preacher. "No doubt most of the pictures are far from elevating. Has the time not come for the Bible schools to use this wonderfully attractive agency for educating and ennobling the people, and not leave it to be used by the devil as a means of drawing the people away from the church?"

Increased Admission Price Seems Certain in San Francisco Territory—"Public Prepared," Says Exhibitor

THE increased rentals now being charged for feature productions of merit, together with the higher cost of conducting motion picture entertainments, are serving to bring about a condition whereby there will have to be an increase in the admission prices charged by the downtown houses of San Francisco.

This is the opinion of several leading exhibitors and they make the prediction that it will not be long before some of the larger houses will break away from the long established policy of ten and twenty cents. About a year ago the five cent houses doubled their prices and there are but few nickel places now in operation in what is considered the business district. A number of small houses, such as the Odeon, the Unique and the Edison are successfully operating near the large houses at ten cents, and, as a rule offer shorter programs than the larger places.

Exhibitors who have made trips to other large cities recently, declare that theatre goers of San Francisco secure more value for their money than those of any other large city in California. They point out that in Los Angeles fifteen and twenty-five cents are the regular prices at a number of houses and that many theatres have adopted the policy of advancing prices to meet the increased cost of some of the large features now being put on the market.

The recent conferences on this question on the part of exhibitors there is expected to bear fruit shortly, especially since the new St. Francis theatre has met with such a flattering success at advanced prices. Any further advances in the cost of film rental is certain to bring about a change in this line.

"The public is prepared for an advance in theatre admission prices," said a leading exhibitor recently, "and higher prices would probably not affect the attendance of the downtown houses materially. Everything else has gone up, from food to clothing, and the high cost of film production has been widely aired in the press. The wonderful improvement in the quality of moving pictures during the past two years, together with the betterment of the musical programs offered, is so noticeable that our patrons freely comment upon it. Just at present the Columbia theatre cannot accommodate those who desire to see "Intolerance" and the seventy-five cent and dollar seats are the ones mostly in demand. This illustrates the fact that a quality production can get the money. Residence houses are not in line for an increase in prices, as here a higher schedule would probably mean a falling off in attendance."

Exhibitors' League of Cleveland Continue Discussion of Relation of the Exhibitor to the Musicians' Protective Association

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Cleveland, held its regular meeting last week, and continued to discuss the relation of the exhibitor to the musicians' protective organization. It was decided to do nothing definite until a decision has been rendered upon the three cases that President Benjamin Sawyer and Lawyer Ernest Schwartz have taken into court.

The first case has to do with the passing of fire cards in front of the Lucier theatre; the second relates to the Milo theatre, where the owner of the theatre, who has an operator's license was prevented from operating his own machine, by the operators' union, and where his partner was restrained from placing rolls in his musical instrument; the third case is the Erie theatre, where union musicians demand that they be employed regardless of the fact that the investment in the theatre does not justify the expense of paying union wages.

Mr. Sawyer was most emphatic in his address to the league, pointing out the fact that these are labor troubles different from any that have ever been brought into court before. "They do not deal with the question of which of two labor branches shall work on a particular job," he said. "They deal only with the vital principle of liberty in conducting one's own business without outside interference."

The league members showed a strong feeling of unity, and one member even went so far as to openly pledge himself to an agreement to protect his nearest competitor by opposing any forces that might injure either of them. He was rightfully applauded.

Edward Warren, formerly director of the Solax Company was present at the meeting and made a few remarks before the adjournment. He commended the necessity of all working together for a principle, giving an example in his own career when he demonstrated the fact that only in unity is there strength.

PICTURES MAINTAIN POPULARITY IN BUFFALO, N. Y.

Motion pictures as a popular form of entertainment in Buffalo, N. Y., are most certainly not on the wane. Never before in the history of film theatres there have the audiences been so large, the programs so good and the interest so warm. There is not an up-to-date theatre in Buffalo that is not enjoying excellent patronage, while in the larger downtown houses, capacity is usually the rule.

Whether this is due to the fact that everybody is working and has some extra money for amusement or whether they just decide to do without things to see pictures is only conjectural, but nevertheless the fact remains that Buffalo film houses are enjoying a season of remarkable prosperity. In turn the theatres are spending more in publicity, much of which is being placed on the dramatic pages of the daily and Sunday newspapers. Here folks are told of the "wonderful attractions" at the various theatres in liberal "write-ups," which are given the theatres in return for their advertising. Theatres that advertise are reaping the harvest. Those that do not are being forgotten, because those who go to motion picture theatres do not want to "take a chance" on whether the show is good or not. That was necessary at one time in Buffalo, but not now.

The Nickel Theatre in the Middle West Is Fast Disappearing; Ten and Twenty Cents Now for Admission

THE nickel theatre is past tense in the middle west. One by one, during the last two years, they have disappeared until the universal charge of admission is ten cents, with fifteen cents on feature nights. Here and there a sturdy exhibitor is charging ten and twenty cents, and occasionally a pioneer asks twenty-five cents for the privilege of seeing his show.

Middle western authorities give several reasons. Better and higher priced films; better and more progressive theatres and exhibitors; a more exacting public; general prosperity.

In the city some houses maintain a regular ten and twenty-cent standard, asking the higher prices for the more choice seats. These choice seats are in boxes with more comfortable chairs, or in a section from which the very best view of the screen is obtainable. The Strand, Omaha, asks twenty cents for the seats downstairs, and ten cents for those upstairs. The Empress has the reserved seat plan, and the Sun will have the choice seat scheme, charging twenty cents for the central section seats.

Of the small town theatres, every one has at least one feature night. These are called "World Nights," "Chaplin Nights," "Pathe Nights," or some other kind of a night. Invariably the price is at least fifteen cents on these feature nights. Some houses have as many as three feature nights a week. The few nickel houses remaining raise the price to ten cents on feature nights.

"Bluebird exhibitors invariably charge at least fifteen cents on the night a feature film is shown," says Manager Calvert. "In the smaller towns everybody, it seems, knows just what will be the admission charge for this or that night at the theatre."

L. A. Getzler, manager of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, has very decided ideas about the class of show and the price of admission for suburban houses. Mr. Getzler's ideas are the result of experience. Once he took a theatre in a town of 1,500 people and made $4,000 in one year out of it. Then he took a house in a city of 20,000, broke even the first week, was making $150 a week within a month and then went into the exchange business. He has established exchanges from Maine to Georgia in the east and is now absorbing in experience from the middle west.

"The public is getting to know the releases as well as some of the exhibitors," he declared, "and still a suburban exhibitor will take some old, worn out naturally inferior production and try to do a big business with it. He attracts a progressive motion picture patron with his advertising. The patron comes and sees a picture released months before, and he goes away disappointed.

"I can't afford to buy better pictures," the exhibitor will say. To which there is only one answer: He has got to raise his price of admission.

"Why shouldn't he reap the cream of the business, showing the best pictures and charging the best prices? Nobody has to set aside a whole evening to attend his show, as they would if they went downtown. They don't have to dress up. And they don't have to pay the carfare which, for a family of five people, amounts up. Why doesn't the suburban exhibitor realize this and quit showing old, inferior films?"

R. C. Cropper, exchange manager for the Universal in the middle west, headquarters in Kansas City, expressed a similar opinion when interviewed by a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative in Omaha. "The cost of operation has tripled," he declared, "and the exhibitor's only answer is an increase in business and higher prices. I find a general increase in admission prices all over the middle west. And I find a big improvement in the personnel of the exhibitors and the general class of the motion picture theatres."

The Omaha Screen Club members, while not taking definite action, are strong exponents of higher class films and theatres, and higher admissions. One exhibitor declared that before it will be on the strong, firm foundation on which it will stand permanently, the motion picture theatre must charge an admission of twenty-five cents, and show such pictures that the patron will go away highly pleased with what he saw for his money.

Special Meeting of Miami Valley League Brings Out Large Number of Exhibitors

A SPECIAL meeting of The Miami Valley (Ohio) Exhibitors' League, held Monday, October 23, was largely attended by exhibitors of the Miami Valley and Cincinnati Film Exchangemen.

Stephen T. Maloney, secretary of the Personal Liberty League of Dayton, Ohio, whose knowledge as an organizer is one of many years' experience, made a strong appeal for organization. He explained how the plans and policies of organization can be more effectively applied by the maintenance of certain regulations with which all must comply.

H. Serkowitch, manager of the trade expansion department of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, and secretary of the Cincinnati Screen Club, advised co-operation and affiliation with the various business associations to the end that the moving picture men's business may have the support of the most substantial element of the community.

A brief talk was made by Charles Weigel, president of the Cincinnati Screen Club, who encouraged close association between the exhibitor and exchangeman, and emphasized the importance of close relation and co-operation between them.

Geo. F. Burba, editor of the Dayton Daily News, who was secretary to the Hon. James M. Cox when the latter was governor, spoke briefly of the passage of the Ohio Moving Picture Censorship Law. Mr. Burba made it plain that throughout the discussions pretaining to the bill, and its subsequent passage, Governor Cox was friendly to the moving picture exhibitors, and consulted many of them before the bill was signed.

It was pointed out that when the bill was pending in the legislature that there was a number of censorship bills pending in the municipal councils, and that the passage of the state law prevented the enactment of a number of local laws that would have greatly hampered the moving picture interests of the state.

Mr. Burba's speech was not partisan, he did not mention partisan politics. But when he had finished it was evident to all of the moving picture men present that Ex-Governor Cox, whom he served as secretary, was always a friend of the moving picture men, and that he did much to conserve their interests.

At the conclusion of Mr. Burba's talk there was a general discussion of existing conditions. Many good suggestions were offered and valuable points were brought out, which were very instructive and could be carried out by co-operation to the benefit of all engaged or indirectly associated with the moving picture show interests.

The meeting was a success, pointing to enrollment of the name of every exhibitor in the Miami Valley.

League in Minneapolis Plans to Form Its Own Censor Board

IF the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Minneapolis succeeds in establishing its own form of censorship, a system, entirely new and original, the accomplishment will stand out as unique among the attainments in the film field.

The association proposes to conduct its own censorship with its own board and consider fairly and impartially every complaint that is made by the regular patrons of motion picture theatres. Where a reasonable number of complaints are received regarding a portion of a picture or an entire picture, the association plans such a censorship that the objectionable matter will be promptly eliminated.

The association is in fact willing to allow the public to judge any film that is shown in any theatre in Minneapolis. To the person familiar with the motion picture business in Minneapolis this means that the exhibitors have confidence in the films that are released in Minneapolis and further that they have confidence in the sound judgment of the entire theatre-going public.

The fight has begun in earnest and whether the system is established under the present city administration or under another, the exhibitors are determined to put it through. It is hardly to be expected that Mayor Wallace G. Nye, who created the unofficial and volunteer censor board, will consent to let the exhibitors and exchange men do their own censoring but the fight will go on under the next administration.

In support of their contention that the exhibitors and film men will treat the public squarely the association members argue that every man who handles films in theatres or exchanges has the best interests of the city and the business at heart. They say that they depend on the good will of the public for success and can not afford to trifle with so serious a matter as public morals even if there were no consideration other than finance.

In the meantime the exhibitors through the screen as a medium are asking the patrons to tell what they think about it. On the screens between films the following pertinent question may be read in most of the theatres:

"Do you believe in a censor board? What films or parts of films do you think you ought not to see? Tell the manager."

The results have not yet been announced but a compilation of answers will soon be in the hands of William Koenig, Gayety theatre, secretary of the association.

What is the censor board doing? It is working night and day with aldermen and prospective legislators to insure a statewide censor law. Both sides have a good stiff fight ahead.

THEATRE MANAGER GETS COMMITTEE APPOINTMENT

Mr. Guy L. Wonders, one of the most prominent exhibitors of Baltimore, and manager of the Wilson theatre, has been appointed a member of the Committee on Fire Prevention, Regulations and Insurance of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. A meeting of this committee was called to take place in New York on Friday, October 6. Mr. Wonders was unable to attend, as he had been out of town and only received the notice two days before the meeting, and was therefore unable to arrange his engagements so that he could visit New York. He accepted the committeeship, however, and wrote the chairman that, while he regretted being unable to attend the first meeting, he would do everything possible to co-operate with the work of the committee.

NEIGHBORHOOD THEATRES IN DETROIT FORM ASSOCIATION

A meeting of thirty proprietors of neighborhood theatres in Detroit was held at the Hotel Griswold, Monday afternoon, October 16. It was a preliminary meeting prior to the organization of a permanent association to comprise neighborhood theatres exclusively. The neighborhood theatre owners and managers feel that their problems are not the problems of the downtown theatres who book pictures for an entire week, while the outskirt houses book them for one day only.

"The association is just for the purpose of getting together occasionally and talking over matters that directly concern outskirt theatres," said F. A. Schneider, who acted as president.

CENTRAL NEW YORK EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE

At a meeting held at Hotel Martin in Utica last Sunday afternoon, the exhibitors of Central New York organized and have applied for a charter from the New York State branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America. The territory of this local includes, Little Falls, Herkimer, Rome, Ilion, Mohawk, Frankfort, Gloversville, Carthage, Lowville, etc. Permanent officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, W. H. Linton, Utica, N. Y.; Vice-president, E. Wolfe, Lowville, N. Y.; Treasurer, W. P. Donlon, Utica, N. Y., and Secretary, William Fait, Jr., Utica, N. Y. Several matters of general interest were taken up, including the coming election.

NO MORE THEATRE LICENSES IN MINNEAPOLIS

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest has made good its promise to keep the number of theatres in the cities down to a reasonable figure. William Koenig, president of the association, appeared before the city council license committee of Minneapolis a few days ago and asked the members to grant no more licenses for motion picture theatres. The theatres now cover the city well and more of them in certain districts will work a hardship on those who are already there. At his request the council refused to grant any of the applications for licenses or for transfers on that date. Licenses for theatres in the outlying districts are going to be hard to get from now on.

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

IOWA—Centerville: The Orpheum theatre was closed recently.

Nashua: The Grand theatre, formerly the property of F. E. Foltz, has been sold to Merinus Larson.

Des Moines: Grace Wiley, who was noted as the only woman proprietor of a theatre here, recently sold her house, the Alama, to F. LeRoy. Mr. LeRoy took immediate charge of his new property.

State Center: The Star theatre, which has been closed for a couple of weeks, will reopen about November 1 under new management. F. C. Rohde has purchased the place from Fred Richerodt. Mr. Rohde is making some changes, one of which is using direct current instead of alternating. The seating arrangement is being entirely rearranged to make ingress and egress more convenient. A new machine is also being installed. The Star will run pictures exclusively.

Rinfisted: J. M. Fredericksen, proprietor of the moving picture theatre, recently sold his house to Messrs. Fredericksen and Hoen.

KANSAS—Washington: The Star theatre, formerly owned by Messrs. Owen and Diehl, is now the property of William Griffin.

Soldier: This town has been forsaken by the moving picture exhibitors so far and during the growth of the industry in larger cities it has only had the benefit of traveling picture shows. It is a town of three hundred. Recently the Woodmen of the World lodge took it upon itself to open the first show the place has had. It placed a machine in Woodmen Hall and showed, at first, only once a week. The interest in the pictures was so great that soon it held the shows three times a week. Now they are seriously considering opening the house every evening in the week. The hall only seats 200 people, yet recently it broke all records when it made its performance to 400 people. This was greater than the population of the town. The farmers in the neighborhood had also taken an interest.

MARYLAND—Baltimore: The first anniversary of the Parkway theatre will be celebrated the week of October 23. Arrangements are now being completed for a special entertainment to be held on Monday night, October 23, at which one or more leading photoplay stars will be the particular guests. The performance ond Monday will be of a special character and a number of guests have been invited to witness the final show beginning at 9 o'clock. The performance will be followed by a reception and luncheon in which the photoplayers will be present. Arrangements for the event are in charge of President H. W. Webb and Manager Bernard Depkin, Jr.

MISSOURI—St. Louis: The Olympia theatre, 1420 Market street, has recently been treated to a very complete and up-to-date $7,000 Wurlitzer orchestra, to be used alternately with the former musical program of the house. Charles Skouras, manager of the Olympia, runs a continuous show, from ten in the morning until eleven at night, with a daily change of programme, at five cents admission.

Kansas City: The Grand Opera House, which was twenty-five years old October 3, one of the most prosperous and successful of Kansas City theatres, will become a moving picture house this fall. It has been leased by the heirs of A. Judah, its manager for nearly twenty-five years, to A. D. Elliott, president of the Sapphire Amusement Company, for ten years, at an annual rental of $12,000. Mr. Elliott will spend several thousand dollars remodeling. The same company has a lease on a site adjoining the Sapphire theatre, and it is said will erect a handsome moving picture theatre there.

MONTANA—Butte: Building operations on the new Peoples' theatre seem to have slowed down the last month, while Jensen and Von Herberg's new house is going up rapidly and should be completed in about two months.

Phillipsburg: The Star is the name of the new theatre here which is being operated by Frank Pappas, who used to run the Grand at Boulder. Theatres in Northeastern Montana are opening up next week, after being closed for about three weeks by a small-pox quarantine.

NEBRASKA—Omaha: Several new theatres are being opened in Omaha's territory. The Sun, the newest, largest and best, will open about November 1. Rex O. Lawhead has opened the Clifton theatre, 2201 Military avenue, giving tickets broadcast for the opening evening. His house was crowded. Mr. Lawhead has been in charge locally of "The Yellow Menace." The Clifton is a concrete theatre, seating 500 people, and with ideal ventilation, decorating, seating and other features.

Broken Bow: H. F. Kennedy will open the

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

CHAPLIN LOBBY DISPLAY FOR "PAWNSHOP"

Of all the various kinds of "Chaplin Lobbies" that have been on view in Milwaukee since Chaplin has been appearing under the Mutual trademark, probably none has attracted as much attention or showed to better advantage than the lobby display evolved by Manager Hildebrand of the Butterfly theatre for the engagement of Chaplin in "The Pawnshop."

The basis of the entire display was the famous "Three balls" sign secured from a retired "uncle" for a couple of pairs of passes. Then a cardboard mounted, cut out a broom and a red light were worked together after one of the scenes in the picture. The red light was made to flash and this, with the big wide display sign across the front of the theatre completed the display. The Butterfly is situated right in the heart of Milwaukee's busy shopping districts and one of the best means for securing business is the lobby display.

BOOST FIVE-CENT ADMISSIONS TO TEN

Owners of theatres located on Main street between Fourth and Sixth streets, Los Angeles, have finally come to the conclusion that it is poor policy to conduct five cent houses, and have all banded together to increase the price to ten cents for any seat. In this district there are six theatres, and every one has boosted the price to ten cents.

The theatres are the Banner, Regent, Picture, Portola, Optic and Olympic. Prior to last week the admission price of these houses was five cents to every one. The managers in the few days that the new policy has been effective, have found the business is practically the same as heretofore, and find the receipts are almost twice as large. The managers propose to secure better service and thus compensate the patrons for the increase in the price of admission.

FREE MATINEE FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Manager C. W. Glass, of the Star theatre, Trenton, Tenn., is attracting considerable attention in his locality by inaugurating a series of free matinees for school children on Wednesday afternoon of each week. The first, second, third and fourth grades of the school are admitted accompanied by their teachers. This innovation has proven of wonderful advertising value to the Star.

Special Matinees for Children Draws Crowds to Des Moines Theatres

The Lobby, 80 x 18, Would Not Hold All the Kids

A. W. NICHOLS, managers of the University theatre in Des Moines, holds special children's matinees, which are exceptional successes. The regular admission fee to the University is ten cents and fifteen cents—children always ten cents, incidentally. These prices never vary. At various times during the year, Mr. Nichols distributes coupons among the school kids of the neighborhood, which, if presented at his theatre with five cents, will gain them admittance.

Mr. Nichols has made the offer seem an attractive one by never varying the admission prices at other times, so the children know that when he makes an offer like this, it is really a special one. Great success has attended his efforts along this line, and he has received considerable newspaper publicity from the crowds of kids that try to get into his theatre on Saturday afternoons. "School Children's Matinees" is the title under which Mr. Nichols conducts these shows. The above picture is not a crowd coming out of the University theatre, but the overflow waiting to get in on one of these special matinees.

"VAMPIRE DE LUXE" ADDS TO LOBBY DISPLAY

Manager O. Hoyt of the Liberty theatre, Long Beach, recently had a very unique and attractive lobby display for "The Wolf Woman," Ince Triangle subject. A large imitation spider-web was built in the lobby, and gave it a very weird appearance. Louise Glaum, "vampire de luxe," of Ince studio, was invited to the theatre to be the honored guest of the management on the opening night of her maiden starring vehicle run at the theatre, and at the close of the showing was introduced and made a brief speech to the audience.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Charity?," Made by Powell, Is Bought by Mutual for Release on December 1st

"CHARITY?" the initial production of Frank Powell Productions, Inc., has been purchased by the Mutual Film Corporation and will be offered for release by this house about the first of December. The picture, which was recently given a trade showing in New York City, is in seven parts and was written by Linda A. Griffith and produced by Mr. Powell.

Mr. Powell and his staff have just returned to New York city from Chicago after a week's sojourn where they completed arrangements with John R. Freuler, president of Mutual, for the release of the picture. It will be offered to exhibitors as a special release and will be given unusual promotion calculated to awaken the public to a realization of its extraordinary nature. Announcement of its exact release date will be forthcoming soon.

"Charity?" as is generally known is an expose, rebuking certain abuses of charity which the newspapers have often proved to be frequent and many. It makes its appeal in behalf of common justice and fairness. While it makes no pointed attack on any one institution, persons in every community are well aware that the contents of the picture are not founded on myth, but fact.

Mrs. Griffith herself appears in the production in the leading feminine role, while also in the cast are Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis, two vastly popular screen performers. Both are known for their work in such production as the serials "The Clutching Hand" and "The Iron Claw."

The story follows the fortunes of two children of the slums, whose early lives were spent in an orphan asylum run by a grasping capitalist. The terrible conditions that existed in the institution are told by a girl on the witness stand, while she is undergoing trial for the supposed murder of her child. The windup of the picture shows extensive improvements being made in the institution.

Mae Murray and Fannie Ward Will Appear on Paramount Program for Week of Nov. 13

MAE MURRAY and Fannie Ward will hold sway on the Paramount Program the week of November 13, in the two feature productions for that week, "The Plow Girl" and "The Years of the Locust," respectively, both from the Lasky studios.

This week marks the return of Mae Murray to the Lasky studios in "The Plow Girl," being the first production she has made since she left the East some weeks ago, after having appeared in the productions of the Famous Players.

Not since the time of "The Cheat," has Fannie Ward had a production, it is said, in which her capabilities have been given such sway as in "The Years of the Locust."

Surrounding the program for the week of November 13, Paramount will release four short reel features, the fortieth edition of the "magazine-on-the-screen," the Paramount Pictographs, in which the leading subjects are "Self-Defense Without Weapons," "People of the Alaskan Wilderness," "Frenzied Frocks and Frills," and "Have You a Little Heifer in Your Home?" "The forty-first of the series of Weekly Trips Around the World," conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he takes his fellow tourists "In Modern Athens," will appear, a Paramount-Bray cartoon with "Colonel Heeza Liar Hobo," and the fourth Black Diamond single-reel comedy, to be released by Paramount, called "A Villainous Pursuit."

In Paramount Pictographs the leading subject is "Self-Defense Without Weapons."

In this edition also of the magazine-on-the-screen, there will be shown the second installment of Prof. George Burbank Shattuck's pictures taken on a geological tour of Alaska.

The secrets of the designing rooms of the Parisian modistes are exposed in a series of pictures posed exclusively for Paramount Pictures by Mons. Cne, one of the foremost of America's fashion artists, while a great deal of comedy is obtained in another section in the picture "Have You a Little Heifer in Your Home?" which "back to the land" movement contemplates the keeping of a cow in every home, thereby having your individual milk supply fresh for all meals.

FASHIONS TO BE PART OF SELIG-TRIBUNE NEWS

The Selig-Tribune, the twice a week news reel, released through General Film service, has instituted a new department of fashions. The fashion department will probably be a feature of each and every issue, and will add to the interest of this news film.

The latest fashion creations from New York and Paris, will be presented by pretty models, and this department will prove attractive to the ladies. The fashion department will be installed in the near future.

"THE SHERIFF'S BLUNDER" IS FROM SELIG ON NOV. 20

"The Sheriff's Blunder," is the name of the Selig feature play to be released in General Film service on Monday, November 20. The play features Tom Mix. Mr. Mix is supported by an all-star cast of Western players. On Saturday, November 25, "The Hedge of Heart's Desire," a one-reel drama of true appeal, will be released in General Film service.

The release announced for Monday, November 27, is entitled "Following the Flag," a three-reel production. "Following the Flag" is a series of spectacular motion pictures of Uncle Sam's soldier boys in action on the Mexican border and in old Mexico. Not only the infantry and artillery, but the cavalry is shown in real and mimic warfare. "Following the Flag" will be released in General Film Company's regular service.

"Mistakes Will Happen" is the title of a one-reel comedy scheduled for release in General Film Company's regular service on Saturday, December 2.

MOSS PREPARES "ONE HOUR"

B. S. Moss, whose pictures, "Three Weeks" and "One Day" have met with such marked success, is now preparing a third subject which will complete this series, entitled "One Hour." Mr. Moss has only just acquired the film rights for this story and at present it is being put in scenario form. He plans to secure the services of a well known director and is already negotiating with stars of prominence of both the stage and screen to enact the leading roles.

"Three Weeks," Mr. Moss's first picture, taken from the widely read novel by Elinor Glyn, proved such a great success that he followed it up with a sequel "One Day." This did unusual business and led Mr. Moss to produce yet another to complete a series.

SELF-DEFENSE WITHOUT WEAPONS IN A PARAMOUNT

The art of self-defense without weapons, which depends fundamentally upon your ability to startle an assailant before he has an opportunity to do you any harm, has been brought to a high state of perfection lately in America, and compares in principle with the jiu jitsu practised extensively in Japan. These principles will be shown in the forthcoming release of the Paramount Pictographs, the "magazine-on-the-screen."

The pictures were posed for by Prof. Marcellus T. Hayes, former physical instructor of Columbia University, who demonstrates the leading points which may be used by a peaceful citizen when maliciously attacked under various circumstances.

"VAMPIRE" RELEASE DATE MOVED BACK ONE DAY

The first announcement made by the Gaumont Company of the release date of "The Vampires" as a Mutual series was that the pictures would be release every Friday beginning November 24. A desire to make the series interlock with "Fantomas" when it comes to the day of the week, to simplify Mutual arrangements for release, has brought "The Vampires" back to Thursday as the release day.

The first episode will be shown on Thursday, November 23. Thereafter there will be a release each Thursday until the series has been completed. Each episode of the nine is complete in three reels.

For the benefit of exhibitors the Mutual is working out some methods of local advertising which are calculated to boost business for exhibitors. These are aimed directly at the patrons of the theatre, and it is promised that there will be no waste in advertising "The Vampires." As a preliminary to "The Vampires," many exhibitors are now running "Fantomas." It is the same style of French detective screen fiction.

LUCAS AND RAY ARE TRIANGLE STARS IN WEEK OF NOV. 19

Wilfred Lucas and Charles Ray are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for the week of November 19. Mr. Lucas appears in a Fine Arts comedy-drama entitled, "The Microscope Mystery," written by W. E. Wing and directed by Paul Powell. Constance Talmadge is featured with him. Charles Ray has a vehicle in the Ince production of "The Honorable Algy." Margery Wilson and Margaret Thompson are headlined with him.

"The Microscope Mystery" is a story of the discovery of the perpetrator of a murder by the use of a microscope. Mr. Lucas takes the part of an honest country doctor named Arnold with a small dwindling practice but great enthusiasm for the study of germ life.

In "The Honorable Algy" Charles Ray takes the part of the youngest son of a titled English family who is sent to America to contract a good marriage.

"Sins of Her Parent" Is a Fox Photodrama Starring Gladys Brockwell, Released in November

GLADYS BROCKWELL in a dramatic photoplay of Alaska, in which she plays the role of a drink-besotted mother and her innocent young daughter; George Walsh in a picture of the West and Valeska Suratt as a heartless, scheming woman who leads two men to ruin—these are William Fox's releases for the first three weeks in November.

Miss Brockwell's first starring vehicle is released for November 6, under title of "Sins of Her Parent." Frank Lloyd directed the production. The cast includes William Clifford, who had a stage career of eighteen years with Mantell, Whiteside, Mildred Holland and other footlight favorites; Carl Von Schiller, George Webb, Herschel Mayall and Jim Farley.

One of the sets in the photoplay represents a big art gallery, and is hung with paintings worth thousands of dollars. Another depicts a great Nome lodge.

Miss Brockwell appears first in the character of Adrian Courtney, who falls in love with Richard Carver (Carl Von Schiller) but cannot marry him because of the objections of Carver, Sr. The latter will not sanction an alliance between his son and a woman of uncertain birth.

Richard's quest for Adrian's mother is successful. He finds that she is a frequenter of Alaskan dance halls. Richard is injured in a fight and when Robert Carver arrives he recognizes in Valerie Marchmont, Adrian's mother, the secret wife of a friend. Then he consents to his son's marriage.

Adrian, meantime, has been abducted by a saloon owner (Herschel Mayall). The rescuers pursue and save her only after a hard struggle in which Valerie is fatally wounded, but kills her daughter's abductor with her dying strength.

George Walsh's new photoplay, "The Mediator," has been picturized by Director Otis Turner for William Fox, from Roy Norton's book.

The story concerns Lish Henley, persistent pacifist—so persistent, in fact, that he spends his whole life battling others in the name of peace.

By the might of his fists, the powerful Lish quells all arguments of those who would interfere with peace. Juanita Hansen, in the role of a charming waitress, makes her debut under the Fox banner in this production. It is she who saves Walsh from eternal peace, when a gang comes to mob him, by serving a new dish at his table: "Pistol on Lettuce."

"The Mediator" will be shown on November 13.

On November 20, Mr. Fox will release "Jealousy," a photodrama with Valeska Suratt in the chief role. The supporting cast includes Walter Law, Charline Mayfield, Abraham Lincoln's grandniece, and Curtis Benton and Joseph Granby.

Miss Suratt's new screen play has for its basis a discontented woman who tries to find happiness by forcing men to love her; but she is crushed and helpless in the end.

"THE NEW PORTER" OPENS VITAGRAPH GENERAL FILM RELEASES ON OCTOBER 30

"The New Porter," a one-reel comedy opens Vitagraph General Film releases for the week of October 30.

This is followed by a one-reeler, "The Game That Failed," which was written by Charles E. Riese. Director William Wolbert of the Western studios made the picture with Mary Anderson, Webster Campbell and Otto Lederer in the cast. This production is listed for release on November 3.

On Saturday, November 4, a three-part Broadway Star Feature from the pen of Frederic Chapin takes its place. Harry Davenport, who directed this production, also plays the leading role and is supported by Mary Maurice, Belle Bruce, Kalman Matus and Lee Lenering.

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard in "The Purple Mask," a Serial Two Years in Preparation

THE Universal wishes to call particular attention to the fact that Grace Cunard and Francis Ford will be featured in its next serial, "The Purple Mask." This serial has been in preparation for two years. Twenty two-reel scenarios of unusual plots—the cream of those submitted in the last twenty-six months have been set aside and incorporated in the serial.

These scenarios were written by Miss Cunard in her spare time for future production. Six months ago they were woven into a connected story.

Meanwhile "Liberty," the current Universal serial continues to exert its patriotic appeal. During the week of November 6, Episode 13, "Strife and Sorrow," will be released. "Liberty" was written and produced by Jacques Jaccard, and features Marie Walcamp, Jack Holt and Eddie Polo. Supporting the principals are L. M. Wells, Bertram Grassby, Neal Hart, Maude Emory and G. Raymond Nye.

The week's Red Feather is "The Place Beyond the Winds," a five-reel drama, featuring Dorothy Phillips and Lon Chaney. The story of this play was written by Harriet T. Comstock, adapted for the screen by Ida May Park, and produced by Joseph De Grasse, Jack Mulhall, Joseph De Grasse, C. Norman Hammond, Miss Youse, Mr. Powers, Grace Carlyle and the Countess Du Cello.

Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean will be featured on Monday, November 6 in the Nestor comedy, "A Political Tramp," the scenario of which was written by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and the production made by L. W. Chaudet. Fred Gamble, the Countess du Cello, and Harry Nolan appear in support of the Nestor triumvirate of stars.

Alice Howell, the towsel haired comedienne, is starred all by her lonely on November in an L-Ko comedy, "Alice in Society," which is released on November 7. Fatty Voss supports her as best he can with his 340 pounds fahrenheit. On the same day King Baggot and Leah Baird will be seen in the special Imp drama, "The Voice Upstairs." There will be no release under the Victor brand on this date.

On November 8, Vola Smith, G. Raymond Nye and Charles Gunn will appear in "The Cry of Conscience," a Gold Seal two-reel mountain drama written by Olga Printzlau and produced by C. S. Elfelt. Ed Brown, Marc Robbins and E. P. Evers appear in support of the principals. On this date No. 45 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released. There will be no L-Ko release on November 8. Instead a Special Victor entitled, "A Roaming Romeo," featuring Tweedledum will be issued.

"The Mantle of Deceit," a two-reel Rex society drama featuring Claire Mersereau will be released as the feature of the day on November 9 under the Rex brand. Stanley Walpole, Helen Slosson, Nellie Slattery and Joseph Granby will appear in support of Miss Mersereau. The Powers cartoon educational, "High Life on a Farm with Hy Mayer," also will be released on the same day. There will be no Victor release on this date.

On November 10, Betty Schade will star in "The Eel," a decidedly distinctive Imp underworld drama. The story of this play was written by Beth Boone, scenarioized by William Parker and produced by H. Millard. Harry Keenan and Percy Challenger appear in support of Miss Schade. On the same day Agnes Vernon is featured in "The Eyes of Love," a Rex drama scenarioized by M. B. Havey from the story by L. J. Benson and produced by Fred A. Kelsey. Leah Baird and Jack Mulhall take prominent roles in the pictures.

November 10 also will see the release of "Sweedy the Janitor," a Nestor comedy featuring Wallace Beery and Belle Bennett. The special Big U mining drama, "The Evidence," featuring Bob Leonard also will be released on this date.

On November 11, Roberta Wilson and Charles Perley will co-star in "The Quitter," a Bison two-reel western drama written by Mary Lanier MacGruder, scenarioized by Alice Von Samar and produced by Burton George. Hayward Mack, Nan Christie, T. D. Crittenden, Harry Schenck and "Babe" Sedgwick appear in support of the principals.

On the same day Gale Henry and William Franey co-star in "In Love with a Fireman," a Joker comedy written by Walter H. Newman and produced by W. W. Beaudine. Charles Conklin, Lillian Peacock and Milburn Moranti join the funmaking after Franey and Gale get it well started.

Sunday, November 12, stands out particularly because of the release of "The Powder Trail," a special Big U two-reel military drama, featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard. Sherman Bainbridge appears in support of Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard. On the same day Harry Depp and Yvette Mitchell co-star in the Victor comedy, "Any Old Duke'll Do," written by R. A. Dillon and produced by P. C. Hartigan. The Countess Du Cello and Ernie Shields don't lag a minute behind Harry Depp and Yvette Mitchell in producing the laughs. On the same day Lee Hill and Maud George appear in "Shadows of Suspicion," a Laemmle drama.

First Appearance of "Mutual Tours Around the World," Gaumont, Is in Week of November 5

THE last episode of "Fantomas" having been released and the first episode of "The Vampires" not due until November 23, the Gaumont Company has only its program of single reels to offer for the week of November 5. The outstanding feature of the week is the first appearance of the new Gaumont contribution to Mutual Pictures, "Mutual Tours Around the World." This is to be released every Tuesday.

The first Gaumont picture of the week is "Reel Life," No. 27, issued November 5. The leading section of the reels shows "The International Beverage — Coffee." The pictures were taken on a Brazilian plantation and show the care required from the planting until the sacked coffee is taken aboard ship at Santos. Fighting mosquitoes in New Jersey is entitled "Our Trench Warfare." It shows what is being done to rid the state of the pest. The third section shows how the new Autoped has developed from a boy's "pushmobile." The fourth pictures a new life saving suit constructed upon the principle of the thermos bottle.

November 7 brings to the screen the first reel of "Mutual Tours Around the World." It pictures La Rochelle, France, and the fishing fleet, the Nile River at the Assouan Dam, and Kamenez-Podolsk, a picturesque town in Galicia.

"See America First," No. 61, released November 8, is a continuation of a former release, "Along the Columbia River in Oregon." The current number is called "Oregon's Famous River." It is devoted particularly to views of the Columbia River Highway. On the same reel is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic, animated by Harry Palmer. It is another of his entertaining "Babbling Bess" series, cartoons that Mr. Palmer first made famous in the New York World and a syndicate of newspapers.

The fourth single reel is The Mutual Weekly. This is devoted to news events of the world, and consequently no one is ever able to forecast the contents of this release. It is made up the day it is issued, in order that exhibitors may have the latest pictorial news possible for their screens.

"END OF THE RAINBOW" WILL BEGIN ON OCTOBER 30

Bluebird announces "The End of the Rainbow" as the October 30 release. "Gloriana" will be the feature for November 6. While not definitely determined it is likely that "We are French" will be the release for November 13. Other features are ready, but remain to be definitely scheduled.

"The End of the Rainbow" was written and produced by Lynn F. Reynolds who also contributed "The Girl of Lost Lake" and "The Secret of the Swamp" to the Bluebird series. Myrtle Gonzales, Val Paul, Fred Church and George Hernandez will play the principal roles. These are the same players who worked with Mr. Reynolds in creating his two other features.

Little Zoe Rae will be the featured player in "Gloriana." The piece was originally titled "Little Miss Charity," but a change of name seemed desirable in releasing the work. Little Miss Rae has done some exceptionally clever work in earlier Bluebirds and it was decided to feature the girl in "Gloriana" when the production was decided upon.

"We Are French" has Ella Hall and Rupert Julian as the leading players. When this feature was shown to Bluebird employees during the past week, the opinion was unanimous that an exceptional Bluebird was at hand. Mr. Julian directed the piece, playing a leading role as well.

"BOOTS AND SADDLES" IS SECOND FILM IN MOSS ONE-A-MONTH POLICY

A screen adaptation of "Boots and Saddles," from the play by Eugene Walters, which comes to the screen in five reels, is now ready for release by B. S. Moss.

The play should not be confounded with the book, "Boots and Saddles, which was written many years ago by Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, widow of General George A. Custer, Civil War hero and commander of the ill fated Seventh Cavalry at the Little Big Horn, familiarly known as Custer's massacre.

The photoplay deals with intrigue, adventure, love disappointed, treachery, heroism, courage, long-suffering, swift action, brilliant climaxes, retribution and love triumphant.

The central figure in "Boots and Saddles" is enacted by R. Henry Grey, who in turn is supported by a typical Moss cast, headed by Lillian West and Gordon Sackville.

"Boots and Saddles" represents the second release of the new Moss one a-month policy.

Big Array of Features in November Releases from Essanay—Harry Watson, "Musty Suffer," Completes Exteriors

THE November releases from Essanay offer what President George K. Spoor considers an inviting array of features and short reel subjects. To permit of more time than customary in picture productions, the facilities of the already extensive plant are being increased. Additional equipment in the third studio, the largest artificially lighted enclosure in the industry, will permit of sets being constructed and filming being accomplished at any hour, day or night. In order to maintain his promise of quality production Mr. Spoor plans to have his technical department construct sets at night, that directors may not be hampered during their work in the daytime.

The Essanay output for November will contain two feature offerings to be issued through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. On November 6 the photoplay de luxe, "The Prince of Graustark," will be ready. Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton appear in this five-reel adaptation of the famous George Barr McCutcheon novel. Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth appear as the leading support. It is a sequel to "Graustark."

"The Chaperon," with Edna Mayo and Eugene O'Brien is to be issued on November 20. This is a comedy-drama taken from the play by Marion Fairfax, which was a big hit with Maxine Elliot in the leading role. It is in five reels.

"The Breaker," with Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig, and "The Truant Soul," Henry B. Walthall's seven-reel feature, will not be ready until December.

A quality production for General Film Service is promised by the following subjects:

On November 1 Canimated Nooz Pictorial, No. 18, will be released. This cartoon carries half reel scenic at Crater Lake, Oregon. "The Heart of Virginia Keep," Edwin Baird's story, is the three-reeler for November 4. Marguerite Clayton and Edward Arnold are featured.

Harry Dunkinson, well known in Essanay comedies and comedy-drama, will appear in a semi-slapstick, "Easy Ed," a two-act piece offered on November 7. He is in the character of a tramp, one of which he played for many years on the stage. "A Safe Proposition," is a one-reel comedy with Ben Turpin and Victor Potel, offered the following day. On November 11 Richard C. Travers and Gertrude Glover appear in a brisk three-act comedy-drama, "What I Said, Goes!"

"Not in the News," is the two reeler to open the next week. Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth appear in this, which will be offered on November 14. Canimated Nooz Pictorial with Lake Tahoe, California, scenic, is the one-reel offering for the following day. "His Moral Code," the three-act piece for November 18, shows three stars, Lillian Drew, E. H. Calvert, and Edward Arnold appearing in the leads.

Little Mary McAllister, who made a hit in "Borrowed Sunshine," will have another two-act piece for November 21. It is entitled, "Unto the Least of These." "Some Bravery" will be issued the next day. It is a comedy with Ben Turpin. The final releases for the month are in the making and titles will be announced shortly.

Harry Watson, alias "Musty Suffer," has completed exteriors for his first Essanay production and has begun work in the studios. Louis Mylls is directing him at Essanay.

"War Brides," by Brenon, Is Ready for Release Through Selznick Exchanges

HERBERT BRENON'S photodrama, "War Brides," introducing Alla Nazimova, the Slavic tragedienne, for the first time to photoplay audiences, is now ready for release. It will be presented as the second of the new Selznick-Pictures, the first of which was Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law." Lewis J. Selznick has completed his own system of exchanges throughout the United States and Canada for the distribution in the open booking market of this and all future Brenon productions.

"War Brides," has been made in the record time of two months and rushed to completion by Mr. Brenon that it may be shown simultaneously with "A Daughter of the Gods," of which he was the sole author and director.

"War Brides" has been evolved and developed from a one-act drama by Marion Craig Wentworth, which was a vaudeville sensation for two years. Audiences in all parts of the United States hail it as the greatest work that Nazimova had ever done on the stage, but she herself declares that a photodrama is even superior to the spoken play.

It tells the story of a young woman whose husband was drafted into the army soon after they were married. He is killed in an early engagement in the war, and his widow comes out among the people of the little village urging women not to marry soldiers, as it will only bring upon them the same tragedy which has come into her life.

The military authorities do their best to silence her, but she finally confronts even the King himself with her defiance of the militaristic rule.

An impressive scene is that in which Joan (Nazimova) receives word of her husband's death. Her first impulse is to end her own life, but she is persuaded not to do so by the reminder of her responsibility as typified by a basket of half completed baby garments.

Camera Man from Steffansson and Anderson Arctic Expedition Back with Film for Mutual-Gaumont Films

THE arrival of George H. Wilkins of the Mutual-Gaumont Company, of London, in Chicago last week, fresh from a three-year cruise through arctic regions in the vicinage of Coronation Inlet, the habitat of the Esquimaux, illustrates in a striking manner the world-wide range of the Mutual Film Corporation for interesting screen material, scientific as well as diverting.

Mr. Wilkins has been attached to the staff of the Canadian Arctic explorers Steffansson and Anderson, who, with their sixty assistants, reached Seattle a week ago from Minto Inlet, after spending two winters among the Esquimaux in their snow houses and two summers under summer conditions in skin huts.

Mr. Wilkins describes the difficulties of photography in a country that depends entirely on dogs for its transportation except where open water permits the use of kayaks, or Esquimaux canoes. Often the entire impedimenta of the photographer had to be packed by members of the expedition, no other form of transportation being available.

"HER NEW YORK" HAS NEW TWIST

"Her New York," a Thanhouser feature by Agnes C. Johnston, starring Gladys Hulette, which is just being completed, is a different sort of a "New York" story. A country girl comes to New York, and instead of deciding that the old homestead is best, she finds happiness in the city and makes up her mind to stay there.

MEMPHIS FILM MEN VISIT ST. LOUIS' FILM ROW

Film Row in St. Louis was visited last week by two film men from Memphis, Tenn., Abe Coffman, manager of the United Exchange in that city, and M. Trimble, proprietor of one of the leading theatres in Memphis.

Messrs. Coffman and Trimble called upon nearly all the film exchanges in the city, and visited many of the leading theatres. They renewed many pleasant acquaintances they had made on a former visit to St. Louis.

ENID BENNETT CAST AS BLIND GIRL IN A TRIANGLE

While he is not actively engaged in the work of production, Director Charles Miller is busy making preparations at the Triangle-Kay-Bee studio for the filming of the play in which Enid Bennett will make her debut as a star.

Miss Bennett was engaged by Ince during the latter's recent visit to New York.

The subject in which she will appear is an unusual story of a blind girl and was written by Lanier Bartlett. Jack Gilbert has been cast to play the principal supporting role.

PEOPLE OF THE ALASKAN WILDERNESS SHOWN IN PARAMOUNT

In the second installment of Prof George Burbank Shattuck's pictures, taken on his recent geological tour of Alaska, which will be released in a forthcoming edition of the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs, there is shown the conditions as they existed in the Klondike region. The prevailing idea that the gold resources of Alaska have been exhausted is far from the fact, as these pictures show.

Florence Turner and Richard Bennett Are Among the Stars Scheduled for Appearance on Mutual Program

RICHARD BENNETT and Florence Turner will be found among the stars that will characterize the Mutual Film Corporation's releases for the week of November 6. Richard Bennett will be seen in "And the Law Says," while Miss Turner will appear in "East is East."

The story and scenario of the former were written by Richard Bennett and Anthony W. Coldewey last summer, after Mr. Bennett had spent several days at Sing Sing prison in New York State in conference with Thomas Mott Osborne, the advocate of prison reform, and in search of local color and fact to incorporate in his plot. William G. Dowlan was the director.

Mr. Bennett is supported by a cast, consisting of Adrienne Morrison (Mrs. Bennett); William Carroll, who plays the role of the judge's derelict son sentenced to death by his own father, who does not know until too late what he has done; George Periolat; Ashton Dearholt, and Charles Newton.

"And the Law Says" will mark Richard Bennett's second appearance in Mutual Star productions, his third under the Mutual banner, since his first screen success, "Damaged Goods," went to the public as a Mutual special feature.

"East Is East" is one of the strongest vehicles ever chosen to convey the charms of Florence Turner to her screen audiences. Larry Trimble was the producer.

On Tuesday, November 7, a one-reel scenic of Gaumont production containing picturizations of little excursions into all parts of the world, will make its first appearance under the title of "Mutual Tours Around the World." The one-reel release will continue making its appearance weekly on the same day of the week after that.

With the initial issue of this scenic, the weekly output of Gaumont studios through Mutual exchanges will consist of four single-reel scenic, cartoon comic and current topic releases.

The remaining Gaumont material will appear on regular release dates the week of November 6—Mutual Weekly, the current news one-reeler, and "See America First" and Harry Palmer's "Kartoon Komic," the split-reel release, appearing on Wednesday, November 8, and "Reel Life," the Mutual's magazine in film, coming on Sunday, November 12.

On Thursday, November 9, two dramas of short-reel length go out through Mutual exchanges.

One, "The Fight on the Dam," will feature J. Warren Kerrigan, the photoplay favorite. The other is a two-part drama of mystery, "The False Clue."

On Saturday, November 11, "The Unpardonable Sin," with Edna Paine and Norbert Myles in the leading roles, will go out as a Mutual release.

Comedy lovers will find laughs in the funny two-reel Vogue comedy release of Sunday, November 12, a picture of the usual Vogue class. The title of this picture is "Picture Pirates." It tells the tale of the adventures of a gang of crooks who carry on a high-handed game of stealing famous pictures. Ben Turpin and Rube Miller and Lillian Hamilton are leads.

Another comedy "His Blushing Bride," a Cub one-reeler, will go to the public on Friday, November 10.

"Norway of America" Is Shown in Essanay Release; 20,000 Feet Received at Laboratories

INTO the "Norway of America," the inland water route to Alaska and the last land of romance in North America, Essanay cameramen have been forcing their way for the past five months, encountering varied dangers that scenic film might be obtained. Now 20,000 feet of this film, picturing natural beauties in localities never before photographed, has been received at the Essanay laboratories. This will be compressed to half length and issued as ten 500-foot educational films with Wallace A. Carlson's Canimated Nooz Pictorial and other half reel releases.

The photographers set out from Vancouver and penetrated all untouched spots on the trail to Dawson. The famous trails and passes, famed in song and story since the gold rush to the old Klondike, have been gone over and the contrast shown in the films. Dead Man's Gulch, where scores of the old prospectors perished, is shown as is White Pass, the Yukon River and the old mining camps.

The treacherous rapids where hundreds lost their lives because they preferred a two-minute chance against death to a two-week trip around, has been shown. All beautiful sounds, glaciers and some gigantic ice-bergs have been filmed.

Subtitles explaining the historical connection of this romantic country with the old days of the gold rush made it a worthy educational series. So completely have the photographers gone over the ground that even the famous old boats that carried the adventurers of '98 have been pictured where they lay falling to pieces on the beach. Their names are still to be made out on the bows, however, and seeing them in the film will make real to thousands the scenes pictured in the novels of Jack London, Rex Beach and in the poems of Robert W. Service and others.

President George K. Spoor wishes exhibitors to know that Essanay will now be able to announce through its usual mediums the titles of the scenic that accompanies each split reel release. The first called, is now being issued. It deals with the beauties of Southern California, Yosemite National Park, Crater Lake, Oregon, and other Pacific Coast wonders, up to this time untouched by the camera.

NOVEMBER 7 IS DATE SET FOR MUTUAL WORLD TOURS

The first release of the new Gaumont single-reel, "Mutual Tours Around the World," will be November 7. No announcement has been made of its features, but it will be devoted to peoples and places under foreign flags.

GLADYS HULETTE NEARLY FINISHES "HER NEW YORK," UNDER DIRECTION OF MOORE

Gladys Hulette, the Thanhouser star, has nearly finished "Her New York," and Director Eugene Moore is preparing to start work on Miss Hulette's next play within a few days. Agnes C. Johnston, author of all of Miss Hulette's Pathe Gold Rooster plays, "The Shine Girl," "Prudence, the Pirate" and "Her New York," has written for Miss Hulette a new feature called "Kate o' the Kitchen," in which Miss Hulette plays a little girl, poor but happy, who has to go to work for four reasons—three sisters and a brother.

Edwin Thanhouser has given "Kate o' the Kitchen," a splendid cast, including, besides Miss Hulette, Doris Grey, Wayne Arey, George Marlo and Arthur Bauer.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

FURTHER evidence of the wide scope of motion pictures is demonstrated in a picture now being made at the Metro-Popular Plays and Players studio to develop the savings instinct and to teach frugality in families of moderate means. It will be released broadcast throughout the country before the holidays. The film is being taken under the direction of Burton L. King, with Violet Heming and William Courtleigh in the leading roles for the Christmas Club.

Wallace C. Clifton has written a story called "Three Christmases," showing how a family suffered before the beginning of the Christmas Club, and the effects after the habit of putting away a small amount each week had been started.

The story revolves around a hard-working clerk and his wife and child. As Christmas approaches the little child prattles about Santa Claus, and wonders what he will bring. A week before Christmas, a fellow clerk persuades the father to gamble on the races with the result that he loses all the money he intended spending for his baby's toys.

Disheartened and ashamed, he tells his faithful wife of what he has done, but she cheers him up by showing her check from the Christmas Club, which she had joined without telling her husband. The following year Christmas was made more enjoyable by reason of the Christmas Club, which the father had also joined. On the third Christmas there was a vacancy in the office where the father was employed, and the president of the company was looking for a man to fill the position, which carried a big salary. The president, in passing the bank where the Christmas Club fund was kept, saw his clerk coming out, and, upon investigating, promoted the father to the vacant position. Violet Heming plays the frugal wife, while William Courtleigh is the father.

"Divorce and the Daughter"

"Divorce and the Daughter," Florence La Badie's next Pathe Gold Rooster play, is nearing completion at the Thanhouser studios, and will be released early in December. The story, by Agnes C. Johnston, is a study of the causes and effects of an unhappy home.

The daughter (played by Florence La Badie), influenced by a man who desires her, loses faith in marriage and begins to believe the new ideas regarding free and untrammeled love put forward by the man. She almost becomes a victim of the so-called "advanced" ideals, but is saved and finds happiness in true love and true marriage.

Frederic Sullivan is the director. The star is supported by an excellent cast, including Edwin Stanley, J. H. Gilmour, Sam. Niblack, Kathryn Adams, Zenaide Williams, and two talented children, Ethelmary Oakland and Arthur Le Vien.

Ethel Clayton, who had a slight but annoying throat ailment, was very greatly surprise recently to read that she had been undergoing a serious operation in a hospital. Miss Clayton's work as one of the highly-valued stars in World-Brady pictures has not been interrupted. She is now playing the big feminine role in "A Law Unto Herself," at the Peerless studio, Fort Lee, and insists that she is both well and happy.

Alice Brady was the only motion picture star to be tendered a reception at the recent Business Show in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. Miss Brady was the guest of the Oliver Typewriter Company, whose booth was decorated with flowers and pictures of the gifted young World Film actress. During the hour of the reception the attention of Business Show visitors was almost exclusively devoted to Miss Brady.

Three new plays are simultaneously under way in the World Film Corporation's studio at Fort Lee. They are "The Bondage of Fear," "The Parasites" and "A Law Unto Herself." The more noted of the players appearing in the different productions are: Robert Warwick, Ethel Clayton, Carlyle Blackwell, Gail Kane, Muriel Ostriche, June Elvidge, Arthur Ashley, Montagu Love, Henry Hull, and John Bowers.

Lucille Zintheo, one of eleven winners of a "Beauty and Brains" contest, conducted by a photoplay magazine, has been given a three-years' contract by Herbert Brenon, and will be seen in his productions for Selznick Pictures in future, beginning with "The Queen Mother," in which Florence Reed will be starred. Miss Zintheo, who comes from Spokane, played a brief scene, which Mr. Brenon outlined to her, in such a way that he was convinced she would be a valuable acquisition, despite her lack of experience.

Grace Davison (Anchor Films)

Herbert Brenon has engaged William E. Shay for a leading role in "The Queen Mother," which will be his next contribution to Selznick Pictures, and in which Florence Reed will be starred. Shay has appeared in nearly all of the big productions which Brenon has made during his career, including "Neptune's Daughter," "The Heart of Maryland," "The Kreutzer Sonata," "The Two Orphans," "The Clemenceau Case," and "Sin." His last work, under the Brenon direction, was as leading man in "A Daughter of the Gods."

Brenon Signs Shay

Previous to his association with Brenon he had several years of stage experience, and also worked before the camera in Paris, Berlin and Vienna. In this way he has gained a knowledge of the subtle methods of the European pantomimists. When it was found that there was no role in "War Brides" suitable for him, Mr. Shay deliberately refused to consider any other engagements, preferring to wait until the next Brenon production.

In "The Queen Mother," he will have the part of a proud Italian duke of medieval times, playing the role opposite that of Miss Reed. Work will begin on this production at the Brenon studio November 1, by which time "War Brides" will be cut to its final dimensions, and ready for the market.

Bennett A. Molter, of the Metro forces, arrived October 23, in Bordeaux, France, sailing on the steamer Espagne. He will go directly to Paris, and will join the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps for six months. He then expects to pass an additional six months in the Volunteer Aviation Corps, rounding out the year, returning to use the first-hand knowledge obtained in subjects for war films in this country.

Mr. Molter's last work before leaving was to assist W. Christy Cabanne in the production of "One of Many," a feature photoplay, with Frances Nelson as star. Prior to that he assisted Henry Otto in the Metro-Yorke studio, at Hollywood, Cal., in the production of "Mister 44," and at the Thousand Islands in the screening of "The River of Romance," both productions starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison.

He is familiar with all branches of the motion picture industry, having been with Pathe, Kalem, Universal, and other film companies as actor, scenario writer, and assistant director.

Milton Sills, leading man for Mrs. Vernon Castle in the International's preparedness serial, "Patria," knows what it means to present a smiling face while suffering excruciating pain. He underwent that unpleasant experience one day last week.

In one of the scenes of "Patria," Mr. Sills, who plays the part of Donald Parr, of the United States Army, raises a heavy flag stone that conceals the entrance to a vault, where $100,000,000 is stored. When he lowered it again, the stone, weighing several hundred pounds, struck the end of his foot, wedging the point of the shoe between the movable stone and the adjoining solid one. Mr. Sills' great toe was broken and badly crushed. Without a murmur, he continued to the end of the scene. He was unable to walk for several days, but is at work again, although it is necessary for him to use a cane.

Mae Hopkins, who appears in several of the episodes of "Beatrice Fairfax," the International's Photoplay series, is the original "girl with the dimpled shoulders." Miss Hopkins' shoulders created a sensation when she appeared in the leading role of "She's In Again" on Broadway. From that production she went to motion pictures, having appeared in "The Deep Purple" and "Old Dutch." Her shoulders have been painted by all the prominent artists of the present day.

Miss Hopkins is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, being a direct descendant of Stephen Hopkins, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Charles Giblyn, one of the best known of the Ince-Triangle directors, has transferred his activities to Selznick-Pictures, and took charge last week of the third feature to be produced by the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, an adaptation of

Edythe Wells

David Graham Phillips' novel, "The Price She Paid."

The rights to this novel were originally purchased for Norma Talmadge when she became a Selznick star, but it was finally decided to present Miss Talmadge in "Panthea," and give the Phillips' novel to Miss Young as better suited to the latter's personality and temperament.

Mr. Giblyn is a director who has grown up with the industry. He was an actor of prominence for many years prior to his becoming interested in the new form of dramatic expression, and his first work in motion pictures was as a player. From acting it was but a step to assisting in the direction of pictures in California, after which he was engaged by the New York Motion Picture Company and Thomas Ince in the production of those famous and stirring Western dramas, in which the men and the equipment of the 101 Ranch were used.

When the Fine Arts Company was organized as the one corner of the Triangle Corporation, Mr. Giblyn became one of its leading directors, producing among other successes several of the best of the Frank Keenan pictures.

In order that it might be capable of producing more films in a proper manner at one time, the Greater Vitagraph has made a number of changes in the location of departments. These changes were planned and carried into effect through a desire on the part of the officials to have things run with mechanical smoothness and without confusion and to operate the same way under pressure.

The negative department has been moved to the third floor of the factory building, that the cutters and comparers may have their work facilitated by fewer interruptions from the other workers and also receive better light.

Doris Kenyon (International)

The manuscript department, which formerly occupied these rooms, has made its quarters in the director's room, where they will not be annoyed by the noise of the factory machinery.

The directors have moved their desks to the old negative room, where they will be right under the studios and not be obliged to run to the third floor of the factory building in the middle of a scene in case they desire something from their department.

These changes are the result of much co-operative planning and discussion, and it is believed by all concerned that they will greatly facilitate the work of production.

George Randolph Chester and his wife, Lillian Chester, last Monday had their first view of the film of their story, "The Enemy," at a private exhibition at the Vitagraph studios, where it has been filmed, with Peggy Hyland, Evart Overton and Charles Kent as the principals. Immediately after the picture had been run, they dashed away to Meriden, Conn., to witness the premier of a new play they have written.

At the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn last week a "mob" of 300 negroes was employed in a scene that will provide another big punch in the Louis Joseph Vance serial, "The Secret Kingdom." Director Brabin had erected a great pampas grass temple, in the shelter of which the negroes went through some weird voodoo rites. One of the persons engaged for this scene was an accomplished snake-charmer, who did some of the most hair-raising parts in the barbaric ceremonies. Charles Richman, William Dunn, De Jalma West, Arline Pretty, Dorothy Kelly and Eulalie Jensen were the white principals in the scenes surrounding this feature of the story.

VIM STAR HONORED BY JACKSONVILLE CITIZENS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 28.

Before 75,000 people, Ethel Burton of the Vim Motion Picture Company was crowned queen of the annual fall festival in Jacksonville, Saturday night, October 21, and was presented with a handsome $250 diamond ring, a complete boudoir perfume set from the Southland Perfume Company, manufacturers of Orange Blossom perfume, and other numerous gifts, in honor of her popularity. Mayor J. E. T. Bowden of Jacksonville, was crowned king of the festival, and with Miss Burton, was the recipient of many congratulatory affairs given in their honor.

Grace Valentine (Metro)

Following the coronation, Mayor Bowden presented Miss Burton with a beautiful broach set with nine diamonds and nine opals, as a personal gift in recognition of her popularity among the residents of Jacksonville, the "Winter Movie Capital."

More than $500 in cash prizes were distributed during the masquerade ball to those persons impersonating their favorite motion picture star, in one of his or her most prominent pictures. Carlyle Blackwell, Dustin Farnum, Charley Chaplin, Harry C. Myers, Babe Hardy, Chester Conklin, Mabel Normand, Valeska Suratt, Stuart Holmes, Theda Bara, and others were among the players impersonated.

According to Louis Burstein, general manager of the Vim Motion Picture Company, there will be no changes in the personnel of officials at the local studio, under the management of the Amber Star Company. However, work will be completed on the enlargement of the stage that was started several weeks ago.

Six Features on Pathe One-a-Week Gold Rooster Program

First of the Series Consists of Astra Features Produced from the Stage Successes of Al. H. Woods and Henry W. Savage—Picture Rights Reported High

THOUGH Pathe's one-a-week Gold Rooster program is now only four weeks old, the results achieved in that short time are particularly gratifying to J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager, who has announced his intentions of releasing only features up to the standard of the best on the market.

On the Gold Rooster Program are six series of features, which are breaking box office records everywhere, and are already giving the longer established program features the stiffest kind of competition. They are: Astra—A. H. Woods and Henry W. Savage; Thanhouser — Gladys Hulette; Balboa—Baby Marie Osborne, Rudyard Kipling; Thanhouser—Florence La Badie, and Arrow productions.

The first series is the Astra features, produced from the great stage successes of Al. H. Woods and Henry W. Savage. In the year that Pathe has been releasing this series, exhibitors are unanimous in declaring that every one has been a "knock-out." The picture rights alone to some of these productions are reported to have cost as high as fifteen thousand dollars each. The Astra directors include Louis J. Gasnier, president of the company; Edward Jose, George Fitzmaurice, and Donald Mackenzie. The scenarios are by George B. Seitz. Instead of engaging some one star for this series, the Astra Film Corporation secures the stars who are best suited to play the leads in each play.

Among the successes already released on this series are: "At Bay," with Florence Reed as the star; "Madame X," with Dorothy Donnelly; 'New York," with Florence Reed and Fania Marinoff; "Big Jim Garrity," with Eleanor Woodruff and Robert Edeson, and "The Test," with Jane Grey. In the near future "The Challenge," with Helene Chadwick; "Kick In," with Molly King, and "The Yellow Ticket," with a famous star will be released as soon as completed.

Miss Hulette's second vehicle, to be released as a Pathe Gold Rooster play, was "Prudence, the Pirate," which made a decided hit, like "The Shine Girl." It was directed by William Parke, formerly Mansfield's stage director from the scenario by Agnes C. Johnston.

"The Light That Failed" is the first of the Kipling releases. Some others are promised for the near future.

The Florence La Badie series produced by Thanhouser include "The Fugitive," "The Fear of Poverty," and "Saint, Devil, and Woman." Miss La Badie is young, beautiful, and a finished actress. She knows the technic of the screen from beginning to end. She is a well-educated, well-balanced woman. All this shows in the features in which she is starred.

The Arrow Film Corporation, which produced "The Woman's Law," is now starting the production of some splendid features, which will be announced later. Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president, is personally supervising these productions.

No Less Than Six Large Houses on Coast to Book Pickfords

One of the First Will Be a 4,000-Seat Theatre, in Course of Erection by Turner and Dahnken in Oakland—Roth's $350,000 Structure in 'Frisco Is Another

WALTER E. GREENE, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, handling the new Mary Pickford subjects, announced last week that no less than six new motion picture theatres of unusual size, now in construction in various cities in the vicinity of the Pacific Coast, had contracted to open with a Mary Pickford release. The majority of them will be completed soon enough to book "Less Than Dust," while it is still a first run.

Contracts with these theatres were closed by Arthur S. Kane, the Artcraft representative on the Pacific Coast. The houses will be located in Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Santa Rosa, and Stockton, in California, while two others in Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Ore., will follow.

One of the first to open will be the 4,000-seat house now being erected in Oakland by Turner and Dahnken, whose headquarters are in San Francisco. This place is scheduled to open November 26 at the present time, and "Less Than Dust" has been booked. Eugene Roth's $350,000 theatre in construction at Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, will open with a Mary Pickford release, although it will not be completed in time to show the initial production of the Artcraft Company. In the meantime all the Pickford pictures will be run at the Portola theatre, which Mr. Roth already conducts not far from the site of his new house.

W. H. Clune's new house in Los Angeles at Ninth and Broadway on which he is expending $500,000, is another which will hold its premiere with a Pickford-Artcraft production. The Santa Rosa house is being constructed by the King-Reavis Amusement Company. While the population of the city is only 10,000, the theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,500, and will show all the Mary Pickford releases, according to present plans.

Turner and Dahnken's second theatre in the course of construction in Stockton will seat 2,400. Jensen and von Herberg, the Seattle and Portland theatre men, will show Pickford pictures in the new Beauty, Butte, Mont., as they are already doing in their other large houses.

"CIVILIZATION" SOLD TO FONTANA FOR PENNSYLANIA, OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA

Hiller and Wilk, Inc., acting for the A. G. Fontana Production, Inc., closed the biggest deal of the year with Thomas H. Ince for "Civilization" in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and District of Columbia.

Branch offices will be opened by the A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, while the home office will be located in the Longacre Building, this city.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.

THOMAS H. INCE and the Ince Culver City studio is alive with political matters, and there is every reason to believe that it will be a hot bed for democracy from now until after November 7. Thomas H. Ince started it all, when he went on record as being a staunch supporter of President Wilson and his policy, in a letter to the Woodrow Wilson Independent League of Southern California. The letter was used in local newspapers as Ince gave his reasons why he was for a continuance of the present administration.

This had no more than appeared in newspapers than "politicians" began taking a straw vote at the studio, and, according to the count, Wilson was re-elected by an overwhelming majority. When the players of the Democratic faith learned the number of members at the studio they went about organizing leagues to work with the Democratic Campaign Committee. One of these is composed of men and Ince was elected president. Raymond B. West is secretary, and in the long list of members appear the names of Charles Miller, Charles Gunn, Victor L. Schertzinger, Robert Brunton, and many others. The officers of the woman's division are: Bessie Barriscale, Clara Williams, Marjorie Wilson, Enid Bennett, and Louise Glaum.

William S. Hart is next to be seen as a bad-man in "The Devil's Double," which has been completed in every department, and is ready for release. Hart is seen as "Bowie" Blake, a fierce gambler, until he meets a woman who puts love in his soul.

Hart is keeping the eighteen-thousand-acre-Inceville-ranch in a noisy condition, as he is staging with the aid of his cowboys, a number of gun-fighting scenes. More than a thousand rounds of ammunition will be used by the famous "horse-opera" troop. Hart, in this photoplay, as yet unnamed, is again wearing his sixshooters, and playing a bad-man part.

The second contract was made with Olga Printzlau, who is to continue as scenario writer for a term of two years. Miss Printzlau has been with C. Gardner Sullivan's staff at the studio for but a few months, and already has several stories completed for production. Prior to her work here she was affiliated with the Edison, American, and for almost two years was feature writer for the Universal. In addition to a large number of successful photoplay scenarios, she has written a number of short stories, and has one published book.

John Lynch, also staff author, has been placed under contract by Mr. Ince.

Ince Makes Two Important Contracts

Thomas H. Ince made two important contracts last week. One provides that Dorothy Dalton will be seen in Triangle Kay-Bee plays for the next two years, she having renewed her contract for that period. This actress has been with the Ince organization for the past year, first appearing with William S. Hart in "The Disciple," and following played important roles in "D'Artagnan," "The Raiders," and "The Captive God." Following this she was starred in "The Jungle Child," and her latest vehicle is "The Vagabond Prince."

A real curiosity consisting of the interior of a New England general store is the center of attraction on one of the big stages at the Ince studio. The stock consists of practically every article imaginable from farm implements to needles, foods for man and beast, and cobwebs galore. The store is supposed to be one which had been handed down from one generation to another, and a great quantity of odds and ends accumulated. Walter Edwards will use this set in a production which will star Frank Keenan. The company is just home from spending ten days at Norwalk, Cal., where one of the pioneer mills is still in operation. Supporting Keenan are little Thelma Salter, Gertrude Claire, Agnes Herring, and J. Frank Burke.

Reginald Barker is busy with the directing of what is described as being "a weird detective drama," written by C. Gardner Sullivan. William Desmond is the star, and Margaret Thompson is playing the feminine lead.

William S. Hart is compiling a book, to be composed of the best verse he receives. Every week the actor's mail is filled with this form of explosions from fans in all parts of the country, and it is Mr. Hart's intention to select the best hundred he receives and have them published.

The Fox studios have been the rendezvous for ballroom opponents almost every day during the past week, but, owing to weather conditions, the 300 people found it necessary to amuse themselves every day instead of working before the camera. A most elaborate interior set has been prepared for the production being made by Richard Stanton. This measures one hundred and eighty feet in length, and more than 300 in evening dress are appearing in the scenes shot here.

Director Apfel will shortly begin a new production, but in the meantime is out chasing the festive duck with the most recent addition to his big collection of guns.

Farnum with a "Biled" Shirt

Director Frank Lloyd, with a company of Fox Players, including William Farnum, Vivian Rich, Charles Clary, and others, are spending a few days at Sacramento, Cal., where legislative scenes for his second production will be shot. The story deals with the strong love of a man for his friend, and self-sacrifices made by him. This will be the first Farnum picture made in many months, in which that star does not appear as the hero of open-air melodrama. In this he will wear the silk hat and the "biled" linen, and execute polite society maneuvers.

Upon the completion of this picture, Farnum will go to another director, who will be in charge of filming his future stories. In the next subject he will be supported by Charles Clary, James Marcus, and Jewel Carmen. This picture will serve to introduce Miss Carmen in Fox photoplays. Previous to this engagement she was a member of the Fine Arts staff, and her most recent work was in "Manhattan Madness," in support of Douglas Fairbanks.

Director Otis Turner has gone with a Fox Company to Balboa Beach, where they will remain for a week shooting water stuff. Turner has been on this class of scenes for more than a week, the first being those taken of the yacht race by members of the South Coast Club for the William Fox silver loving cup.

A Fox comedy company has left for a two-weeks' stay in the Brea oil fields. Production by this organization has been delayed because of illness of the leading woman, Julia Faye. Iva Crosthwaite has been engaged to succeed Miss Faye, and will play the lead opposite "Smiling" Billy Mason.

Announcement was made from the Fox studio last week that Edwin Frazee will, the first of the year, be added to the list of comedy producers of that organization. Frazee has been identified with the production of Keystone comedies, where he served as director.

Charles Arling is to be the featured comedian in the next subject of the Walter Reed-Fox Company, with a supporting cast which will include Amy Jerome and Annette De Foy.

The Lasky Company has found it necessary to extend an electric power line about two miles in order to secure light necessary for the Kleig equipment, needed for the interior photographing of a mine. These scenes were for the production being staged by Frank Reicher, with Fannie Ward as star, which is known as "Betty of the Orange Country."

Costumes which have been in storage for some time, the property of Marie Doro, have been brought to the coast for use by that actress. Miss Doro will be seen in the Lasky production of "Oliver Twist," in the same costume she wore in the stage production. Included is a wig, said to be made from Miss Doro's own hair, which she wore during her stage engagement in this play.

A number of sets far in advance of production have been built by the technical department of the Lasky studio, and for a time it looks as though the men of this department will be on easy street. The companies have all been delayed, because of cloudy weather, and thus the production department has advanced.

Lasky Lane to Be Retained

Lasky lane, the only thoroughfare in the Lasky studio,, either side of which is faced by rows of dressing rooms, is not to be destroyed in order to make more room for stages. The management of the studio decided this after the players presented a petition asking that the "land mark" be retained. The dressing rooms are said to have been occupied by more celebrities of the stage and screen than any similar ones in use today. The first star occupant was Dustin Farnum, and after him came Edward Ables, Max Figman, Marguerite Clark, Theodore Roberts and many others including Geraldine Farrar, Victor Moore, Lou Tellegen, Charles Richmond, and the present players being featured in Lasky productions, Blanche Sweet, Fannie Ward, Marie Doro, Mae Murray, Cleo Ridgely, Jack Dean, Tom Meighn, James Neil, Wallace Reid, Horace Carpenter, Billy Elmer, Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Sessue Hayakawa, and others.

Director J. P. McGowan, Helen Holmes and Cameraman S. A. Sues, together with a number of players of the Signal Company producing "A Lass of the Lumberlands," upon advice from El Portal, California near Yosemite Valley, that weather conditions there were suitable for motion picture making, went there and remained several days securing exteriors. In all more than sixty scenes were shot, many taken on the Yosemite Valley railway.

The organization is now working on the fifth episode of the serial and the story for it is laid upon facts based upon the experiences of the Arcata and Mad River Railway Company. This is owned by a lumber company near Arcata, originally operated solely for the company's use. Residents in the section sought to secure services and attempted to bring the road under the jurisdiction of the commerce commission. The first attempt failed. Then the lumber company's employee at the most inland point accepted shipment to another state. This fact was brought to the attention of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and despite numerous law suits and appeals to the higher federal courts, the railway company lost, after an expense of between fifteen and twenty thousand dollars. It is now necessary for the railway company to accept for shipment any article, and also to furnish transportation to anyone who desires it.

At the Signal studio, mammoth set representing a logging camp has been built, and whether it is used or not depends upon the weather. If it is possible for the company to shoot exteriors at a genuine camp near Yosemite Valley, they will go to that place, and the big expense of building this set will go for naught. The set was built for emergency use only, and is a part of Mr. McGowan's plans to make up for time lost because of inclement weather which delayed production in the lumber regions.

Mary McGowan, mother of J. P. McGowan, who spent the past six months in America visiting her son, is shortly to leave for her home in Australia.

Perkins Recovering from Operation

Jean Perkins, member of the Signal Company, who prior to his engagement there did dare-devil dives into nets and tanks for circus and carnival companies, is in a hospital recovering from an operation made necessary by injury received several months ago, when he made a high dive for a Signal picture. At the time the stunt was staged, Perkins did not realize he was injured. The slight injury developed into a series of complications which made the operation necessary.

The most remarkable pictures of a scenic or educational nature have just been developed in Los Angeles laboratories from the film exposed by Al. Smith, who recently returned from spending more than six months in Alaska and islands along the coast. While on this trip Mr. Smith was accompanied by his wife and several assistants. Two reels completely edited and filmed have been placed in one subject titled "Kodiak Bear Hunting." It shows the largest variety bear known in his native haunts of Kodiak Island off the coast of Alaska. After days of searching the party located a very large specimen, and after proper precautions were made, secured several hundred feet of negative that show it and a number of its cubs in their daily life. Finally the bear was shot as it came down a hill toward the camera. Five bullets were required before it was killed. The skin from the bear measures twelve feet in length.

Mabel Normand and Her "Jitney"

Laughable Situations in L-Ko's Three-Reel Comedy, Featuring Alice Howell in "Alice in Society"

Another subject secured will consist of four or more reels. When edited it will be known as "Alaskan Wonders in Motion." Smith and his party spent a number of days at Turnagain Arm, named by Captain Cook, where there is one of the two known water bores of the earth. This comes in before the tide, traveling at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour, and most frequently attains a height of more than thirty feet. The bore destroys everything in its path, and has been known to completely annihilate gasoline boats of the size used by ocean going ships.

Several weeks were spent along the locations described in Rex Beach's "The Iron Trail." On one side of this is the Child's glacier, and on the other the Miles. Both are more than four hundred feet in height. The Child's extends more than three hundred and fifty miles in length, and the other is even longer. Smith made a number of different views showing the ice falling from these, some requiring days of waiting when he would have his camera focused on birds perched upon the ice about to break loose. The noise caused by the falling of the ice is described by Smith to resemble thunder of an eastern electrical storm.

While in the Alaska territory, Mr. Smith secured a great quantity of articles suitable for lobby displays, including bear teeth, claws and hides which will be furnished for display purposes.

Prior to his trip north, Smith served as a cameraman for a number of years. He was connected with the Pathe organization, and made many of the scenes for "See America First" series. He also filmed "Capturing Mountain Lions Alive in Montana."

"Meanest Man on Earth"

"The Meanest Man on Earth" is to be seen on the screen, and William V. Mong is to impersonate the name part in the two-reel photoplay he is producing from scenario by Harvey Gates. It is a melodrama appropriate for Thanksgiving time. The final scenes show a change coming over a young couple when they hear the church bells ring on Thanksgiving Day. Instead of adding sorrow to the life of the girl's uncle, which they had planned to do, they return to his home and bring gladness. In the cast are Willard Wayne, Little Zoe Rae, Harry M. Holden and others.

Episode number thirteen of the Liberty serial is being filmed, and in it misfortune befalls all the leaders of the cast. There is a double tragedy which causes the death of the feminine heavy and the hero, and Liberty herself, is taken away to be thrown into prison at Chihuahua, Mexico. The American troops met by outnumbering forces fifty to one, are all killed or taken prisoners with the exception of eight.

The first of the Yorke Norroy series being filmed by John McDermott, and known as "The Last Cigarette," has a unique climax. Kingsley Benedict appearing as Norroy, has secured valuable papers for his government, and international spies, who wish to secure these for their own government, secure liberty for a man sentenced to death if he will take the life of Norroy. Norroy is captured and held by the convicted man at the point of a gun while he fills in certain papers for the plotters. He lights his last cigarette while doing this, and this makes possible his escape. Vola Smith is playing the feminine heavy lead, and Malcolm Blevins is taking the part of the convict who traps Norroy.

Prior to taking up the filming of the series, McDermott made the two-reel picture known as "The Thief," from a scenario by Willis-Woods. The plot for this pertains to the eternal triangle. Malcolm Blevins appears as the thief, and Irene Hunt is the wife.

"Bred in the Purple," the juvenile picture with Elizabeth Janes and Elwood Bredell being made by Ruth Ann Baldwin, will show two children who save their money from the sale of their pet rabbits, and invest it in trying to locate a missing horse to gain a reward offered.

Director Allen Holubar has filmed a one reeler to be known as "Midnight," which is an adaptation from the Frank Spearman story by E. J. Clawson. The subject will show the soul of a child leading a priest to the death bed of her father, who since her death had taken to drink, and was dying from a wound. The man is sought by the police, and dies shortly before they arrive. Little Zoe Rae takes the part of the girl, and Mr. Holubar appears as the priest.

Lois Weber's current Universal production, "The Mysterious Mrs. Musselwhite" has an interesting story. The leading character is a young man overburdened with wealth, who becomes bored with all the joys and beauty that his money buy him. His friends noticing this hope to arouse him to see more in life, and so induce him to visit a clairvoyant. Jack Kerrigan takes the leading role, Evelyn Selby is the clairvoyant, and Mary MacLaren the girl.

The second installment of "The Voice on the Wire" series has been titled "The Sceptre of Death." Ben Wilson as the scientific detective Montague Shirley, attempts by scientific deduction to discover whose voice it is that brings death threats to important people. Ernie Shields plays the second lead, that of a man who receives the warning that he is to be the next victim of the mysterious murderers.

The western melodrama made by Henry McRae in two reels and known as "Giant Powder" will offer Fred Church in the juvenile role, L. M. Wells as the leading character actor, that of the boy's father, and Edith Johnson the girl. It is a story of mine life in which two men seek the hand of the storekeeper's daughter. The two men fight for her, and are separated when she learns the cause. Later the heavy rescues Church, the juvenile, when his foot is caught, and he is threatened with death over a cliff, on condition that he will leave. The girl takes matters in her own hands, and decides she will leave with the juvenile.

This Chap Has a "Peanut Soul"

Director Lynn Reynolds' story "The Man With the Peanut Soul," will offer George Hernandez in the name role. The part is that of an aged man who has been embittered against the world, because of numerous disappointments, but is brought to look upon life with a smile when he is entrapped in a mountain hut by a landslide, and there faces death in order to escape. Reynolds has Myrtle Gonzalez to play the leading feminine part, Val Paul the juvenile which is a semi-western character, and a big cast to support. Many of the scenes for this will be taken in Grand Canyon of Arizona, where a landslide will be staged.

"Culdoon" is the mysterious title of the Nestor comedy. The name refers to the part taken by Lee Moran, the operator of a sanitorium where all ills to which flesh is heir is cured. Eddie Lyons as a matinee idol, goes to the place for recreation and treatment, and there meets an aged man and his daughter. The actor and the owner are both smitten on the girl, and their rivalry takes the form of winning the good graces of the father, which create numerous comedy situations. The story is by Bess Meredyth, and Louis Chaudet is directing the picture.

"Winning a Mother," a comedy written and being produced by Captain Peacocke, has to do with the members of a bankrupt road show forcing one of their number to impersonate the missing son of a wealthy woman in order to raise money that they may get out of town. The comedy is in one reel.

A burlesque on "Damon and Pythias" is being made by Director W. W. Beaudine of the Joker players. The beautiful story of love and friendship has been changed to show jealousy and hatred, which builds up a number of slapstick situations. The usual Joker cast appears in this subject.

"The Organ-Grinder," a drama of two reels with Italian atmosphere, is being filmed by Douglas Gerrard, who directs and plays the lead with Ruth Clifford in the feminine lead part.

Betty Schade, who has been seen in Universal program subjects for the past three years, and who took a prominent part in the Pavlowa subject made by the Smalleys, is now playing the featured part of a five-reel production known as "The Reward of the Faithless." The opposite lead is taken by Wedgewood Nowell, who has appeared in the lead part in several Universal-Bluebird subjects. The photoplay has a Russian atmosphere.

Rex D. Rosselli, who has played character parts in many Henry McRae subjects and worked under the direction of other well-known directors at Universal City, is to film several subjects featuring Joe Martin, the orang-outang. Rosselli is superintendent of the Universal zoo at the present time.

Roy Stewart has been cast to play the featured part in the five-reel production taken up by Director Charles Swickard entitled "Mixed Blood."

Director F. A. Kelsey has been selected to direct the first subject in which Harry Carey, recently contracted by the Universal, appears. The Western actor takes the role of an outlaw in this semi-western production of three reels. Working opposite him is Louise Lovely.

Macdonald Directs "His Precious Jewel"

Donald Macdonald is directing the filming of "His Precious Jewel" partially of the nature of a melodrama in two reels. He has Edith Roberts and Lee Hill as the featured players.

Charles Rankin, who served as manager of production at U City, and was called East for consultation in reference to sales plans, has returned to U City, but it is not announced in what way he will be connected.

Mary Chambers, former American newspaper woman and caricaturist who now claims London as her home, and who perhaps is best known by the pen name of Kate Carew, was a guest at U City last week, where she spent a full day learning the technic of motion pictures.

Another distinguished visitor of the week was Frank Rolph, uncle of Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco.

Raymond Wells is next to produce a five-reel production to be known as "Constantinople by the Sixth." Ruth Stonehouse is to be starred in this, and the story, which is by Fred Myton, deals with an attempt of a man to reach the Turkish capital by a given time for an important engagement. Miss Stonehouse takes the part of a boy who runs away from home and becomes a stowaway. As such the latter becomes the traveling associate of the one who is attempting to set a more speedy record than that described in the story "Around the world in eighty days."

Barnyard and urban scenes make up the Mack Sennett Keystone comedy "Haystacks and Steeples," which has just been completed by Clarence Badger. It is a farcical melodrama with the old time villian trying to win the heart of the fair one through the means of posing as a man of wealth, and thus gaining the good will of the girl's relatives. In this instance the girl runs away to the country and there finds a new lover who appears just in the nick of time to stop the marriage. The principals are Gloria Swanson, Reggie Morris and Bobbie Vernon.

Mack Sennett has added to his collection of artists, Jasper the educated diving horse, and his trainer Soveren, who are to add thrills to the comedy melodrama. The first scene was staged this week when Jasper and his trainer in a runaway scene ran off a broken bridge, and dived more than twenty-five feet to the Keystone tank below. It is spoken of as the most sensational stunt ever staged by a Keystone Company, and the act was performed in the presence of practically every member of the producing staff.

Bobbie Dunn scored additional honors as a thrill maker last week when he jumped from the running board of an automobile moving at twenty-five miles an hour over the balustrade of a bridge in Hollenbeck Park, and dived to the water forty feet below. The scene is for a picture being made by Frank Griffin, which as yet has not been titled. This is only one of the many stunts that Dunn has pulled, the list includes a leap from a four-story building, and numerous high dives into the Pacific Ocean from ships. He has also made the slide for life down a four hundred foot cable.

Winsome Alice in Railroad Comedy

Roscoe Arbuckle, Al. St. John and Alice Lake have taken up the filming of a railroad comedy, or at least one which has numerous scenes of railroad properties, and are working at local yards. In two instances trans-continental trains were delayed in departing to make possible the shooting of a Keystone comedy scene.

Two companies are absent from the Keystone studio. Walter Wright with Ora Carew and a number of supporting players joined the Sells Floto circus when it left Los Angeles Wednesday, and will be out for a week or more taking scenes for "The Circus Girl."

Director Frank Griffin with Charles Murray as leading comedian and Louise Fazenda playing opposite, are spending a week at San Diego.

A reception was held on the Keystone lot when an unannounced pair of distinguished visitors arrived. They were Douglas Fairbanks and Director Paul Powell of the Fine Arts Company. It took but a few minutes for word to get all sets, and all the Mack Sennett companies took part in entertaining the actor and his director.

Two companies have begun work at the Horsley studio for releases on the Mutual. Crane Wilbur is to be starred in a series of pictures, the first one of which is to be titled "The Morals of Man," which was written by the actor himself. Tom Ricketts of the American staff is in charge of the direction, and Florence Prienty is playing the opposite. Others in the organization are Oliver Stokes, Nan Christy, John

A Quartet of Scenes from Four Lasky Offerings—Left to Right, "Lost and Won," "The Black Wolf," "The Years of the Locust," and "The Soul of Kura San"

Oaker, Harry Ingram, Hugh Bennett, and others.

The Cub Company will consist of practically all the former members, George Ovey being the featured comedian. Claire Alexander will play the feminine lead, and others are George George, Jeff Osborne, Helen Gilmore and Jay McCarty.

Another company is being formed and will begin work within a week. Ulysses Davis, who was formerly with the Horsley Company, is to be in charge of directing this, which will make animal subjects of five reels.

All the Horsley animals have been returned to the zoo here from Coney Island, and will take part in pictures.

Chaplin Studio Comedy Sent East

After a week in the cutting room, the motion picture studio comedy of Charles Chaplin was given the final touches last week, and shipped East for distribution. Mr. Chaplin and his scenario aides including Vincent Bryant and Maverick Terrill have prepared the scenario for the next production, and filming will be in progress within a day or two.

But one new story was started by the Vogue organization last week. It has so many complications and double crossing events that the scenario department, for want of a title, have dubbed it "The Dentist Story." Rube Miller is to dress up in this picture, which in itself is a big novelty. Rube, a corset clerk, had secretly married the office girl of a dentist. The dentist, thinking her single, carries on quite a flirtation. He refuses to give his wife the money she wants, and she goes to a park where she meets the corset clerk who is out of a job.

They become acquainted, and she tells of the unkind ways of her husband with respect to money, and Rube goes to the dentist and borrows a hundred dollars, leaving with the reply, "I will return this to you or your wife this afternoon." He gives the money to the dentist's wife, and they go shopping. She buys a coat, and presents him with a beautiful watch.

Fearing to take the coat home she pawns it, and gives the ticket to her husband to redeem. Rube sends the watch home by a messenger, and his wife secures it. The dentist gives the coat to his office girl, and the girl gives him the watch. The wife calls at the office and makes a discovery, and Rube comes in to have dental work done, and sees his watch. How they will ever explain it, must be a mystery until the film is completed. Lillian Hamilton has the featured part of the office girl, and Ed Laurrie appears as the dentist.

EDITH STOREY TALKS TO SAN DIEGO AUDIENCES

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Diego, Cal., Oct. 28.

Edith Storey of the Vitagraph Company has been visiting this city and the exposition, accompanied by her mother. She talked to the afternoon and evening audiences at the Cabrillo theatre one day during her stay. Manager Hicks gave her a "personally conducted" tour of the exposition grounds, which she highly praised when she met President G. Aubrey Davidson, who extended her special courtesies.

Manager Harry Pollard of the Pollard Picture Players is busy with the finishing touches of the five-reeler, "Miss Jackie of the Navy," which will be released in the near future through the Mutual, and will soon be hard at work on "A Night at Tarquizzi," a five-reel play adapted from a novelette in The Parisienne.

Fellow Vitagraphers on the Observation Platform of the Train at New York Central Station, N. Y. City, Seeing Edith Storey Off to California

Henry Otto, formerly with the American, Universal and Metro companies, has joined the Pollard forces as a co-director with Mr. Pollard and will have charge of filming "The Butterfly Girl," which is to be the third of the five-reel features in which Margarita Fischer leads.

This picture will be made almost entirely on the Isthmus, as the amusement street at the San Diego Exposition is known, and will depict the transition of a waif who found employment with some of the concessionaires, and experienced their life with its gaudy environment. Her associates include the weinie vendor, the Hawaiian troupe of singers and dancers, the gypsy fortune-teller, the living statues, and the like. Ultimately she emerges, like a butterfly, into a higher plane of life and becomes a society favorite. Miss Fischer will be called upon to dance the Hula Hula in one of the scenes, but its rendition will not compare with her usual dainty dancing with which her audiences are more familiar. Jack Mower will be seen in "The Butterfly Girl" as one of the Hawaiian singers. Mr. Mower, by the way, can play the part to perfection, having been born in Honolulu. Stuart Featherstonehaugh will do the camera work.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, and J. R. Crone, manager of the Vogue Film Company, were among last week's visitors at the Pollard studio at the Exposition.

Melvin Mayo, who has been assisting Mr. Pollard in directing, has returned to Los Angeles, as has also Julian Lamothe, who has been in charge of the scenario and publicity department at the Pollard studio.

After being redecorated throughout the Grand theatre has reopened under the management of John F. Eidee, showing Metro films. A new Hafeman nitro-silver screen, 16 by 20 feet, has been installed. Bills will be changed Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Mabel Normand's Peace Day will be observed at the Exposition on Sunday, October 29, and Miss Normand is expected to be the central figure in the program of the day, which will include the planting of an olive tree and the burying of a weapon of war.

POINT PIDGIN SELECTED FOR LIGHT-HOUSE SCENES IN A METRO-YORKE

Point Pidgin, California, has been selected as a logical location for the making of light-house and sea scenes for the coming Yorke-Metro subject, "Pidgin Island." This location was selected after photographs and descriptions of all the light-houses along the Pacific Coast from north of San Francisco to San Diego had been compared.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison appear in this subject as secret agents whose professional work is unknown to each other. Virginia Corban, a child actress who has appeared in a number of Pacific Coast made pictures, will be seen in this subject.

LEONHARDT, WESTERN DISTRICT MANAGER FOR FOX, SPENDS WEEK IN LOS ANGELES

Harry Leonhardt, Western district manager for the Fox Film Corporation, spent the past week in Los Angeles, and has departed for the East. Much of the time was spent at the two studios of the Fox organization, and with Fox exhibitors. Prior to his departure Mr. Leonhardt was host at a dinner given theatre men, news and trade paper representatives, and a number of the Leonhardt was accompanied East by Field Carmichael, manager of the Los Angeles exchange, who will attend the Exhibitors' convention before returning.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Exchangemen in Washington, D. C., Hold Meeting and Discuss Problems of Vital Interest to the Trade

THE suppression of the photoplay "Purity" in the District of Columbia occupied a considerable part of the meeting of the exchange managers of Washington held last week in the rooms of the National Press Club, although many other matters of interest to both exchanges and the theatres were taken up during the meeting.

The evening opened with a sort of informal reception during which the several new members of the industry were introduced to their fellows. Following this the members gathered in the small dining room where an elaborate banquet had been prepared for them. In the center of the table was a huge bunch of roses presented to the exchange managers with wishes of success by Gude Bros. Company.

J. H. Butner, manager of the Triangle Exchange, was elected toastmaster and later chairman of the meeting. In opening the discussions he told of the need and of the great opportunity for an organization of this type, and expressed it as his opinion as being the psychological moment, with so many varied questions facing the exchanges, to get together and form an organization that would be able to cope with such matters.

Considerable time was utilized in the discussion of the proposed fire regulations under which a majority of the exchanges would have to seek other quarters, it being said that there are only three places that would really come within the provision of the proposed regulations. Reference was made to the report that Tom Moore, prominent exhibitor, was about to start on the construction of such a building, but there being no definite information at hand the problem was passed over for the time being.

It was voted that the managers take up with the heads of their companies certain matters pertaining to express service which to their minds are not to the best interests of the business. Among the several things desired in this respect are the more prompt payment of C. O. D.'s, the more prompt settlement of claims for overcharge, loss, damage, etc.; a later pick-up in the night than is now afforded exchanges that films may be sent into Southern territory with greater dispatch, and a more earnest attempt on the part of the companies to bill as "on 2" shipments consisting of, say, a package of reels and a package of paper, instead of charging for each of these separately.

H. C. Wales, D. F. O'Donnell, and E. G. Evans, managers of the World, Pathe, and Mutual Exchanges, respectively, were appointed members of a nominating committee to make recommendations at the next meeting as to the officers desired for the coming year as well as to suggest a program of work that such an organization as this might well take up.

Carl F. Senning and C. R. Milliman, of the Fox and Universal Exchanges, respectively, are to draft resolutions on the death of J. Leo Yates, formerly manager of the Universal Exchange in that city, and, as stated by Mr. Senning in bringing the matter before the meeting, one of the best liked film men who ever served in the city. Regrets of his death were heard on all sides.

C. R. Milliman, G. R. Mayo, and N. H. Spitzer, the two latter being members of the Hy Art Masterplays Exchange, were the newcomers at the meeting, Mr. Milliman having entered upon his present duties but a week previously, while Mr. Spitzer had arrived in town the day of the meeting. Each of these was called upon to make a short speech and Mr. Spitzer told of how a similar organization had been formed in Kansas City.

As a whole, the meeting was highly enjoyable and interesting. Of the matters brought up for discussion each had a direct bearing upon the business of the exchanges represented. The enthusiasm noticeable throughout the evening, it is believed, will be carried through to the end that a successful organization will be formed. It is already planned that another similar banquet-meeting will be held in November.

ALLIANCE, DALLAS, CONTRACTS FOR WEEKLY RELEASES OF EDUCATIONAL

The Alliance Film Company, Dallas, Texas, has contracted for the weekly release of the Educational Film Corporation and beginning November 4, will handle the subjects of this company in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. The same exchange has also contracted to handle the Christie comedies in the same territory.

The Educational releases obtained by this company embrace, "The Stampede," "The Film Hunters," "The Sunset Trail," "The Yarn of the Sloren'ell," "The World's Road" and "The Trail to Cloudy Pass," while some of the first of the Christie comedies are "His Wedding Night," "The Making Over of Mother," "He Loved the Ladies" and "What's in a Name?"

SUPERIOR FEATURES, DETROIT, BUYS MICHIGAN RIGHTS TO CHRISTIE COMEDIES

The Superior Features, 71 Griswold street, Detroit, has taken the Michigan rights on the Christie Comedies. Art W. Blankmeyer, of this concern, has also purchased the Ohio rights, and will shortly expand to Cincinnati and Cleveland.

CLEVELAND ELECTS OFFICERS

New members elected to the Cleveland Screen Club last week were: J. J. Mooney, Phil Isaacs, T. E. Surrell, John Pekras, W. W. Kulp, M. D. Gugerman, George Shenker, David Olmsted and Maurice Spitalny.

Mutual Exchange in Philadelphia Is Reorganized and Will Move to More Commodious Quarters in Thirty Days

THE exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation in Philadelphia, has been entirely reorganized, since B. R. Folmas became manager. A new system of efficiency has been put into service. In the next thirty days the exchange will move from its present quarters at 251 N. Twelfth street, to a new building in the immediate vicinity. Although but one year in its present home, the growth of the Mutual business in that section makes this change imperative. Especially have the Mutual Star features, and the Chaplin releases been in big demand. The new quarters will have 8,000 square feet on one floor.

John F. Gill, formerly of Triangle and well known to all film people as one of the best bookers in the business has been acquired as head booker in the Philadelphia Mutual Exchange.

Ed. Kraupa, proprietor of the Monarch Film Exchange, is making improvements in his office, among which is a new vault. This is necessitated by the growth of the business. From five to ten new customers are being booked each week.

The Monarch is now distributing the Ford Weekly, which goes free to any exhibitor desiring this service, whether a regular customer or not of the Monarch. Mr. Kraupa says the weekly is real news with the Ford part made very slight indeed.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company is getting so much Pennsylvania business, a new exchange had to be established. Phillipsburg, Pa. was the place chosen.

C. V. Carrick, district manager, went to Phillipsburg to install this newest Universal branch. The name of the manager selected has not been announced.

C. G. Powell, formerly manager of the Mutual Exchange, and more recently special representative for "Gloria's Romance," and later for the Kleine Poster Company, is now with the Electric Theatre Supply Company as special representative in Pennsylvania for "The Yellow Menace" and "The Crimson Stain," the two serials for which the Electric has the rights for several states.

Changes in San Francisco Exchanges Cause Discussion on West Coast

THE frequent changes in the management of some of the film exvhanges at San Francisco has aroused considerable discussion on the advisability of such a policy and it is freely remarked in San Francisco that there is almost always some new exchange manager striving to make the acquaintance of the trade. Almost invariably when a change is made a man will be brought out from the East to assume charge, instead of appointing some one with a wide acquaintance among Western exhibitors, and necessarily it is a long time before he thoroughly understands conditions in his territory.

In many cases the manager of the San Francisco branch of the Eastern house has for his territory all of California and Nevada. The size of this field may be judged from the fact that California alone is more than eight hundred miles in length, the state exceeding in size the combined areas of New York, Ohio, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Delaware and Rhode Island. The northern and central sections of the state, comprising the territory served from the San Francisco offices, embrace about three-quarters of California.

The concerns that have apparently made the greatest success in the film exchange business there are those managed by western men who understand western business methods and which make but few changes.

No less than three projects are under way for the erection of additional buildings on San Francisco's Film Row, for the use of film exchanges, and one of these has reached the stage where foundations for a one-story Class-A structure are being put in. Plans are being prepared for a four story building nearer Market street, while arrangements are being completed for the erection of a two-story building at Jones and Golden Gate avenue. There are half a dozen firms desirous of locating on this thoroughfare and the outlook is that they will all be accommodated.

The Pathe Exchange, Inc., is getting settled in its new quarters in the Musical Building on Market street and now that the moving task is off his mind Manager H. E. Lotz is turning his attention to perfecting his sales organization. Several new men will be put on and a determined effort will be made to bring in business.

Nat A. Magner, who returned from New York but a few weeks ago, is making another Eastern trip in connection with a large deal that is under way. He is now becoming a formidable rival of Sol Lesser in the matter of making frequent journeys to the Eastern metropolis.

William J. Citron, manager of the San Francisco branch of the William Fox Film Corporation, has departed for New York to attend the meeting of branch managers. Business in his territory is reported by Mr. Citron to be keeping up to the high level established some time ago, country business having shown a material increase of late. Great interest is being taken in the release of the Annette Kellermann production and Mr. Citron hopes to have some interesting information to impart to California exhibitors concerning this on his return.

Great interest is being shown in the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay releases that have been received in California, but up to the present time Manager W. O. Edmonds has not arranged for a first run in any downtown house. However, he anticipates that the service will be placed soon, as exhibitors who have reviewed the productions are greatly pleased with them. Many inquiries for them are coming from out-of-town places and the exchange on Golden Gate avenue is a very busy place, additional help having been taken on to assist with the clerical work.

The San Francisco branch of the Triangle Film Corporation has not been disposed of, but it is anticipated that a deal for its transfer will be completed at an early date. It is believed that it will be taken over by San Francisco film interests.

Marion H. Kohn, of the Consolidated Film Corporation, is still in New York, but his return to the Coast is expected at an early date. During his absence G. Epstein has charge and is succeeding in keeping the films on hand working in good shape.

Since the opening of the public schools the Atlas Educational Film Company, Pacific Building, has been doing a heavy business, both in the sale of machines and in the rental of film. This concern takes care of the films being accumulated by the University of California.

Extensive alterations are being made in the offices of the Independent Film Exchange on Golden Gate avenue, this concern having taken over more space to accommodate its business. Manager Chamberlain recently returned from a trip to Oregon.

INTERNATIONAL APPOINTS HORGAN MANAGER FOR BOSTON EXCHANGE

The International has appointed Dan Horgan manager of the Boston branch of the International, succeeding F. H. Vine.

Mr. Horgan was born and reared in Boston and has been connected with the film industry during the past two years, first as roadman for Pathe, later going with the International when it opened its Boston office.

District Manager B. F. Lyon has been in Boston the past week "breaking in" the new manager and reorganizing the sales force. Two new salesmen have been added to the Boston office. E. L. Knight, for several years manager of the Bijou Theatre, Springfield, will cover the territory vacated by Mr. Horgan, which is Western Massachusetts, and Connecticut east of Hartford. S. P. Levenburg, formerly of the Unicorn, has been assigned to Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont territory that has heretofore been covered by W. S. Davidson, who is transferred to Rhode Island, Boston and vicinity and the Cape.

BOWLES WRITES ADVERTISEMENTS FOR ALL EXCHANGES

H. G. Bowles, publicity man of the Universal exchange, Kansas City, Mo., is doing what no other man in the city has done. Mr. Bowles writes the advertisements of several theatres for the local papers. These are not written once a week, but as often as the advertisement is changed. Mr. Bowles makes no distinction between the advertisements featuring the exchange he represents and the other exchanges of the city. The advertising written by him does not cost a penny.

Lederman of the Laemmle Film Service in Des Moines Entertains Thirty Members of His Force at His Country Home

MANAGER D. B. LEDERMAN of the Laemmle Film Service entertained the thirty members of his force at his country home in West Des Moines recently. Three automobiles left the office at six o'clock in the evening for Mr. Lederman's home. A cold lunch was then served. Each department gave a little stunt, while individual honors went to "Bill" O'Hare, who sells Universal pictures on the road. O'Hare won his merits on his voice. The big feature of the evening was a series of dances by the host and hostess. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lederman proved to be artists on "tripping the light fantastic" and gave their guests a delightful treat. Although Mr. Lederman had been planning an event of this sort for some time this was the first evening he had managed to bring his workers together for a social time.

A new road man with the Pathe exchange is George Skala, who formerly sold tobacco in Iowa.

Maurice W. Stoffer, special auditor for Carl Laemmle, was at the office of the Universal in Des Moines for four days last week. Mr. Stoffer went there from the Laemmle Film Service offices at Omaha and left for Chicago.

L. A. Sheridan, manager of the Pathe exchange, gets a little more enthusiastic each day over "The Shielding Shadow." Mr. Sheridan predicts record sales for this serial. Incidentally, he adds that the Florence Rose fashion pictures distributed by Pathe are going big.

R. H. Gill, manager of the Iowa Theatre Company, recently was away on a trip to Chicago.

A visitor to the Des Moines offices recently was Ed McCray of the Lyric theatre at Oskaloosa. Mr. McCray was at the office of the Paramount.

RUTLEDGE, DETROIT, GOES TO PARAMOUNT

Frank Rutledge, formerly with George Kleine and more recently manager of the Detroit exchange of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, has tendered his resignation and has become the manager of the Paramount Exchange in Chicago. He is succeeded at Detroit by C. L. Peavey, his assistant, who has been many years in the film business. Mr. Peavey will have for his assistant Harry Trask, also formerly with the George Kleine Exchange.

Mr. Peavey announces that the first Artcraft picture, "Less Than the Dust" with Mary Pickford," will be shown for two weeks at the Majestic theatre starting Sunday, November 5.

ATLANTA OFFICE OF V-L-S-E IS RENOVATED

The Atlanta V-L-S-E has taken new offices in the Film Building. After a recent office meeting all the employes (reports fail to state if the young ladies were included) took paint and brushes in hand, and as a result the cement floors, covering 5,400 square feet of space, are now looking spick and span. This resulted in many blisters, sore knees and lame backs. However, this will work out as the second and third coats are put on, following subsequent meetings.

The entire State of Mississippi, with the exception of Jackson and Meridian, has been turned over to the New Orleans suboffice of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E, Inc., to handle as part of the Dallas territory. Result—better shipping facilities.

BROADWAY FEATURE, DETROIT, ENLARGES ITS QUARTERS

The Broadway Feature Film Company, Broadway Market Building, Detroit, is taking larger quarters in the same building. C. C. Beals is manager of this exchange, and says it is necessary because of the increased business.

The week of October 22 was the greatest in the history of the Detroit branch of the Fox Film Corporation. All due credit should be given to Dow Thomas, the new manager.

INTERNATIONAL OPENS BRANCH IN CLEVELAND

The International Film Company has opened offices in Cleveland in the Belmont building, under the management of C. S. Goetz. Mr. Goetz was one of the early Cleveland film men. He opened the Fox office here. The first release from the International office is to be about November 6.

Mutual Film Offices in Toronto Are Now Housed Under One Roof

THE Mutual Film Company of Canada has finally brought all offices in Toronto together under one roof at 71 Adelaide street, West, Toronto. The main floor of this building has been taken over by the Mutual and will be entirely devoted to the interests of the exchange. One of the features of the new quarters is the private projection theatre, which will be used for screening new features. W. C. B. Price is general manager for this Company for Canada and W. F. Barrett, the Ontario manager.

The Pathe Specialty Film Import Company has been doing some exceptionally good business in Ontario lately, so much so that Mr. Travis of the Toronto office has received a compliment from Mr. Ouimet on the business produced. All the branches of this company are working on a percentage basis, which forces them to produce business in proportion to the cost of operation.

The first Canadian film feature, "Self Defense," produced in co-operation with the Canadian Government, had its first showing at the Strand Theatre, Toronto, last week. Altogether the picture, while having many faults natural for the first production of a new company, was a very creditable example of what could be done locally in the industry if time and money were really devoted to it.

"The Battle of the Somme," which opened in the Regent Theatre, Toronto, to capacity, was in great demand. It has been arranged to have this picture at both the Rialto and the Globe theatres simultaneously so insistent has been the demand. Opinions vary on the film but it is universally conceded that the remarkable success of the film is due to the interest attached to it in the minds of the Canadian people.

Cancellation of Sara Bernhardt's tour after she had played Montreal has been the cause of several cancellations of films featuring Madame Bernhardt which were scheduled to run in Toronto during her visit there. Naturally the film men are very much peeved by their loss of revenue therefrom.

The Universal Camera Company of Chicago has established a branch in Toronto in charge of L. H. Roos at 20 Alice street. This company, which is called The Adanac Films, Limited, is doing commercial work exclusively, specializing on titles. Mr. Roos claims that he can produce titles cheaper in Canada than could be secured in the United States and if this is the case they should find no difficulty in securing ample business.

Serials in Michigan Are Popular, Especially in Detroit

SERIALS have taken a big hold in Michigan during the past two months and certain houses, particularly in Detroit, that heretofore have shunned the serial—would not even consider it—have ultimately come around to the point where they have convinced themselves that the right serials are a good thing and that they do bring results. This applies to the Liberty and some of the other John H. Kunsky outskirt theatres, also the Knickerbocker theatre, at Jefferson avenue and the Boulevard. The four serials that are most popular in Michigan right now are "The Crimson Stain" (Metro), "Beatrice Fairfax" (International), "The Shielding Shadow" (Pathe) and "The Yellow Menace" (Standard).

R. A. Von der Goltz, who is handling International affairs in Michigan reports: "It's not any trouble to sell 'Beatrice Fairfax'; exhibitors seem to know what it means as a box office attraction and we are taking on new houses every day.

Jesse Fishman, of the Standard office in Detroit, says: "'The Yellow Menace' is getting results for exhibitors and we have yet to run across a single exhibitor who is dissatisfied. We have booked houses that never before ran serials, and they are more than satisfied. It has built up business for exhibitors on their poorest nights."

At the Pathe office in Detroit, we hear business is twice as good as expected on "The Shielding Shadow," while at the Metro a whopper business is reported on "The Crimson Stain."

Is the day of the serial past? If anything, the serial is just in its infancy—especially the right kind—with the right story. Stars in serials do not seem to be essential if the story has the "punch."

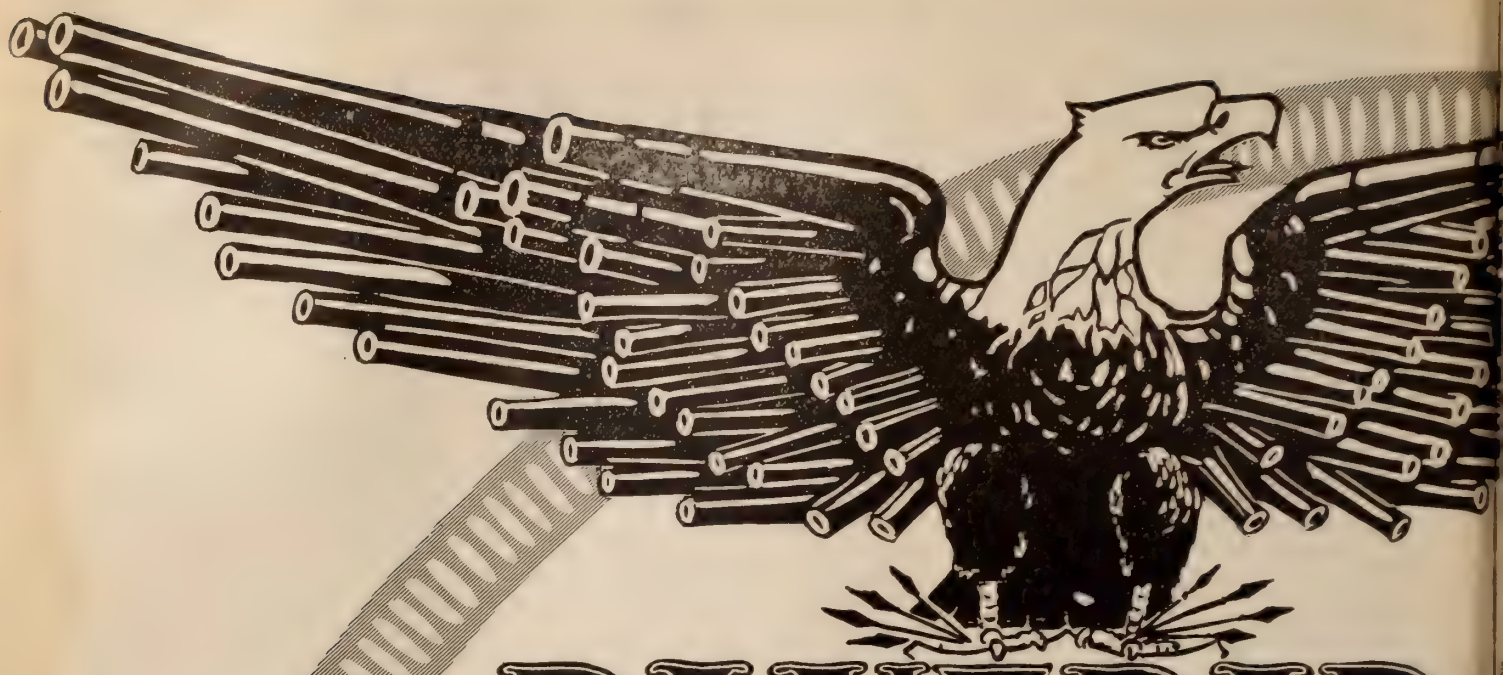
Best Theatres in the Middle West Get 25-Cent Admission in Evening

THROUGHOUT the Middle West the tendency is for increased prices at the newer and finer theatres, according to information given the Detroit correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, who recently visited some of the larger cities and the larger theatres. For instance, in Cleveland, twenty-five cents is the lowest evening admission price of the principal photoplay houses. In Detroit, the Majestic theatre, recently inaugurated a new scale of twenty-five cents as the lowest admission price; the Washington theatre has increased its prices slightly this season as compared to last; the Broadway-Strand increased its prices to twenty-five cents flat rate for all seats, afternoon and evening, during the two weeks of "The Common Law," and now the Knickerbocker theatre, Jefferson and the Belle Isle bridge, Detroit, has advanced its prices to fifteen, twenty and twenty-five cents, whereas, the former prices were ten, fifteen and twenty cents.

Wherever any of the large theatres have advanced prices, there is not a single complaint of business falling off; if anything, the increased prices have a tendency to improve business, because those who do not care to pay the top evening prices go to the matinees when prices are slightly lower, thus increasing the afternoon business and giving those a chance to attend the evening performances who are willing to pay the top prices.

Where the crowds are too big at night, many people are turned away, but if the prices are high instead of low, business seems to be adjusted all around so that both the afternoon and evening business is good, instead of most of the business being at night.

A good point about slightly increasing the price is that an exhibitor is sure to keep up the grade of attractions because he can then afford to do so, whereas, if he keeps his old prices and the price of film advances, he eliminates the high-grade film and takes on a cheaper service.



METRO SHOWS "ROMEO AND JULIET" TO THE TRADE IN KANSAS CITY

The Metro exchange, Kansas City, Mo., of which C. W. Harden is manager, recently held a private trade show at the Gilham theatre, Thirty-first and Gilham road, at which only the most prominent exhibitors of the country round about Kansas City, Mo., were present.

The Metro release of "Romeo and Juliet" caused much favorable comment by the fifty picture exhibitors present.

"CIVILIZATION" BOOKED BY WOODS FOR NEW YORK

"Civilization," the Thomas H. Ince spectacle, is now being booked by A. H. Woods throughout the State of New York. George F. Miller is in charge of the bookings at Mr. Woods' general offices in the Eltinge Theatre Building, New York.

L-KO KOMEDY News

JULIUS STERN, Pres. 6140 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Cal. Nov. 11, 1916

JULIUS STERN,
President and General Manager L-Ko Comedy Co.

THE old adage, "A new broom sweeps clean," seems to have unusual realization in the recent reorganization of the L-KO Komedy Co's forces at Hollywood, California. Since the advent of Julius Stern at the L-KO studios things have been happening thick and fast. Now that Mr. Stern has been elected to the office of President and General Manager he has swept aside all the old time methods of comedy productions, surrounded himself with the most capable comedy people in the business, and is headed on the straight road to a huge success. Associated with Mr. Stern at the L-KO studios in Hollywood are his brother, Abe Stern, as Secretary and Treasurer, and J. G. Blystone as Director General, plus a combination of other clever minds not found in the comedy film field in this or any other country. The old regime has been entirely discarded. Entirely new and cleverer methods have been instituted throughout the entire plant. The vulgar slap stick has been "canned." The old time thread bare "love in the park—brick throwing" picture has also been sent to the scrap heap. L-KO'S from Mr. Stern's advent have taken on a new dress. Newer in idea—newer in props, newer in every detail of production and no expense being spared now to make L-KO the topnotchers in the entire comedy producing field. Mr. Stern can feel complimented by the associates who have surrounded him and thru whose loyalty and brains, plus Mr. Stern's own initiative, augur a huge success for L-KO films and for all Exhibitors who are now showing them or who will show them.

"ALICE IN SOCIETY"

Latest L-Ko Makes Tremendous Hit in New York City

Manager of Mt. Morris Theatre Says It Tops Any Thing in Comedies Ever Shown At His House

WHEN all of us in the film trades get right down to brass tacks and talk plain without the fancy advertising phrases that anyone can use, we all know in our hearts that the acid test for any picture whether drama or comedy is the public. When the public respond so strong as to stand out a block long in line to see a comedy, you can beturesweetlife its got to be a good comedy. Alice Howell in "Alice in Society," one of the latest L-KO releases, stood the crowds out in line for hours, and you can take the theatre manager's word for it as being a good comedy or not just as you wish. Anyhow read what M. Edelstein of the Mount Morris Theatre (one of the largest theatres in Harlem) said about "Alice in Society": "All that you have heard about comedies not being well done in three reels is all a mistake. I write you of my experience, not of my own opinion. My audience, the other night saw your 'Alice in Society' and they screamed and screamed and screamed from the first flicker of the picture till the very last. I have been an Exhibitor many years and played all sorts of comedies and I must admit that I never heard any audience go into such convulsions of laughter as they did on your 'Alice in Society.' I watched it myself and laughed till the tears ran down my face. First time I've done that in many months." Signed M. Edelstein, Mt. Morris Theatre, 116th St. and 5th Ave., New York City. Even the critical reviewers on the trade papers stated that Alice Howell in "Alice in Society" was a side splitter.

List of Winning L-Ko Releases growing bigger all the time

You simply can't hold 'em back. Every release adds up to a larger total of comedy successes. L-KO growing by leaps and bounds. Reason? Quality—punch—action—superiority in every detail. Book these and watch for the others coming constantly.

All these L-Ko's made exclusively under the direct supervision of J. G. Blystone, since the advent of Mr. Stern as President of L-KO:

"Crooked from the Start," "Cold Hearts and Hot Flames," "A Surgeon's Revenge," "Tillie's Terrible Tumble," "A Rural Romance," "Terrors of a Turkish Bath," "Alice in Society," "Murdered by Mistake," "A Mid-Air Mix-up," "Unhand Me, Villain," "Lizzie's Lingering Love,' "Where Is My Husband," "Temper-Mental Mother-in-Law," "The Right Car, but the Wrong Berth," "Where Is My Wife," "Pirates of the Air."

Book "ALICE IN SOCIETY." Advertise your head off. Describe it as the funniest picture ever projected on any screen. The picture will make good ten times over. It's a whale. It's a riot. Get it NOW.

COMING

Sensational L-Ko with Alice Howell and great cast

Ss-h-h-h-h, whisper it softly. Keep it dark temporarily. Careful, so on hearing the news that your competitor don't get it away from you. It's coming. A sensational L-KO Comedy Release that is going to set the world upside down with laughter. Yes, and Alice Howell plays the lead with a supporting cast that will make all other comedy producers envious. It's going to be a genuine 4 base smash with the bases full and no mistake. Sh-h-h-h-h. don't let it out temporarily but keep your eye on the L-KO ads in the trade papers.

UNDERWOOD REPORTS BIG DEMAND FOR "SHADOW"

W. G. Underwood, manager of Pathe Exchange in Dallas, reports that never has a serial been in demand to the extent that "Shielding Shadow" has since he has been manager of Pathe, and says that there is hardly a town or city in his territory that has not booked this serial.

J. W. Cotter arrived in Dallas from Chicago to take a position as roadman for Mutual. Al. Raymond has resigned.

L. M. Cobb, manager of the Amarillo office of Mutual, is in Dallas for conference with C. A. Clegg, district manager of the Mutual.

Cropper Inaugurates "Personal Touch" System with Exhibitors for Universal in Omaha

R. C. CROPPER, exchange manager for Universal in the middle west, with hteadquarters in Kansas City, has been in Omaha the last few days installing a new system which, he declares, will make a friend of every exhibitor who has an experience with it. It is a sort of "personal touch" system, originated in the Universal's experiment station in Kansas City.

This experimental station, just to show how successful it is, during the past year, showed a highly satisfactory increase in business, emerging with a loss from unreliable exhibitors that was less than that of any exchange in the country ever reported. The loss was far less, by comparison, than that suffered in any other line of business.

The new plan includes the shipping to the exhibitor, fourteen days before the picture is to be shown, all the advertising matter for it, together with little talks, especially prepared, which will give the exhibitor an insight into the coming picture that could not be bettered by seeing it on the screen.

This system is also meant to encourage heavier newspaper advertising, with the minimum size of an advertisement, six inches long and occupying two columns in width. The articles will be for publication in the papers and, Mr. Cropper declared, will be of a quality worthy to occupy space on the front page of any paper. This material, coming two weeks before the picture, will give plenty of time for advertising, even in the towns where the paper is published but once a week.

A system of filing away the facts on each picture in alphabetical order is also furnished by the Universal. A specially instructed representative will call on the exhibitors and instruct them in the new system, pointing out the advantages and showing them how to handle it. Every roadman, trying to interest an exhibitor in the Universal's releases, will also try to interest him in the new system. Every exhibitor, says Mr. Cropper, will by this method become an authority, days before, on every picture that is to be shown in his theatre. He will know just how to advertise, will know what points to boost, and can answer any questions regarding it.

P. Ryan, who has handled some advertising schemes for other products that have made the American people sit up and take notice, is in charge of the advertising feature.

"When the exhibitors read the trade papers more, the money-making ideas in them, and find out everything about the pictures and the business, then and then only will the motion picture business show the true progress which it deserves. Every roadman should be urged to take the matter up with every exhibitor and get them interested in the trade papers.

"For myself, I am a strong advocate of Motion Picture News. I am a personal friend of Mr. Johnston, and greatly admire him as a leader in the world of motion picture activities. His articles show an insight that is of value to every man who reads them. I only wish more of the exhibitors who show our pictures read them, and the rest of his valuable paper. It would mean money for the exhibitors, greater satisfaction for us, and progress in the industry."

Bershon Finds No Market Glut When He Goes Out to Sell Film —Lamb Joins Metro Sales Forces

MANAGER Dave Bershon of the Universal California Exchange, despite the big supply of multiple reel pictures on the market, is having little difficulty in placing Bluebird and Red Feather subjects for the first run in Los Angeles larger theatres. "The Evil Women Do" has been booked at Tallys; "Wanted a Home" at the Superba, and "If My Country Should Call" goes to the Garrick, all three Los Angeles Broadway houses.

Arthur B. Lamb, who has served as salesman for United, Peerless and Universal exchanges, has left the latter Los Angeles branch to become affiliated with the Metro Exchange, which by the way, is now under the management of Harry G. Ballance. Mr. Ballance recently went to Los Angeles from Denver where he conducted a state rights exchange for the past year. He is a former Los Angeles man, and thoroughly familiar with the field there.

The Metro serial, "The Crimson Stain," which does not open for two weeks, has been booked for sixty days with but two open dates in that period. By the time of the first run showing in Los Angeles, Metro Exchange Manager H. G. Ballance expects to have the subject contracted for seventy-five houses.

J. H. Goldberg, who has been connected with the Los Angeles Universal Exchange for the past four years in various departments, has been promoted by Manager Dave Bershon to salesman, and will have charge of Southern California out of Los Angeles territory. Mr. Goldberg up till now has been serving as chief booker at the exchange, and his work in this department of caring for program and Bluebird subjects will be taken care of by Don Mitchell.

Sam Whitehead, Joint Owner of Canadian Rights to "Spoilers," Visits Vancouver—Lubin Opens Office There for Metro

SAM W. WHITEHEAD, joint owner with George L. Broy of the Canadian rights for the Selig's "Spoilers," has arrived in Vancouver, and is making his headquarters at the Standard Film Service, Ltd., distributors of Metro pictures in Canada. Mr. Whitehead reports that "The Spoilers" has been doing capacity business throughout the western territory, and is now arranging his bookings in the vicinity of Vancouver. This picture should repeat its former successes there, as it was the production which broke the power of the British Columbia censor and paved the way for a saner administration of censorship in the province. Following the pictures' rejection a year ago, the matter was carried to the attorney-general, who reversed the censor's decision, and the business done at the Colonial theatre in Vancouver during the week following still stands as the biggest week ever played by a picture in British Columbia.

Herbert Lubin, who opened the Metro office in Vancouver a short time ago, has been carrying on the greatest newspaper publicity campaign ever seen in that section of the country, and capped the climax on a recent Sunday morning by taking two full pages in The News-Advertiser, to advertise the attractions "The Soul of a Woman," with Emily Stevens, and Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "A Man and His Soul." The advertisement included a telegram from the joint stars, addressed to Manager J. R. Muir of the Dominion theatre, and conveying greetings to the theatregoers of the city.

SALT LAKE MADE A MAIN OFFICE BY "V"

Owing to the great distances between towns in the Salt Lake City territory, and the time lost in shipping films to and from Denver, Salt Lake City has been made a main office instead of a sub-office. This change was effective October 23. One new salesman will be taken on who will make his headquarters in Butte, Mont. F. A. Wagner will remain in charge as branch manager, and the office will continue to be one of the Coast Division group.

BALSDON IS MADE ASSISTANT NEW YORK BRANCH MANAGER

George Balsdon, Jr., has been appointed assistant New York branch manager, to succeed A. N. Webster, promoted to St. Louis manager. This young man started with the V-L-S-E as shipping clerk, and last December was promoted to booker, in which capacity he has done exceptionally well.

THREE TRAVELING AUDITORS VISIT LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles exchanges in the past week have been visited by three traveling auditors. Fred C. Sumner of Pathe, and C. J. Jaeger of the World Film. Mr. Hill of Greater Vitagraph Exchange system has just gone to San Francisco.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Many Excellent American Films Shown in Paris

Special to Motion Picture News.

Paris, Oct. 15.

SINCE my last letter, we have seen many very good American films in Paris. The public is very well pleased with them, but among the exhibitors these films have led to great disturbances.

As reported in my previous articles, renting-prices are fixed by the syndicate of the Kinema trade. Every film exhibited at the general show rooms is submitted to these rules and must not be rented at higher prices.

As a rule there is always a loophole to get around certain arrangements; renters were showing their special films at private rooms, and this way they were asking much higher prices.

A few weeks ago when the first Lasky and Famous Players films reached Paris, the firm who secured the French rights invited a few important managers to view one or two of them, and insisted upon imposing an engagement to take all the Lasky and Famous Players productions at a very high renting price.

Immediately this became known, the president of the Kinema Syndicate called a meeting of all renters and exhibitors. Very strong speeches were delivered against the proceedings, and it was unanimously agreed that no films must be exhibited anywhere except at the general showrooms, that every film must be shown before renting it, and that no prices others then those fixed by the syndicate must charged. We will have to wait and see what the result of this decision will be.

Downie Arrested on Embezzlement Charge

Quite a sensation was created in Paris, when it was known that James Downie, the French agent of the Trans-Aatlantic Film Company was arrested for embezzlement.

He was tried last Thursday and condemned to one month's imprisonment, and the payment of 6,000 Frcs. Now Mr. Tippett, the manager of the firm has given the agency to Mr. Haick, the well-known representative of the Western Import Company.

I have had a visit lately from S. Marks, manager of over twenty Kinema theatres in England, and agent for a well-known film producing concern in America. I took him around to a good many kinemas. One night we called at the Aubert Palace on the main Boulevards seating over 1,500: "No seats left" was the answer. We went to the Tivoli with a seating capacity of over 3,000: "Not a single seat to be got." Off we went to the St. Paul Palace, one of the newest building, a very beautiful palace holding 3,000 seats: "Standing room only." From there I took him to the famous Vaudeville theatre, but found hundreds of people waiting to get inside, and so we had to give it up.

"How is that possible," Mr. Marks inquired.

This is exactly the case at every show, and during the week; the places are crowded from 2 P. M. until 11 at night. The reason of this success is to be found in the management; it is our well-known Mr. Sandberg who is responsible for the enormous success of these theatres.

He not only manages theatres in Paris, but nearly 30 in the provinces, and every one of them is a success. A few more under Mr. Sandberg's management are in course of erection in Paris.

When Parisian men and women of fashion have applauded to the echo the eighth episode of the exciting "Exploits of Elaine," an episode entitled, "A Serpent Amidst the Flowers," and one of the most thrilling of the whole series; when they have seen on the screen "The Diary of the War," "Pathe Journal" and "Pathe Gazette;" when their eyes have been charmed by the wonderful landscapes of the Philippines, as represented by scenes depicting "The Tobacco Harvest," and when they have laughed until their sides ache over "A Gift from the Sky," they find that they have by no means come to the end of the good things on this week's program at the Pathe Palace. There may also be projected on the screen that powerful drama: "Which?" splendidly played by Melles; Colliney and Raynal in a film entitled "The False Prophet," adapted from a celebrated English work, and the amusing "An Unexpected Catch."

Voltera Bros., not long ago program sellers at different theatres in Paris, are now managers of the celebrated Folies Bergère, Olympia, Gaité, Cigale; their latest acquisition is the Casino de Paris, where they are to give vaudeville and kinema shows.

They have secured a few very big exclusives—among them "The Birth of a Nation" which will be seen shortly.

An officer and a soldier of the Kinema Department of the French Army, whose pictures have given so much pleasure in Paris, were recently buried by the explosion of a big shell, while they were engaged in taking a moving picture of the operations. Two of their comrades went to the rescue, at great peril, and succeeded in extricating them while shells were bursting all round them.

Baron Rothschild's Picture

The long awaited film "Cresus" the scenario for which was written by Baron Henri de Rothschild will be seen next week at the Vaudeville theatre.

"Cheat" is still drawing large audiences in spite of its six weeks consecutve run at the Gabka.

Throughout the war interesting kinema pictures of scenes near the French front, taken under the supervision of the military authorities, have given the public vivid impressions of actual conditions in and near the fighting line. Many people, who would otherwise rarely go to kinema theatres, visit them now in order to see the war pictures. An excellent film, now on view in Paris, shows the French soldiers rushing from their trenches in an actual attack. The brave "poilus" are seen crossing No Man's Land with fixed bayonets and bombs slung by their sides.

With grim determination, disdaining to crouch down in order to avoid the enemy's fire, they steadily advance straight on the foe. A few moments later the same trenches are alive with files of dejected-looking prisoners, hurried along by the returning victorious captors. This is by far the most realistic picture of the war that has yet been seen.

Expectations were surpassed at the exhibition at the Theatre Réjane of the supremely realistic film series taken under the sanction of the British Government at the front of the great battle on the Somme. The impression produced upon the spectators was that of actual presence at the scenes depicted. Certain parts of the film, as seen in England, and fully described in these columns on August 24, had been cut out by the French authorities, though in proportion to the whole these parts are very small in extent.

The motive is understood to have been a fear that sensitive nerves might be too severely tested. But, notwithstanding this excision, the spectacle remains the most wonderful which has ever been thrown upon the screen. The pictures which evoked the greatest interest were those that showed the British soldiers actually fighting. The big guns attracted especial attention.

The last series of pictures shown was that of King George on his visit to the captured German trenches, with the Prince of Wales, and of his return to England, guarded by battleships. These views have not yet been seen in England. At the end all the spectators rose and sang "God Save the King." In the theatre were many wounded French soldiers and British Red Cross nurses, both men and women. Only a comparatively small number of children were present. The film series of the Somme battle will be shown nightly for some time to come.

Some Interesting Situations Culled from Episodes 5, 7 and 9 of Consolidated's Serial, the "Crimson Stain Mystery"

At the Omnia this week we have the great film from the United States: "La Bella Dona," a superb drama, interpreted by the illustrious American actress, Pauline Frederick. This is again a very notable success. The program also includes magnificient views of the front: "Devant Péronne," "Sur la Somme" and the Review of the Russian Troops at Salonica; besides "La Servante de Rigadin," in which Prince shows himself as amusing as ever. The supplementary numbers are: A fine drama by M. Abel Gance, "Les Gaz Mortels," admirably played by the charming Maud Richard, the Youthful Fleury, M. Mathot and Maillard and Mme. Pelisse.

We learn at the last moment that the well-known Italian Film Producing Company "Cines of Rome" has become a French company.

Everything remains as usual for the present, big changes are contemplated by the new management.

J. KAENKA.

FEATURE SHOWN AT TWO FIRST-RUN HOUSES IN CLEVELAND FOR A WEEK AT SAME TIME

For the first time in the history of Cleveland motion picture theatres, a big feature film was shown at two first-run theatres, for a week at the same time.

"War's Women" the Ince production, was booked for the Alhambra theatre, and as previous contracts had been made with the Orpheum theatre, this production started on its Cleveland career at both houses last Sunday.

The only previous instances where the same production was shown simultaneously in more than one theatre in Cleveland was when the new Chaplin two-reel comedies were released and in the case of short one-reel news pictures.

DAMAGED NEGATIVE CAUSES PARAMOUNT RELEASE DATE TO BE CHANGED

Because the negative had been damaged, Paramount was compelled to change the release dates of two of its Paramount-Bray Cartoons, and "Bobby Bumps Helps a Book Agent" will be released at a later date, while "Bobby Bumps Queers the Choir" will take its place and can be released on October 26 instead of November 23.

Professor Shattuck of Vassar Joins Paramount Forces

Authority on Geology Will Release Through Its Magazine-on-the-Screen, the Pictographs, a Subject Entitled "In the Heart of the Alaskan Wilderness"

MR. GEORGE BURBANK SHATTUCK, professor of Geology in Vassar College, and authority on this subject, has joined the Paramount forces, and will release through Paramount's "magazine-on-the-screen," the Paramount Pictographs, "In the Heart of the Alaskan Wilderness."

On July 4 of this year, Dr. Shattuck started for Alaska with a company of young people to see that region. They went up the inside passage from Vancouver to Skagway by steamer, then over the White Pass Railroad, and from White Horse where the railroad ends they sailed down the Yukon River to Tanana, then up the Tanana River to Fairbanks, then back to Tanana and on down the Yukon River and out of St. Michael. There they took the Pacific liner to Nome and Cordova, and so on back to Seattle, arriving at the end of their trip, August 20.

The party traveled through the very heart of Alaska and covered much of the outside coast as well, taking some exceptionally remarkable pictures whenever conditions and circumstances permitted. Beginning with a forthcoming release in the near future, the best of these pictures will be released in the Paramount Pictographs.

The first section of this series of pictures will be called "People of the Alaskan Wilderness," and will show the conditions which exist among the native Indians and Esquimaux inhabitants living in a semi-barbarous state on the outskirts of civilization. Among the interesting features pictured, are the primitive methods of capturing salmon from the Yukon River, which supplies food when dried for both man and sledge dogs through the long Arctic winter.

Pictures are shown of Ruby, a typical mining camp which sprang up over night when gold was discovered in the hills.

In the heart of Alaska there is pictured the trading post of Tolovana, where provisions are supplied to the natives and Esquimaux in exchange for valuable furs which are secured by them during the winter. There are striking pictures of the work being done on the Government railroad.

Intimate views of Esquimaux family life and their extraordinary mode of living, were secured after many hardships and with great difficulty.

This subject will be followed by others showing the gold fields, and other interesting features.

Sam Spedon Reaches Cleveland with Forum, Inc., Films

Former Vitagraph Publicity Man, Known to Everybody in the Business, Takes with Him First Picture of Company, Entitled "U. S. Government in Action"

Cleveland, Oct. 28.

S. M. SPEDON, best known motion picture publicity man in the business and for eight years in charge of Vitagraph's publicity department, came to Cleveland last week as representative of the Motion Picture Forum, Inc., a producing concern which aims to present only pictures of national, historic and educational interest. Mr. Spedon brought with him the first picture of the company, entitled "The United States Government in Action," showing President Wilson and his cabinet officers at work at their desks. The picture contains a number of intimate views of the national figures, each of whom is shown close-up and in characteristic attitudes. The subtitles are the expressions of the work accomplished during their term of office in each department. Of particular interest to Cleveland is the part devoted to Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

The picture is offered free of charge to exhibitors of Cleveland who care to include it in their programs.

"Looking over the entire film industry as my present connections enable me to do," said Mr. Spedon, "I can see that moving pictures will touch fields unthought of before. For instance, they will become a factor in school and college life, in the church, in politics.

SERVIAN-BULGARIAN WAR PICTURES SHOWN BY COSMOFOTOFILM

The Count de Villafranca has brought some pictures into this country including one showing some life scenes of the Servian-Bulgarian war.

This interesting film can be seen at any time at the offices of the Cosmofotofilm Company, Inc., 110 West 40th street, New York City.

Pennsylvania Censor Board Will Issue Circular to Protect Exhibitors from Unintentionally Renting Films Not Approved by That Body

THERE is soon to be issued by the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors a circular of instructions designed to protect Pennsylvania exhibitors who live in cities bordering on other states against the renting of films which have not been approved by the State Board but which are represented by unscrupulous exchange men in states nearby to have passed the Pennsylvania censors. By this circular, it is believed, many border city exhibitors will be able to avoid being arrested and fined for showing uncensored pictures which they have been led by exchange men to believe have passed muster.

There have, it appears, been a great many cases, brought to the attention of the censors, of exhibitors running theatres in that state close to the boundary lines of other states, who have displayed films that have not received the board's sanction or which have been condemned by the board. These exhibitors in many cases, it is said, have proved that they have exhibited these pictures in entire ignorance of the fact that the films have not been approved, it having been represented to the theatre men by exchange men living outside of the state that the pictures have been approved by the Pennsylvania authorities.

Fines have been imposed on the exhibitors for such technical violations of the law for the reason that the exchange men, though they are responsible for getting these exhibitors into trouble, live beyond the reach of the Pennsylvania law.

It is to protect innocent exhibitors against falling into traps set by unscrupulous exchange men in neighboring states that the board of censors has planned to send out the letters of instruction. The circulars are now being prepared by Joseph H. Berrier, of this city, chief clerk of the Censorship board. The letters will advise exhibitors, when renting films, to demand to be shown the certificates of approval that are issued by the Pennsylvania censors with every film approved, and they will be instructed as to how to tell whether such certificates are genuine.

One of the chief annoyances encountered by exhibitors near the state boundary line is that some of the films they rent from outside agencies have been approved by the Pennsylvania censors, but with parts of the films eliminated. There have been prosecutions of exhibitors who have shown such films with the censored parts left in simply because it had been represented to them by outside exchange men that the films had been approved in their entirety.

Part of the letter of instruction that is to be sent out will explain to the exhibitors how they can ascertain from the "certificates of approval" whether all the parts of the films that have been banned by the censors have actually been eliminated from the films as they reach the exhibitors.

Cleveland and Ohio Practically Bars Showing of "Birth of a Nation"

CLEVELAND and all Ohio are practically barred for all time from viewing David Wark Griffith's screen masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," by virtue of a ruling of the state Supreme Court handed down in Columbus.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been shown in every state and almost every city in the United States, with the exception of Ohio. When the picture was brought into Ohio the state censors rejected it as a whole and refused to permit its showing. The Epoch Producing Company, Griffith's organization, petitioned the Supreme Court, asking that the order of the censors be set aside.

After much deliberation, the Supreme Court passed on the petition. The court held that there is no law on the Ohio statute books by which it can decide whether an order from the state censors restraining the producers of a picture from exhibiting a film is reasonable or unreasonable.

In effect, this is understood to mean that the word of the censors on a film is final. In dismissing the petition, the court, for the time being at least, has virtually ruled that "The Birth of a Nation" cannot be shown in Ohio, as the decision leaves the power of the board of censors unmodified.

GIVING VAUDEVILLE HOUSE A TASTE OF THE SAME MEDICINE

V. V. Thompson, manager of a vaudeville theatre, plead guilty at Fort Worth, Texas, October 13, to operating his theatre on Sunday, and was fined $25 and costs.

All of the other Sunday opening cases tried in Fort Worth recently have involved moving picture theatres, and Thompson's is the first one affecting a vaudeville house to be fined.

OHIO CENSORS PUT O. K. ON THREE PICTURES

For the third time in the past ten days the Ohio board of censors has placed its collective O. K. on a moving picture depicting a woman in the nude.

Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law" wears an engaging smile—and nothing more.

June Caprice, garbed in the light and airy nothingness of nature swims to and fro in a creek in "The Ragged Princess."

And now comes Audrey Munson, as nude as the solemn truths, to alarm our sedate societies in "Purity."

The Mutual people have been trying to get this picture over since last July, when it was first announced as ready for release. The censors have finally passed it, but not without a number of cuts. In fact, the picture did not reach the censors in its original state; the producers eliminated several scenes in which the clothless Audrey cavorted about.

"Purity" is an allegorical story in which a good angel falls in love with a struggling poet, who is in dire need of material assistance necessary to the publication of a set of poems. The good angel gets a little job of posing in the altogether for an affluent artist, and the gossipy neighbors hear about it. Then the action starts.

This is Audrey's first feature since "Inspiration," and will probably be released locally within the fortnight.

CLEVELAND POLICE CHARGE EVASION OF CENSOR LAW

Managers of several film service companies of Cleveland were liable to arrest recently, it was announced at Central police station, as a result of a police crusade begun against film men alleged to be violating the state censorship laws.

Police Captains Jacob Graul and Stephen Murphy, charge that in several moving picture houses in Cleveland films with "cut outs" and without "leaders" are being shown. By "cut outs" the police mean parts of the films cut out by the censors. "Leaders" are state board of censors' stamp of approval and film license numbers.

According to the police, a sergeant found two pictures were being shown in one of Cleveland's largest picture theatres without leaders. Another theatre in the downtown district, Capt. Graul says, showed a film with parts the state censors had prohibited.

Evidence gathered by police will be submitted to Chief of Police W. S. Rowe and Police Prosecutor James L. Lind. It will be for the prosecutor to decide whether warrants will be issued.

PICTURES ON SUNDAYS ONLY FOR RECRUITING IN ONTARIO

A deputation representing various religious denominations has waited upon Premier Hearst of Ontario and protested against the use of moving picture films on Sundays for other than strict recruiting purposes. They informed the Premier that they had conferred with the military authorities previously, who said they felt it still necessary to make use on Sunday of moving-picture films for recruiting purposes.

The deputation maintained that this method of recruiting was unworthy of the cause and had not been a successful medium, but inasmuch as it was the wish of the militia, they would not oppose their use, with the understanding that it should be under authoritative military control, confined absolutely to recruiting, and permits be not issued for the purposes of raising money for philanthropic endeavor.

The members of the deputation were agreed that such conditions as prevailed last winter in Toronto were intolerable and no system of recruiting should be adopted which would alienate any element of the community.

Premier Hearst assured the deputation that its representations would have the most serious considerations of the Government.

MINNEAPOLIS DRUGGISTS THREATEN TO CLOSE THEATRES

About the last men the motion picture exhibitors would expect to become open opponents are the druggists, yet the druggists of Minneapolis threaten to use every means in their command to close motion picture houses and several other concerns on Sundays. The druggists have decided that they are overworked and that they should have a day of rest. No one in the city blames them for that but they are not willing to close their places. They want the confectioners to close as well and have declared that unless delicatessen and confectionery stores join them in Sunday closing they will try to obtain a law closing everything, and name the picture theatres particularly.

No small part of the druggists' business is given to them because of the film theatres. The drug stores and theatres are nearly always in the same districts and the theatres have built up the druggists' refreshment business amazingly. It is doubtful, however, whether such a bill would get a serious hearing in the legislature, as the Sunday closing proposal for theatres has been threshed over many times and the lawmakers have always decided that the theatres afford thousands the only Sunday recreation within their means and that it would be wrong to take the privilege away.

HARRISBURG, PA., REVIVES CURFEW LAW

Hardships of the Harrisburg, Pa., motion picture theatre proprietors, who until October 1 worked under the handicap of infantile paralysis quarantine ban against children in the theatres, have been increased by a recent order put into effect by Chief of Police Wetzel reviving the curfew law that had sunk into disuse.

This ordinance requires all children who are under sixteen years old and unaccompanied by parents, to be off the streets by 9 o'clock, and contains a specific provision that theatre managers must notify such children to leave their theatres at the time mentioned.

The theatres, at 8.45 o'clock each night, are required to flash on the screen a notice to the children that they must leave the theatre in the next fifteen minutes. This according to exhibitors, often compels the children to leave before they have seen a complete program and naturally has a tendency to reduce the number of children at the shows.

The revival of the ordinance is brought about largely through the insistence of the Women's Civic Club, which was responsible for the measure originally being placed on the city's statute books. The curfew signal is sounded each night by blasts on factory whistles in all sections of the city.

PATHE WINS CASE AGAINST DEALER WHO BOUGHT PATHE FILM FROM UNAUTHORIZED SOURCE

The suit of Pathe Exchange, Inc., against the A. F. T. Corporation for the recovery of a complete set of "Who Pays?" which was found in the possession of the defendant was tried before a jury in the Supreme Court in New York County on the 16th and 17th of this month.

The defendant claimed to have bought the films in good faith in ignorance of the fact that they had been stolen. In fact, it contended that it had been induced to buy them by a detective employed by the Pathe Company, who represented that he was acting for "a friend in Cuba," who wanted to buy.

The judge instructed the jury that good faith was not an element in the case. In face, there was no evidence in any way suggesting anything else than good faith on the part of the defendant. Yet Pathe won.

This case should stand as a warning to dealers in films, that they buy with the certainty of losing both money and films, if what they get is stolen property. As the judge said in the trial, a buyer of stolen property gets no better title than the thief had—and a thief has none. Stolen property can be recovered in any one's hands by the true owner, no matter how many channels it may pass through or how innocent the buyer may be.

THEATRES IN DAYTON, OHIO, PASS FIRE INSPECTION

A city-wide inspection of Dayton, Ohio, motion picture theatres has just been completed by City Fire Inspector Walter E. Tucker and his assistants, Frank De Pries and Walter Rehmert. Booths, cellars and stages were given a thorough inspection, and all picture houses passed under the test so well that all were given a good rating. Three theatres were inspected each night.

When a performance was going on they remained behind the stage and watched the electric devices and other arrangements likely to cause fire. The theatre inspection was but one portion of the activity of the fire inspectors.

WANT SUNDAY OPENING IN CHATTANOOGA

It is understood that friends of Sunday motion pictures in Chattanooga, Tenn., have expressed a determination to ask the next legislature of Tennessee to legalize the opening of the picture theatres on that day. Two of the democratic candidates for the legislature have expressed themselves as heartily favoring such a measure. The information is that the other democratic candidate for the legislature will favor the movement. The republican candidate for the senate is known to favor Sunday motion pictures.

Dr. W. F. Powell, Chattanooga, in a sermon to his congregation recently, advocated the strict censorship of motion picture shows. He suggested the censorship proposition as one of the first aids in the protection of the morals of the young of Chattanooga.

VICE HUNTER PUTS EXTINGUISHER ON NUDE PICTURES

Chief of Police Walter J. Peterson, who is the official censor of moving pictures at Oakland, Cal., announces that he does not intend to allow pictures made for the express purpose of exhibiting nudity to be shown on the screens of that city. Under his direction a raid was recently made on the Broadway theatre and an exhibition of "The Garden of Knowledge" was brought to an end.

The proprietor of this house sought to obtain an injunction to prohibit the Chief of Police from interfering with the showing of the film, but was unable to obtain this. The official censor declared that this particular production was "inexcusable" and that he took action after numerous complaints had been filed with him.

BETTER EXPRESS SERVICE FOR CANADA

The Dominion Express Company on account of increased film business, and because of the representations of Ontario Film Managers have formed a special department to look after the collection, delivery and shipment of film consignments. One extra shipment will also be taken from the exchange offices every day, making four collections and three deliveries, except on Saturday and Sunday. The question of the C. O. D. payments, which have become very important since the new pay in advance policy, has lead the company to increase their bookkeeping ability in order to make payments to the film company in quick time.

EXHIBITORS THEIR OWN CENSORS

Mayor J. H. Mellett, of Anderson, Indiana, has announced that after talking with some of the operators of motion picture theatres of that town, he has decided that no ordinance restricting the class of pictures to be shown in Anderson theatres will be presented while the theatre men show high class films. Mr. Mellett says that he will make no effort to present an ordinance affecting the picture theatres, while the pictures are of good standard, but that some action may be taken by the council if films which he does not regard suitable for children are shown.

"WEALTH LURE" FROM LATIN AMERICAN WITHIN A MONTH

The Latin American Producing Company of which Paul Trinchera, the Italian director is president and director general, will begin its first feature picture production at the Grantwood Studios this coming week. The Latin American Company has already signed contracts with a foreign marketing concern and from its first release will find instant market.

The first release which will be within the month will be "The Wealth Lure," a drama in which Vera Sisson, the emotional actress and Sidney Mason will be costarred.

Mr. Trinchera, who will personally direct all the productions which will consist of three and four reelers, has had a distinguished career as newspaperman, writer and director. He came to America within the past year. After making several productions for big film concerns, he decided to enter the foreign field from American shores.

His company has taken a long lease on the Grantwood, N. J. studios, where its future operations will be conducted.

Associated with Mr. Trinchera as business manager of the new company is Clarence Woodhams, formerly an automobile expert. The offices of the new company are located at 1482 Broadway, Fitzgerald Building.

SMOKING A CIGARETTE IN A PICTURE IS NOT A CRIME

Discreet use of the cigarette in motion pictures is legal in Kansas. A Jury in Wyandotte District Court, after having viewed the controversial film, returned a verdict of not guilty in the case pending.

The motion picture, which had been passed by the Kansas state censorship board, was alleged to show a woman smoking. A special run of the picture showed a woman with a lighted cigarette in her hand.

"Bought and Paid For" from World November 13

National Advertising Which Made the Stage Version Known to Everybody Has Paved the Way for the Screen Play—Broadhurst Pleased with the Photodrama

ONE of the most important photoplays ever made by the World Film Corporation is "Bought and Paid For," which will be released on November 13 with Alice Brady as its star. The spoken drama, by George Broadhurst, was the first production at William A. Brady's Playhouse, New York, where it continued for two winters and one summer, without a break.

With the beginning of this remarkable record Mr. Brady adopted a system of national advertising that had never been undertaken in connection with a theatrical attraction. He figured that the old system of producing a play in New York and allowing the country to find out for itself that the run was going on was out of date and useless.

The Brady publicity man was called in and told to get in touch with every nook and corner of America with "Bought and Paid For" material, and not to let up—to keep the mill grinding all the time and the grist pouring into the laps of the future patrons direct.

This plan was carried out to the letter under the supervision of Mr. Brady, and at a cost of many thousands of dollars, but with the result that long before the companies to play it broadcast were organized the drama was known to practically everybody.

Another outcome of this advertising campaign was that persons who came to New York from afar had heard of "Bought and Paid For" before they started, and went to see it at the Playhouse, subsequently telling their home friends all about the play.

Thus in one way and another Mr. Broadhurst's drama in its original dress is familiar to almost every community, large and small. That the author himself is entirely satisfied with the result of Mr. Brady's work in making the transfer to the screen is apparent from the following letter, written October 20:

"Dear Mr. Brady: Please accept my heartiest congratulations on the splendid picture you have made of 'Bought and Paid For.' The central story is directly and dramatically told and the comedy element is admirably handled. Also I may add, it is extremely well played.

"I can see no reason whatever why your picture should not equal the success of the play itself both in this country and abroad.

"Sincerely, "GEORGE BROADHURST."

Bookings of "The Crimson Stain" Come Up to Expectations

Goebel and Erbe of the Consolidated Film Corporation Started Out to Make a Record with the Serial and Have Succeeded Beyond Their Hopes

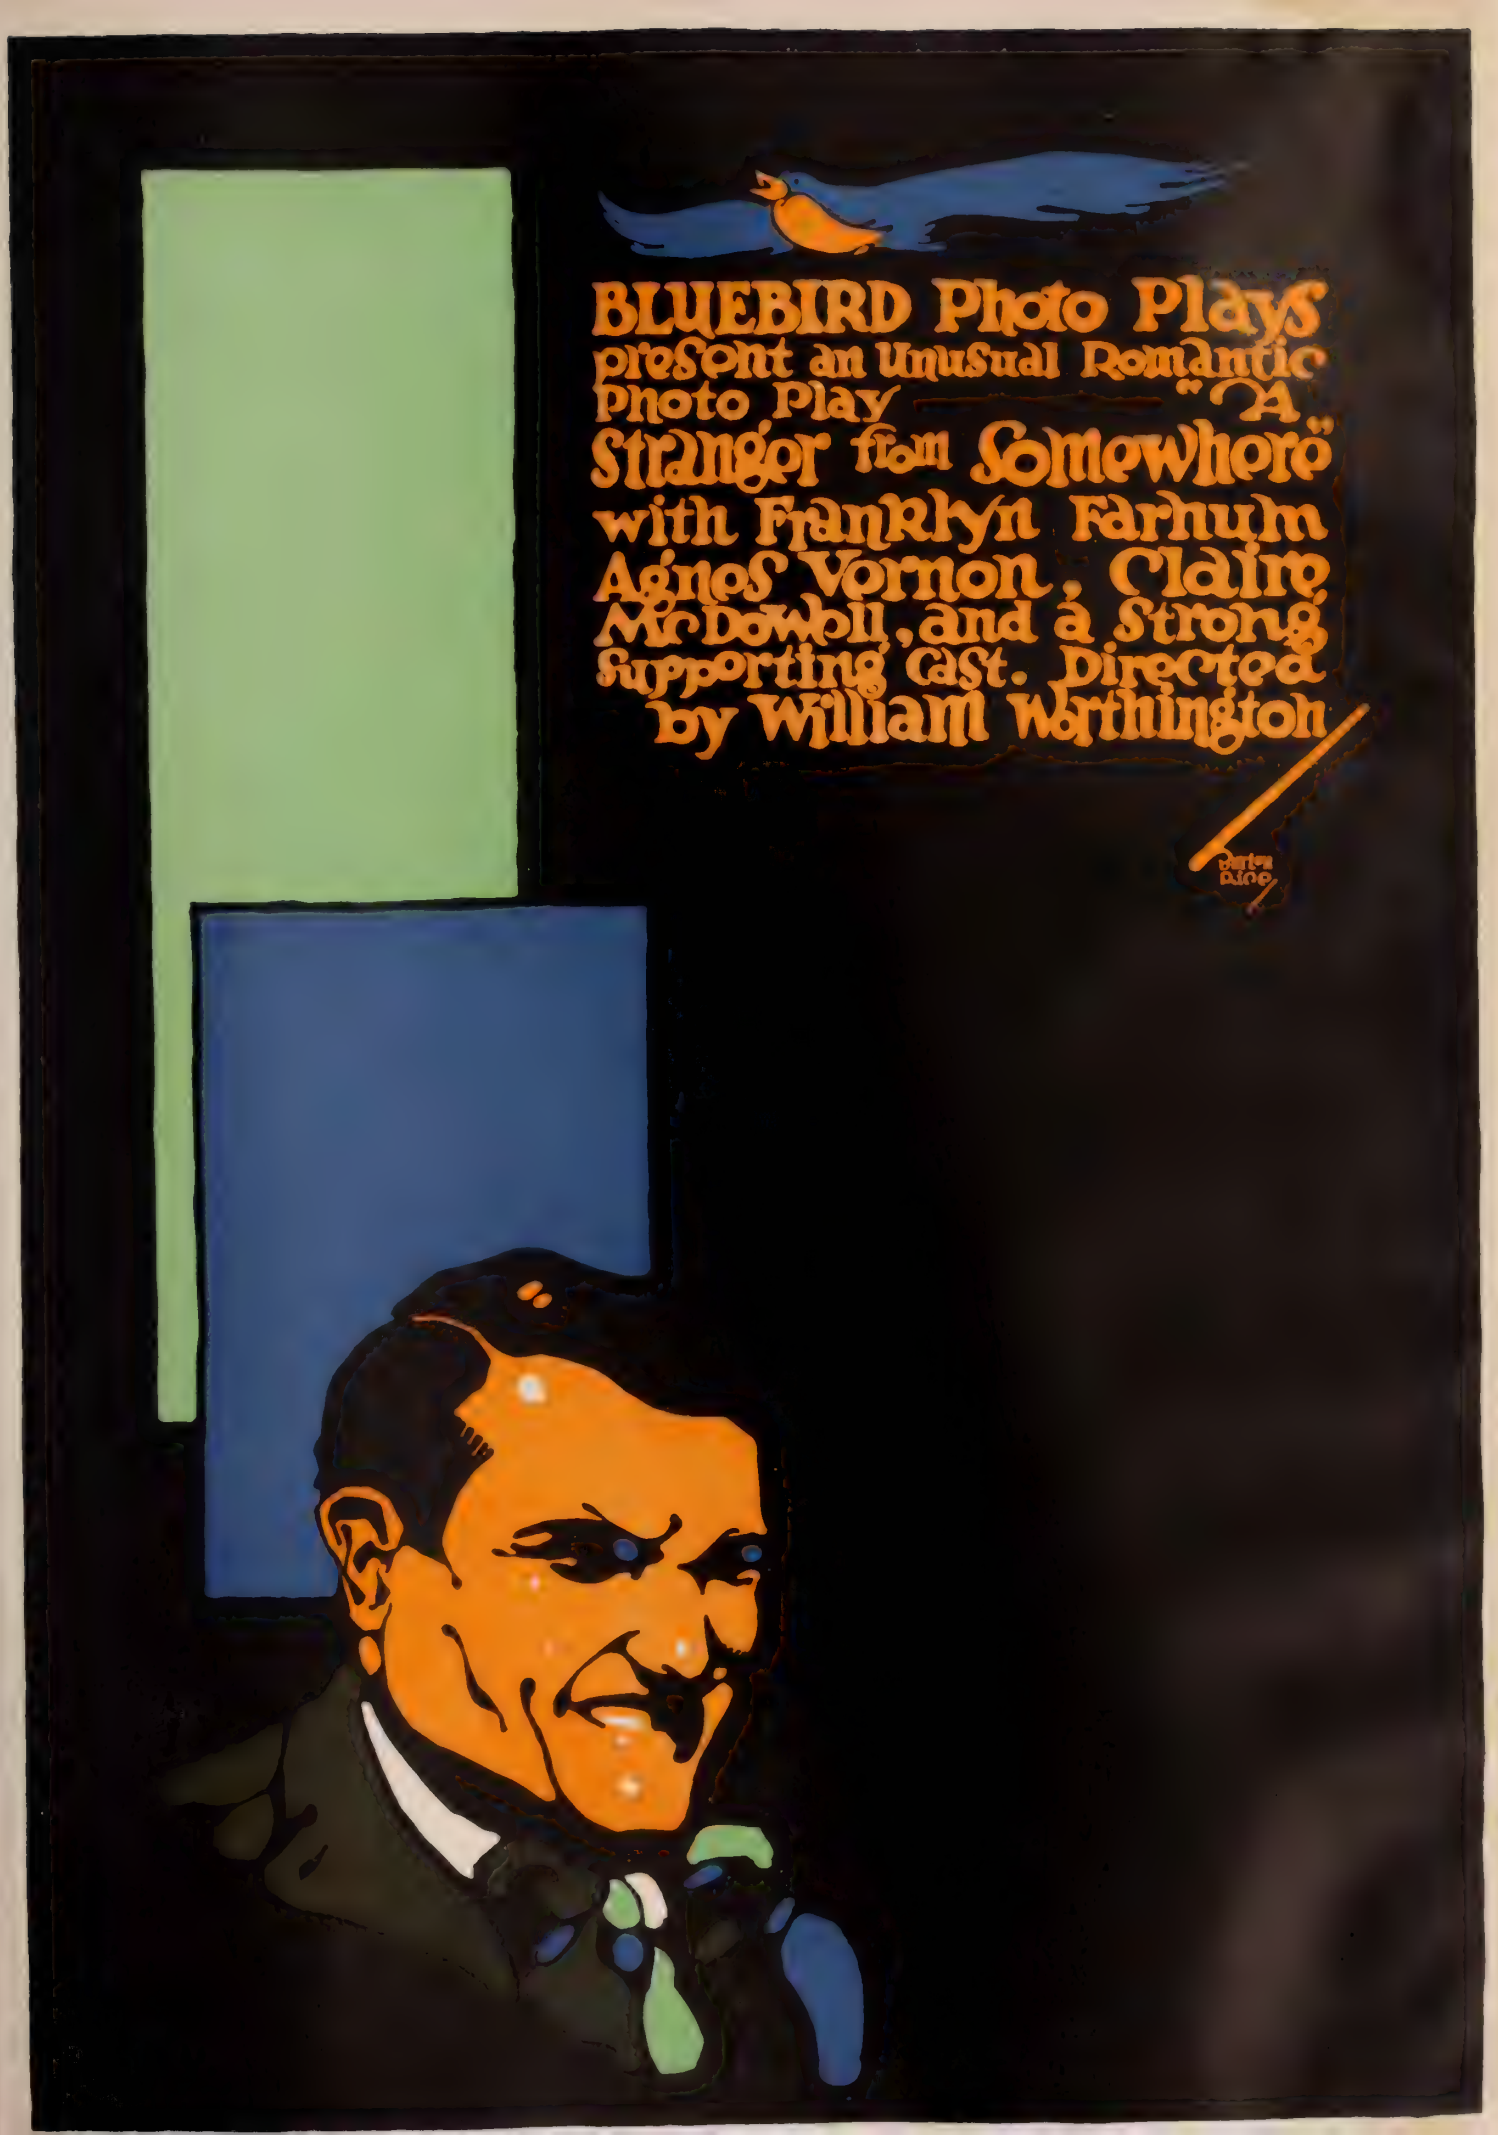
"THE Crimson Stain Mystery," the sixteen episode serial manufactured by the Consolidated Film Corporation, has by its bookings realized the fondest ambitions placed on it by O. E. Goebel, president and G. B. Erb, vice-president of the company. When these two men organized the Consolidated company their desire was to make a serial record with "The Crimson Stain Mystery" and judging from the reports received from exhibitors and exchangemen throughout the country they have done so.

It was a difficult proposition that confronted the heads of the Consolidated as the concern was new and everyone connected with the trade had to be "shown." Knowing nothing about the company beyond the fact that the heads of it were reputable film men, that T. Hayes Hunter was the director, that Albert Payson Terhune was the author and that Maurice Costello and Ethel Grandin were the stars, film men were a bit wary about waxing as enthusiastic as Messrs. Goebel and Erb would have desred. But the fact that they have succeeded in their enterprise is daily evinced by the flood of telegrams and letters that come to the home office of the company praising the serial and telling of the wonderful business that it has brought.

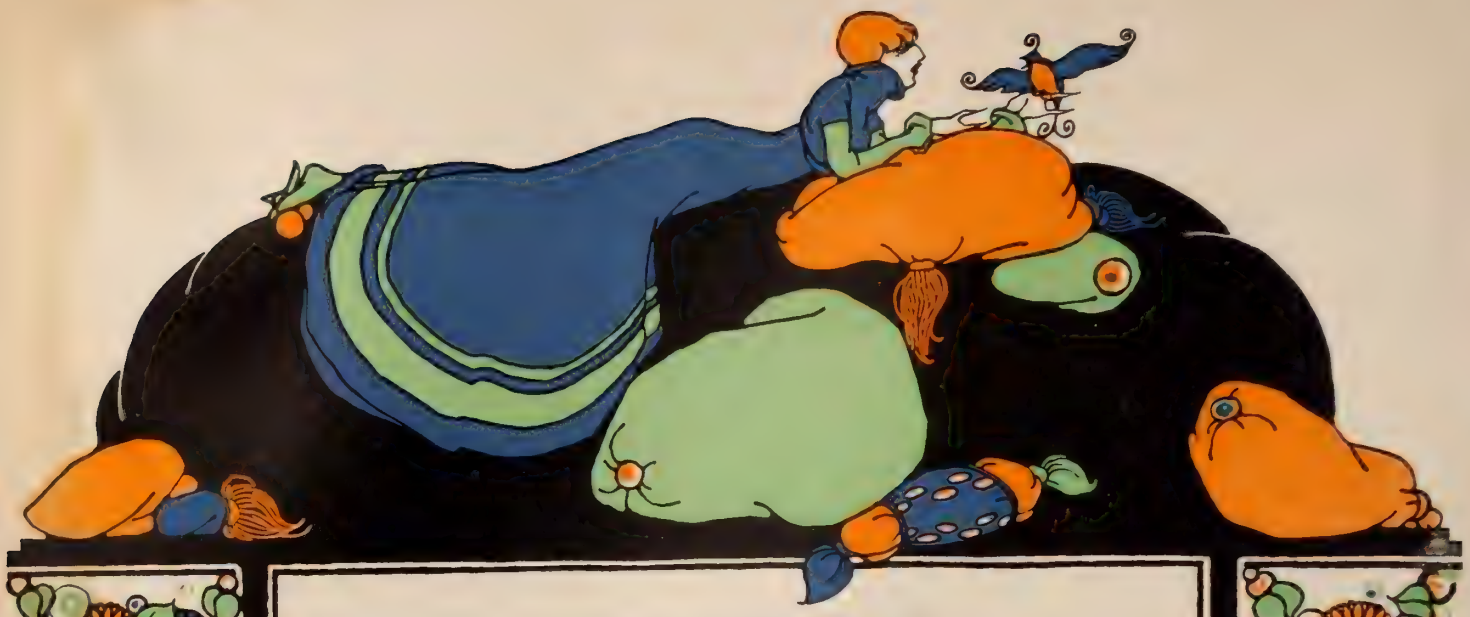
At the start both Marcus Loew and Alexander Pantages, owners of the two largest vaudeville circuits in the United States, one in the east and one in the west, signed up for the serial after viewing its introductory episodes. They were more than pleased. Soon after other exhibitors followed suit after special showings had been given in every large city of the United States.

From theatres and exchanmen all over the country messages of congratulation and thanks are coming in to the heads of the company. "Attendance on the increase," "Your wonderful serial," "Our successful opening with 'The Crimson Stain Mystery,'" "We heartily recommend it," and "Will break all records" are lines that are becoming ever so conventional in the communications.

PATHE'S "THE SHIELDING SHADOW" PRAISED BY NEWSPAPERS



Throughout the country, Pathe's serial, "The Shielding Shadow," is attaining a marked degree of success, according to the following newspaper comments, which indicate the popularity of this serial, featuring Grace Darmond, Leon Bary and Ralph Kellard:



The Minneapolis News says: "'The Shielding Shadow' is a most pretentious serial featuring a trio of stars. There are thrills to burn in this new serial. Thrilling action marks every episode. There is a mysterious character called Ravengar who, Pathe believes, will baffle the audiences more than the Mystery of the Laughing Mask in 'The Iron Claw.'"

The New Orleans Item says: "Promise of a moving picture serial that will out do anything that has ever been attempted in the way of thrills is contained in 'The Shielding Shadow.' 'The Shielding Shadow' will establish a new record for thrills."

The Buffalo Times says: "'The Shielding Shadow' is a daring creation of the studio experts, a play such as one rarely sees.'"

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: "'The Shielding Shadow' gives promise of new thrills in film and story form."

BLUEBIRD

The now famous BLUEBIRD policy—"The Play's the Thing," is more than just to the illustrious stars that shine in its famous productions. Heretofore the star has been at the mercy of producer, director, "business policy," or of whatever play the scenario department had on hand, regardless of its suitbaility.

BLUEBIRD has changed all that. The production of a BLUEBIRD Photoplay begins with the selection of a strong drama. Then the cast is chosen and if a certain star fits a certain part, that star is chosen for that part. Frequently BLUEBIRDS are produced with an all-star cast; not for the purpose of boosting the stars as such, but to give the play the best cast that experienced judgment and unlimited resources can command.

Thus, while the BLUEBIRD policy insists upon the primary importance of the play, yet BLUEBIRD plays are presented by some of the greatest stars in moving pictures; stars whose salaries are higher, whose ability, popularity and fame are far, far beyond the average star in the average feature. Further the BLUEBIRD policy enables its stars to do the best work of their careers, and perfect entertainment is the result.

These facts are being told to over ten million people week after week in large advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post. Increased attendance at all BLUEBIRD theatres is the result. You can get your share by booking BLUEBIRD Photoplays.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

"UNLIKE the fool and his money," writes the Lasky press department, "Fannie Ward and her gowns are not easily parted." There seems to be no end of trouble to which stars will go to please the National Board.

And now B. S. Moss after giving us "Three Weeks" and "One Day" is coming again, this time with a picture entitled "One Hour." Don't procrastinate Mr. Moss, because you know, the minutes are going fast.

"Why don't you run for President?" shrieked some enthusiast as Francis Xavier Bushman emerged from the Broadway theatre after watching a public showing of "Romeo and Juliet." We wait eagerly for the announcement of Mr. Bushman's platform, wondering whether "Peace at Any Price" will be one of the planks.

THEY'RE AT IT AGAIN

The Lubin theatre of Cincinnati, Ohio, offers the following contribution in its monthly magazine:

"The hot weather of the past week proved too much for the ever-alert doorman of the Lubin. Business was somewhat light on Wednesday afternoon, and he experienced great difficulty in keeping awake. His head kept nodding and bobbing, until finally Dame Nature conquered, and oblivious of all his surroundings, he sank sweetly into the welcoming arms of Morpheus.

It was then he met "Leah Kleschna" a well known "Lady of Quality," who was out riding "In the Bishop's Carriage," with a charming "Daughter of the Hills," known "In Missouri," as "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." It seemed somewhat strange to him that on this "Day of Days" she should show such "Caprice"—she the "Pride of Jennico" playing "Checkers" in "Arizona" and telling "Tess of the Storm Country" at such an unseemly moment as "An Hour Before Dawn."

He decided it would be the proper thing to inform "The Count of Monte Cristo," so he called up "Chelsea 7750" only to learn from "His Neighbor's Wife" that the Count had been taken to "The Port of Doom," as a "Prisoner of Zenda." Somewhat dejected he retraced his steps and on his way back met "An American Citizen" and two other "Soldiers of Fortune" who were having a great time with "Brewster's Millions." They invited him to join them and tempted by "A Good Little Devil," he donned the "Clothes" of the "Squaw Man," and with their "Hearts Adrift" he entirely forgot the mission on which he started.

"The Brute" within him now fully aroused, he seemed doomed to land at "The Port of Missing Men," when suddenly he was confronted and saved by "The Master Mind," the same one which was responsible for "The Redemption of David Corson." And then he woke up!

In one of the numerous fan publications, a writer with a highly trained imagination, dwelling on the feats performed by Marie Walcamp, tells of her leap from the back of a galloping horse to a train going forty miles an hour. Just for the sake of sport we would like to procure this horse, enter him at Altona or some such place and play him across the board. August Belmont might be interested, too.

A contributor to F. P. A. of the New York Tribune, who was so anxious to break into the column with a pun, wrote in to the effect that Wallace Beery directed "The Rummy." As far as we know Wallace never worked for Fine Arts.

Harry Rattenberry, who plays comedy characters for Al Christie as a rule has been borrowed by the Lasky Company to play the part of Bumble in "Oliver Twist."

Wonders never cease in this land of make believe, writes in J. C. Pacific Coast Motion Picture News Jessen. E. H. Allen, business manager at the Ince studios, boasts of having taught the fish in the fountain in front of the administration building to eat out of his hand. And it's the same hand Allen uses to sign all the payroll checks. It's getting so you can't even fool the fish any more.

Doctor H. G. Stafford, formerly scenario editor at Universal City, has organized a company in Honolulu for the production of "Aloha." Gilbert Warrenton left for the islands recently to film the production.

WHILE MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL BOARD WAITED THE START OF THE PRIVATE SHOWING

"I saw a great picture yesterday, wonderfully done, with a good moral. It was called "Sex Lure," or "The Lure of Sex," I think.

"Yes, that was shown at 218 W. 42nd street, wasn't it?"

"I believe so, in that building on 46th street."

"That's the new building at 729 Seventh avenue."

EDITORIAL

The Vitagraph company has instituted the commendable practice of showing its pictures for review to the accompaniment of music. A good idea this, and one which is well worth the consideration of other manufacturers and distributors. How many times during its public showing has a poor picture been saved by good music? Count 'em. You can't. Many times we have dropped into the Strand or Rialto to witness a poor picture that we thought good, and we discovered that it was the music that covered up the defects of the show.

It stands to reason that any picture is going to go better with good music, so why does the manufacturer exhibit his product to the trade press minus practically half of its setting? Of course it is not to be expected that an entire orchestra be present at a trade showing. But if a pianist could have his music for the picture arranged before hand it would be a mighty good idea—benefitting the manufacturer in the end.

WAR COLLEGE BUYS PRINTS OF DONALD THOMPSON BATTLE PICTURES

The Army and Navy War College at Washington, D. C., has bought prints of the Donald Thompson War Pictures to be used in an official capacity for study and observation by officers of the army and navy. The pictures were shown recently before the members of the Army and Navy Club and the members viewing them recommended that they be purchased by the War College.

Many of the pictures were taken under actual fire at the front. One scene stops in the middle because Mr. Thompson was hit on the head by a piece of exploding shrapnel and was unconscious in the hospital for two days. Another feature of the films is that they show the machinery of war in great detail and reveal things that are supposed to be military secrets. Officers of the general staff were amazed at the many things they saw, such as the manufacture and piping of poison gas, the sappers digging mines under the enemy trenches by the aid of compressed air, how the ammunition is fed to the big fifteen-inch guns and their method of firing, the armored canal boats bringing up supplies in back of the lines, and the organization and working of the spy system. Mr. Thompson has been on every front in Europe with the exception of the Roumanian and is going there soon.

EXHIBITOR CONTENDS THAT THEATRE LAW IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The Court of Appeals of the State of New York is at present considering briefs submitted by both parties in a case of interesting and perhaps financial import to motion picture exhibitors. Jacob Van Brink, exhibitor of New York, has been found guilty in the lower courts of violating the law by which children under sixteen years of age are prohibited entrance to theatres unaccompanied by parents or guardian.

Counsel for Van Brink contends that this law is unconstitutional and that with its enactment the government deprived the exhibitor of his rights by law. As the business of exhibiting pictures is considered by the State of New York a lawful enterprise, Van Brink contends that he has just as much right to admit juveniles to his theatre unaccompanied as schools or churches have in admitting children to their entertainments. The fact that the show may be immoral or improper for children to witness is a presumption that should not be taken into consideration as the fact that the show is licensed by the state implies that nothing immoral or improper be shown upon the screen.

Edward G. Ullman is a head cameraman at U City, as the Studio Directory should have specified on p. 248.

Advertising by Auto for Verne Film Is Sherman Webster's Happy Thought

A "Live Wire" Stunt of a Buffalo Exchangemen to Boost "Around the World in 80 Days," Herald Film

SHERMAN S. WEBSTER, well known in the sales field of New York state, has again become affiliated with the Rogson Film Company, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. Already he has reported a great number of bookings on the features handled by this exchange which include among the latter subjects, "Around the World in Eighty Days," "Where Are My Children?" "The Prima Donna's Husband" and "One Day."

The Rogson Film Company has instituted a money-making advertising stunt in connection with "Around the World in Eighty Days." An automobile is utilized which is decorated with advertising concerning the picture. Stress is laid on the fact that it is an adaptation of one of the most popular novels of Jules Verne. This car is driven throughout the extensive territory covered by the Rogson Exchange.

This is the first time that a picture has been so advertised in the state, and the heads of the exchange report good bookings because of it.

"Honor System" Release at Psychological Moment

Picture in Work by Walsh for Fox Over a Year Will Appear on the Screen at a Time When Public Is Discussing Reform of Prison Methods—Louis Victor Eytinge, Prisoner Making $20,000 a Year by His Pen, Criticises Film

The Yuma Prison, Arizona, and Inmates Assist in the Filming of Fox's Latest Multiple Production

"The Honor System." In the Centre is Milton Sills. The Film Was Directed by Raoul Walsh

WARDEN OSBORNE'S resignation from Sing Sing prison has made prison reform the topic of the hour. His taking the stump against Governor Whitman and criticising the Superintendent of Prisons, has aroused widespread interest throughout the country in the fate of the man behind the bars.

Just at this psychological moment, William Fox is about to release his prison problem film, "The Honor System."

The Fox Film Corporation has been working on this production for more than a year.

Though prison reform is the dominant note in the production, human interest is not lacking. "The Honor System" has been directed by R. A. Walsh, supported by a cast of artists and types famous in the motion picture world.

"The Honor System" was produced amid actual prison scenes. Real convicts enacted some of the parts.

As a matter of fact, one of the best criticisms on "The Honor System" has been sent to Mr. Fox by a convict. He is a "lifer" in the Florence penitentiary. Louis Victor Eytinge is a literary genius, who though in prison, makes more than $20,000 a year by his pen. He is editor of "Postage," a magazine devoted to advertising. It has an extensive and peculiar circulation under Convict Eytinge's remarkable editorship. He is perhaps the most famous literary convict in the world today. Eytinge, after witnessing the performance of "The Honor System" wrote the following critique:

Eytinge Enthusiastic Over Picture

"I am filled with an earnest enthusiasm for the entire thing, this to include story, acting, direction, photography and ensemble. I do not know of any single influence that may do more for genuine prison reform than this wonderful drama filmed by your forces. It is vital, virile, vimful—the story never drags—the action is at all times progressive—the ending, so different from the mawkish 'happy endings' so commonly thrown to a sentimental audience is stirring and properly climatic.

"The acting and direction are of the highest order. Director R. A. Walsh is to be congratulated for his selection of locations, for a higher selection of his actors, for the smooth, harmonious direction he has given to every incident. The littlest 'bit' stands out as clean cut as a cameo. I question, if in all my experience, I've ever seen a film drama as intelligently acted and directed as this 'Honor System.'

"I believe this film will be the greatest single enlightening influence in behalf of humanity in prisons of the decade and I am personally grateful to you for its production."

"The Honor System" was produced mainly in Arizona and along the Mexican border. In order to give this film every attribute of real life, Mexican raids were staged which are described by persons who have figured in actual raids, as absolutely correct in every detail. Thousands of men are shown taking part in cavalry charges and in battles, in every respect similar to those being fought between the warring factions of Mexico today.

Walsh's Direction Praised

R. A. Walsh, before screening the first scene of his battle pictures, spent weeks in going over the ground and working out his strategic maneuvers under the guidance of military experts. Film artists and connoisseurs who have witnessed these scenes pronounce them perfect; superior to any battle scenes hitherto shown in the moving picture world of this country—and we surely have had a lot of battle pictures recently. This praise of Frank Walsh's direction is not extravagant.

To depict the prison scenes showing old, brutal methods, Governor Hunt placed at the disposal of the Fox Film Corporation the old prison at Yuma, Arizona, which in its time has been one of the most terrible hell-holes in existence.

Convicts from the modern prison at Florence, Arizona, actually assisted in many of the scenes.

Preparations are being made by the Fox Film Corporation to see that "The Honor System" comes into its own in the matter of recognition when it is placed before the public.

Recently a representative of the Fox Film Corporation attended the Congress of the American Prison Association at Buffalo and brought the film to the attention of the five hundred delegates—governors of states, superintendents of prisons, wardens, and prison experts.

HILLYER ON STAFF OF INCE SCENARIO

Lambert Hillyer, a short story writer and author of a number of scenarios, has been added to the Ince staff of writers. Mr. Hillyer has also had some experience in producing at a studio at Providence, R. I. He was engaged by Thomas H. Ince prior to the producer's departure for the coast.

Charles Stumar, an Austrian cameraman, who several years ago gained fame when he risked his life to photograph the Alps, is a new member of the staff of cameramen at the Thomas H. Ince studios.

DANZIGER IS ON THE ROAD FOR HERALD FILM

Roadman Danziger is traveling for the Herald Film Company, and taking orders for "The Prima Donna's Husband" and "Around the World in Eighty Days," on the state rights plan. State rights buyers may get in touch with Mr. Danziger by addressing him in care of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

KIMBALL, HANOVER FILM COMPANY, BUYS LIBRARY COPIES OF ENTIRE BIOGRAPH OUTPUT SINCE 1910

Charles E. Kimball, managing director of the Hanover Film Company, has bought the library copies of the entire output of the Biograph Company since 1910. The purchase totals one and a half million feet of film, and contains about eight hundred different subjects.

A large number of the various pictures were directed by David Wark Griffith, while an equal number or more were staged under the direction of Mack Sennett. Many of them contain seven and eight famous picture stars of today all working together in the same picture. Mary Pickford, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, May Marsh, Owen Moore and a large number of others who have since become the shining lights of filmdom are seen in their early days playing subordinate parts in these pictures. Many of those who played the star roles in those days have passed into the limbo of the forgotten.

Mr. Kimball has bought these pictures outright. They are the library copies of the company, the copies it kept for record, and they have never been publicly shown, therefore they are all in the best of condition. The Hanover Film Company will sell the prints outright. They can be shown anywhere in North and South America. Only Europe is restricted. Mr. Kimball told a representative of Motion Picture News that he would sell to the first buyer coming forward who would take a hundred prints, the choice of the whole lot at a price of seven cents per foot. He will then split the balance up into various lots and dispose of them at a higher price.

CLASSIC FILM CORPORATION INCORPORATED AT $200,000

The Classic Film Corporation has been incorporated under the laws of the State of New York with a capital of $200,000, with offices at 507 Fifth avenue. J. Alan Turner is the president; Lieut. Victor Delinsky is vice-president; Arthur Donaldson is director in chief with Richard Sterling as co-director, while Philip Mindle is the publicity and advertisng manager.

The object of the new concern is to produce in a highly artistic manner the standard literature of the world for the screen. It will begin with a series of twenty episodes from the "Arabian Nights" and will follow this with the celebrated fairy tales and mythological stories of the world. The producing company is now forming and will sail for Jamaica, B. W. I., November 2.

The new company has been given a franchise by the recently organized Standard Film Industries, Inc., and will release its product through that organization.

COLIN CAMPBELL ON WEST COAST

Colin Campbell has returned to the Selig Pacific Coast studios after working in Chicago on the first prints of "The Garden of Allah" which he recently completed. Mr. Campbell upon his arrival in Los Angeles, will immediately start work of production on a big feature film which, it is said, will be particularly interesting to Chicago people.

Territory for "Civilization" Sold Fast by Ince

Among Buyers Is the Western Civilization Company, Controlling Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Arizona, Utah, Wyoming—Company Has an Option on Alaska

A GREAT deal of territory has been bought by the state right buyers on the Thos. H. Ince cinema spectacle "Civilization" since the picture was released on this plan a few months ago. The rest of the country is under negotiation.

Earliest to take advantage of the privilege of handling "Civilization" in this manner among exhibitors was the Western Civilization Corporation, with offices in the Pantages Building, Seattle, Washington. The officers of this corporation are: President, Alexander Pantages, Secretary, W. I. Rosenthal; Joint Managers, Alexander Pantages and Isaac A. Rosenthal.

The Western Civilization Corporation controls the production in the following states: Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Arizona, Utah, Wyoming, an option is also held on Alaska.

An unmistakeable boom in "Civilization" started, and has since been maintained, as soon as the Superb Feature Film Company, Minneapolis, of which H. Rathner is general manager, secured the rights for Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Montana, North and South Dakota.

David A. Lourie is president and N. Pinanski is treasurer of the New England Film Distributors, Inc., which controls "Civilization" in the following states: Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The New Jersey state rights are controlled by the Civilization Film Corporation, of which Arthur A. Werner and Frank H. Hall are the active heads with executive offices in the Strand theatre building, New York City.

Greater New York, all of Long Island, and Westchester County, have just been obtained by the Civilization Feature Company, 130 West 46th street, New York City, of which Nathan Hirsh is general manager. Bookings for the spectacle are numerous and the enormous local publicity it has received is aiding to secure high prices.

The Amalgamated Theatres Corporation, secured the rights of "Civilization" for Cook County, Illinois, which means, of course, the city of Chicago.

Other state right deals are either pending, or nearing completion, but sufficient perhaps has been said to show that in a very short space of time the state rights of "Civilization" that have been acquired, have yielded large returns to the buyers.

In addition to the foregoing a number of states in South America have been disposed of at big figures, and it is understood that several European countries are about to be purchased.

Forty Touring Companies of "Daughter of the Gods"

Fox Will Send Out a Complete Organization of Kellermann Units, Including a Manager, Two Advance Agents, a Musical Director and Musicians and a Mechanical Crew

WILLIAM FOX, producer of "A Daughter of the Gods," announced last week that he would forthwith send out forty touring companies. "The Birth of a Nation" had twenty-five companies, "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria" had about a dozen each, and the big films of last summer had only six or eight traveling organizations apiece. There has never been a film or legitimate production exploited by means of forty companies, and the experiment of booking up 1,600 weeks of solid time in the United States for one play is, consequently, looked upon by theatrical sharps with unwonted interest.

The word "company" means a complete organization including a manager, two advance agents, a musical leader and musicians, and a crew to run the stage and the electrical and mechanical effects. For all the big-city productions one, and sometimes two, baggage cars will be carried. The entire business will be conducted in the usual theatrical way. The so-called "two-dollar" houses will be played, with the bookings in charge of Charles A. Miller, a veteran theatrical expert.

Recent events have pointed toward the above as the destination of "A Daughter of the Gods," but only the other day did Mr. Fox lay out the plans. In the first place, the engagement of the "picture beautiful," which began at the Lyric theatre, New York City, on October 17 will last one year. The simultaneous engagement at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, is just as crowded. Reports from that city say that trolley traffic in Chestnut street is blocked in the early afternoons and evenings by the crowds surging to get in. Finally, the opening at the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, on October 25, determined the issue, for it was discovered that the industrial population of that great city was just as eager to see the Kellermann film as were the cosmopolitan crowds of New York or the staid and cultured burghers of Philadelphia. The dimensions of the business may be gathered from the fact that the aggregate advance sale of the three cities constantly fluctuates between forty-five and fifty thousand dollars.

Seats are selling over the Christmas and New Year holidays in New York, and it is probable that the seat sale there will soon be extended up to March 1.

Obviously, to restrict "A Daughter of the Gods" to the three experimental openings—as "The Birth of a Nation" was restricted to New York and Boston for the first few months—would be to deprive most of the American public from seeing the film for a long time to come.

BRADY BACK IN NEW YORK

After a fortnight's observation trip through the Middle West, William A. Brady, director general of the World Film Corporation, has returned to his desk in the office of that concern. "The engine of prosperity," says Mr. Brady, "is whizzing along under a full head of steam, with the throttle wide open."

Heads of Film Interests to Form Advisory Committee

One of the Most Important Steps in the Comprehensive National Plan to Completely Organize the Industry and the First Action in the Creation of a Series of Powerful, Effectively-Formed Units of the Big Central Body Will Take Place in Chicago

ONE of the most important steps in the comprehensive national plan completely to organize the motion picture industry and the first action in creating a series of powerful, effectively formed units of the big central body, with headquarters in New York, will be taken on Friday next when the chiefs of the big screen and film interests in Chicago will meet for the purpose of forming an advisory executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

To the layman this might carry no more significance than an ordinary trade announcement—and there are many in the business who may fail to realize the profound importance of this move following promptly on the announcement of the general plan only a few days ago. But it is the beginning of the deep-foundation construction work of national character. The legislatures of thirty-eight states shortly to be convened are likely to take up measures of censorship, and, from these and other sources more or less powerful the industry is faced with problems of defense and protection more numerous than at any time in the history of the business.

These adverse activities can be met and overcome only by an organization, watchful, tirelessly aggressive for its rights, efficiently affiliated for the common good and the general betterment of the industry. The Chicago gathering will furnish an illuminating illustration of the tremendous scheme of the projectors of the National Association, for, though the body to be formed in that city will bear the name of an "advisory committee," it will be, in actual fact and operation, a perfectly rounded, separate organization, functioned exactly as the parent body and embracing all of the fifty odd divisions of the National.

With such men directing its activities as John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual, George K. Spoor, of the Essanay, and W. N. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope, and allied interests of the same relative power, the Illinois organization must take its place at once as a commanding force in building and buttressing the industry.

Both the Illinois and the California branches were decided upon at the last meeting of the National, at which time Mr. Freuler, who had been offered the chairmanship of Illinois, had the matter under consideration. Since that time there has been an interchange between the head of the Mutual and President William A. Brady and Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the Executive Committee, with the result that a time was set for the meeting and Frederick H. Elliott, the executive secretary, was instructed to go to Chicago to give direction in the formation of the body. Arrangements were made to have it as far as possible a representative meeting.

The Selig and the Essanay companies are among the original subscribers to the initial agreement of the National Association, and two members of the Board of Directors are located in Chicago—Maurice A. Choynski, of the Newberry theatre, representing the Exhibitors' Division, and Donald J. Bell, of the Bell and Howell Company, of the Supplies and Equipment Division. Alfred Hamberger, manager of theatrical enterprises is also a member of the National.

The producers will make a good showing, for besides the three big concerns mentioned there will be all of the others. Among those on Mr. Freuler's notification list are William J. Dunn, president of the Eagle Film Manufacturing Company; W. R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; Frederick J. Ireland, president of the Emerald Motion Picture Company; Wilbur Dunham, president of the Sunbeam Motion Picture Company.

Correspondence from the Central West coming to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shows the liveliest interest in the work of the parent body and his revealed the pressing need of a compact organization willing to mingle enthusiasm with hard work and a right fraternal pull-together federation of interests.

Executive Secretary Elliott left New York on the Twentieth Century Limited on Wednesday last, and immediately on his arrival at the headquarters that he had established at the Hotel Blackstone got in touch with the men who are to build the Illinois branch into one of the big, virile factors of the National Association.

Thirty-one Stars Will Shine for General, November 6-11

Selig Two-Part Drama, "As Ye Sow," Is the First of the Week's Offering—It Will Be Followed by Vitagraph's Educational, "New York Rapid Transit"

THIRTY-ONE notables who may be classed as film stars are featured in General Film Service program for the week November 6-11. Their names follow: Virginia Kirtley, Mary Pickford, Harry Dunkinson, Ethel Teare, Franklin Ritchie, Victor Potel, Rosemary Theby, True Boardman, Babe Hardy, George Larkin, Ralph Whiting, "Pokes" and "Jabbs," Gertrude Glover, Victoria Forde, Sid Jordon, Robyn Adair, Lionel Barrymore, "Ham" and "Bud," Henry Murdoch, Ben Turpin, Harry Myers, Marin Sais, Kate Price, Dorothy Davenport, Ollie Kirkby, Dorothy Long, Richard Travers, Helen Gibson and Pat Christian.

The Selig two-part drama, "As Ye Sow," presenting Virginia Kirtley and Robyn Adair, will be the first of the week's offerings screened. This will be followed by a one-reel Vitagraph educational film, "New York Rapid Transit," which will precede a reel of Selig-Tribune. The final picture for that day will be a Biograph production (reissue), "The New York Hat," presenting Mary Pickford and Lionel Barrymore.

Harry Dunkinson is featured in the Essanay comedy, "Easy Ed," in two acts, being the first picture shown Tuesday, November 7. This will be followed by Kalem's one-act comedy, "A Desperate Duel," in which "Ham" and "Bud," Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch provide the fun. "The Science of Crime," in two parts, by Biograph (reissue) featuring Franklin Ritchie, will conclude that day.

"A Safe Proposition," by Essanay in one reel, with Ben Turpin and Victor Potel in the titular roles, will be the first picture screened Wednesday, Novmber 8. A Vim comedy with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, "Marked 'No Funds,'" will follow. The fourteenth episode of "The Girl From 'Frisco," by Kalem, entitled "The Witch of the Dark House," will conclude the day's screens.

Selig-Tribune in one reel and a Vim comedy presenting Kate Price and Babe Hardy in "A Warm Reception," will be Thursday's offerings.

A Knickerbocker Star Feature three-part drama, "The Question Mark," in which Dorothy Davenport has the leading part, will be the first film screened Friday, November 10. Then will come the fourth episode of Kalem's "Grant, Police Reporter," presenting George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby in "The Man From Yukon." This will be succeeded by a Vitagraph one-reel comedy, "Weary Willie's Birthday," presenting Ralph Whiting and Dorothy Long. "Hot Dogs," a Vim comedy in one act, with "Pokes" and "Jabbs" in the lime light, will be the final picture.

An Essanay three-part drama, "What I Said," in which Richard Travers and Gertrude Glover shine as stars, will be the first picture shown Saturday, November 11. This will be followed by a one-reel episode of Kalem's "Hazards of Helen Series" in which Helen Gibson figures in some startling feats in "The Lone Point Mystery." The final picture of the week's offerings will be a Selig one-part comedy, "When Cupid Slipped," presenting Victoria Forde, Pat Christman and Sid Jordan.

STATE RIGHTS COMPANY OF JACKSONVILLE, MISS., HAS RIGHTS TO "CRISIS" FOR THREE STATES

The State Rights Company of Jacksonville, Miss., has bought from Sherman-Elliott, Inc., the rights to "The Crisis" for the states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, not the State Rights Company of Vicksburg, Miss., as announced last week in the NEWS through an error.

The Master Photoplay Company of Newark, N. J., has purchased the rights to "The Crisis" from Sherman-Elliott, Inc., for the state of New Jersey. All communications from exhibitors will reach the Master Photoplay Company in the new Proctor Theatre Building, Newark.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"THE HONORABLE ALGY"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

J. G. HAWKS has here constructed an admirable story around the English nobleman who comes to America in search of a fortune. He has done it with a remarkable show of originality from first to last. In the first place, the Honorable Algy is not a dunce but a normal human being with more than the average amount of intelligence. In the second place, he does not willingly seek the hand of an American heiress, but does so influenced by his father who must have money by a certain time to meet collections due on his estate. But the Honorable Algy after saving valuable jewels that have been stolen from an American heiress, goes to work in the employ of her fiance and makes good and is thus able to pay off the debt and keep his promise to the girl back home.

The Honorable Algy Plunges

For four reels Mr. Hawks' scenario moves dramatically, logically and originally. The observer is greeted with a surprise at almost every change in scene. The expected never happens. The unexpected arrives many times. Humor and drama have been mixed in proportions of delightful quantity. Briefly the first four reels of "The Honorable Algy" are excellent. The last reel drops. But drop as it will it can not destroy the good effect created by the first four. The fifth is illogical, sentimental to the extreme anl quite impossible. A dramatic critic would tear it to pieces unmercifully but a trade critic can happily ignore it and instead judge the picture as a whole and not in part. As a whole then, "The Honorable Algy" is a picture very far removed from the average. Its merits are many and its defects so small in comparison that they are negligible.

Charles Ray is seen in the title role and gives one of the splendid performances for which he is famous. Margery Wilson is the English girl and Margaret Thompson the American heiress. Others are Howard Hickman, Albery Cody, Jerome Storm, Charles French, Louis Brownell, Thomas Guise, Katherine Kirkwood and Walt Whitman.

Raymond B. West had charge of the directing and has made a creditable showing in every angle of his work. In the production end the Ince department has excelled itself. Never before to our knowledge have such realistic settings been employed by a motion picture of ordinary feature length. They possess a certain solidity and are besides so artistic and fitting that words are insufficient in their description.

"FAITH"

(American-Mutual Star Production—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

THIS latest Mary Miles Minter offering is easily classified; it is a shade better than its predecessor, "Youth's Endearing Young Charm." If you exhibited the latter picture, your audience's reception of it will give you an accurate gauge of the value of "Faith."

The story of the second Minter release is of the same type used in its forerunner, being slightly stronger, but spread thinly to cover six reels. The first half of the footage is used principally in showing the character of Faith, the heroine. The numerous incidents employed for this purpose bear great similarity to each other, and would become tiresome, were it not for the piquant personality of the star.

Although given better support and directing than in her previous Mutual picture, Miss Minter carries most of the production on her young shoulders. She performs this task exceedingly well, even contributing something new to each of the too frequent close-ups.

The second half of the picture moves decidedly more swiftly, bringing in the much-discussed theme of birth-control, a trial scene, and other dramatic stand-bys.

In spite of its mildness and inflation, this picture will probably get by well, because many men and most women will be captured by Miss Minter.

Helen, the daughter of Thorpe, a selfish millionaire, contracts a secret marriage, and at the death of her husband, finds herself about to become a mother. To hide what he considers a disgrace, Thorpe puts the infant in a foundling asylum, telling Helen that her child has died.

Faith Takes the Blame Upon Herself

Fifteen years later the girl, named Faith, has become a sunny, lovable child. She obtains a menial position in her grandfather's house, she and her relatives being ignorant of their relationship. Thorpe has married again, and has forbidden Laura, his stepdaughter, to see Thorne, a college student. Laura sees the man clandestinely, and later realized that an immediate marriage is all that stands between her and disgrace. Thorne refuses to marry her, so she decides to go through an illegal operation. To pay for this she steals some money from her stepfather's safe. When she is suspected of this robbery, she persuades Faith to take the blame. Strong, a lawyer whom Faith once befriended, defends the girl in court, proves her innocent, and shows that she is Helen's daughter. Faith, who has always prayed for a mother, finds her prayers answered.

The story and directing were done by James Kirkwood. The support includes Clarence Burton, Lizette Thorne, Margaret Shelby, Josephine Taylor, Perry Banks, Gertrude Le Brandt, John Cough, and King Clark.

"THE HEART OF THE HILLS"

(Edison-K-E-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

"THE Heart of the Hills," brings the Orient and Occident in close juxtaposition. The early part of the story is in India, and is surrounded with the lure and mysticism of the East, while the closing scenes are laid in London, where Eastern conspiracy is worked out with the Western setting.

Though the picture was adapted from the novel, "The Girl of the East," by David Whitelaw, there are times when it drags somewhat. We believe that this could have been obviated, to a large extent, by the elimination of a number of the scenes. In fact, we believe that the whole production could have been made more gripping and more intense had the continuity been handled in a different manner.

As it is the picture forms an exciting melodrama to which has been added a considerable amount of mystery. Sani, an East Indian seditionist, in order to win the love of Natali and Eurasian, steals the sacred ruby from the neck of the God in the temple. Natali, however, falls in love with and marries Sir Christopher Madgwick. Two years later Sani kidnaps their daughter Hester, and consecrates her as a vestal virgin in the temple. Natali dies, and her husband returns to England, taking with him the ruby which Natali in her struggle with Sani tore from his neck. Years later Madgwick marries again, and as the years roll on is ill-treated by his son and daughter. Sani on his deathbed confesses to the theft of the ruby, and tells the priests where it is. They send Hester to England to obtain it. Sani writes Sir Christopher, telling of his daughter's coming, and urging him to take the ruby to his grave with him.

On her arrival in England Hester meets and falls in love with Redgell, Madgwick's man of business, and because of her love tries to obtain her release from the seditionists. Madgwick dies suddenly, and on the discovery of a mysterious Eastern poison Hester is accused of his murder. To add to her seeming guilt she has been imprisoned by Karaji, the leader of the seditionists in England. She escapes, and, learning of the accusation against her, goes to Redgill and tells him what she knows about the seditionists. The police raid Karaji's house, and capture Ali, a servant of Madgwick's, who confesses that he put the poison in the coffin, as Madgwick had a horror of being buried alive. The mystery being cleared Hester and Redgill find happiness in each other's arms.

Mabel Trunnelle in the leading role of Hester was attractive throughout, but especially so in the scenes showing her as a vestal virgin in the temple. Conway Tearle pleased in the role of Redgill, though he was not called upon to exert himself to any great extent. Others in the cast were: Bigelow Cooper, Ray McKee, Marie La Corio, Herbert Prior, George Wright, Robert Conness, Edith Strickland, Crawford Kent, Charles Sutton, and Henry Leone. The picture was characterized by some good photography and lighting, and was well staged under the direction of Richard Ridgely.

"HIDDEN VALLEY"

(Pathe-Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

A STORY of mysterious adventure, this, quite out of the ordinary run of multiple reel features, featuring Valkyrien (Baroness De Witz) and Boyd Marshall. The plot is not heavily burdened, but makes up partially in novlty what it may lack in the customarily expected "punch"—for this is simply narrative, with here and there a half-thrill. The introduction, in which the young divinity student is shocked, on the day of his engagement by the return of a former sweetheart of the girl, who promptly returns to him his ring, promises a strong story, but immediately the tale develops into an African expedition, in which our hero is sent on a mission of discovering why a supply of ostrich plumes, which his uncle's firm has been buying, has suddenly diminished.

This mission carries him to Africa, where he soon forgets his jilting among the strange foreign tribes he encounters. Reaching the country adjoining Hidden Valley, he is told anyone venturing beyond two crossed spears will never return alive. He ventures, however, and becomes a God in the eyes of the astonished natives, miraculously discovering an underground stream which by blowing through the confining rock he liberates for the watering of the valley which has suffered drouth for many years. He finds there a captive white girl (Valkyrien) who showed him the hidden source of water.

He promised the water on the agreement of the natives to accept his God instead of their own pagan deities, and to open up their country to civilization, and the picture closes by the miraculous formation of a big cross in the water channels newly created.

This is the "climax."

The picture contains no thrills other than the shooting of one native, and the blowing through the rock wall to release the waters with a small keg of gunpowder. The African natives look like American citizens attired in breech cloths, with the addition of a few rings in their noses.

"THE PLACE BEYOND THE WINDS"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Place Beyond the Winds" has its shortcomings and regretably they are not to be counterbalanced by its merits. There is fine photography, superb settings, good acting if not always apropos of the situation. but the story is weak. Weak because neither of its two main threads is accentuated sufficiently to give strength to the picture. It is from the pen of a popular author, Harriet T. Comstock, and was scenarioized by Ida May Parke. If either of the threads had been dwelt on with more precision and force a dramatic picture would have been the result.

As presented, however, "The Place Beyond the Winds" creates a lukewarm impression.

At a distant trading post there is a girl with a stern father who forbids gayety in his home, believing that it is identical with evil. And there too is a man living in exile because he killed another who disgraced the woman he loved. The girl is turned out of her home by her father because she stayed away for an entire night. In the city she becomes a nurse and after a while meets the girl for whom the exile committed murder. She is dying, having been betrayed a second time by the man who is engaged to marry the daughter of the brother of the murdered man. This discovery on the father's part leads him to permit the exile's return. The girl goes back to the trading post and there concludes a stringy romance with a doctor.

Joseph De Grasse, who directed, has fared excellently in the selection of proper locations. His cameraman did adequate work also. As to the presentation of the story Mr. De Grasse's work is not so meritorious. He has a knack of introducing characters here and there without good cause. This is probably a case of poor cutting and perhaps should not be laid at the director's feet.

Dorothy Phillips is featured. Mr. De Grasse is the exile and Jack Mulhall the doctor. Lon Chaney and C. Norman Hammond also appear.

"THE OCEAN WAIF"

(International—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THOUGH the story for this picture is slight it is pleasing and interesting and furnishes a pleasant hour's diversion. The triteness of the story, however, is more than compensated for in the great beauty and general ability of Doris Kenyon, the star. She possesses a naivete that is charming to witness and in addition is a clever and winsome actress. We believe that she is worthy of a more pretentious offering than is evident in the picture under consideration.

The story is styled an original comedy drama by its author, Frederick Chapin, but there was little of the comedy element and most of the dramatic tensity was supplied by a trial for murder and court scene which was far from original.

Millie, washed up on the shore of a New England fishing village while a baby, has become the drudge of Hy Jessop, a drunken, brutal, disreputable fisherman. Following a beating she runs away and takes refuge in a deserted house that is supposed to be haunted.

Ronald Roberts, a celebrated writer of best sellers, rents the house that he may have quiet to finish his new novel. Millie plays the part of the ghost until discovered, and then follows the opening of a new life for her in which love is born. The arrival of Roberts' fiancee dissipates her dreams and she returns to her foster father. Jessop beats her brutally and in the midst of the scene is shot and killed by Sem, a half-witted admirer of Millie. Roberts appears on the scene at the exact psychological moment and is accused of the murder. Later he is tried and convicted. At the last moment, just as he is about to be sentenced, Sem confesses and escapes. Roberts, in his hour of trial, has been deserted by his fiancee, which leaves him free to embark on love's journey in company with the beautiful Millie.

There were one or two minor lapses in direction, but on the whole the picture was well staged and well produced with pleasing lighting and photography. The supporting cast included Carlisle Blackwell, who pleased greatly as the celebrated author; William Morse as Hy Jessop; Fraunie Fraunholz as Sem, who gave a mighty good characterization by the way; and Lyn Donaldson as Beatrice.

"THE MICROSCOPE MYSTERY"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN an attempt to mix comedy, drama and the study of insects in one story, those concerned in the production of "The Microscope Mystery" have tackled too difficult a job. When the picture is at last over, the observer is left with a conglomeration of impressions, none of which asserts itself over the rest to a suitable extent, except perhaps a certain sickening feeling which a particular phase of the picture creates.

When one is presented with a humorous introductory reel it is hardly to be expected that in its latter phases the picture will turn out to be violent melodrama. If the switch was to light drama all well and good. It could be countenanced and be convincing in the bargain. But when the same set of characters who in the first reel cavorted about for your amusement, turn to such serious business that even murder and an inquest is reached, it doesn't ring true. The melodrama be it ever so well done—and in passing that in "The Microscope Mystery" is not well done—is harmed to a certain extent by the opening which seems to attempt to route all thought of seriousness.

William E. Wing prepared the scenario for this picture. He can do much better. Even the comedy in the first part is inferior and the many subtitles instead of creating a laugh give the impression that the author is a poor humorist, which is quite wrong. The direction was in charge of Paul Powell and is praiseworthy in practically every respect. If locations and settings were all that went to make up the realism of a production "The Microscope Mystery" would have fared exceedingly well.

The picture exposes quack doctors. The sickening part referred to above is the series of scenes in which the chief quack manages by administering injurious medicines to bring an old man to his bed. Then he asks the old fellow for a ten thousand dollar check. The patient refuses and forthwith the quack gives him a dose of something that causes the recipient to suffer tortures of the damned. All this is not very pleasant—in fact it is quite far removed from any sort of entertainment. Then the quack is mysteriously murdered. The daughter of the old man is suspected, but her lover, a bona fide doctor, proves through the use of his microscope that a half-wit farm hand is the culprit. There is a prolonged closeup of the half-wit confessing, in which he contorts his face into such grotesque expressions that the effect on the spectator is about as aggravating as it must have been agonizing to the actor.

Constance Talmadge is starred as the old man's daughter. Wilfred Lucas is the real doctor and F. A. Turner the man who falls afoul of the quack. Pomeroy Cannon is the quack.

WARNER OLAND as Baron Huroki of the Japanese Secret Service.

DOROTHY GREEN as Mrs. Fanny Adair.

GEORGIO MAJIERONI as Senor Juan de Lima, Secret Agent of Mexico.

Mrs. Castle appears in the dual role of

PATRIA CHANNING, Society heiress

and

ELAINE, the dancing girl of the Montmartre.

PATRIA

The supreme serial—a romance of preparedness.

MRS. VERNON CASTLE as Patria Channing in "Patria," the superb new serial, shows remarkable versatility.

She shoots with the dead sure aim of a frontier maid.

She swims with the grace and abandon of a mermaid.

She dives from dizzy heights.

She drives a motor at a speed that defies all law.

She rides with the easy daring of a "cowgirl".

She laughs, cries, dances, makes love—she portrays all womanly emotions with the power of a great artist. But—

As Arthur Brisbane advises—

"Why waste time describing Mrs. Castle. When you mention her name you tell the whole story.

"If you had engaged Theodore Roosevelt to play the part of a cowboy, you would not attempt to tell the public he had once been a rough rider."

Viola Dana in the Latest Metro-Columbia Feature, "The Gates of Eden"

In Her Support Appear Augustus Phillips, Edward Earle and Robert Walker. The Feature Portrays Life Among the Shakers

"THE GATES OF EDEN"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

VIOLA DANA is surrounded by a thoroughly competent cast in this picture, which makes dramatic material out of the peculiar religious belief of the people known as the Shakers. To these people self-denial and abnegation even to refusing to acknowledge the right of self-perpetuation, has made their sect one of abnormal individuals, now almost extinct, and we can well imagine the events pictured in this story to have really happened.

Briefly, the story tells of Evelyn, the mother, and her daughter, Eve, a double role admirably taken by the star, who makes enough apparent difference in the two characters to complete the illusion. Evelyn, the daughter of Brother Joseph, has yielded to the temptation of a nature requiring love for its complete unfolding, and Eve is the child of Evelyn and William Bard, the son of Brother Peter. The unyielding severity with which Elder Joseph metes out punishment to William, by the lash, with his own hand, driving him from the community, turns William to a life of hate and revenge on all humanity. William, returning once to reclaim Evelyn, finds her dead, and is told the child died also, a lie which Elder Joseph repents when he realizes what havoc he has brought. The main theme and story of the plot is of William's plan of revenge, which culminates at the same time as a new love between William's adopted son and Eve. When he discovers this new love and regains his child his heart softens, as does the heart also of even uncompromising Elder Joseph. Augustus Phillips as Elder Joseph, Robert Walker as William Bard, and Edward Earle as Rodney Drab, his adopted son, carried the conspicuous roles, splendidly handled.

In this newest vehicle for Miss Dana, Metro has selected a deeply dramatic theme, with hardly a moment of relief to the intense melancholy of the story. Remarkable art is evidenced in the staging of a thunderstorm with accompanying lightning, which is used to heighten the dramatic effect of the wrath of Brother Joseph, which he points out to the terribly frightened Eve is the direct wrath of Heaven on her wickedness. A skidding automobile, and views of the sky, before and after the storm, add a fine touch to this illusion. We were unable, however, to figure out how it happened that with all the rain and lightening everywhere else, the visitor in the automobile found an apparent calm moment in which to arrive. Perfect illusion of storm from within, fine frenzy of nature when he reaches the steps of the Shaker home, but for some reason only the skidding car and the mud underneath to indicate the storm during the interim. It would seem as if a double negative or some trick should be used to complete this scene in the finished print, which only needed the "rain" in this one scene to make one of the most effective storm illusions we have ever seen.

The scenes showing William receiving the punishment of the lash were brutal enough without being too much so, the evacuation of the home was finely attended to, and Elder Joseph's final "confession" was as good acting as we have witnessed in pictures in many a day. Real tears are no novelty, nowadays, but were very effectively used by Miss Dana in the big climax, the final reunion and perfect understanding between all the principals.

Auidences will like Miss Dana in this picture—but it is very sombre.

"THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THOMAS MEIGHAN and Anita King make a double-star combination which will be very acceptable to Paramount patrons, and we cannot conceive of an average audience not enjoying every minute of this play, picturized from Paul Armstrong's dramatization. The titling, at several crucial points, is timed exactly to the moment to get a sympathetic laugh, for this is more comedy than drama, but comedy of the sympathetic kind, where you don't laugh at but with the hero. The "goat" of the piece is the mother-in-law, a part admirably taken by Edythe Chapman.

She has a powerful mind of her own, but when she tries to mess things up for her son-in-law the bluff works for a while, until you really feel something must happen to relieve the situation, and before it gets to worrying you too much the something does happen. And that makes the play enjoyable all the way through. The action is fast and so timed that just the right suspense is given to make every surprise count to the fullest. Joe Lacy (Thomas Meighan), a miner who adopts citizens' clothes with reluctance, Bud (Horace Carpenter) and Bill (Charles Ogle) are seen in all kinds of surroundings and no pains is spared to make the atmosphere true, whether it is the Western dance-hall or the fashionable drawing-room.

Miss King has an unusual power of facial expression, and as Geraldine Kent, who marries for money and finds she has true love along with it, gives a fine interpretation of the girl who at first is willing to sell herself, at her mother's persuasion, and later develops a will of her own and a heart feeling that makes her stick to her husband-lover and side with him when he takes matters in his own hands and decides to run his own household.

None but will sympathize with both principals all the way through the picture, and as the story ends right, with everybody happy, it is sure to please. There are a good many serious moments in the play, which made a real hit in its spoken form on Broadway, and the salient good points of the stage play have been saved and worked up well into picture form. The novel crib Bud and Bill make for the baby should be mentioned as one of those touches Lasky directors seem to have a special genius for working into their pictures, in the infinite pains they take to have them complete.

The Partner Presents Joe's Wife with an Automobile

"THE LAND JUST OVER YONDER"

(Unity-Dudley—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

PETER B. KYNE'S stories of western mining life have a literary appeal which, if transferred to pictures so as to bring out the characters portrayed true to the author's story, may be counted on to find favor with those who like the romance of the great west in pictured form. "The Land Just Over Yonder" has a possibility of appeal that could be made much of, but such a story will require master direction and a quality of acting which is not found in the picture of this name just released by the Unity Film Corporation.

The Governor Is Convinced that a Pardon Is Warranted

We have never seen a picture which better illustrates the fact that merely putting together the incidents of a story no matter how fine the literary merit of the written narrative, will not make a dramatic feature. What is lost by the silence of the picture, must be replaced by the "punch" of the scenes adapted to convey the same thought to the audience. "Punch" is lacking in "The Land Just Over Yonder" until the last half of the sixth reel, and therefore as this is an essentially "western" feature, there is little else to carry it over with an average audience.

From the time the old man finds his former pardner and comrade under his care as a prisoner in the jail of which he is sheriff, condemned to be hanged in a few days, through the well directed scenes of the interview with the governor and the holding him to a promise really made under a false impression, the action is tense and deserving of high praise. But this, even coupled with a realistic fight and some snappy dance hall scenes half way through the picture, should not be expected to satisfy an audience for a six-reel "feature."

"YELLOW MENACE"

(Chapters 13-14—Unity—Two Reels Each)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

NEARING the close, several new surprises are sprung in these two chapters, which continue the menace to the white race of Ali Singh's organized gang of yellow crooks. Chapter Thirteen introduces Ali Singh in citizen's clothes, as the wily sleuth who undertakes personally to obtain from the over-vain inventor, Howard Smithson, the secret of his wonderful submarine air control device. Smithson, to prove he is right in an argument framed by Ali Singh for the purpose, undertakes to show Ali the invention. In the meantime Hong Kong Harry and Najla hold one another at bay at pistol arm's length. Smithson is trapped in the submarine, but escapes and locks Ali in the vessel after shutting off the air supply. Ali's faithful man shoots Ali to safety through the torpedo tube, at the sacrifice of his own life, in a dramatic scene. Meantime Harry captures Najla and carries her before his chief.

Chapter Fourteen concerns the attempt of Ali to learn the secret of quadrinolite, a wonderful explosive mixture. Exciting scenes in this chapter are the lassoing of Captain Cook from his bedroom to the story above, and the storming of Ali's stronghold and substitution for Ali of a man closely resembling him. A dramatic ceremonial, interrupted just in time, which would make Najla become Hong-Kong Harry's wife, adds to the counterplot—several thrills at once occurring here.

"IT'S NEVER TOO LATE"

(International—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THIS is the first episode in a new series to be known as "The Adventures of Dorothy Dare," and forms an unusual combination of dramatic adventure and fashion pictures. Each episode will contain an adventurous story built around a display of th season's latest fashions.

In this first episode Dorothy is the means of keeping the salesgirl in a fashionable store to the straight and narrow path. While visiting a restaurant Dorothy sees a beautiful young girl in company with a wealthy man of bad reputation. The next day on visiting a fashionable costumer's she finds the same girl as the head salesgirl. She tries to warn her of her companion of the night before but the girl takes umbrage.

Later the girl borrows a beautiful gown from the stock of the store and goes out with her wealthy lover. Dorothy has found the humble lover of the girl and together they trail the other couple. At a road house there is a fight between the two men and the gown is ruined. Dorothy agrees to purchase it in order to save the girl at the store who sees the folly of her conduct. A reconciliation follows and true love resumes the even tenor of its way.

The picture was beautifully staged and served the purpose of exhibiting some very beautiful gowns, many of them artistic creations as well as conforming to the latest fashions. Taken as a whole it was a pleasing offering and one that should please the feminine patrons of any theatre.

"THE HEART OF A HERO; OR, LIFE OF NATHAN HALE"

(Peerless-World—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

ROBERT WARWICK and Gail Kane save this from being a mediocre production. For two full reels we see Nathan Hale in his country school at New London, Conn., well staged scenes introducing the romance of the two lovers, teacher and pupil, with disconnectedly inserted historic bits which the average American will of course understand. But what a world of opportunity for the master of photoplay technique to have given real life and blazing color to a romance which in this picture is simply a sweet love story punctuated with historical references —up to the close of the third reel. Then at last the director seems to catch the idea that it is a drama which is being enacted, that requires the audience to take a solemn and personal interest in the characters aside from the fact that each looks at the other with longing, feverish anxiety to have something to do to prove their devotion.

Nathan Is Still Determined to Serve His Country

Hale is awarded his captain's commission, and wins added admiration from his love, by organizing his scholars into a volunteer company, and the audience is treated to the customary reviews and farewells, and other incidents which prove that it is serious business. But Hale's capture of the British stores was not serious. No watchman could sleep through such a conspicuous approach of danger. Likewise, later in the picture, Hale himself walks by the British officer, saddle in hand, and prepares the mount which we know is later to furnish his only possible means of escape.

And so we say again, that Robert Warwick and Gail Kane make a good picture of this offering in spite of disconnected and careless handling of fine material which the director had to work with. Costumes, properties, and many of the individual scenes deserve sincere praise, but if the scenario had not called for continuous action, from the time Hale arrives at the British headquarters in the Widow Chichester's tavern until he is hanged with the famous words on his lips that he would he had another life to give for his country, we could never put our o.k. on this picture as getting anything for the exhibitor. We think stars and story, as a whole, will get this by as a satisfactory production.

"THE PENCIL CLUE"

(Kalem-General Film—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE third episode in the series, "Grant, Police Reporter," is called "The Pencil Clue," and contains a clever bit of detective work. George Larkin also makes a thrilling jump from a roof to a moving automobile, and there follows a strenuous fight down the traffic crowded streets.

Tommy Grant, the police reporter, on the Chronicle is visiting the Morgue, when word comes in of the mysterious death of the senior partner of a well-known law firm. They hasten to the scene, and while the junior partner, John Goss, tries to make the authorities believe that his partner died of heart failure, Grant noses around. Later he meets the stenographer, and she tells him of the suspicious action of Goss that morning. She gives Grant the pencil that the senior partner was using when he died, and Grant having the point analyzed finds it covered with a deadly poison. An autopsy discloses the same poison on the senior partner's tongue. Goss tries to escape, Grant pursues, and finally captures him after the strenuous fight in the automobile already mentioned.

The episode is exciting throughout and well up to the standard that has characterized the series so far. George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby continue to please in the leading roles, and the lighting and photography were up to the usual standard.

"GLORIANA"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"GLORIANA" is an innocuous production, which derives its subject matter from two greatly touted lines, "Charity begins at home," and "A Little Child Shall Lead Them." The first comes about as a result of the latter. Gloriana is adopted by a doctor of affluence, with a wife whose pet hobby is regenerating the Indian heathen. So enthused is she over the proposition of his welfare that she forgets about the slums of her own city and particularly her own home. It takes Gloriana to convert her and in the end she acknowledges that her theories were well formed but poorly directed.

Zoe Rae, the clever child actress, has the title role in the picture. Little Zoe is an actress from the way she dresses to the way she performs. She is distinctly a child of the theatre or the motion picture, whichever you will. The fact that she is so young and so clever will instantly win her applause, so hearty we believe that audiences will be able to overlook the fact that she is quite far removed from anything naturally juvenile. When she has a scene to play she enters into it with the zeal and determination of an artist with years of skill. She would be quite able to carry a good story and put it over with more than an ordinary bang.

The Death of Gloriana's Mother

"Gloriana," though, is a picture that lacks vitality. It is a skeleton without vitals. Which is merely another way of saying that the story is too small for its allotted space. All would be well, providing "Gloriana" was speedy sometime during its stay on the screen, but regrettably it is slow from first to last. It doesn't entertain one sufficiently, but it does interest because of Zoe Rae, who by the way was once known as Zoe Bech.

Her support here includes Gordon Griffith, Virginia Foltz, William Canfield, Clarissa Selywnne, Irene Hunt, Mary Talbot and John Cook. E. Masson Hopper directed from a scenario by W. H. Lippert.

"THE SEX LURE"

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THE Ivan studios are to be congratulated on this latest offering of theirs. A most interesting story running along old lines has been put into a new dress, as it were, until it is almost new. A thoroughly competent cast, alive to each respective part, gives as finished a piece of acting as could be wished. The entire ensemble of six reels is good to look upon, and in addition to a thoroughly enjoyable story the suspense is sustained throughout.

James Morrison and Frankie Mann in their characterizations of Arthur Reynolds and Rose Bernton, respectively, are deserving of special mention, for they just "lived" their parts.

Wallace and His Mother Are United Once More

Rose, taught by her uncle to look upon the Reynolds as the murderer of her father who had been killed in one of the Reynolds' shops, is adopted by them on the death of her uncle.

Arthur Reynolds, their young son, who had been kidnapped by Rose's uncle before his death, loses his mind and is adopted by a wealthy bachelor, Col. Denby, without being able to disclose his identity.

Mrs. Reynolds, a victim of melancholia since the illness of her boy, is easily displaced in the affections of Reynolds by Rose and forced to leave her home and her husband at the instigation of his new charmer, who sees about getting a divorce.

Mrs. Reynolds, arriving in the city, goes to a hotel and there meets Col. Denby, who is stopping there with his adopted son. Hearing the voice of Mrs. Reynolds, Arthur's mind comes back to him and he and his mother are united. Learning of his father's change of heart he goes to the house and in the absence of his father, wins the fickle Rose to himself just as Reynolds returns and finds the two in a compromising position. Explanations are in order and Arthur tells his father that he was only trying to show him the kind of woman he was entertaining in preference to his wife.

Rose is in turn driven away and Arthur takes his father to the city and there the boy's parents are united once more and everybody is made happy.

"BOOTS AND SADDLES"

(B. S. Moss—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

THIS is a virile, attention-holding story and the original from the pen of Eugene Walter is ideal for screening. The B. S. Moss studios are responsible for this one, with R. Henry Grey playing the lead.

A little more careful editing might have been the just due for this "Boots and Saddles," as it is a pretty fair number. But it is possible to make it one of the best releases of the month with a little care.

The acting is good, the photography excellent and the plot interesting, but a little more attention to detail would help a whole lot. Lucy Ferris, wife of the superintendent of the Ajax mines, entertains a party of visitors and takes them on a visit to the encampment of some troops on the border near the mines. Sergeant James, who has enlisted under an assumed name, and whose troop is stationed there, recognizes in Lucy the girl whom he has never ceased to love even though she chose another in preference to him.

Ferris, an inveterate gambler, plots with another trooper to rob the paymaster on the way to the mines and the money taken to Ferris's house. Ferris, who is disguised, is shot by his wife, who takes him to be a burglar, and Sergeant James goes in pursuit of the two other robbers. Coming up with them he confiscates the bag of money, but lets the two miscreants go, for fear of compromising Lucy in disclosing the character of her husband. James is courtmartialed for letting the robbers go, but the opportune arrival of Lucy and her avowal that James was trying to shield her by holding back information that would dishonor her dead husband's name, sets him right again, and everything ends happily.

"THE SOUL OF KURA SAN"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is a picture of strong emotional appeal, ably interpreted by a cast of which all the principals save two are Japanese. Sessue Hayakawa and Tsuru Aoki offer expressive performances of roles which, in the hands of less competent players, might have fallen into sickly sentiment on the one hand and melodramatic posing on the other. And Myrtle Stedman is exceedingly appealing in the third star part.

The Lasky staff, and particularly Director E. J. Le Saint, has again demonstrated ability to build an absorbing drama of narrow compass, fully developed as to climaxes, and with a genuine punch. Mr. Le Saint's work here is rendered all the more gratifying because of the admirable attention to technical detail, in which Art Director Wilfred Buckland and Cameraman Allen M. Davey share. The atmosphere of old Japan, both in the interior settings and the exterior, is reproduced splendidly.

The story shows in its first division, the tragedy of the love of Toyo and Kura San; in its second, Toyo's vow of vengeance toward Kura San's betrayer, and what came of it. Except for the Japanese atmosphere, and the distinct treatment accorded the story, the plot is the old plot of melodrama. But there is no such thing as a bare plot aside from the treatment it receives. And in this case the treatment is very effective.

Miss Aoki portrays love and despair with a restraint which is exceptional; and Mr. Hayakawa is really impressive in his rendition of revenge, as well as in the love scenes. The cast also includes George Webb, Thomas Kurihara, George Kuwa, and several interesting Japanese types.

"A SON OF ERIN"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

"A Son of Erin" provides fair entertainment, without rising to any heights of drama or humor, although both the latter elements are worked upon. It is one of those pictures which may be called pleasing, by which we mean that the story is harmless, the players sympathetic in their parts, and the technical details well handled.

Dustin Farnum has a matinee idol role. He appears as an honest young Irishman who comes to America with the avowed intention of getting a job as a policeman, the upshot of the matter being that he aids the Reform party in ending police graft. Naturally, he suffers some hardships before his worth is finally recognized, and the girl comes from Ireland to be his bride.

In contrast to the lack of intensity in the story, and its obvious use as a vehicle for Mr. Farnum, we have some pretty love scenes, with Winifred Kingston as an appealing figure; excellent atmosphere of Irish farm life; and the usual splendid photography and attractive settings which the Pallas people give their productions. It is quite true that the technical side of the picture is superior to any other side; and it is also true that Mr. Farnum and Miss Kingston are quite as picturesque as the surroundings in which they are placed.

Others in the cast are Jack Livingston, J. Wallace, Winifred McDonald, Wallace Pyke, Lee Williard, Mabel Wiles and Hugh B. Koch. The direction was in charge of Julia Crawford Ivers, who also wrote the story. J. O. Taylor handled the photography.

"SHADOWS AND SUNSHINE"

(Pathe Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

DON'T ask the reason for this play—you will enjoy it. One can hardly be expected to understand how it would be possible for a father to disown and drive from his home an only son, simply because he has married a "working girl," nor the resulting consequence, the mother refusing to speak to the father forever afterward, yet living in the same house with him. A queer and unreal beginning—yet based on these facts, which you must accept, is a truly charming "kid story." The star will be remembered from her previous appearance in "Little Mary Sunshine," a "return date" attraction in many theatres.

Little Sunshine Puzzles Over Her Mother's Saying that "Little Angels Don't Have Black Faces"

Ready, go! Father and mother lonely, mourning the loss of their only son, who might better be dead. "Little Sunshine" first brings dad around, then gets into mother's heart, and, when it is all over, they find that "Little Sunshine" is really their grandchild.

There might as well be no plot, as five-reel plots go, but none the less this is an unusual and a good offering. Marie Osborne as "Little Mary" is perfect. All she does through four reels is win the hearts of the father and mother, and the audience, in a hundred different ways. There is comedy, pathos, surprise, and almost every conceivable dramatic quality imaginable in the portrayal of child character. It is really wonderful what this actress and her director have made out of so little plot. Daniel Gilfether as the impossible father, and Lucy Payton as the mother and grandmother, added materially to the play, as did the child mother, personated by Mollie McConnell.

If an entire evening of clever kid acting is desired, this picture will furnish it. The child is natural, pleasing, clever in every way, and will pull on the heart strings with a real hard tug in many a scene. The scenes where she tries to make an angel out of the little colored boy by scrubbing him in the bath-tub is good comedy, and when as one of her pranks she takes a notion to go swimming in the lily pond, her little nude form is exceedingly graceful. The picture surely has novelty and is wonderfully produced in the point of a child's holding interest and attention through a full hour of entertainment.

"THE LAND OF SILENCE"

(Educational Films Corporation, of America—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

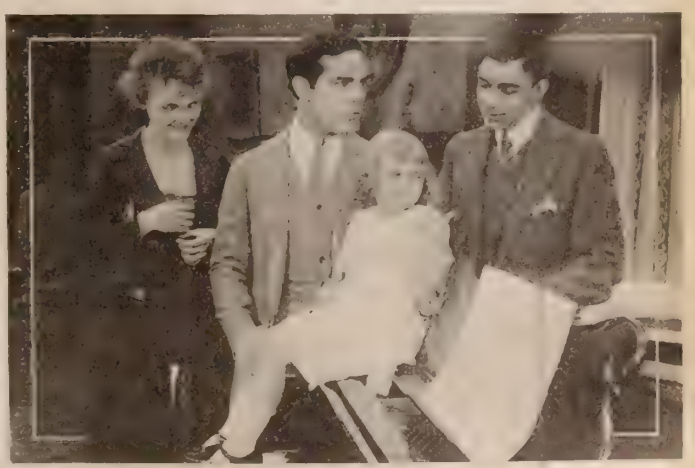
A MAN and his dog in search of peace and quiet, find both in the vast stretches of snow and ice amid the mountains here shown. Trackless stretches of snowy waste, with here and there straggling pines struggling for a bare existence on patches of earth among the lava beds; beautiful lakes, so still that the surroundings are reflected in their mirror-like surfaces; mountain-tops with their blankets of snow and ice in the background, in the foreground and to the right and left, all are shown in their natural beauty in this scenic picturization.

The dog romps and plays all around his master whether he is tracking a fresh path up the mountainside or over the lonely waste, he lays alongside him as he make his camp for the night and the two are the only living creatures for miles around. Just Robert C. Bruce and his dog.

Birds, squirrels or other living animals there are none, for they are six thousand feet above the sea level and when we see them even the air is still. Even the snow storm that overtakes them on the mountain top is without wind and the flakes come straight down, soon covering the small tent in which man and dog have found shelter.

For an entire reel scene after scene in all its natural beauty is unwound and the beholder feels that Nature has revealed to him her sacred secrets. There is no reason that this release should not be welcomed by any exhibitor, anywhere, any-time at any theatre.

"THE DEVIL'S PRIZE"



(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

VITAGRAPH offers a society drama in "The Devil's Prize," which was written and directed by Marguerite Bertsch. It contains a number of considerably dramatic episodes that are enhanced by capable acting and appropriate staging. The series of scenes forming the climax are effectively arranged and should not pass without creating a sensation of proportions greater than the average. The settings, lighting and photography have been carefully attended to in practically every instance.

We know that Miss Bertsch is a good author and that she is a good director she has proven by other productions. Her accomplishments, however, are better to be seen each by itself than combined in one picture. Doubtless the reason for the haziness in the first scenes of "The Devil's Prize" resulted from the fact of the author being so well acquainted with her situations that she presumed upon the intelligence of the audience. She has plunged right into the middle of a big situation at the start and as a consequence one is at somewhat of a loss to determine the various characters and fix in his mind the numerous settings employed.

The central character of the picture is Arnold St. Clair, who is always on the lookout for his own good. Previous to his marriage, which brought him great wealth, he had dishonored Myra, who shortly afterwards married Roland, a newspaper owner. Stratton, a man possessed of a worthless mine, is the only one who knows Myra's secret. Stratton decides to unload his stock on the people and acquaints St. Clair with his plans. St. Clair, believing it is a straight deal tells Roland, who is for municipal ownership, of the plan and he is enthusiastic. Later St. Clair learns that the stock is worthless but threatened by Stratton he doesn't tell Roland. When the mine goes under Roland is accused of the whole fraud. From here the story moves with increasing clarity. St. Clair, afraid of Stratton, kills him, but not until Roland learns of St. Clair's former relations with his wife. Crazed with fear, St. Clair accuses another man of the murder, but later at the approach of detectives he succumbs.

Albert S. Howson appears as St. Clair and gives an emotional and telling performance. Those featured are Antonio Moreno as Roland and Naomi Childers as St. Clair's wife. Others are Templar Saxe, Lark Taylor, Clio Ayres and Mildred Platz.

"THE HERITAGE OF HATE"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETE MILNE

"THE Heritage of Hate" is a sensationally evolved story in which the nameless daughter of a wealthy business man plans to secure vengeance by wrecking him in business. And she succeeds, turning the trick at last by setting fire to his large warehouses on the river front. The story was written by Walter Woods and was evidently calculated to bring forth alternate volleys of cheers and hisses. The villain meets his just deserts; the heroine is reformed of course and marries the man she least expected loved her. Everyone else knew he did but she didn't.

The Accusation

If we wrote on the basis that all's well that ends well, then all would be well with "The Heritage of Hate." However, all is not well with the body of the picture. It is not a convincing piece of work; its big situations, such as they are, fail to ring true to life. The cast is not particularly accomplished and the big scenes are played more or less mechanically with no real show of feeling.

Roberta Wilson, as the girl, is attractive and pretty to look at and does well in subjects which make no great demands on her histrionic ability, but in a big part such as is allotted her here she fails to create a strong impression. William Quinn is the father and the supporting cast includes Betty Harte, Paul Byron, Betty Schade and Eileen Sedgwick.

"LOVE AND HATE"

(Fox—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THIS picture deals almost entirely with home wrecking and the losing fight of a perfectly innocent woman to keep her home intact, and the love and respect of her children. In the end she is dragged through the mire of the divorce court and only achieves her happiness by a near murder.

Helen Stirling has the misfortune to excite the sensuous passion of George Howard, a wealthy, unscrupulous broker. By a series of highly unprincipled events he causes her husband to become suspicious, and finally maneuvers so that he seeks freedom in the divorce court. The name and honor of the woman is stained by the perjured testimony of Howard and it is on his account that the custody of the young child is awarded to the husband.

Later Rita Lawson, who has aided Howard in some of his shady transactions, suggests to Howard that the only way to gain possession of Helen is through the child. They follow Stirling as he leaves the court room and are successful in kidnaping the little girl. They lock her up in Howard's apartment and then apprise the mother. She appears and consents to give her body in return for the freedom of her child. In an elaborately fitted up lounge room she gets hold of a revolver and in a struggle which follows with Howard he is accidentally killed. This serves as a means of opening the eyes of Stirling, who sees how unjust he has been and a reconciliation follows.

Bertha Kalich has the leading role and it is needless to say that the production furnishes her with ample opportunity to display her well known ability as an exponent of the dramatic art. She makes the most of every moment and her expression and gesture throughout the whole production are such that they leave little to be desired. She has been given a role that is eminently fitted to her and has made the most of it from every angle.

Stuart Holmes did a creditable piece of work as Howard the unscrupulous broker. He was the villiain par excellence, but withal a quiet, dignified villain who comprehended the value of suppression. Kenneth Hunter pleased as the husband. Others in the cast were Madeleine Le Nard, Jane Lee and Katherine Lee. The lighting and photography were well up to standard.

Taken all in all it is a picture that will please those who like this kind of offering, extremely well acted and well produced. It was staged under the direction of James Vincent from the story of Mary Murillo.

"A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS"

(Signal-Mutual Serial—Chapters 2 and 3)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

THE second and third chapters of the new Mutual serial bring in all the thrills foreshadowed by the initial installment, with more thrown in for good measure. The big moments are not only gripping, but are the logical developments of a genuine story. In many serials the plot is twisted out of shape to get in the "punches," but here there is always good reason for their introduction.

The fine locations, commented on in a review of the first chapter, are duplicated by the splendid scenery used in the following installments. The same high-grade photography also continues.

Helen Holmes, who makes her debut in the second chapter, is peppier than ever, and puts over the climaxes in her usual smooth manner. A fifty-foot dive, a spectacular race in a locomotive, and the shooting of rapids in a canoe are among the stunts pulled off for the edification of the fans.

The story of the first chapter was outlined in last week's NEWS. In the second chapter Holmes marries the trust president's daughter, and she bears him a son. Twenty years later this son is returning from college on a steamer. The ship is wrecked, and the youth would have been drowned, except for plucky work of Helen, who jumps off a high cliff and carries him ashore. In appreciation of the act, Holmes gives Helen a job on his railroad. Later Holmes kills a man who owns a strategic piece of timber land, and sends his lieutenants to register the land in his name.

Helen discovers the plot, loads a canoe on a locomotive, and races to the river. She puts the canoe in the water, and after shooting the rapids, reaches the recorder's office before Holmes' men. The latter have been delayed because their machine fell through a bridge.

In the third chapter Holmes' men discover that the girl was not of age when she registered the land, so they get a deed to the property themselves. To offset this loss, Helen and her friends decide to send some logs to the mill. Ten cars are loaded, but Holmes refuses to let them be transported on his railroad. Knowing that the road to the mill is all down-grade, Helen decides to let gravity take the load. After starting the cars down, Helen finds that a special passenger train is going over the same line. After a wild chase in a locomotive, Helen captures the cars and side-tracks them in time to prevent a collision. She then hauls the logs to the mill, thus scoring first blood for the independent loggers.

J. P. McGowan directed these scenes admirably.

"A PECK O' PICKLES"

(American-Mutual Star Production—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY

THIS latest Kolb and Dill offering, while perhaps not so original as their previous releases, is nevertheless excellent comedy. The story, written by Frank Stammers, gives the featured comedians a number of chances for their characteristic humor.

Slap-stick work and fun-making of a more sedate nature are shrewdly alternated in order to satisfy all classes of audiences. Trick photography is occasionally used with good effect.

Some of the settings are unusually pretentious for a comedy, and many of the burlesque war scenes were done on a large scale. Director T. N. Heffron wisely ordered the camera to be pointed most of the time at Kolb and Dill, knowing that their inimitable grimaces would surely get across. The dialect subtitles contribute greatly to the picture's effect.

While it is difficult to appraise comedy value, "A Peck O' Pickles" seems to have enough subtleties to please a high-class patronage, and enough of the obvious to tickle less exacting audiences.

Mike, a cobbler, finds an ancient lottery ticket in a shoe he is mending, and decides that it is worth $50,000. He sells "ten per cents" to Louie, a delicatessen, and Louie plans a store where the packages will automatically weigh and tie themselves (cheating the customer in the process), and where the money will automatically register itself.

Later Mike and Louis fall asleep after a debauch, and dream that they have won the lottery and are living in the days of the Civil War. They are conscripted into service, and have several laughable adventures. After this nightmare the pair burn up the ticket. Many other comedy episodes follow, including Louie's exploit of inebriating the village's W. C. T. U. leader.

Supporting Kolb and Dill are May Cloy, Josephine Clark, Marie Van Tassell, Burdell Jacobs, and Frank Thompson.

"THE SON OF CAIN"

(Kalem-General Film—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY THEODORE OSBORN ELTONHEAD

THE fourteenth episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco" series contains all of the material necessary for an ordinary five-reel picture. It is replete with action from start to finish and forms an exciting offering in every way, shape and manner. The story is tense and thrilling and reaches a sensational climax. The acting, direction, photography and lighting have been well executed and are well up to the standard that has been maintained throughout the whole series.

While on a hunting trip Barbara Brent's dog, a mighty intelligent Great Dane by the way, discovers a straw hat and a disk of beeswax besides a dead fire in the brush. Her father recognizes the hat as that of a hermit living in the vicinity. They visit his house, find it in the state of greatest disorder, and discover a number of broken disks similar to the one found by the camp fire. Cutting this open Barbara finds a twenty dollar gold piece inside. They come to the conclusion that the hermit has been murdered for his money.

Setting the dog on the trail they soon find his body at the bottom of a nearby creek. They go into the camp and warn all of the store keepers and the proprietor of the saloon to keep their eyes open for twenty dollar gold pieces with beeswax sticking in the milling of the coin. The murderer soon appears and changes one of these pieces of money. John Wallace, Barbara's fiance, tries to capture him but is wounded. The murderer seizes the stage coach which has just arrived and escapes. This wild drive of the stage coach is one of the best incidents in the piece. Barbara jumps on her horse and follows. At a sharp turn in the road she is thrown from the horse down a cliff. It is one of the best falls we have ever witnessed. Climbing laboriously up she finds that the murderer has cut loose the stage horses and mounting one has left the others. Jumping on the back of one of these she continues the pursuit. Coming to a railroad the murderer intimidates the crew of the engine of a passenger train and climbs aboard.

Barbara is just in time to catch the rear of the train. There follows an exciting battle on the roof of the fastly moving train in which the murderer is finally wounded in the arm. Seeing that he has been bested in the fight he jumps into a river as the train passes over a bridge, to be immediately followed by Barbara, who finally captures him as he swims ashore. The arrival of the sheriff and his posse disposes of the prisoner who confesses as to the manner in which he committed the crime.

Marin Sais, and Ronald Bradbury as the murderer, walk away with the acting honors of the pictures. Others in the cast were True Boardman, Frank Jonasson, Edward Clisbee and Hart Hoxie.

"HOW LIFE BEGINS" IS AN EDUCATIONAL SUITABLE FOR CLASSROOMS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC

GEORGE E. STONE, A.B., in collaboration with J. A. Long, Ph.D., assistant professor of embryology of the University of California, Berkeley, have brought out a real educational film. It is in the line of biological study, under the caption "How Life Begins."

The entire treatment of the subject is obviously that of an educator. This is shown in the scientific progression from the single cell to the mammal, as well as in the diagrams which are inserted in the midst of reproductions of actual life in such a way as to greatly enhance the teaching value of the film.

The first reproduction of life is that of the dividing cell of the protozoa. Then comes the budding of the yeast cells. The reproduction of life in plants by cuttings is shown in detail with the geranium, and by seed with the pea blossom. The latter shows the structural formation and the fertilization of the seed by the pollen through the pistil. The apple blossom and the distribution of the pollen by bees is shown. The sea urchin is next illustrated.

Thus far the beginning of life has been independent of parental care. Begininng, however, with the fertilization of a hen's egg, the development of the life in which is shown with much detail, the parental care becomes effective. The same is true of the white rat. The swallowtail butterfly, from the laying of the egg, is carried through the catterpillar, chrysalis and thence to the butterfly again. The frog comes nevt from the egg to the tadpole and finally to the frog again.

The rest of the film showing cat and kittens, mare and colt, and an attractive baby, teaches its lesson by suggestion in the statement that the same process prevails as in the lower forms previously shown.

Take it altogether, this film, about 3,000 feet, marks a forward step in the use of film in educational work. Mechanically it is good—some of the microscopically enlarged work is fine. Technical in titles, it sets an example which might well be followed by others; in scientific handling of the topic it is the work of real educators; it treats a delicate subject with such earnestness and sense that few could find fault. It is primarily for classroom work, though it might be advantageously used in theatres with certain limitations as to the composition of the audiences.

THE NEW ST. FRANCIS, SAN FRANCISCO, MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION AT ITS OPENING

THE New St. Francis theatre on Geary street, near Powell, San Francisco, and opposite the well-known hotel of the same name, opened for business on October 2, and during the opening week made a wonderful showing for itself. This theatre is one of the few that have been erected there exclusively for motion pictures, with no provisions for transforming it into a legitimate playhouse should occasion require. Being built for pictures only, it embodies many new ideas and a wide departure has been made from the type of theatres that house dramatic productions.

Even a casual glance at the new home of motion pictures reveals the fact that something different has been created, from the tiled sidewalk to the frosted glass facade and its wonderful light effects. At night the visitor is reminded of some of the great lighting effects seen at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and the whole building reflects the artistry of that great effort.

The interior arrangement is unique, in so far as Western houses are concerned, being reversed, the screen being near the street entrance. In entering visitors pass on either side of the screen to the aisles along the wall and select a seat near the front or further back as they may choose, before getting a view of the picture, the aisles being lighted by subdued lights.

The decorations are of unique design throughout, being along art nouveau lines, the colors all being in soft pastel shades. On the mezzanine floor, in plain sight of the main body of the house, a fountain plays and gold fish swim placidly in the great bowl. Here are located the rest rooms, which are in charge of uniformed attendants, but the screen cannot be seen from here, and there is no tendency on the part of the visitor to loiter, unless to inspect the decorations. The lower floor seats about eight hundred, while half as many more can find places in the balcony.

In the projection room are to be found two Powers Cameragraphs 6-B, the very latest in rewind equipment and an unusually efficient operator in the person of William Rhea. The throw to the screen is about one hundred feet.

The theatre was planned and erected under the direct supervision of N. L. Josey, and he has selected a manager in Charles Rothschild, well-known in moving picture circles. A first-run Paramount service has been contracted for, this service being divided with the Imperial theatre. A full orchestra furnishes music and the prices are fifteen cents for matinees and twe cents for evening performances, loge seats bringing thirty c

"THE LAST MAN"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PRODUCED by the western Vitagraph company from James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Last Man" makes an average release. In all probability it will go over unusually well in many houses owing to the great show of heroism exhibited by one of the characters in the final episode and numerous scenes of fighting in the Philippines. It is, however, a picture of several faults, that should not have been allowed to pass. Take the scene where the Filipinos charge into the stockade after all the Americans have either been killed or have fled. The stockade gates are open, there is no one at the machine gun inside, yet some of the natives persist in climbing over the stockade wall only a few feet from the open gate.

That, of course, does not condemn the entire picture. But there are also several cases of extending individual scenes over too much space. They don't possess the correct tempo and as a consequence they haven't got the snap and vigor in them that should be there. Whether it was really a case of one man reappearing in a role after he had been killed in another earlier in the picture, or whether it was just a striking resemblance of two actors we don't quite know, but anyway it seemed as if doubling had been resorted to.

William Wolbert produced the picture and he was aided to a vast extent by the wonderful photography of his cameraman. Western Vitagraph camera work has never been opened to criticism but here it is so perfect that it merits even extra commendation. The locations are all well selected.

Harvey, a surgeon in the army, discovers his wife to be unfaithful. At the same time he discovers that he loves a country girl named Jeanne. When he returns to the Philippines she goes with him as nurse. Before leaving for an inland army post he tells her that he will marry her on his return. The post has been attacked by natives and Harvey arrives in the thick of the fight. He discovers his former wife and her husband there and when it is discovered that the natives hopelessly outnumber the garrison he sends them away over the back wall of the stockade. Later he flees himself and overtaking them saves them both from Filippinos. The woman then discovers she really loves her first husband but he remains loyal to Jeanne.

Mary Anderson appears as Jeanne while opposite her is William Duncan as Harvey. Corinne Griffith, Otto Lederer and Jack Mower are others.

"THE MASQUE OF LIFE"

(Signet Films—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE dividing line between American and foreign films is easily distinguishable to even the untrained eye. Americans are wont to scoff at foreign acting, particularly that of the Latin nations, for the obvious reason that their emotional code is graded on an entirely different scale than that of our own. The Latin waves his hands and roles his eyes, whereas the American employs the movement of one facial muscle. "The Masque of Life" is of foreign manufacture, but frankly it comes nearer within the scope of the standard by which we judge our own pictures than any other we have seen. The players with only a few exceptions are a deal more suppressed in their work than is usually the custom in a foreign made film. "The Masque of Life" was made abroad in France or Italy and it is a great picture. Great because it packs within its footage a tremendous amount of sensation and novelty, both qualities which are always welcomed by any public in any part of the globe.

The sensation is furnished by a foreign actress who to all appearances didn't give a two penny for her life. Her biggest stunt is scaling a smoke stack of great height in order to rescue the king's child who has been borne there by an ape. One feels as much at ease in watching the actress performing her daring feat as he would running ahead of an express train. It is a thriller and no mean one either.

The novelty is furnished by the ape who goes under the name of Pete Montebello. Pete's climb up the smoke-stack with the baby under one arm is another stretch of thrills. Of course you are not fooled into believing that the rag doll under the animal's arm is a real baby, but even minus this part of the illusion the scenes connected with this incident get over extraordinarily well. Pete appears in a good many scenes before this and fares with equal success in these too.

The second half of the picture is devoted to the spectacular. In it is staged a lavish pantomime, supposedly enacted by circus performers. As a stage spectacle this is of equal value as the thrills. And itself winds up with a series of scenes that are sensational and lavish in every respect. The circus catches fire and as a consequence the wild animals go on the rampage. They batter down the front of their cages and leap savagely into the water. Truly we have yet to see an American film that can supply the sensation furnished in "The Masque of Life" with the exception of Mr. Griffith's two big spectacles.

The story of the picture deals with the daughter of the circus owner and the king of a mythical kingdom. There is much that stands between them and perfect happiness and all of it is pictured in "The Masque of Life." In the end the two are united with no kingdom and no circus to stand between them. One doesn't though, pay a great deal of attention to the story itself—it is the various big incidents in it that count.

A prologue and epilogue accompany the picture which show the antics of a pair of marionettes who, the short time they hold the screen interpret the main ideas incorporated in the picture proper. Rita Jolivet and Hamilton Revelles are the puppets in these scenes and are featured in the picture by the releasing company. Just why, however, is not quite conceivable. The foreign actress should have the lion's share of advertising along with Pete.

In photographic effects the picture is of fair order. The lighting is not always properly handled although at times it is very good. The laboratory work done by the Evans Film Company, which includes the tinting of the film, is quite praiseworthy in every respect.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM SERVICE

"Easy Ed." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Nov. 7.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Easy Ed, a hobo, climbs out of his "side-door Pullman" to fall into the arms of Archibald Nasturtium. Nasturtium thinks Ed is his wealthy uncle who is a tramp. Accordingly, he gives banquets and balls in Ed's honor, much to the vagrant's wonder and delight. The mistake is discovered at last, and Ed is chased by his enraged benefactors. He hides in the room of Imogene Hey, an elderly and would-be vampire, and the decrepit Lorelei practices her wiles on him. Preferring arrest to these blandishments, Ed jumps in the lake to escape. Then he wakes up to find he has been dreaming, and the train crew has turned a water pipe on him. The cast is composed of Harry Dunkinson, Florence Oberle, Royal Douglas, and Virginia Bowker.

"A Safe Proposition." (Essanay. Wed., Nov. 8.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Smith wants a safe, but his wife objects. Every time the movers bring the safe to the house the wife gives them money to take it away. The disputed article is finally installed in the house, and two burglars decide to rob it. When they open it they find it empty, and so filling it with valuables, they carry it off. The wife catches them, and gives them money for removing the safe. Ben Turpin and Victor Potel are the principals.

"What I Said, Goes." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Nov. 11.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Dorothy Manners is engaged to Esmond, manager of her father's contracting business. One of Dorothy's friends warns her against Esmond, so she decides to watch her fiance. She disguises herself, and works in Esmond's office. Mason, son of a rival contractor, also works under Esmond. Ignorant of her identity, Esmond makes love to Dorothy, and is beaten up by Mason. Later Mason proposes, and is accepted. In the cast are: Richard Travers, Gertrude Glover, John Cossar, Thomas Commerford, and Fred Malatesta.

"A Desperate Duel." (Kalem. Tues., Nov. 7.)—A burlesque duel, according to the code of Ham and Bud, forms the most amusing incident in this single-reel offering. They are the rivals for the hand of a beautiful young girl, but a French count comes along and cuts them out. Ham treats the Frenchman roughly, and he retorts with a challenge to a duel. This forms an amusing series of scenes, and causes the picture to get over in good shape.

"The Man from Yukon." (Kalem. Fri., Nov. 10.)—This episode in the series, "Grant, Police Reporter," is fully as thrilling as those that have gone before. Tommy Grant on his day off accidentally runs into a rich gold miner, who has just returned to civilization. The miner meets a young girl who Tommy recognizes as the associate of thieves. He tries to warn the miner, but is unsuccessful. The girl inveigles the miner to a fake pool room, and Tommy and the police enter just in time to save his money. There is a mighty good fight that is realistic in the extreme, and Grant makes another one of his hazardous escapes when imprisoned by the thieves. It is a thoroughly good offering from start to finish.

"The Gate of Death." (Kalem. Sat., Nov. 4.)—This picture is an extremely thrilling and exciting episode in the "Hazards of Helen" series, in which the daring Helen Gibson again flirts with death to an alarming degree. The paymaster of a mine is robbed. In the fight that ensues Helen comes galloping by on horseback, and, reaching down, lifts the handbag containing the money from the ground. Pursued by the robbers she deserts the horse and, jumping on a steep runway that is used to slide material down the mountain, shoots down the incline and hurdles a moving freight train at the bottom. It is, indeed, a dangerous and thrilling experience, one that will cause the hair to raise on the onlookers head, and the cold chills to run up his spine.

"As Ye Sow." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Nov. 6.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. When Robert Norton finds that his mother's death was caused by his father's unfaithfulness, he sinks in a coma. The doctor gives him morphine to revive him. Robert becomes a morphine fiend and deserts his young wife and child. Norton, Sr., marries his paramour, only to find that she, too, is faithless. The prostrated father sinks to the depths. Robert wrenches himself away from the habit, and, making a man of himself, returns to make his wife happy. Appearing in the cast are: E. J. Brady, Lillian Hamilton, Robyn Adair, Virginia Kirtley, and Eugenie Forde.

"When Cupid Slipped." (Selig. Sat., Nov. 11.)—This rural comedy has little or nothing to recommend it, and it will get by only with most unsophisticated audiences. The leads are Victoria Forde, Pat Chrisman, and Sid Jordan. Lizzie and Hiram elope, much to the chagrin of Lizzie's father. The father gives chase, but mistakes a pair of runaway lunatics for the elopers, and locks them up. The sheriff mistakes Lizzie and Hiram for the imbeciles, and locks them up. Lizzie's pa finds her in jail, and, taking her home, sets her to peeling potatoes.

"Gertie's Garters." (Vim. Wed., Nov. 1.)—Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby star here in refined comedy. We say refined, advisedly, for evidently the parts of the film that live up to its name have been scissored considerably. Some audiences will be greatly disappointed because the opportunity to work in "business" of a suggestive nature has been lost. The story hinges about the theft of a diamond garter—in fact, a full set of two garters—which Gert the Dip purloins and plants on the innocent "fall guy," with embarrassing consequences.

INTERNATIONAL

"Curiosity." (International. Two reels.)—The twelfth episode of the "Beatrice Fairfax" series impresses one as an attempt to be sensationally melodramatic without any great amount of success. The story tells of two newlyweds. The husband is very secretive about his business. The wife spies upon him and finds that he is the associate of thieves. She calls in Beatrice Fairfax to solve her marital difficulty and after a series of more or less slight adventures they find that he is an agent of the Department of Justice. Harry Fox and Grace Darling pleased as usual in the leading roles, while Evelyn Fariss, newcomer to the cast, made a favorable impression. The lighting and photography were well up to standard.

Hearst-International News Pictorial, No. 85. (Tues., Oct. 22.)—Ocean liners depart from New York City; rabbit hunt, Palmdale, Cal.; Fifth Massachusetts back from Mexican border, Boston, Mass.; Yale celebrates 200th anniversary, New Haven, Conn.; private zoo established by multimillionaire, Montevideo, Uruguay, South America; girls compete in diving contest, Riverside, Cal.; Hughes in Chicago, Ill.; on the Austro-Italian front; sweepstake races, Media, Pa.; fashions worn by Ivy Sawyer; President Wilson at Albany, N. Y.; and other scenes.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

See America First, No. 61. (Gaumont. Wed., Nov. 8.)—Views along the Columbia River, Oregon, comprise the greater part of this reel, embracing such points of interest as Cascade Rapids, Eagle Creek Bridge, Devil's Punch Bowl, salmon fishing, Horse Tail Falls, etc. An animated cartoon by Harry Palmer closes the reel.

"Mutual Tours Around the World." (Gaumont. Tues., Nov. 7.)—Views of the harbor, quays, fishing fleet and ancient town hall of La Rochelle, France; pictures of the Nile at Assouan; and scenes in the Galician town of Kamenez-Podolsk before the outbreak of the war comprise this reel which is the first of the series.

Reel Life, No. 27. (Gaumont. Sun., Nov. 5.)—The coffee industry in Brazil; riding New Jersey of mosquitoes; the new "autoped"; new life-saving suit built on the principle of the thermos bottle.

"Picture Pirates." (Vogue. Two reels. Sun., Nov. 12.)—Although this slapstick comedy has a good plot, the action drags at times, due to the undue prolonging of certain scenes. There are many laughs tucked away in the picture, however, and the film will be received in any audience that is not over-critical. Rube Miller and Ben Turpin put over their rough-house stuff handily, assisted by Larry Bowes, Lillian Hamilton, Rosie Rosee, Harry Huckins, and Ruby McDonnell. An art collector buys a famous painting at auction. The Picture Pirate asks if he may call and view the masterpiece, and the new owner cordially consents. A couple of yeggs try to pick the Pirate's pockets, but he chides them for their rough work, and hires them to help steal the picture. The trio, arrayed in cutaways, call at the collector's house, but because of their bungling, cannot get away with the picture. The owner is called away, so one of the yeggs takes his wife out to dinner, leaving one crook to make the haul. After numberless complications have arisen, the picture is finally stolen, but the conspirators find that it is a cheap reproduction, hung up by the art collector as a decoy.

Mutual Weekly, No. 96. (Gaumont.)—Big blast loosens 30,000 cubic yards of dirt and rock, Fresno, Cal.; milk maids and diving girls entertain fair visitors, Riverside, Cal.; "Discovery of America" pageant at San Francisco, Cal.; Yale pageant commerating two hundredth anniversary of college, New Haven, Conn.; powerful magnet removes big cargo of pig iron, Buffalo, N. Y.; trial trip of submarine built by United States for Spain; Northwestern defeats Chicago University in football; fashions.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

Florence Rose Fashions, No. 8.—This reel shows the elegance of raiment worn by the ultra smart set in Manhattan, opening with a shopping tour and closing with a dinner and theatre party in the metropolis. What appeals about these pictures is the perfect close-up views of what to the feminine understanding is like a rare and heretofore undiscovered script to the archeologist. Every conceivable feminine taste is interested, and Pathe perfect photography allows an almost microscopic examination of everything from opera bags to veils, showing at the same time just on what occasions these feminine adornments are suitably worn. For the women patrons, this reel will be a revelation, for there is no similarity to the "fashion" section of the weeklies.

"Luke, Gladiator." (Rolin.)—A Lonesome Luke comedy that is really funny and full of action, as most of the Luke comedies are. As a Roman gladiator Luke certainly is a scream, and his shield and pointed helmet make a foil which baffles the bravest. As a burlesque on Roman times this is diverting. The audience will find real novelty in this comedy.

Pathe News, No. 86. (Wed., Oct. 25.)—School children of Brooklyn, N. Y., reap harvests of their own crops; Yale University celebrates 200th anniversary, New Haven, Conn.; Thomas A. Edison in New York City; guardsmen engage in battle practice, Las Cruces, New Mexico; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt nurses wounded, Paris, France; Russian troops in Salonika, Greece; scenes in connection with the Somme battle, France; men's styles in fall and winter clothing; suffragettes out in force to meet President Wilson, Chicago, Ill.; and other events.

Pathe News, No. 84. (Wed., Oct. 18.)—Young lions at New York zoo; Roosevelt at Wilkesbarre, Pa.; views from United States Naval observatory where standard time is figured, Washington, D. C.; sailors give circus in aid of sick companions, Newport, R. I.; Ambassador Sato from Japan, at Washington, D. C.; Lewis machine-gun in action, Washington, D. C.; Australian troops off for front reviewed by King George, London, Eng.; Pennsylvania democrats visit President Wilson at Shadow Lawn, N. J.; New life buoy tested, Portland, Ore.; Duke of Connaught, retiring Governor-General of Canada, reviews troops, Ottawa, Can.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"A Political Tramp." (Nestor. Mon., Nov. 6.)—An excellent comedy in which two tramps take the places of a political candidate and his secretary and are feted by the inhabitants of the small town. This has Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran in the roles of the tramps, and the two comedians also prepared the scenario, which is full of fine business and uproarious situations. Harry Nolan and Priscilla Dean are others.

"The Mantle of Deceit." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., Nov. 9.)—An interesting melodrama albeit based on a number of conventional situations. In the main it deals with the showing up of the villain by the heroine, this action taking place at a masque ball. The principal parts are well taken by Claire Mersereau, Joe Granby, Stanley Walpole and Helen Slosson.

"Sweedy, the Janitor." (Nestor. Fri., Nov. 10.)—Wallace Beery in a comedy of racy complications only fairly well done. As the janitor, Beery finds a piece of jewelry dropped by Mrs. Newlywed, which he presents to his wife. The young bride, however, wins the janitor's sympathy, and then there are many complications resulting from the janitor trying to straighten things out.

"The Quitter." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Nov. 11.)—Evidently this was written by some rabid Westerner who wanted to glorify his own section of the country and forgot all about putting in any drama. The Eastern wife leaves a prospector and returns home. Here she discovers society in general shallow and a villain particular who attempts to steal her husband's fortune. She saves it and there is a reunion. Roberta Wilson, Charles Pearly, Hayward Mack and Nan Christy have the leading roles.

"The Cry of Conscience." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Wed., Nov. 8.)—This is a well done picture throughout. The story tells of a good-for-nothing son of the country sheriff who goes up into the mountains in pursuit of a man long suspected of murder. He finds the suspect, falls in love with his daughter, and then finds that it is his rival in love that is the real murderer. The simple charm of the story has been enhanced by some beautiful scenes and capable direction in charge of Clifford Elfelt. Vola Smith, Charles Gunn, Raymond Nye, Edwin Brown and Marc Robbins are the principals.

"In Love with a Fireman." (Joker. Sat., Nov. 11.)—The rivalry of the fire and police chiefs for the hand of the village boarding-house keeper forms the basis of this comedy, which passes as an average Joker and that means it's something good. A traveling theatrical troupe is introduced and is made the means of more comedy. William Franey, Gale Henry, Charles Conklin and the usual Joker support appears.

"Shadows of Suspicion." (Laemmle. Sun., Nov. 13.)—Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude have here evolved out of an eternal triangle plot a picture that possesses much originality and suspense in its development. Maude George, Clyde Benson, Lee Hill and Gertrude Astor are the leads.

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 44. (Wed., Nov. 1.)—New life saving device tested, Sandy Hook, N. J.; 1,000 men enlisted in 15 days for coast artillery regiment, Los Angeles, Cal.; egg battle between Sophomores and Freshman, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; American guns being shipped to Villa seized by marshal, Los Angeles, Cal.; aviation stunts which resulted in death of Aviator Pettrirossi, La Plata, Argentina; U. S. S. Pennsylvania at gun pactice; automobile races at Sheepshead Bay Speedway, New York; Women's special on Hughes campaign trip arrives, Los Angeles, Cal.; cartoons by Hy Mayer and other scenes.

Universal Animated Weekly, No. 43. EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

Lyric soon. This house, brand new, will be the best in this town.

Central City: The Auditorium theatre, now being built, is the third new theatre here.

Kearney: Paul Hoppen will open the Crescent theatre this month. It seats 520 people and is a modern, ornamental theatre.

NEW YORK—Buffalo: The Family theatre has been presenting "The Little Girl Next Door" for the past three weeks, at admission of twenty-five cents. This is one of the record runs for a picture in Buffalo and capacity audiences have been the rule since the opening. The Elmwood theatre recently inaugurated a policy of two big features every evening. The plan is a success. A new stage setting has recently been installed at the Elmwood, which is now under the management of E. S. Davis. The Academy theatre this week opened its regular season of vaudeville and Triangle photoplays. Manager Michael is giving his patrons six acts of vaudeville, a Triangle feature, a Keystone comedy and an installment of "Liberty" or "Beatrice Fairfax," all on one program. Five and ten in the afternoon and five, ten and twenty at night. "The Fall of a Nation" will be presented at Shea's Hippodrome commencing Monday. Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law," was shown for an entire week at the Hipp and recorded record business. Shea's Hippodrome is one of the finest photoplay houses in the country. Triangle plays and Keystone comedies and special features occasionally released are shown. An eighteen-piece orchestra, under the direction of Herman E. Schultz, is one of the features, which together with a large pipe organ, renders a fitting musical accompaniment to the fine programs offered. The Regent theatre is, after two years of a somewhat doubtful career, suddenly meeting with success, under the able management of Jules Michael. Mr. Michael, who also directs the policy of the New Academy theatre, has booked the Triangle productions as well as other leading brands, has engaged an excellent orchestra of artists, installed some elaborately decorated and furnished boxes on the heretofore unoccupied second floor and has just recently inaugurated a series of special Friday night musicales, at which he intends to present some of Buffalo's leading musicians in recital. Recently, Mr. Michael engaged a camera man to take motion pictures of every patron as he or she entered the theater. These films were later thrown on the screen and were received with much enthusiasm. It is also noticed that the Regent is a great favorite with motorists, as every street in the vicinity of the theatre is always crowded with machines.

OHIO—Sandusky: John A. Himmelein has subleased the Plaza theatre to Charles Kessler. Mr. Himmelein, a few minutes before making the arrangements with Mr. Kessler arranged to lease the Plaza from the bondholders of that playhouse. The lease gives Mr. Himmelein the right to purchase the Plaza at the end of a year, if he so desires.

Delaware: Buchman Brothers, managers of the Star Theatre, have contracted for the exclusive use of first-run Mary Pickford pictures.

Cincinnati: Thomas C. Barnett, who had charge of the Garrick theatre, Madisonville, Ky., for the last two years, has taken charge of one of the leading picture theatres here.

PENNSYLVANIA—Philadelphia: Philadelphia theatres are certainly sprucing up this season. Large and small, there are but few which show no improvement. Several have been entirely rebuilt. The Great Northern at Broad and Erie avenue after having $25,000 spent on it in improvements, reopened on Oct. 30th under the direction of the Stanley Company, with Harry Ertle as resident manager. The Stanley theatre has in a new Rembusch Crystal Fibre (Gold) Screen, handsome new stage settings and what is most appreciated by the patrons, new and comfortable chairs. Each one made a large hole in a five dollar bill. Incidentally the Stanley has raised its price to thirty-five cents from its former twenty-five cents. The increase has caused no diminution in the large crowds which nightly throng the playhouse. There are always people standing from 8 to 9:30. Jay Mastbaum, manager of the Palace, has just returned to his post, having taken care of Keith's on Garden Pier at Atlantic City all Summer. The Palace has had new carpets, 1,000 new chairs, new velour draperies and the wooden floors of the back tier of seats have been replaced with sanitary concrete. This house, only four blocks from the Stanley on the same street (Market), runs most of the Stanley first run releases two weeks after the former and yet plays its capacity nearly every night. About $5,000 was spent on the improvements during the summer. The Central Market Street Company, through its general manager, Frank W. Buhler, has secured for its largest theatre, the Victoria, at 9th and Market streets, the first showing of Metro's picture of "Romeo and Juliet." October 23 is the date set for this release. An unusual advertising campaign has been inaugurated by the management. About $2,000 for the one week's engagement will be spent in advertising, divided between the Victoria and the Metro Company. In this connection 8,000 postals were sent out, not only to the usual picture patrons, but to the best known women's clubs, dramatic societies and the like. Large space for advertising was also used in the daily papers. Appropriate musical settings will be made a feature of the week's campaign.

Mt. Union: The Shapiro Amusement Company's new theatre is rapidly nearing completion and from present indications the house will be opened to the public early in November. It is built of brick and concrete and is up to date in every respect. The equipment for the theatre is also of the latest pattern and many improvements have been made in the construction of the theatre, in the lobby and also in the spacious booth. The theatre will have a capacity of 1,000 and the plant will represent an investment of $25,000. The equipment will include a $4,000 Seeburg Organ.

Pittsburgh: Charley Chaplin, in the big Essanay release of the 1916 Review, is to be shown for one week at the Columbia theatre in Fifth avenue. This theatre has arranged for the exclusive right to show the picture for one week before any of the other theatres in the downtown section of Pittsburgh get a chance at it.

PENNSYLVANIA—Cresson: J. A. Wolff, owner of the Happy Hour theatre here, and the Happy Hour at Ebensburg, has taken over the Dreamland theatre here. This house was sold at sheriff sale two months ago, and Mr. Wolff bought it from the purchaser.

Pittsburgh: The Midway theatre, 3106 Burton street is the newest addition to the list of Pittsburgh theatres. The house has a capacity of 300, and is owned by N. J. Kane. The new theatre is fireproof throughout, and finely equipped. It was opened for business recently. The management of the Minerva theatre in Fifth avenue has arranged with contractors for the remodeling of the theatre, both inside and out. It is to be made one of the prettiest theatres in the downtown section of Pittsburgh. The front is to be changed. All of the work will be done at night so as not to interfere in any way with the comfort of the patrons. A new heating and ventilating plant is also to be added. Mr. Demas has also contracted for the installation of a $15,000 pipe organ.

SOUTH DAKOTA—Sioux Falls: J. A. Dundas, formerly of Mitchell, has opened the new Strand theatre.

Mitchell: D. L. Gilmore has bought the Maynard.

ILLINOIS—South Pekin: The McDonnell Amusement Company has opened the Pavilion in charge of M. McDonnell.

IOWA—Moravia: H. W. Barrett of Moulton, has opened the new Crystal theatre, a modern little house for a small town, and is enjoying good patronage.

MAINE—Lewiston: A. P. Bibber, formerly manager of the Music Hall is mentioned as the next general manager for the William P. Gray Enterprises. James W. Greely, formerly of the Greely theatre, Portland, and now owner of the Jefferson holds a lease of the Music Hall, starting November 1.

Rumford: George Appleby, formerly connected with the Mutual in Boston, Mass, is now managing the Majestic.

MARYLAND—Baltimore: Berman's photoplay theatre, 1-3 South High street, reopened on Tuesday, October 17, under the proprietorship of Isaac Berman, who originally constructed the building. About a year ago he sold the house and after running for some time it was closed. Mr. Berman again took hold of the property a few weeks ago, and entirely remodeled and improved the building. J. B. Fields, former manager of the Leader theatre on South Broadway, has been engaged as manager of the Berman. The house has a seating capacity of about five hundred.

NEBRASKA—Omaha: Hugo Biltz, manager of the Hipp theatre, one of Omaha's largest houses, fell and hurt his back last week. He will be laid up for some time.

Wisner: Brisben Brothers have bought the Royal theatre.

WASHINGTON—Seattle: A very successful Alaska exhibitor, Miss De Graff, who manages the Empress theatre of Cordova, was in town for several days.

G. T. Holtzclaw, manager of the Circle theatre, Portland, Ore., was a Seattle visitor this week. He informs us that the tactics of the notorious censor board of Portland is unchanged.

Other exchange visitors this week were, Mr. J. A. Allen of Kittitas, Mr. Blanchard of the Dream theatre, Puyallup; Carl McKee of the Orpheum theatre, Everett; R. M. Parrish of the Grange theatre, Cashmere; H. E. Morre of the Colonial theatre, Tacoma; Walter Craft of the Park theatre, Tacoma; William Allen of the Vaudett theatre, Tacoma; Clarence Summerville of the Hippodrome theatre, Tacoma; Mr. Burg of the Shell theatre, Tacoma; A. H. McDonald of the Savoy theatre, Eugene, Ore., and Mr. Tibbits of the Alhambra theatre, Portland, Ore.

Last Week's Issue of Motion Picture News Carried 12 1/2 More Pages of Paid Advertising Than Any Other Trade Publication

Previous to last week and for the preceding three months MOTION PICTURE NEWS carried a total of 80 more pages of paid advertising (200 more pages, counting the MOTION PICTURE NEWS Studio Directory) than the paper carrying the second largest amount.

This is the Readers Gain

This large amount of advertising appeared exclusively in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. It consisted of important business announcements—important to the exhibitor. Only through MOTION PICTURE NEWS could the reader get this information, which is one important reason why MOTION PICTURE NEWS is which reason in turn is why the advertiser selects exclusively this publication for many advertising announcements. Circulation figures are one thing; reading circulation is quite another. The first is easy to talk about, to manufacture, even to acquire; the second can only be got and held by putting out the best and most readable publication. Reading circulation alone brings the advertiser the results he wants and pays for.

EXPERIENCE IS A DEAR TEACHER

WHY NOT PROFIT BY THE EXPERIENCE OF OTHERS

Mr. Carl Pearson says:—
" I used a Late Model Motiograph and a ——— — machine—had a disastrous fire and the ——— — machine never was found, but the Motiograph can easily be placed in running condition.
" Me for the Motiograph hereafter; experience has shown me that it is made of the very best material."
Can you who contemplate placing a new projector in your booth afford to take a chance on a projector which is made of inferior material when the MOTIOGRAPH is priced right, gives satisfactory results and is made of the very best grade of material?

Society of Motion Picture Engineers

THE October 21 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS contained an account of the first regular meeting of the engineering society of the motion picture industry. How much this organization is needed in the business was shown by the attendance and the enthusiasm shown.

We have an enormous industry—like an octopus, with its arms extending in every direction and taking in branches of other businesses which at first thought would never be considered as being a part of, or even allied to motion pictures. One of the largest powder companies located in Delaware, from a bi-product, is making upholstery for our theatre chairs. We have machine shops which were flourishing before pictures were even thought of, yet they were drawn in and are now a part. One of the largest paint factories in the country has put in a consulting department for exhibitors in order that they may co-operate in making theatres as attractive as possible. And so it goes until we find many industries interwoven with our own.

IN addition to all these different outside influences, we find that the picture itself grew up so fast that there was no time for those who developed it to catch their breath, saying nothing of keeping things in order during the building process. It just arrived like any child. Now that it is here and here to stay, a general gathering together of the loose ends has to be started and certain standards set up which will guide those already working with us and tell those who are thinking of entering just what will be expected of them should they come in.

IT is not my purpose to say here what needs to be standardized or how—the mere statement that innumerable things in this line are necessary is enough. This is the work for the Society of Motion Picture Engineers—this is the reason it was organized and the necessity for its existence can be pointed out in no better way than by the fact that twenty-four active members were enrolled before the meeting on October 3 was over. It was an enthusiastic gathering and every man was there with his coat off, ready to plug and plug hard.

They recognized the mammoth task before them and realized that its accomplishment meant the combined brains of all the engineers in the industry. For this reason it was decided that all members of the society should compose the membership committee and should work toward the one end—bringing the enrollment up to 100 per cent. efficiency.

THE next regular meeting is to be on April 6-7 at Atlantic City—what is to be done between now and then? Already the chairmen of the various committees are showing results in organizing their branches. This is very necessary, for discussions are never rounded out, nor can decisions be arrived at unless representatives of all the various leading companies are enrolled. For example, perforations, sprockets, lenses and other things which need standardizing cannot be properly treated unless representatives of all the leading companies manufacturing or using them have their say in connection with the standardization.

THE more active this membership committee becomes, the more rapid will be the progress of the organization. It is not, however, necessary for a company to wait to be invited in order to enroll their representative in the organization. Being actively interested in the progress of the motion picture is all that is necessary. This makes you eligible—all that is left to be done is to write in to an officer of the Society and make application for membership. The NEWS will be only too glad to take care of such communications if you will send them to us, or applications may be sent direct to C. Francis Jenkins, president of the Society at 712 Eleventh street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

THE underlying reason for the Society's formation and taking up this matter of standards is simple. There is absolutely no use in trying to have an organization other than one composed of actual engineers fooling with engineering problems. An organization doing this work must be independent. In joining as a member from a given company, each man must remember that he is primarily a member of the Society as an engineer to improve the motion picture art, and only secondarily as a representative of his company.

EACH company thus represented has its own engineering problems. These of themselves are difficult, but through the association with the men in the Society, who are working along the same general lines, they can be materially lightened and more effectively solved. Therefore from the viewpoint of each company connected with the motion picture industry, it is decidedly to their advantage to have an active member or members in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

In closing there are two things which I should like to call to your attention:

1. Those who are members must realize the responsibility resting upon them in getting new members.

2. There is no company so large or so small that they can afford not to be represented. SEND FOR APPLICATION BLANK TODAY.

A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room

The Starting of the D. C. Compansarcs, A. C. to D. C. Compensarcs and Operating Instructions for Both Type Machines for Either One or Two Lamps—Also Remarks on the Care of the Machines to Obtain the Best Results

N starting the D.C. Compensarcs have the switch at the lamp open, then close the switch in the main line and the armature will begin to rotate slowly counter-clockwise facing the generator commutator. The proper direction of rotation is indicated by the small arrow on the bearing housing. Next move the lever of the starting box slowly to the right as the machine speeds up, until the lever reaches the last contact when it will be caught and held by the cutout magnet. By this time the machine will have reached its maximum speed. The field rheostat connected into the generator field circuit is marked by a small white arrow to indicate the proper position of the handle for the current and voltage at the arc as shown on the compensarc nameplate.

To start up, close the switch and bring the carbons together so that they barely touch; then, quickly separate them about 1-16 of an inch, gradually increasing the separation as the carbons heat up until the proper length of arc is reacher. The D.C. arc should be from 5-16 to 3-8 of an inch long, or about twice as long as an A.C. arc. The voltmeter should now show about 55 volts at the arc, and the ammeter about 35 amperes where the 35-ampere outfit is used, or 55 volts at the arc and 50 amperes where the 50-ampere outfit is used.

If the carbons are held together too long, the machine voltage will be automatically reduced to zero, so that the arc will not have sufficient voltage and will, therefore, break when the carbons are separated. Should this occur, keep the carbons apart about ten seconds, or until machine voltage can automatically build up again; then strike the arc as directed above.

The switchboard panel having instruments mounted on it along with the field rheostat is very useful and the proper current and voltage can at all times be accurately maintained. As the machine warms up, the handle of the rheostat may have to be moved one or two points from the mark in order to maintain the desired voltage and current.

If the circuits are all connected as shown in the diagram which accompanies each machine, the polarity should be as indicated, the upper carbon being positive. Should the upper carbon be negative and one or both of the instruments on the panel read backward, the trouble must be corrected. See that all connections are made as indicated on the diagram, and if they are correct, interchange the incoming loads at the starting box. DO NOT TRY TO CORRECT THE TROUBLE BY REVERSING TERMINALS AT THE GENERATOR. The machines are all checked up complete with their equipment when tested at the factory and the motor must therefore be connected to the proper side of the line to bring the polarite of the instruments and carbons correct. The operation of the two-lamp alternately equipment is the same as for the A.C. to D.C. Compensarc for two lamps alternately.

Starting the A. C. to D. C. Compensarc

In starting up the A.C. to D.C. Compensarcs have the switch at the lamp open. If a single-phase outfit, close the main line switch and move the starting lever on the starting box from the "off" position to the split segment which will introduce the necessary starting coils to cause the armature to start to rotate. When the armature has attained nearly full speed, this starting lever should be moved quickly over to the last segment where it is held by a latch controlled by a relay magnet. If the voltage fail, the relay magnet will release the latch allowing the starting arm to return automatically to the "off" position stopping the motor.

The arm of the starting box should never be left in starting position longer than one minute. Usually much less time will be sufficient.

When the power companies do not require the use of starting compensators in connection with the two- and three-phase outfits (and the power companies do not generally require them on these machines), these outfits should be equipped with double-throw starting switches which have only one side fused. When starting up, the switch should first be closed to the unfused side. When the speed of the armature is up to normal the switch should then be thrown into the starting position with a quick, firm thrust and held there until the machine comes up to speed (about 20 or 30 seconds), and then, with one quick, firm movement, the arm should be pulled over into the running position where it is held by a lever engaging with the low-voltage release mechanism.

Never, in any case, should the meter be started by "touching," that is, by throwing the starting arm into the starting position and quickly pulling it out a number of times. This plan of "touching" DOES NOT make the rush of current at starting less, but on the contrary, it produces a number of successive rushes in place of the one which it has been attempted to avoid and what usually amounts to serious trouble by causing the contact fingers to be so badly burned that is is necessary to replace them with new ones.

To stop the machine open the main switch. The compensator arm should automatically return to the "off" position on the opening of the main switch. If it does not, throw it over to the "off" position by hand.

When the speed of the machine is up to normal and the starting box or switch is in running position and the rheostat handle set as marked by the white arrow, the switch at the lamp may be closed and the arc struck as described under "Starting D. C. Compensarcs," previously given in the second paragraph.

Direction of Rotation

The coupling is marked to show the direction in which the armature should revolve which is against the brush-holders of the generator.

The direction of rotation of two-phase induction motors can be reversed by interchanging two stator leads of the same phase. In the case of single- or three-phase motors it is only necessary to interchange any two leads.

Operating Directions for Two-Lamp Outfit

The motor end of the two-lamp outfit is started up in the same way as the regular single-lamp outfit as given above. Referring to Fig. 2 (page 2729, October 28th issue), have the "change over" switch closed and start the one lamp by closing the switch at the lamp and striking the arc in the usual manner. When it is desired to change from one lamp to the other open the "change over" switch while the first lamp is burning, then close switch at the second lamp and strike its arc. Open the switch at the lamp which is to be cut out, then close the "change over" switch. By tracing the connections as shown in the Fig. 2 mentioned above, it will be seen that when the "change over" switch is opened it causes the current flowing to the lamp to pass through the grid resistance. This resistance steadies the arc and keeps it from going out when the arc is struck at the second lamp.

The second arc can therefore be started and the carbon be burned into proper shape while the reel in the first machine is being finished and in this way a dissolving effect can be obtained on the screen.

This steadying resistance is in circuit only when both lamps are burning and care must be taken that the "change over" switch is KEPT CLOSED when only one lamp is burning. If for any reason a sudden increase of current at the arc is needed, or it is necessary to heat up the carbons very quickly, this "change over" switch can be opened on one lamp for a few minutes raising the current through the arc without disturbing the field rheostat setting.

Keep the first arc rather short at the instant the second arc is struck and neither are will go out or "flutter." The ability to handle both arcs perfectly and change over without a flicker in the picture can be easily acquired if the operator will keep his eyes open and if the second arc is struck long enough ahead to be perfectly steady, one picture can be dissolved into the next without any difficulty, and will not be discernable to the average observer.

Care must also be taken that the two lamps are not both burning longer than is really necessary, as the Compensarc is not intended to carry both lamps continuously. The ammeter will show 30 to 50 amperes and the voltmeter about 55 volts when one lamp is burning, but when both are burning the ammeter will show about 70 to 100 amperes and the voltmeter 65 to 70 volts, the voltage being automatically increased by the machine to compensate for the drop in the grid resistance. The voltmeter as shown in the diagram before mentioned is connected across machine terminals (1) and (3) and indicates the machine voltage which is the same as the arc voltage when the switch is closed.

STRAND, WASHINGTON, D. C., IS A MOTION PICTURE LANDMARK

LIKE Tom Moore's Garden theatre, Washington, D. C., his Strand, in the same city, is a motion picture landmark in the capital. The house was erected in 1895 and in 1913 was converted into an amusement place for film exhibition. Mr. Moore has made music an attraction as important as the picture. His orchestra of ten renders selections from the best in popular and classic music and makes a specialty of playing for the pictures.

In the lobby, measuring twenty by thirty feet, is the regulation box office equipment and striking displays of photos and paper in attractive frames.

The Strand gives eight daily performances and reduces the number to five on Sundays. The admission charged during the day is ten cents and an advance of five cents is made for the evening. Twenty-five people are required to attend to the duties around the house, which is located in the business district.

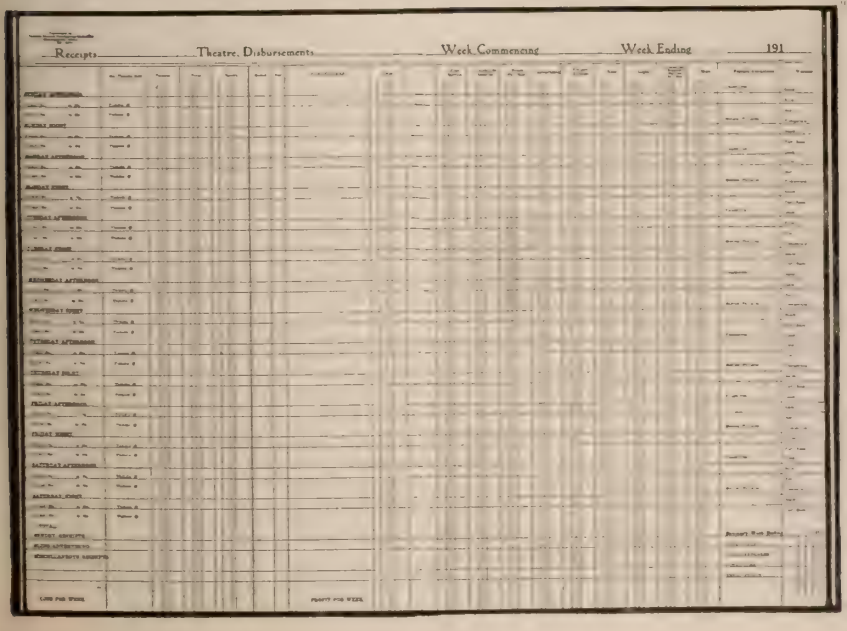
Moore's Strand has the largest seating capacity of any motion picture theatre in Washington, D. C., and draws patronage with releases from V-L-S-E, Mutual, Metro, Kleine-Edison, Pathe and other well known companies. A consistent advertising campaign through the newspapers is maintained by the management, which makes use of an extensive mailing list. A bright house organ is sent out to interest prospective patrons and keep the regular picture attendants of the Strand informed of new offerings.

Stage stars are popular with Strand audiences, and visualized "best seller" fiction gets most applause. The demand for pictures of this kind often results in crowded attendance, and it is impossible to accommodate everybody wanting to get inside the doors.

Two Power's motor-driven Cameragraphs, a slide dissolve, generator and spotlight comprise the theatre's operating equipment.

The decorative scheme is in old rose with buff trimmings, and draperies to match. An artistic stage setting adds the finishing touch to the interior decorations of the Strand.

THE GARDEN THEATRE, DAVENPORT, IOWA, SEATS 780 PEOPLE



THE Garden, Davenport, Iowa, was built in 1915 for Blank and Greenebaum from plans drawn by Clausen and Kruse. The dimensions of the theatre are 150 feet by 42. The material used in the construction of the building is terra cotta. The ventilation is the Sturtyvan system and both direct and indirect lighting are used in the Garden. S. E. Greenebaum is the manager.

The house seats eight hundred, and the chairs were furnished by the American Seating Company. The main floor has space for 780 seats, and there are only twenty chairs on the balcony. Simplex projectors are in the booth; the throw is 127 feet, and a Minusa screen is part of the equipment.

All furnishings are in black and white. All the decorations are hand painted and free from stencil work.

CHORUS OF FIVE HUNDRED VOICES AT TIVOLI THEATRE

THE management of the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, recently registered a hit when it secured a chorus of five hundred voices to render operatic selections from the stage of that house. The chorus was being trained for a performance of the opera "Aida," to be rendered at Ewing Field for charity, with Madame Gadski in the principal role, and the opportunity of singing with the accompaniment of the famous Tivoli orchestra was as eagerly seized by the management of the outdoor fete as was the chance of securing the services of the chorus as an attraction by the management of the house.

RUNNING the theatre on a business basis and knowing exactly how the house stands at the end of every day, week and month is most important. It is necessary in order to be most successful to know in addition just what class of picture has been shown and under what conditions. These things cannot be kept track of on slips of paper or in any other half way manner—they must be done systematically.

J. V. Bryson of the Northwestern Motion Picture Equipment Company of Minneapolis, Minn., after careful thought has compiled the "Theatre Record Ledger System," which is complete in every detail. By accurately keeping it up to date there is no possible way for error and every theatre owner can tell at a glance just how much he has made or lost on any given picture. Either this particular record system or one equally comprehensive should be installed in every house, no matter how large or small. The accompanying cut shows the method of entry and the items contained on any two pages. This covers one complete week's showing.

VENTILATOR COVER

W. A. Ham, Rehoboth Beach, Del.: We have recently installed a ventilating set in the operating room of our "Blue Hen Theatre" for the comfort of our operators and are asking you if you can give us some idea of what sort of cover the stack should have. We have a flue or stack running directly from the operating room through the roof and into this stack our blower discharges air. We find, however, that the top of our stack seems to create a back pressure when the air is forced against it. If you can give us any suggestion as to how to remedy this we will be very grateful.

Answer: I am glad to see that you are at least one of the managers who considers the comfort of his operators. Would that there were more like you. As to the ventilation problem, I am submitting in the accompanying diagram two methods of covering the vent flue. In Fig. 1 the vent flue is shown going up through the operating room to the open air. A is the roof of the building, and the vent flue is covered by a cap that overlaps the vent proper by about eight inches, which prevents rain from entering the vent and so reaching the operating room.

Instead of a "blower" I would suggest that you install an exhaust fan in the vent flue either above or below the damper shown in the illustration. This exhaust should be controlled by a switch easily accessible to the operator so that he could run or not run the fan as he chooses. The damper, with a ring and cord attached for fastening, should run down into the operating room and should be so arranged that the damper is normally open, but at the close of the day's run may be fastened by the ring so that the damper will be closed, thus keeping out all dampness which will be injurious to the machine if left unclosed.

The other illustration, Fig. 2, shows another style of cap that has many good points. This cap is made to fit over the vent flue in such a way as to be easily revolved, and with the aid of the "wings" is kept in such a position that the open side is always to the leeward, thereby making it impossible for rain or snow to enter the vent. Any good tinsmith can make either style cover at small cost, and with the exhaust fan located in the vent flue proper you will find that the "back pressure" will disappear.

MENISCUS-BI-CONVEX CONDENSERS AGAIN

A. F. Felsch, Leigh, Neb.: I am a reader of the NEWS and when I receive same the first thing I do is to read the projection department. I have received much good from that part of the NEWS and will say that if it were not for that section or department I would not take it. I would like to ask one question, and that is if a pair of meniscus-bi-convex condensers will give me more light than common plane condensers under the same conditions. Would also like to know the price and where I can get them.

Answer: I am glad to know that you are a reader of the NEWS, but you sure did start something when you wrote the above letter. It is very kind of you to make the statement you did, but the other departments in the NEWS are much better than any efforts of mine. We who are on the staff think we have "some" paper, but that is no reason why any one single department should be chosen as the leader.

I wish though that other operators would feel as you do, for then we would have a projection department that would be worth while. But to answer your question. You will undoubtedly get greater illumination on the screen with the use of meniscus-bi-convex condensers than with the ordinary plane. The price of these condensers is, I believe, $4 to $5 per pair—that is, combination—and when ordering you should give the distance from machine to screen as well as the size of picture being projected, so that the proper combination may be sent you. The Northwestern Picture Equipment Company, of which J. V. Bryson is the president and which is located in Minneapolis, Minn., would be within easy mailing distance for you.

ATMOSPHERIC SCREEN SOME SCREEN

ONE day last week I visited William Fox's Academy of Music, on Fourteenth street, this city, to find out if I could what this "atmospheric" screen was like, a number of operators having written asking information regarding same. I was met by the young man taking tickets at the door and after stating my errand was cordially invited to step inside and look to my heart's content, which I did, viewing the picture from every angle; and while I did not find out anything as to the composition of the screen I was more than surprised at the brilliancy of the picture, for it was to my mind the most brilliant picture I have ever seen at any theatre in the greater city.

At least, thought I, the operators are using about 150 amperes to get a picture like that, and I made up my mind to find out. So asking permission to visit the operators, which was granted, I went to the operating room and found operators Lew Conroy and Joe Kochel projecting a picture with Simplex projectors a distance of 155 feet and using but 90 amperes of current. This could be reduced to 75 easily without hurting the picture at all, for the picture was the purest black and white that I ever saw, and the illumination was so great that it really did cause one to marvel at the possibilities of this screen.

Screens of this type were made for reducing current bills, not for increasing them, and it should be the aim of the exhibitor, while giving perfect projection, to cater to the comfort of his patrons. The projection during my visit was, with the assistance of arc controllers and the watchfulness of the operators, something that they might well be proud of. The atmospheric screen is manufactured here in the city and I hope to examine it further at an early date, when I will have more to say about it.

POWERS 6-B IN THE LYRIC, HOBOKEN

THE Lyric theatre, Hoboken, N. J., one of the Marcus Loew houses, has just installed a Powers 6-B. This with the 6-A, both motor driven, is something that the Lyric has needed for some time, and now if they would only follow up the good work by installing arc controllers, as they have in the other houses on their circuit, the patrons of the above mentioned theatre could be assured of better pictures; and as the Lyric was the first theatre in Hoboken to show motion pictures, and as the patronage consists of "regulars," there is no reason why they should not receive the same benefits as the patrons of Mr. Loew's other houses. The operator, Joseph Cantoli, is assisted by his brother Nicholas, and is putting on fairly good projection, which could be improved by the installation of mode modern appliances as have been done by the other theatres in that city.

Manager Grant S. Riggs, who has been for years the man in charge of the executive duties at the Lyric, is what we might term a "real" manager. One who has the respect and affection of each and every employee, for he is not a "slave driver," but one who believes in and practices the Golden Rule. Mr. Riggs reports big business through the showing of the serial "The Crimson Stain," which features Maurice Costello, he being quite a favorite among the feminine patrons.

The program at the Lyric consists of a five-reel feature, a two-reel serial or a two-reel comedy, a weekly and five acts of vaudeville, at the admission prices of five, ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents, with an entire change of program every Monday and Thursday.

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT COMPANY PLACES MANY MINUSA SCREENS

THE Picture Theatre Equipment Company, of New York City, during the past week, report the sale of Minusa Gold Fibre screens to the following theatres:

Strand theatre, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Empire theatre, Redbank, N. J.; United Theatres Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jas. Sargent, New Haven, Conn.; Sheer Bros.' Victoria theatre, Elmhurst, L. I.; Times theatre, New York.

Grant Heth, 311 Majestic building, distributor for the Minusa Cine Products Company, has received an order for a Minusa Gold Fibre screen from Mr. Mitchell, of the Russell theatre. This is one of Detroit's biggest picture palaces and is built somewhat on the Greek amphitheatre lines.

Work is already progressing on this order and the Minusa Cine Products Company expect to make delivery the latter part of October.

The Saenger Theatre Company, with main offices at Shreveport, La., have placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company for a specially constructed Minusa Gold Fibre to be placed in their Majestic Theatre, Shreveport.

All of the Saenger houses are equipped with Minusa screens.

ALADDIN, BAY CITY, MICHIGAN, REMODELED AND REFURNISHED, IS NOW OPEN

THE remodeling of the Aladdin theatre, Bay City, Mich., which has been going on for the past five weeks, has been completed and the house reopened Sunday, Sept. 3. In the remodeling of this theatre the interior arrangements have been entirely changed. The floor which was formerly high at the entrance, with a sharp slope toward the stage, is now constructed in a saucer shape, lowest end near the center and with a gentle slope from the center in all directions.

Another change is the addition of two balconies which will add something like 1,000 seats. New decorations and new furnishings complete the changes. L. R. Simpson, manager, announces that every Thursday will be Symphony Night, a splendid symphony orchestra having been engaged for the season for Thursday nights.

LOCAL 384 TO GIVE A BALL

PLANS are now under way for the third annual ball of Local 384, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. of Hudson County, N. J. It is the purpose of the various committees to make this affair something that will cause everyone to sit up and take notice.

In the past the above local has been congratulated upon the good behavior displayed at their affairs and there is no doubt but what the coming ball will be a huge success. Date and place where the ball is to be held will be announced later.

A $15,000 PICTURE THEATRE IN ROCKWELL, IOWA

IF a person had to judge the New Empress theatre at Rockwell, Iowa, by the upper half of the building, the chances are two to one that he would say it was a church. The red tile roof, sloped in such a way as to give the appearance of a church, is only one of the features of this classy little $15,000 moving picture theatre.

Unique in its construction and attractive in both its exterior and interior finish, the Empress is classed as a leader of theatres of its size in the Middle West. The seating capacity is 320.

The building is of fireproof construction, the exterior being of rough brick, with a white stucco finish. The top is of red tile. The interior is made attractive by a beamed ceiling, the beams dropping to pilasters. On these beams, which stretch from wall to wall, have been placed pots of artificial and natural flowers, including some real palms.

The New Empress Theatre, Rockwell, Iowa

A complete blower ventilating system has been installed. The best part of this system is in the heating of the house. By means of kerosene, steam heat is obtained, making it possible for Manager G. L. Meholin to stand in the lobby and by the turning of a certain lever control the steam pressure. This not only eliminates the work incidental to handling coal, but is just as cheap and keeps the house cleaner and in better atmospheric condition.

The lobby is a small one. The sides are of Georgia marble, while the floor is of varied colored tile. A steel canopy suspended by chains has been erected over the entrance to the lobby. The sides of the theatre have been decorated with flower pots, as the picture shows. Three large swinging doors, with large good looking mirrors open into the theatre proper.

The color scheme of the entire theatre is two-tone tan, the effect of which is increased by an indirect lighting system. The promiscuous placing of palms and artificial flowers also adds to the beauty of the interior.

The projection room is equipped with two Powers' 6-B machines and a motor set generator for direct current. This is a feature that many theatres much larger cannot boast of, and when the population of Rockwell, estimated at 725, is considered, the acquisition is a much more notable one.

Shows are given six nights a week; the service is varied, both feature and regular service being shown. G. L. Meholin, manager, is also the proprietor of the Brower Hotel in Rockwell.

ENTERPRISE AMUSEMENT COMPANY WILL ERECT ANOTHER THEATRE IN PITTSBURGH

LOUIS O. BROSIE, an architect of Pittsburgh, is preparing plans for the new motion picture theatre which is to be erected by the Enterprise Amusement Company at 1714-16-18-20 Center avenue. This company, of which Mark Browarsky is manager, now operates several houses in Pittsburgh. The Victoria theatre is in the same section where it is planned to erect the new one.

The lease of the company expires on the Victoria theatre next spring and the new theatre will probably be called the New Victoria. It will have a capacity of 1100 and will be built on the bleacher style similar to the Regent theatre in East Liberty.

The building will be 60 by 110 feet and four storerooms will be included in the first floor frontage. The cost of the theatre will be $60,000. The intentions of the company are to begin work on the new structure within the next thirty days with the expectation of having the theatre completed in time for the opening next spring when the old Victoria will be closed.

The Enterprise Amusement Company now operates four theatres in Pittsburgh, the Rex in East Liberty, the New Regent at 1600 Fifth avenue, the Orpheum theatre in Squirrel Hill and the Victoria theatre in Center avenue.

PICKETING OF THEATRES FORBIDDEN BY ORDINANCE IN OKLAHOMA CITY

PICKETING of theatres has been forbidden by city ordinance in Oklahoma City, Okla. The two sections of the new ordinance which describe the offense are as follows:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to walk, stand or loiter on any street, sidewalk, alley or public place within the city of Oklahoma City, in front of, or near to any place of business, and call out, speak to, or attract the attention of any person along such street, sidewalk, alley or public place—with the intent to induce such person to patronize or not to patronize such place of business.

Section 2. It shall be unlawful for any person to walk or stand or loiter along or upon any street, sidewalk, alley or public place in said city and display in any manner any sign or banner to the persons along such streets, sidewalks, alley or public place, calling to the attention of such persons that they should or should not patronize any place of business located within the said city of Oklahoma City.

The penalty for its violation is a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50 and be confined in the city jail for a period of not exceeding thirty days or both.

MEMBERS OF I. A. T. S. E. IN REGINA, SASKATCHEWAN, HOLD BANQUET

THE members of the I. A. T. S. E. in Regina, Saskatchewan, recently held a successful banquet at one of the cafes, and had as guests of honor, H. L. Gage, manager of the Rex theatre, O. W. Powell, manager of the Regina theatre; and B. S. Courtney, who as head of the Basil Corporation was in town with "The Birth of a Nation," Canadian rights for which are owned by the company, and which was playing a week's engagement at the Regina. About forty were present at the banquet.

ENTERPRISE REPORTS UNUSUAL BUSINESS

THE Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company reports unusual business with its Motiograph machines during the past few weeks. Edward H. Kemp, the western representative of the company, recently made a shipment of one machine to Shanghai, China, while the home office has just filled an order in Ketchikan, Alaska. Sales in the United States have been unusually heavy, particularly from central Ohio, from which section John E. McAuley has just returned after placing thirty new machines.

FERNEY PROVES AN ENTERPRISING SALESMAN

CARL J. FERNEY, Chicago city salesman of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, is elated over his recent sales of Motiograph projectors as well as the prospects for future sales. Some of his recent installations were two machines in the Hub theatre, two in the Ideal, two in the Morris, two in the Vilas, two in the Estehna, two in the Melrose, one in the Hermosa, one at the Warsaw, one in the Grant and two in the Strand of Maywood.

FOUR BAIRD MACHINES BOUGHT BY DAN MEYERS

FOUR new Baird moving picture machines, which cost $500 each, have been received by Dan Meyers, manager of the Broadway and Strand theatres at Muskogee, Okla.

For Efficiency and Economy Install a Transverter

NO matter how much you pay for good pictures, you can't get full profit possibilities out of them unless you have good light. It's false economy to put up with the inconvenience, annoyance and expense of inferior projection equipment.

TransVerteR

TRADE MARK, REGISTERED, U. S. PAT. OFF JULY 25, 1916

Considering what it does and what it saves, the Transverter is lower in price than any other device on the market. The transverter is a compact, simple motor generator that meets every requirement for a steady, brilliant, easily controlled light for artistic projection. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded.

Order your Transverter now and we will deliver it in two or three weeks. This is going to be a big year in the moving picture business. Install the kind of equipment that will enable you to get your full share of this business.

September Bulletin giving complete information and net prices will be sent on request.

More About Additive Color Cinematography—Two-Color Processes Not Scientifically Correct—Christensen's Patent—The Ortograph Process—Gaumont's "Chrono-Chrome"

KINEMACOLOR being a two-color process could never produce theoretically accurate color effects, but nevertheless this process has won the admiration of all scientists by reason of the close approximation to natural color effects which it yields. Its most apparent disadvantages are, firstly, that it requires twice as much film as the ordinary black and white system to record a given scene; secondly, that rapidly moving objects are seen to be bordered by a red and green colored fringe, due to the fact that the objects occupy a slightly different position in each successive image. While it has been proposed to eliminate this annoyance by extending the red and green elements of the projecting filter until they meet or overlap slightly; it is hardly possible to entirely eliminate this color fringing in the case of rapidly moving objects photographed through alternating filters upon a single film strip. The eyes also become easily fatigued when witnessing a Kinemacolor exhibition. This latter was long attributed to the double flicker caused by the revolving shutter and the rotating color filter respectively, but it is now known that the color sensitive groups of nerve fibrils in the eye become tired when they are alternately excited as rapidly as 32 times per second. This eye fatigue would be much worse, however, if the nerve cells were being excited 48 times per second by a process using three successive color record images and a filter containing three separate projecting colors.

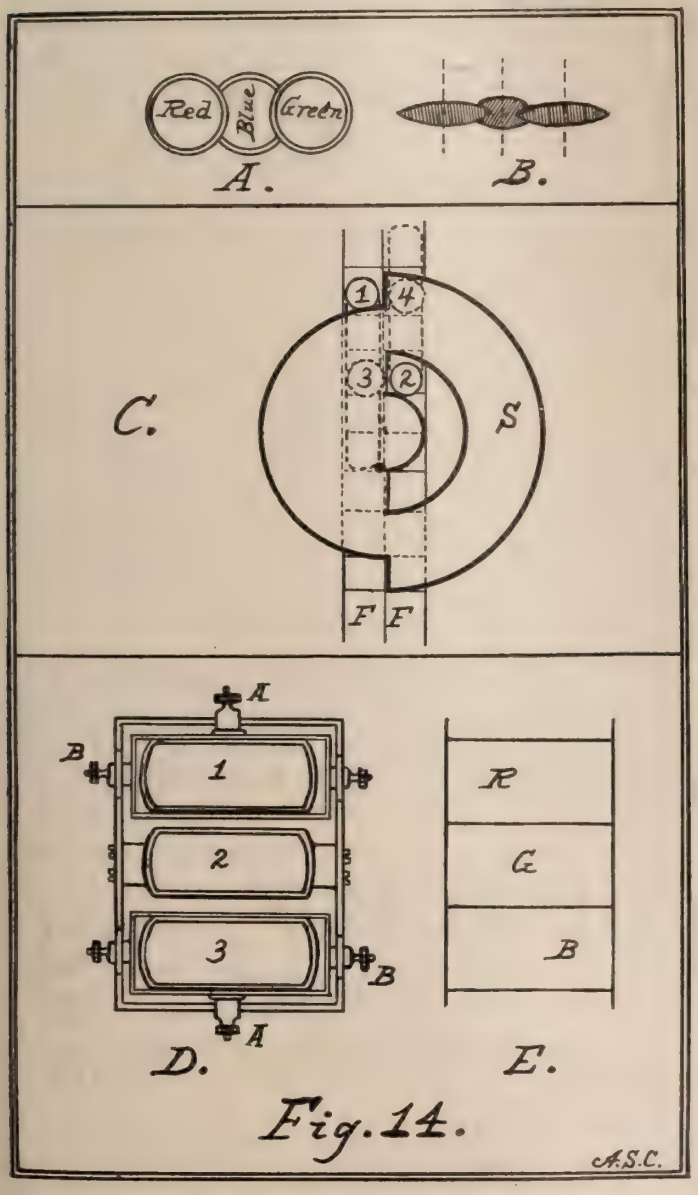

Fig. 14.

Christensen's Lens Arrangement

This latter fact seems to have been taken into account by C. P. Christensen, a Danish inventor, who, appreciating the desirability (from a scientific point of view) of a 3-color cinematographic process, sought some means of combining the 3 primary sensations upon the screen instead of upon the retina of the eye. His patent of 1910 shows that he proposed to accomplish this by projecting the three sensation images through 3 lenses arranged as at A, Fig. 14. Christensen reasons that as the blue record requires less exposure than the red and green the lens used in securing it can be smaller than the lenses used in securing the green and red records. The blue taking lens therefore has part of its diameter cut away and the other two lenses are recessed into it as shown at B, Fig. 14. In addition to thus compensating the exposures the highly desirable end is also achieved of bringing the axes of the three lenses closer together than would be the case if all were of full diameter.

Christensen further points out that inasmuch as each lens is only recording one color, the lenses need not be highly corrected, the only requirement being that the lenses be of equal focal length for their respective colors. It is to be understood, of course, that each lens in the Christensen process is provided with a color filter and in constructing such a lens combination the three lenses are partitioned from one another by thin metal plates, so that the light being transmitted by one objective cannot penetrate or become mingled with that of its neighbor.

Ortography

In 1912 there appeared in one of the motion picture trade journals a description of an interesting color process called Ortography. Outside of the article in question nothing more was heard of this proposition, but it is recalled to us by a recent patent on a projecting machine (U. S. Patent No. 1,167,643). The projector there described seems so similar to the one employed in the so-called Ortograph process and seems so well adapted to color projection that we will briefly describe its principle, reference being had to C, Fig. 14.

In C. Fig. 14 FF is a film bearing two rows of images (side by side). The Ortographic process employs three rows of images (red, green, and blue), the projecting colors for each row being on the celluloid side of the film in the form of 3 adjacent colored bands. For simplicity in describing the mechanism we

KLINE POSTER COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, IS GROWING FAST

THE Kline Poster Company of 1307 Vine street, Philadelphia, is growing, growing, growing. Having completely filled up the building at 1307, it is now taking all of 1305. The expansion will be accomplished by December 1, at which time the addition will be in readiness. This will give the Poster Company eight floors in these two buildings. So much for the retail end of it. There is a wholesale department also, but that is another story, also another building. It is at 1423 Vine street that this branch holds forth. Here the Kline Posters have 6,000 square feet in the Green Building, all on one floor.

Luke Gring is manager of the wholesale department. C. G. Powell, formerly exchange manager for Mutual, is Southern representative. Pat Caster, formerly of the Bluebird Philadelphia office, is central representative. Besides these two gentlemen there are four other roadmen representing the Kline Poster Company and doing it in such good fashion the firm finds it difficult to fill orders fast enough.

GOERZ AMERICAN OPTICAL COMPANY CANCELS FORMER PRICES

THE C. P. Goerz American Optical Company, 317 East 34th street, New York City, reports that adverse conditions caused by the European war have compelled them to cancel and withdraw all former prices. The company reports that while the war has somewhat interfered with the delivery of their cameras, yet, as regards lenses they have been more fortunate. Prior to the war they had imported a large quantity of genuine Jena glass which their completely equipped optical factory in New York City has been turning into Goerz lenses without interruption.

At present the company is in a position to supply nearly all its lenses with but few exceptions. A new catalog, containing a list of such goods and accessories as they are able to furnish in reasonable quantities, is now on the press. It will also contain the new list prices which are about ten per cent in advance over the prices in force prior to October 1, 1916, and will be ready for general distribution within a short time.

DUPLEX SHIP COMPLETE LABORATORY EQUIPMENT TO BRAZIL

AMONG many of the recent export shipments made by the Duplex Machine Company, Inc., 316-318 75th street, Brooklyn, N. This shipment contained every possible equipment to make up a complete and up-to-date film laboratory, including everything from the printing and film cleaning machines down to film rewinders.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Cue Sheets Not Considered Helpful

"If Only the Poorest Musician Would Do Away with These Musical Suggestions and Use His Brains, They Would Be of More Benefit Than These Assistants"—Exception Is Taken to Player Who Thinks More of Doing Stunts Than Playing Intelligently for the Picture

I AM writing the following article for the benefit of the younger players who are not acquainted with the method of playing correctly for the pictures.

First, I wish to warn the beginner of the so-called "Cue Sheet." There is only one way for me to express my feelings towards them, and that is, "They are rotten" (with all due respect to the publisher).

"Publisher"—there you have it. In other words, "Music Publisher." These Cue Sheets are nearly always gotten out by some kind music publisher who has never played to a picture in his life, but sits down and after perhaps reading a synopsis of the photoplay endeavors to enlighten the poor musician, who is at the mercy of these Cue Sheets, owing to the late delivery of the films in so many cases. Hence the poor music we hear in most of the picture shows. If only the poorest musician would do away with these horrid Musical Suggestions and use his or her brains, no matter how few they were, they would surely be of more benefit than these Cue Sheets.

Take, for instance, the parting scene. Why not use such familiar airs as Tosti's "Good-bye," "Aloha Oe," "Say Not Farewell," "How Can I Leave Thee," "Good-bye, Rose." All of these are well-known by your people and would be appreciated. Then there is the heavy music. All the Cue Sheets I ever read, when it came to a part of the picture where the heavy music is needed, it will read something like this: "Dramatic Tension No. 9," or "Mysterioso Dramatico No. 22." Will some one tell me why on earth some of these musicians don't use some of the old masters' works on the heavies. Take such overtures as "Martha," "Stradella," "Faust," "La Tosca," "Phedra," "Templewheiwe," "Semiramide"—I could go on all night and name thousands of overtures that are heavy and at the same time there is always that sweetness to the melody that is pleasing to the ear and still is in keeping with the heavy action of the photoplay.

Why Play Improvised Music Without Melody?

Why play this improvised stuff which has no particular melody and most of which is not even pleasing to the ear?

In sad scenes, bring in old music like the "Traumerei," "Angel's Serenade," "Evening Star Song," Massanet's "Elegy," Pascal's "Nocturne," "Miserere"—any one of the 3d, 5th or 6th Nocturnes, Chopin's Prelude, "The Young Nun" by Schubert, and many others—old selections that every one knows and loves?

The main trouble with the average musician, organist or orchestra is that he wants to be the attraction and the picture is just on the screen so that the people will have something to look at while they play. Why doesn't the musician remember that he or she is only there to break the silence and to improve the picture with proper and correct music? The people pay their dimes and quarters to see the pictures. Therefore if the musician fully realizes his or her place they will put more effort into the selections they use and not so much to showing off stunts that are so often practised, by organists especially. They seem to think that the main object that calls them to the organ is to show off all the fancy fingering and sliding around the seat for the benefit of the few who are fortunate enough to secure a front seat. For goodness sake, get down to business. Can all this fancy stuff and play to the pictures. If the organist must show off, let there be an organ recital at the end of each show and let him or her show off with all the spot lights on to their hearts' content; then when the picture starts, get down to hard work again.

One playing to pictures must be quick to think. When you review a picture always keep the oldest selections in your head and you will always find some scene during a five-reel picture to play at least one or two of them, and by doing this you are pleasing some one in the theatre and offending no one.

I want to mention a few words in regard to a remark that I read in another trade paper some time ago regarding instruments which are operated by a double tracker. The writer made the statement that any exhibitor who used a mechanical instrument in his theatre was sadly neglecting his music. I fail to see where he gets his foundation for this statement, unless he has only heard the old-style electric pianos or orchestrians. The new up-to-date instruments can be operated so that the people cannot tell whether they are played by hand or by rolls. I am at the present time employed by the Turner and Dahnken Circuit. They have a large orchestra and have just installed a pipe organ on the Pacific Coast, made by the American Photoplayer Company. This organ is operated either from the console or from the double tracker.

It has 52 stops, four manuals, a few of the most important drummer traps, together with orchestral bells, chimes, Vox Humana, etc., and I am operating it, relief to the orchestra with the rolls. I use mostly hand played Q. R. S. rolls and vocal style for the solo work. I have my picture run off for me a week ahead and have a full week in which to select my music, and if the writer in the trade paper thinks that a mechanical instrument cannot play to the pictures it would pay him to take the trip to California and look us over. I have had many of my programs published from time to time in the NEWS, and my work has been highly commented on by Clarence Simms.

My program for "The Christian" was highly spoken of by him, and I think that before knocking the mechanical instruments the objector should look around some and see if he does not find that the picture can be more closely followed by the double tracker instrument, when the proper music is used, than any organist or orchestra can possibly do. He used as his main reason that the people got tired of the same selections, and no matter how many rolls one had, they would never have enough to make the changes. I have operated now for seven years and am never at a loss for music, provided the manager allows the purchase of the rolls as I need them. The T. and D. Circuit allows you to purchase just what you need for each picture, and I very seldom use the same selections over, not half as much as does the orchestra. Of course if the manager will not buy the rolls, the operator cannot play them, any more than an orchestra can play new music unless the leader buys new stuff.

Equipped with one or two music rolls, or furnished without rolls for hand playing.

There is one instrument that has been standard since the birth of the moving picture industry.

—one instrument that faithfully and smoothly interprets every bit of action on the screen.

—one instrument that is made in so many styles and sizes that any exhibitor can own one.

No, our friend is all wrong, and I would like to have him go to the nearest Photoplayer office, have them tell him where he can hear a first-class operator, have him sit and listen for half an hour and see if he does not change his mind.

CARRIE HETHERINGTON.

EDITOR'S NOTES: We are always very glad to hear from Miss Hetherington and admire her forceful way of stating the facts as they come to her notice. The above is another thought suggested by the Lovett article, which appeared in these columns some time ago.

Cue Sheet Discussion

We are now getting down to the point of Cue Sheet discussion. That the average theatre requires some musical assistance we know to be a fact. In Miss Hetherington's case it seems she has one week's time to set her music after seeing the picture, which is a good reason why a cue sheet would not appeal to her at all. Another reason would be that in her adaptability for setting a picture with music rolls, a cue sheet would be of no value at all.

I have at all times contended in my writings, and there is no reason why I should change my opinion, that cue sheets which suggest musical numbers and do not allow for the musician to use other numbers than those suggested, are of no value to the picture musician whatsoever. Anything in the line of help for the picture musician must be so compiled that the musician using such cue sheet or plot can select from his own library music that he is familiar with to substitute for such numbers as are suggested. To be dictatorial in cue sheets can only mean one of two things.

First, that the one who makes the cue sheet has little or no knowledge regarding the requirements and possibilities of the picture theatre; the second, that the maker of the cue sheets has not really better picture music at heart, but has seen in the cue sheet a possibility of exploiting musical publications. Both of the above two factors are injurious and the smaller exhibitor will always suffer by them.

We must, however, not offend the known publisher of good music, for picture music will always require new and worthy musical publications. As Miss Hetherington says, every picture

Note.—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X, representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation, "——," it means that the Cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes. When the time of each 1,000 ft. of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Music Notes.—This picture is a romantic story with a slight military setting, interspersed with melodramatic suggestion. No. 1 must be a long concert waltz with a slow introduction, having a romantic appeal. No. 2 should be a slow melodious number of romantic suggestion. No. 3 must be a long number of romantic appeal and a positive dramatic suggestion. No. 4 should be a light 2-4 number. No. 5 should be a 6-8 march played softly. Must have a military suggestion. No. 6 must be a short medium slow number having a slight dramatic suggestion. No. 8 is similar to 1. No. 9 is a 2-4 number having a slight dramatic suggestion. No. 10 is similar to 3. No. 11 is similar to 4. No. 12 is similar to 5. No. 13 is similar to 3. No. 14 is similar to 7. No. 15 is similar to 3. No. 16 must be a lengthy slow number and must be similar to the melodramatic mysterioso. Nos. 18 and 19 must be slow numbers positively suggesting pathos and should be of decided dramatic effect. No. 20 is a short waltz as an aftermath.

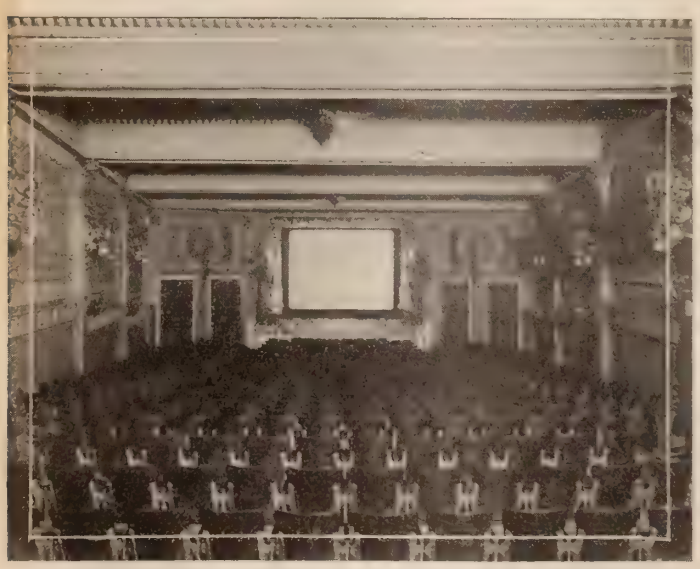
THE WEST END IS A BALTIMORE THEATRE WITH MANY ATTRACTIONS FOR IN AND OUT OF TOWN PATRONAGE



THE West End, Baltimore, is controlled by the West End Theatre Company and was erected in 1913. The structure is of solid concrete, and is located on a triangular plot 156 feet deep. Its peculiar wedge shape makes the theatre a prominent landmark, and in a way is an advertising asset. You can't fail to see the West End as you pass down the street. The interior is decorated in a yellow color scheme. Artificial flowers, velvet chestra plays the music for the pictures. Photo frames and posters are used for displays in the lobby, twenty by twenty feet. A National cash register and ticket registering machine is part of the lobby equipment. Six shows a day are given, consisting of features from Triangle, Paramount and Metro. Six reels to a show constitute a performance, and ten cents is the charge of admission. The West End is located in a residential district. The attractions get publicity in the daily papers, by a liberal distribution of window cards, billboards, and programs attractive enough for the patrons to want to take them home after the show.

The screen has an outdoor effect. It is framed in a pargola. Artificial flowers and a fountain add to the pleasing effect in the front of the house. The fountain is of the electric variety and has the appearance of liquid gold. The West End attracts much attention, particularly on the part of out-of-town visitors.

EMPIRE, MONTGOMERY, ALA., IS A HOUSE WITH A GROWING PATRONAGE

THE Empire, Montgomery, Ala., is a picture house with a fine patronage at present, and an excellent outlook for an extensive increase of business in the future. Percy L. Smith, the manager, has been in the business for nine years, and was well known as a representative for Paramount before taking hold of the Empire.

View of the Stage of the Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala.

Six shows a day are held at the Empire, at an admission price of ten cents. Fifteen employees are in its service. The theatre is located in the heart of the business section and draws big houses at practically all times. The newspapers are used freely for obtaining publicity. A house organ, the Empire Weekly, has been found to bring satisfactory results. Paramount, Fox and other features are the mainstay of the performances.

The theatre stands on a plot eighty-five by thirty-five feet and the lobby dimensions are twenty by thirty-five feet. On the main floor are six hundred comfortable seats, and two hundred are in the balcony. A Power's 6-A motor driven projection throws the pictures on a Minusa screen ninety feet away. Two spot lights give the same electric effect obtained in the Strand, New York.

The lobby frames were furnished by the Theatre Specialty Manufacturing Company, Cleveland; an electric fountain was installed by the Electric Fountain Company, New York; and the floral decorations were obtained from the General Flower and Decorating Company, 228 West Forty-ninth street, New York. The house was decorated by a Montgomery concern, which produced pleasing effects on the walls by a system of hand stenciling.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

INDIANA

The Temple theatre, Macy, has been closed. Earl Enyart of Fulton, who purchased the equipment several weeks ago, has moved the outfit to Fulton, where he expects to start a picture show. Citizens of Macy regret the town is without a show, but are optimistic that some one will start another soon.

Charles Walker has sold his interest in the Gem theatre at Plymouth to his son, Alonzo Walker, who will continue to operate the house.

A motion picture show at Bryant, owned by Bowen & Son, was badly damaged by fire on September 25, when the electric light plant, owned by the same company, was destroyed.

D. A. Hoover, a meat market man of Portland, has bought the Royal theatre, in West Main street, Portland, from P. A. Gott, who has managed the show for the last five years. The theatre is to be remodeled, making it one of the most up-to-date picture houses in Portland. The interior is to be refinished, the lobby painted and other improvements added.

IOWA

The Opera House at Caggon, operated by Phil Burst, will be closed for two or three weeks for repairs to be made.

The closing down of a mine at Muna, resulting in two-thirds of the population leaving the town, is the reason advanced for discontinuation of service by the Pastime theatre at that place. C. Albertson is proprietor. It is reported that the chances for the house to reopen are about even.

The Palace theatre in Lynville, operated by M. Mitchell, is closed at present. It is expected that it will be opened again in about six weeks.

An epidemic of diphtheria at Rockwell City resulted in the closing of all picture shows in that town for over a week.

After having been one of the proprietors of the Orpheum theatre at Fairfield for the past seven years, J. H. Fleagle recently sold out his interest to the two other partners, F. W. Jericho and Frank West. With F. A. Spielman, Mr. Fleagle opened the Orpheum seven years ago.

The Unique theatre at Oakland has been sold by its owner, G. M. Crawford, to Fred A. Crosby of Omaha. Mr. Crawford has moved to Omaha with his family, where he will conduct a pool and billiard parlor in the Paxton block. Shows will be given at the Unique every evening except Sunday and Thursday and there will be a matinee on Saturday.

Selecting a time when the policeman on the beat was absent and relying on the roar of presses in the Times-Tribune office next door to muffle any sound of an explosion, expert safe blowers last week entered the office of the Palace theatre in Waterloo and got away with $187 in currency and a gold watch. The watch was the property of the wife of W. L. Myers, manager of the theatre. A plate glass window was smashed and the safe door was blown open. While the men were without any doubt professionals, they were evidently unfamiliar with the surroundings. No trace has as yet been found of the burglars.

After being closed for several weeks, the Orpheum theatre at Oelwein has been reopened, this time under the management of J. L. O'Brien. The former proprietor has gone to Minneapolis.

One of the latest and best motion picture houses in Iowa to be opened is the Strand at McGregor. Harry G. Simpson is the manager. The house seats 350. The Des Moines Film and Supply Company got the contract for furnishing the equipment. The opening day was a gala occasion for the residents of McGregor. An admission fee of fifty cents was charged at the first performance and the entire town turned out. The picture was a Paramount release, Mary Pickford in "Little Peppina."

The Casino theatre in Des Moines recently had as a special attraction the Federal moving picture film, "A Day with the Fleet," sent out to the Des Moines naval station from Washington, D. C. Chief Master-at-arms J. M. Sullivan, who has been with the navy for twenty years, explained the pictures.

Lyman H. Howe's travel pictures were recently shown in the Berchel theatre in Des Moines at advanced prices. The Berchel is a theatre given over to legitimate productions, but occasionally its doors are thrown open to moving pictures.

Suit for $2,788 has been brought in the Des Moines Circuit Court by S. Davison & Brothers against A. S. Kirkhart for rent claimed to be due on the Golden theatre at 805 Walnut street, in Des Moines. Kirkhart operated the Golden theatre profitably for some period, but was forced to close it eventually. Since Kirkhart gave it up various other persons have tried to make the theatre go, but it has not been a success since Kirkhart's first venture.

"The Common Law," Clara Kimball Young's first production with her own company, recently had its first showing in Des Moines. It was at the Garden theatre, owned by A. H. Blank, president of the corporation that has the state rights for this picture in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. The picture showed five days with the matinee price 15 cents and the evening price 25 cents. The Garden Orchestra was augmented to twelve pieces and a special musical program was given. A quarter page advertisement in the Des Moines papers announced this first showing. Mr. Blank, after a stay in New York, was here for the opening show. He left after the second day on a business trip to New York City.

Mrs. Rhoda McCarty, who has recently been operating the moving picture theatre at Ankeny, has closed that house down and has moved to Carney, where she has opened another theatre.

Because the building in which his theatre was located was torn down, F. Richerodt, operating the moving picture house at State Center, was forced to quite business for the time being. Although not yet certain whether he will reopen or not, it is probable that he will start another theatre shortly.

The lease on the picture show building at Orient having expired, Messrs. Sprague and Farquhar, proprietors, have given up the running of the house. The reason they did not renew the lease was on account of the fact that their time will have to be devoted to other business. Their successor has not yet been named.

Elmer Johnson is remodeling a brick building in Gurnsey with the intention of opening a moving picture theatre soon.

B. A. Shafer of Dayton recently purchased the moving picture theatre at Earlham and is now in charge. Mr. Shafer also plans to take over a mill at that place and go back into the milling business.

KANSAS

S. L. Ware, owner of the Varsity theatre in Lawrence, has recently bought the Bowersock theatre. This purchase gives him the control of both theatres in Lawrence.

NEBRASKA

Manager De Long announces that he will reopen the Electric theatre at McCoon in the near future.

The William Branch theatre will be opened for business at Hastings in the near future.

John Sass has leased the Opera House at Bennington and will show moving pictures.

ANOTHER HUNCH

This is the way scores of exhibitors are bringing their patrons back. They put a Rawson & Evans Interchangeable Letter electric sign inside the theatre. The sign announces coming attractions. The brilliant distinctness of the illumined letters makes the patrons read the message, and makes it stick in their minds. They come back the next day—a proven fact. They'll read this sign when they won't remember the slides.

You can sell the bottom line to a local advertiser if you want the sign to pay for itself. This type of sign is also great for the lobby, or on either side of the entrance.

Remember, the lettering of these signs can be changed in a jiffy, the current cost is low, there is no breaking of bulbs, and the cost is less than any other form of advertising.

Send now for particulars. Write your name and address on the margin of this page, send it to us, and we'll forward full information. Please do it now.

The Paddock theatre at Beatrice is to be made over and run as a first-class moving picture theatre.

Ferdinand Grosshans has purchased the Lyric theatre at Sutton.

The Gem theatre at Beaver City has been renamed the Actern.

P. N. Le Dou opened a theatre seating 500 in the town of Bartley, population 400, last week. It was carnival week. He had planned to run but three nights, but remained open every day and may keep open every day in the future. He equipped the house with all modern appliances and has one of the best small-town theatres in the state. He calls it the Opera House.

OKLAHOMA

Dan Meyers has commenced the erection of a new moving picture theatre at Muskogee, to be known as the Strand. It will seat 650 people and will be modern and up-to-date. Mr. Meyers will show moving pictures at the Strand exclusively, while in his other theatre, the Broadway, he will show vaudeville and feature pictures.

Fred Hewitt and Cecil Rowley have taken over the People's theatre at Kiowa.

TEXAS

The Crystal theatre, an old picture house in Pearl street, Beaumont, reopened on September 1, under the management of Thomas and J. C. Clemmons, with an attractive program of moving pictures and musical comedy.

show, however, a film with only two rows of images upon it.

The film travels continuously. Mounted to the projector mechanism are two pairs of lenses, 1 and 3, and 2 and 4 in the diagram C, Fig. 14. If three rows of images are employed three pairs of lenses are of course used. These pairs of lenses have a reciprocating motion (one pair moves up while the other pair moves down and vice versa) and thus they follow the successive images on the continuously moving film. An eccentrically mounted revolving shutter, S, having exposure openings on its surface, as shown, follows the travel of the pairs of lenses, being so arranged as to always expose one lens of each pair. The two pairs of lenses are, of course, so mounted that their projected images converge upon a common screen—thus superimposing the images from both rows of pictures on the film. The shutter by virtue of its odd shape also serves to uncover one pair of lenses at the same time that it is masking the other, so the screen is never dark and hence no flicker with this novel mechanism.

The Gaumont Chrono-chrome System

What is generally considered "the best as yet" in natural color cinematographic processes is the Gaumont "Chrono-chrome" system, which aroused such favorable comment when shown in London and New York in 1913. It is generally understood that the Eastman Kodak Company controls the American rights to the "Chrone-chrome" process.

The method of taking and projecting "Chrono-chrome" seems quite similar to that of Christensen, previously described. Three sections of large lenses (1, 2, and 3, D, Fig. 14) mounted very close together are used with this process. The advantage of getting the axes of the lenses close together is apparent in the superior superimposition of the red, green, and blue images upon the screen. In this way parallax (the multicolored fringe showing at the edges of incorrectly superimposed screen images) is largely done away with in the Chono-chrome process, but not entirely, the effect being still noticeable in scenes showing close and far-off objects.

Each lens, in the Gaumont system, carries its own color filter and, as will be inferred from a study of D, Fig. 14, the center lens can be mounted stationary while the other two must be adjusted laterally by the attachments AA, and up and down by BB in order to correctly superimpose the images upon the screen. The peculiar form of the lenses used with the Chrono-chrome process makes it necessary to alter the size and shape of the film images. These are on standard film and of standard width (1 inch) but are only ½ inch in height. There are therefore three images, E, Fig. 14, within the space of two standard sized images on the film strip. These images are shifted by the intermittent in sets of three at each shift (equivalent to 1½ inches of film or double the standard length of film moved by an intermittent) and here again we have the three colors superimposed on the screen instead of on the retina—hence freedom from undue eyestrain.

Beautiful results have been shown by the Chrono-chrome process, but it appears that the film stock at present used has not the necessary color sensitiveness to permit of scenes showing rapid action being photographed at sufficient speed to permit of their satisfactory reproduction.

(To be Continued Next Week)

requires that some pleasing and entertaining musical number be played, and we know that every feature picture affords several opportunities for doing this. Good picture music will only be heard in those theatres where a good and well selected library of music is used and from which all musical programs for pictures are set. Above all things, the most important for the picture theatre musician or orchestrian is that he is familiar with the numbers that he is going to play.

As regards a library of music, the only benefit that the cue sheet can ever do for the picture musician is to suggest new numbers and their temperamental value in picture playing to those musicians who always add to their repertoire of music, just as Miss Hetherington does to her rolls. If we are to live another 100 years, there will always be a different opinion among the musicians as to which is the right number to play for a parting scene or a sad scene, etc., but I note in Miss Hetherington's suggestions that regardless of which number you play that she suggests, the temperamental and emotional effect would be the same.

The titles alone are different. I quite agree with Miss Hetherington as regards the fancy stuff. The photoplay theatre is no place for showing off technique. When something big is to be done, the picture should be stopped and the spotlight be put on that which is to be big. The musical interpretations of all pictures should be quiet and undisturbing.

Double Tracker Instruments

A few years back there was some thought that I was against the double tracker or mechanical instrument. I will admit that I was, but not from the fact that I did not think good music could be obtained on such instruments by competent operators, but because there seemed to be no way of using these instruments without destroying every orchestral possibility, and I was an orchestral man. I have, however, always advocated musical theatre equipment along this line, especially in all houses which cannot maintain orchestral combinations and certainly in houses that can afford orchestral combinations. My personal experience has been that where organs or double tracker instruments of merit have been installed, the management has shortly after recognized that they could well afford to spend more money on their music and instead of the orchestras being cut out, as so many of these mechanical instrument salesmen had suggested, the orchestras have been added to and the musical expense increased, much to the satisfaction of the manager, who certainly would not have allowed his expenses to become higher had his box-office receipts not increased.

Demonstrations Beyond Expectation

I have had the Photoplayer demonstrated to me upon two occasions, and I am to hear the very large one that Miss Hetherington speaks of in the near future, and to be perfectly frank I must admit that I was musically entertained beyond my utmost expectations at both of the demonstrations. There is not one iota of doubt but that just as much, if not more, musical progress will be made in the manufacture of such instruments as will be made by music publishers or would-be cue sheet writers. All three of these elements are factors in the progress of picture music, and I want to assure my readers that the Photoplayer is not a mean factor.

Knowing that Miss Hetherington has met with great success in her picture work, I would be very grateful if some day she would write us in her frank manner, which I want to assure her I greatly appreciate, about her impression regarding orchestral accomplishments in picture theatre music. I note that she relieves an orchestra.

Next week we will reproduce a letter from one who disagreed with us a few years back, but who, by a close study of this department, has changed his views completely, and he writes us some very helpful words. I want to again suggest to all our readers to help the good work along and to let us hear from them.

These columns are for educational work alone, and you will not find articles of criticism, deportment and other irrelevant things discussed.

Overwork, and the strain of his responsibilities, bring the great surgeon to a nervous collapse. His memory is gone;—he doesn't know who or what he is. But the light of understanding returns to him as suddenly as it departed. The shock of an accident to the woman he loves restores his mind. His great skill alone can perform the necessary operation. Dare she be trusted to the hands of the man whose mind has been so completely shattered? Will it be life for her—or death?

THE BIG HEAVY MAN AND THE SMALL HAPPY MAN

Written for Children but Exhibitors may read between the lines.

CHAPTER II.

"HERE you are, young ladies," shouted MR. HEAVY FEATURES, the big Impressive Man. "Here's one of the most magnificent motion pictures ever conceived. Don't miss this. It combines all my knowledge of art, poetry and music. You never saw such wonderful acting; such tense situations; such a tremendous climax. Come right in and see Gladys Sadeyes in 'The Cup of Misery.'"

"Aw Nix," said a Sweet Young Thing, "let's don't, they bury everybody in the last reel. Let's go down and see Bougless Bareshanks in 'Crazy in New York.'"

The WISE OLD EXHIBITOR watched this incident. "Whew," he exclaimed, "I wonder if that isn't something for me to think about. I always knew people would rather laugh than cry."

"You just bet that's something to think about," said MR. CHRISTIE COMEDIES, the Small Happy Man. "You want to put some fun in those programs of yours. Let it be clean and jolly and kinda human. You'll be surprised at the difference in your receipts at the end of the week.

"Come over to the Independent Exchange man — he's all right. He'll show you 'SOME KID,' my Open Market Release for November 20th. This features Betty Compson and Neal Burns. Directed by Horace Davey. You don't have to take it unless you like it, but you will like it. It's funny and good. Al. E. Christie saw to that."

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

NOVEMBER 18, 1916

Huge Success of New Serial Shown By Big Box-Office Receipts

A SMASHING success was scored by the first chapter of "A Lass of the Lumberlands," recently released through Mutual exchanges. Theatres the country over played this thrilling new Helen Holmes production to capacity business. It scored an even greater triumph than did "The Girl and the Game." In one big city motion picture fans stood in the rain for a half hour or more, waiting for a chance to see the opening chapter. Chapter two proved even more startling than chapter one and audiences went away enthusiastic over the daring feats they had witnessed on the screen.

Helen Holmes' Daring.

Gritty Helen Holmes is amazing exhibitors by her daring. Nothing seems too risky for her to attempt. She is absolutely fearless. Whether swaying in a frail birch-bark canoe suspended by two slender ropes from a lofty railroad trestle, or hanging on with one hand while she peers from the cab of an engine going ninety miles an hour, she seems equally cool. In "The Girl and the Game" she performed feats that are beyond any other actress. But in "A Lass of the Lumberlands" she is outdoing all that has gone before. One tensely dramatic scene follows another. Helen foils the plotters of the lumber trust only to find that she is enmeshed in a new scheme to deprive her of the timberlands coveted by the all powerful octopus. Grimly she battles on.

Thrills of Railroading.

Though the scenes of "A Lass of the Lumberlands" are laid in the big North Woods, all the thrills of railroading which made "The Girl and the Game" popular are again in evidence. Helen again appears in the role of a telegrapher. Again she takes wild rides in the cab of a locomotive. Runaway trains of logs, thrilling dashes down the mountainside and tense moments at the telegraph key are all mingled with floating logs, lumber jams and problems of delivery at the sawmills. Off to a successful start, "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is sure to develop headway as the story unfolds. Bookings on this stupendous chapter play can still be made at the Mutual film exchanges. Those who packed their theatres with the previous Helen Holmes serial were quick to take advantage of this newer and greater film offering.

The release date on the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky," will soon be announced.

GAUMONT TO OFFER

Through Mutual New Picture Called "The Vampires" Which Is

9 CHAPTER THRILLER

Crimes of the most baffling sort, intrigues of the most complicated kind, and detective skill of a surprising character, will be revealed when "The Vampires" is released by the Mutual Film Corporation. Gaumont is the producer of this series of thrilling photoplays. "The Vampires" is a brand new series of stories, based on the operations of a band of powerful law breakers. There are nine stories in all. Each is three reels in length. November 24th is the date of release for the first story of the new series. "The Detective's Head" is the title of the first installment of "The Vampires." Every episode bristles with sensational events. There are sliding panels—traps in the floor—ingenious torture chambers and all the other unique elements that went to make the "Fantomas" series so sensational. Bookings on "The Vampires" can now be made at the Mutual film exchanges.

Kirkwood Newspaper Articles

James Kirkwood, producer of the Mary Miles Minter Series of Mutual Star Productions, is writing a series of articles for publication in newspapers all over the country. They will be read by millions. All these people will be anxious to see the production staged by the man whose articles they have been reading. The exhibitor who is running the Mary Miles Minter Series of Mutual Star Productions is sure to cash in on this interest of the fans.

Fourth Kolb & Dill Mutual Star Production Now Read

TWO feature productions of widely v ried character will be the Mutual Fil Corporation's offerings to the exhibit for the week of November 13th. Th Mutual Star Production is the fourth the Kolb & Dill Series and presents th famous vaudeville headliners in an e tirely new atmosphere. Its title is " Peck o' Pickles." The other is a Mutu Masterpicture, five reels in length, fe turing Frank Borzage and Anna Litt It is a story of the West, with wild ri ing, cow branding and typical scenes ranch life. It is released under the tit "Immediate Lee."

"A Peck o' Pickles."

In "A Peck o' Pickles" the celebrate Kolb & Dill appear in a thrilling five-a Mutual Star Production that has as i foundation the stage play of the san name, popular a few years ago, whi was written by Frank Stammers. It a fords the stars innumerable opportu ties to display their ability, and the pr duction, stage settings and costumi are all in accord with the story. A lo tery ticket numbered 131,313 and a k of sweet cider have not a little to with the plot of the drama, which i cludes many scenes of the period 1860 in Washington, D. C. This is t fourth of the Kolb & Dill Series of M tual Star Productions and can booked now at any Mutual exchange. Million for Mary," "Bluff" and "Thr Pals" are also available in the Kolb Dill Series.

"Immediate Lee."

The real West with its cowboys, i cattle branding and grim justice are t background for "Immediate Lee," the fi act Mutual Masterpicture featuring Fra Borzage and Anna Little. Such favorit as Jack Richardson, Chick Morrison a others are in the supporting cast. B lah, a girl of the dancehalls, loved Hurley, a brand-blotter, is the storm c ter of the story around whom revolv the whole plot. It is one of the m exciting and fascinating Westerns e released by Mutual or made by the Am ican Film Company, Inc., at its San Barbara studios.

BIG FEATURE COMING.

"Charity?" a seven-reel feature, will s be offered as a Mutual Special Featu This unusual production which was acted under the direction of Frank P ell, and features Linda Griffith, amo others, seems likely to rival for b office merit the great Mutual Spec Feature "Damaged Goods."

"THE SHIELDING SHADOW
is a splendid serial—the best Pathe has put out. It is different, it is unique, it is thrilling."
P. Kearney in Motion Picture Mail.

"It will probably establish an epoch in the production of mystery serials, since it combines strong melodrama and rapid action with an almost impenetrable mystery . . . . Without doubt the best serial produced by Pathe and should prove to be one the most successful ever released."
E. Smaney in Dramatic Mirror.

"The serial question offers no unsolved problem to Pathe. The proven money makers they have handled in the past is enough of an attribute to their ability to pick a winner and make it go. . . . The Shielding Shadow possesses thrilling scenes in abundance."
P. Milne in Motion Picture News.

"The first four episodes convinces us that it is superior to any serial thus far offered by Pathe. . . . They are sufficient in every way to make The Shielding Shadow a huge success."
T. C. Kennedy in Motography.

Fairy Tale Classic

in Four Parts

All who have seen this picture of "SNOW-WHITE", unite in expressing unqualified admiration. Children wonder over it and love it; mothers grow tender over the exhibition of the children's charm; grown men become boys again and see the visions of days when fairy tales still held a glamor for them; tired critics wax enthusiastic; and even the moving picture people themselves in the centers of activity, steal time to look at it and declare it to be the finest motion picture of its kind ever produced.

Here is what the critics say:

WHAT NEW YORK'S GREATEST CRITIC SAYS ABOUT THE SEX LURE

FROM THE NEW YORK JOURNAL NOV. 1, 1916

STAGING OF "SEX LURE" WORK OF GENIUS

By "ZIT."

Yesterday there was a private showing of a six-reel feature entitled "The Sex Lure," produced by Ivan Abramson, the genius in the directing of motion pictures. There may be other directors who produce one hundred to five hundred thousand dollar productions, but when it comes to putting an artistic finesse into a picture that costs a small amount to manufacture and make something that costs six thousand look like fifty thousand, that is the time ability tells.

Most any one can do a great deal with a great deal. But how great can a director make a thing with a small amount of money?

I have seen many, many pictures, but I don't pretend to be a critic. In fact, far be it from me to think that I was ever considered one, but I do want to go on record as saying that "The Sex Lure" is a most beautifully told story, and the most interesting one I have witnessed in many moons. For every one in the production is an artist and an actor, and Ivan Abramson has dug deep into the soul of each one of them and brought out the necessary talents to depict each part the way the author intended.

Every point in the motion picture industry has been covered by this wizard, Abramson, in this picture. To tell the story would only spoil it for those who are going to see it on the release date, which is next week.

It is home stuff—true stuff—nothing exaggerated. There is thrill after thrill. You have everything—love, murder, kidnapping, deceit, wrecking of a home, factory life, poverty and riches. It's a picture you can't afford to miss. It's a picture you have got to see. It's a picture that will hold you every minute.

If you went to see the picture at 4, and you had to catch the 4:45 train, you would miss the train to see the finish. I missed my dinner, and I want to go on record as saying that if that's a sample of Ivan Abramson's work we are going to hear a whole lot more of Ivan Abramson, and it won't be long.

THIS BOY HAD NEVER SEEN A WOMAN. HE KNEW NOTHING OF SEX, OR OF THE REAL WORLD. ALL OF THE LIFE HE COULD REMEMBER WAS SPENT ON A SECLUDED ESTATE. THEN HE RETURNED HOME TO FIND HIS PARENTS SEPARATED BY AN UNGRATEFUL BUT ALLURING FIEND-GIRL. HOW WAS HE TO PROCEED? HOW OVERCOME THE LURE OF SEX? This Industry and This Publication

A DISTURBING and confused situation exists right now in Times square.

It emanates from the headquarters of the New York local of the Exhibitors' League, which also are the headquarters of the National Exhibitors' League and its threads concern other local exhibitor organizations, exchanges, producers, trade papers and individuals.

WE have been earnestly besought by a number of honest-minded gentlemen, who approach the subject from various angles, to state in print many facts, which as yet are only talked about, patent facts, however, which obviously, in the interests of justice to all, should see the light of day.

Our own impulse, we must confess, is to report the situation in full. This impulse is based upon the same righteous indignation that moves a citizen to report a public wrong.

AS publishers, however, and as an independent and integral part of this industry, we feel differently.

Happily the politics of Times Square are of little import to the exhibitors of this wide country, our readers; and furthermore the continuous convulsions of Times Square are only tempests in a teapot as compared with the onward rush of an industry so great that great economic laws, and these alone, can and will guide its true progress.

AS publishers we are concerned primarily with the business interests of our readers and with the large and true development of this industry.

We believe in and we pin our faith to the future of the motion picture. Our faith in this future is far greater and our concept of it clearer now than ever before.

WE believe that the industry at present is in a vast confusion. But we believe just as firmly that it will, with the patience of all concerned and despite the muddling efforts of many within it, clear itself and find itself in a very large way.

* * *

IF we can let any light in upon this great and important industrial development, that, we take it, is our prime function. We have no editorial space to waste upon politics, insignificant bickerings, and especially upon local dirt.

Our reader at large, we take it, is primarily interested in his own business. His interests therefore are our interests.

THESE business interests of the exhibitor concern us first. His pitcures, what kind he should have for his particular clientele, how he shall judge their box-office value, what and how he should pay for them, what he should charge for them, how he can most successfully advertise them—these problems editorially and in a news way are primarily our concern.

IT is on these problems that we are working. There is much to be done—much light to be let in, much construction to follow. But we are doing this work and we shall continue it and amplify it. We shall continue to secure definite figures, to analyze and present them.

* * *

WE believe that the industry today is leaning upon the exhibitor.

The appalling weakness and waste in distribution, the equally amazing expense and inadequacy of production—these are burdened largely and wrongly upon his shoulders.

IMPOSSIBLE policies are devised in New York and their impossibility loaded upon the exhibitor. He is told to buy the goods and then by the help of himself alone and heaven above to bring in the returns to justify the outlay demanded of him.

THIS is wrong, economically wrong—and therefore it cannot last.

This must and will be a legitimate business, whether those within it want it to be such or not. Its very size demands regularity and legitimacy, and its very size will place it right alongside of other great industries. This is inevitable. The gambling element, the short-sighted element, the get-the-money-quick-and-any-way element within the industry must give way to the industry's own bigness and true development.

IN other legitimate businesses the dealer's welfare—in this industry the exhibitor is the dealer—is held highest. The manufacturer awakens or helps awaken the interest of the public—he helps bring the public to the dealer's door, he helps secure prompt, full and economic distribution of the goods—he helps to keep production cost down; in other words he aims through co-operation all along the line of the goods to make a legitimate profit for the dealer and therefore one for himself.

This is the one true way.

Look for Fred Herrington

WE are advised by Fred J. Herrington, national organizer of the M. P. E. L. of America, that he is leaving in a week or two for a tour of some of the western states in the interests of exhibitor organization.

HE will cover those states in which adverse legislation is confidently expected from state legislatures soon to meet. Mr. Herrington's trip is well-timed.

It is not necessary for us to emphasize the fact that adverse legislation in many states will certainly be offered. The exhibitors in these states must be well aware that a grave danger is imminent.

ALSO we need not point out the equally obvious fact that organized exhibitor effort is absolutely necessary to oppose and defeat this threatened legislation. Exhibitors this year should have an additional incentive to organize and fight in the knowledge that the National Association of the industry exists to back solidly their efforts.

* * *

FOR Fred Herrington we repeat what we have said of him before. We believe in his conscientious, unselfish and capable fighting ability. Exhibitors everywhere can count upon his experience and enthusiasm as the nucleus of an organization that will do things for them.

Pictures and Exports

IT is a well-known fact that the European nations have secured their trade supremacy in South America and other countries by first investigating closely the needs and machinery of the market, and then producing the kinds of goods wanted in the way they were wanted.

* * *

IT is equally well known that this country has failed in the same markets by reversing this logical process. Our production and sale of export goods have been based upon our own conception of demand and not upon the customers.

* * *

THERE'S a close analogy between the situation and the production and sale of pictures.

New York produces pictures from New York's conception of pictures—largely a Broadway conception. New York distributes and rents pictures from New York's own financial viewpoint.

ISN'T it about time we find out just what kind of pictures are wanted in Bakersfield, California; Alliance, Iowa; Lafayette, Indiana; Selma, Alabama; Fitchburg, Mass.; Brownsville, Texas, and a few others of the seven thousand towns. The box-office receipts of those theatres keep this industry going.

* * *

ALSO it might be well to investigate what is a reasonable film rental for these various grades of theatres and how they can do business without C.O.D. shipments of film. These theatres are not quite as far away as South America.

The Local Exhibitors' League

OUR present faith in exhibitor organization is pinned firmly to the local organization, be it city, state or sectional. We believe it should maintain its identity and continue and increase the excellent work it is doing for its members in many localities.

These organizations are doing constructive work; they are helping their members; they are and always will be highly necessary because of their intimate touch with local conditions. We believe, too, that the constructive work to be done by the National League will be largely a sum total of the constructive efforts and strength of the local organizations. They deserve to and should preserve their identity.

This Industry and This Publication

THE manufacturer cannot bring it about by flattery, kind words, false promises, specious offers, or by liberal contributions directly or indirectly to exhibitor organizations.

Exhibitor organizations cannot bring it about through balls and expositions. They cannot bring it about if their whole or even part effort is spent in their own politics, or in business enterprises in which their officers or a few members are also engaged for personal profits. Such moves have and will disrupt any trade organization. They cannot bring it about by swinging blindly a cancellations club. They cannot bring about the good of the individual member—and this is their one duty—unless they do wholly one thing, namely: constructive work in an open-minded, intelligent, legitimate way toward the economic betterment of the individual member's business.

THE trade paper, also, cannot bring about the exhibitor's welfare and therefore the industry's welfare, unless it too keeps its columns free of politics and its vision clear enough to see and outline true progress, unless it too is wholly constructive, independently, honestly and capably.

We believe we have made clear our belief in this industry and our own position to it. This paper was founded and will continue along these lines as set forth.

Essanay Inaugurates Time-Run Startling Innovation

Will No Longer Classify Length of Pictures by Reels, but by Length of Time It Takes to Show Them—George K. Spoor Explains Reasons for Change—Also Believes in Box-Office Value of Short Subjects

THE Essanay Company has ceased to make photoplays by reels. George K. Spoor, president, has inaugurated the system of putting out photoplays according to the time they take to run on the screen.

In the future Essanay plays will not be announced in reels or acts but by their screen time. As the average reel takes about sixteen and a half minutes to be thrown on the screen at a normal rate of speed, the exhibitor can readily judge the footage of the picture, if he cares to know.

It is Mr. Spoor's idea that the spectators at the theatre care nothing about the number of reels, but are anxious to know what is the length of time a picture will run.

There is still another and more fundamental reason why Mr. Spoor decided to disregard the reel lengths and to adopt the system of screen time.

"Since the advent of the feature into the motion picture business the public has been differentiating between pictures by length rather than by quality," said Mr. Spoor. "There are short films that are just as much entitled to the name of feature as the long ones. I have seen three-reel photoplays which were as strong as any longer feature and much stronger than many.

Story to Run Right Length

"It has been a question of chopping down a story to make it in two or three reels or padding it out for five or more to make a feature out of it. Essanay will not do this. The story will run for just what it is worth and no more. If the plot can be carried out in three reels and a half it will run that long and not longer. If it is necessary to carry a footage of five thousand and five hundred feet or more it will get that footage.

"The exhibitor and the public can judge its length by our announcement of its screen time, the length of time it takes to project it. I think that the sooner the manufacturers realize that the public is not entirely feature mad, the better it will be for the exhibitor's business and for the manufacturer. I believe that exhibitors are anxious for the shorter stories of real merit and it is up to the manufacturer to supply them.

"In my opinion there is a large percentage of the public that would welcome shorter photoplays. The motion picture business was built up very largely on its informality. If a man and his wife wanted an hour or a half's entertainment they would drop into a motion picture theatre. If they see the screen time of a play marked at thirty-six minutes, or whatever it is, they will drop in for that time.

"The exhibitor also has the advantage of advertising more than one star, when he has two or more good short plays. I believe that the exhibitor who plays for this class of business will be on the road to success.

"This does not mean that I am opposed to the five or more reel feature, because I am not. Essanay will continue to get out features of five thousand feet and more, but it will make each story the length it requires to tell it and will not conform to the antiquated method of making it a positive reel length.

"There is no reason why a feature should not be in three thousand feet just as well as five thousand. If the story is strong enough it is just as much of a feature as one three times as long.

"The reason for judging films by reels no longer exists. It used to be that theatres were compelled to stop after one thousand feet to put on another reel. The majority of theatres now have two or more projecting machines and do not carry any title with part two or three.

"There is no logical reason for calling a film by acts. There is no necessity to shift scenery as on the speaking stage. The photoplay is one continuous story and should be so run. The only thing of importance to the public is the length of time it takes to show it."

Beecroft in Charge of Overseas Distributing Company

Eastern Representative of the American Film Company Resigns to Devote His Attention to Market American-Mutual Productions, and Other Suitable Films, Abroad

THE resignation of Chester Beecroft as Eastern representative of the American Film Company is announced from that company's office, effective at the end of this week. The step is taken by Mr. Beecroft to enable him to put into independent action a plan of foreign distribution which will bring maximum returns to the manufacturer.

Mr. Beecroft's new connection is with the Overseas Distributing Company of America, an organization which has made arrangements to market American Film Company-Mutual productions abroad through the foremost foreign distributors. Mr. Beecroft will also continue to handle the sale of the Chaplin-Mutual pictures in foreign countries and will in addition deal in the product of any other high class film companies looking for the widest foreign market.

The proposition is worked out on a bigger and broader scale than has been applied before in marketing films abroad and every indication is that it will be a huge financial success. Mr. Beecroft will be located for the present at 71 West Twenty-third street, New York.

Harry H. Poppe and Eleanor O'Keefe, who were associated with Mr. Beecroft during his term as general manager for David Horsley, and who have been with him in the American Film Company's office, will go along with him in his new venture.

Chester Beecroft has been a brilliant success since his entry into the film business. He first drew attention as advertising manager of the Patents Company, the first great combination in the business. Later as advertising and publicity manager of the General Film Company, he wrote a startling line of copy in the interests of that releasing concern's product. These advertisements were so compelling that even though five years have passed since they were written they are still frequently referred to as among the finest examples of film advertising ever printed in the trade papers.

After leaving the General, Mr. Beecroft wrote publicity and advertising matter for David Horsley, who was then re-entering the film business after a brief retirement. Here again, the strength of his pen became evident, and after a spectacular campaign Mr. Horsley climbed back into a far stronger position in the film business than he had held before his retirement.

Appreciating the value of his services, Mr. Horsley appointed Mr. Beecroft his general manager, an office which he handled with such good judgment and in which he was so remarkably successful that John R. Freuler offered him the post of the New York representative of the American Film Company and full charge of the American-Mutual and Chaplin-Mutual export business, together with the responsibility of other important duties. Mr. Beecroft accepted and, as in previous positions, made a big success out of the undertaking.

One of his notable achievements in this position was the sale of the rights to the Mutual-Chaplin releases in the United Kingdom for a sum equal to more than half of the total salary the Lone Star Company is paying the famous comedian.

BALL FOR BRONX LOCAL ON NOVEMBER 6

On Monday, November 6th, the Cinema and Exhibitors Association, Bronx Local No. 2, M. P. E. L. of America, will hold their annual movie entertainment and ball at Hunts Point Palace.

The motion picture used in the entertainment will be projected on the "Atmospheric" screen furnished by the Atmospheric Screen Company, Inc., 220 West 42nd street, New York City.

At the close of the ball this screen will be auctioned off to the highest bidder as is the usual custom. The screen auctioned off at last year's entertainment after being shown to the many exhibitors present was sold to John Wittman, president of the above named Association and is now being used at the El Dorado theatre in the Bronx.

RESERVE PHOTOPLAY IN HANDS OF A RECEIVER

Greater Vitagraph Releases Complete to Feb. 17

Exceedingly Strong Group of Pictures and Stars for Latter Part of This Year and Beginning of Next

IT is a considerable source of satisfaction to the executives of the Greater Vitagraph to be able to announce that the following features will constitute its programs for the months of November, December and January.

There have been a few changes in the release dates for November and December since the last complete announcement was made. Such changes, however, have not only strengthened the program as here revised, but have provided a wider variety of stories and stars.

Coincident with the publication of this news, the exhibitors using first-run Vitagraphs will be showing "The Devil's Prize," a modern production, the story of the downfall of a man who defies the laws of humanity, written and directed by Marguerite Bertsch.

On the 13th of November Marc MacDermott makes his second appearance as a Greater Vitagraph star in "The Price of Fame," a dual role production. Charles Brabin, the director, has handled the double exposure work with nicety and precision. Playing opposite Mr. MacDermott is Naomi Childers.

Lillian Walker lends her charming personality to "The Dollar and the Law," which is released on Nov. 20. This is the production for which Irvin Cobb wrote the scenario, the first bit of screen writing this famous author has ever done.

On the last Monday in November E. H. Sothern will be presented in his second screen appearance in "An Enemy of the King," the stage play by Robert N. Stevens. No stronger combination could possibly be secured, exhibitors will find, than in advertising E. H. Sothern and Edith Storey as the stars of this Blue Ribbon feature. Mr. Sothern's name and fame should act as a box office magnet, while Miss Storey's popularity is too well recognized to be questioned.

On the 4th of December Peggy Hyland and Antonio Moreno will be starred in "Rose of the South," written by Arthur Train. "Rose of the South" will take motion picture enthusiasts back to Civil War days and furnish ample opportunity for Peggy Hyland's winsome beauty and Antonio Moreno's dramatic acting to show to the best advantage. It was directed by Paul Scardon.

On Dec. 11 the Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchanges will release "The Enemy," by George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester. This is a powerful preachment against drink. Peggy Hyland is featured in this production for the week of the 11th. She is supported by Evart Overton and Charles Kent.

On Dec. 18 "Whom the Gods Destroy," written by Commodore Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady, will be released. A trio of stars will help exhibitors make money with this picture. These stars are Alice Joyce, Harry Morey and Marc MacDermott. Mother Maurice, Charles Kent, Thomas R. Mills and Logan Paul are the remaining members of the cast.

On Christmas Day patrons of the first-run Vitagraph houses will have an opportunity again of seeing Lucille Lee Stewart. William Courtney is the co-star with Miss Stewart, and his interpretation of the hero's part in this thrilling railroad story is everything that exhibitors or fans might wish for, "The Ninety and Nine" will be recalled by old theatre-goers as the play by Ramsey Morris that thrilled them in their younger days. From a box-office standpoint it has everything—stars, story, good direction—to insure success.

On the first day of the New Year Greater Vitagraph will present Earle Williams in a five-part production entitled "The Soul Master." This story was written by James Oliver Curwood and its direction has been in the hands of Marguerite Bertsch.

The second release of the New Year, Jan. 8, is "Indiscretion," from the original story by William Addison Lathrop, directed by Wilfrid North. The heroine is a modern day "Topsy"—an adorable, impulsive young girl, who, when she is left to rear herself, innocently plays with fire without any realization of her danger. There is really but one actress appearing in Greater Vitagraph productions who could do this part justice, and she plays it with all the dash and fire for which her work is noted—Lillian Walker. Miss Walker will have the benefit of a splendid support cast, including Walter McGrail, Tom Mills and Mother Maurice.

On Jan. 15 "The Little Brown Sparrow," from an original synopsis by Paul West, picturized by A. Van Buren Powell and directed by Paul Scardon, will be released. Antonio Moreno and Peggy Hyland are the stars, supported by a cast which includes John Robertson, Julia Swayne Gordon, Bobby and Helen Connelly, Jack Ellis, Mildred Platz and Mrs. Costello.

On the last Monday in February three of Vitagraph's most popular stars are presented in the story by Hamlin Garland entitled "Money Magic." Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno and William Duncan are now working in Vitagraph's Western studios on this production which is being directed by William Wolbert.

"AS YE SOW," FROM SELIG, BECOMES "SO SHALL YE REAP"

It has been decided to change the name of the Selig picture, "As Ye Sow," scheduled for release through General Film Service, November 6th, to "So Shall Ye Reap." The cast in this production is made up of Robyn Adair, Virginia Kirtley, Eugenie Forde, Lillian Hamilton and E. J. Brady. The scenario is credited to Leo D. Maloney and Leo Pierson.

Governor Whitman Defines Position on Censorship

Tells Delegation from National Association and Exhibitors' League That Future State Regulations Will Depend on Manner in Which Business Is Conducted

GOVERNOR WHITMAN and Congressman W. M. Calder, the Republican candidate for the United States Senate from New York, met a representative committee from the motion picture industry last Tuesday for the purpose of expressing their views on censorship.

The Governor made it plain to representatives of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America that all future regulations of motion pictures would depend upon the conduct of the men engaged in the industry.

The Governor pointed out that as industries grew the responsibility for the proper conduct of those industries increased to the same degree and that the men controlling the industry should be quick to realize the necessity of so conducting their affairs that there should be no need for regulation by law. Future conduct of the directors of the industry will govern future policy with respect to regulation, he added, in emphasizing the fact that he would not bind his future action on the subject.

Congressman William M. Calder, candidate for United States Senator, told the delegation that he chose to remain a free agent at all times. He subscribed heartily to the expression of Governor Whitman that all regulation of the industry in the last analysis depended upon the conduct of the business by those interested in it. He complimented the present system of motion picture regulation as administered in New York City by License Commissioner Bell and said that, as a senator from New York, he could vote in the broad spirit of New York institutions.

Among those present were: Walter W. Irwin, Greater Vitagraph, V-L-S-E.; Samuel H. Trigger, Tremont theatre, New York; Lee A. Ochs, president Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America; Mr. Arthur James, Metro Pictures Corporation; J. Robert Lubin, A. S. Le Vino, Fred H. Hawley, Motion Picture Directory; Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and I. N. Hartstall, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THOMPSON'S WAR PICTURES BOUGHT BY UNCLE SAM

After the remarkable war pictures taken by Donald C. Thompson were shown at the Army and Navy Club, Washington, D. C., the officers completed a deal whereby Mr. Thompson supplies the Army and Navy war colleges with prints of his pictures. The officers were astounded when shown the pictures, as scenes never before exhibited in public were incorporated in the reels. The Army and Navy officials immediately saw the advantage of the United States government possessing such films, and as a consequence the sale was effected.

Wilson Campaign Pictures Unqualified Success

Sam Spedon, National Motion Picture Campaigner, Tells of His Experiences with Motion Pictures in Presidential Campaign. Pictures Enthusiastically Received in Middle West

"THE introduction of moving pictures in a national campaign was something so new that some of the campaign committees looked questionably upon the proposition we had to show them."

This was the beginning of the following statement made by Sam Spedon, the well-known motion picture expert and advertising man, who was the field representative of Motion Picture Forum, Inc., producers of the motion pictures of the Wilson campaign.

"When I reached Chicago to introduce the picture of 'President Wilson and his Cabinet, the United States Government in Action,' the M. P. League, of which Sam a member, received me in open meeting, attended by two hundred exhibtors. After stating my mission to Illinois, the readiness with which they met the Forum's offer to loan the exhibitors of Illinois the free use of the picture dispelled all doubts of the campaign managers—and my own.

"If the exhibitors had any doubts of my statements of the character of the picture, being free from all partisan bias and anything which might arouse animosity, I gave a private showing at the Ziegfeld theatre on Michigan boulevard to the press and the exhibitors that they might judge for themselves. This showing created a still greater demand for it and it became necessary to establish an exclusive exchange to distribute the films and circulate publicity. Within two weeks we had listed over two hundred theatres in Illinois and given twice as many showings. The additonal bookings since then, Oct. 14, are so great I doubt if we have enough prints at our Chicago office to fill the demands before Election Day.

"My experience in Ohio and Indiana, although we only had three weeks in Ohio and two in Indiana, was practically the same. In Ohio we have booked two hundred showings and in Indiana over three hundred, some of the theatres running the picture two, three and five days. The picture was well received, generally with great applause. In some instances it was received with respectful and studious interest, and if shown at any time, other than previous to Election Day, it would have been looked upon purely as a picture of national and educational interest.

"The high tone, the dignity of the picture won the picturegoing public's respect as characteristic of President Wilson's campaign methods. It was also indicative of the general sentiment of the public towards the selection of Mr. Wilson.

"I estimate that the picture has been seen in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio by at least two millions of people and in New York State by about five millions. Of course we are counting in Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota and Oklahoma, where our films were distributed by the local campaign managers.

"In Indianapolis Mr. Bernard Korbley, the state campaign manager, is a motion picture fan and he entered into my efforts in Indiana with refreshing enthusiasm. After the work was under way he rented a large vacant store in Washington street, near Pennsylvania, and before the end of the week we had a free moving picture theatre, showing "President Wilson and His Cabinet" and the patriotic cartoon, "Peace, Preparedness and Prosperity," alternately fading into real scenes of peace, preparedness and prosperity, showing the railroad yards, the navy yards, farms and factories as the cartoon progressed. The show is given every day from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. and nothing but the pictures, no campaign harrangues. It was wonderful to see men and women step from the busy thoroughfare and spend an instructive and entertaining half hour.

"Tomlinson Hall on Market Street, seating five thousand, is open every other night this week simply showing these pictures and speaking volumes more impressively than tongues could tell them.

"From my experience with motion pictures in this campaign, I am convinced that no one can deduct the great uses to which they will be put and the power they will wield in the educating of the people and the affairs of the nation."

LANDAU TO BOOK LATEST STEGER PICTURE

Arthur M. Landau, until recently supervisor of sales with the Universal Film Company, is in charge of the booking of Julius Steger's new production "The Libertine."

Mr. Landau has had a number of years' experience, during which time he held responsible positions first in the various departments of the World Film Corporation, and later with the Universal Film Company, and is well versed in both sides of the industry.

"THE MEDIATOR" FROM FOX ON NOVEMBER 13

William Fox will release "TheMediator" on November 13.

"The Mediator" has been adapted from Roy Norton's famous book of the same name. George Walsh, the hero of "The Beast," makes a memorable figure of Lish Henley, persistent pacifist, who wants peace so whole-heartedly that he spends his life battling for it.

Juanita Hansen, who makes her screen debut under William Fox in this picture, heads the unusually capable cast in support of Mr. Walsh.

Otis Turner directed the production, his first for William Fox. Mr. Turner took his company of sixty-four actors into the high Sierras for "location" work."

First Subject from Art Dramas Is Set for Release on 27th

"I Have Been Asked by Several Exhibitors Whether We Could Actually Make Pictures of Excellent Quality and Still Ask Low Price; We Can," Says Compnay Officila

THE first release of the newly organized Art Dramas Company, which will distribute the productions of the William L. Sherrill Feature Corporation, the U. S. Amusement Corporation, the Erbograph Company and the Van Dyke Film Productions Corporation, has been announced for Nov. 27. It is understood, however, that this date is only tentative and will not be made absolute until the four producing companies have enough pictures completed to ensure the meeting of their weekly release obligations.

One of the officials of the Art Dramas Company, in speaking of their policy of making high-grade productions to be rented at moderate prices, said:

"I have been asked by several exhibitors whether we actually could make pictures of excellent quality and still ask less for them than the other programs do. My answer is yes, most emphatically. We intend to go further than that. We intend to give our exhibitors better pictures than they get on some of the other programs.

"The producers of Art Dramas have not undertaken to make more pictures than they can do well. That means that every production will be made carefully, and that sufficient time will be given to the making of each one. There will be no pictures on our program rushed out in a hurry whether it be ready or not. Every picture must measure up to our standard of quality and also to the standard of our distributors. We can easily afford to do this, because of the two big savings that we shall effect. For one, we shall employ no stars at prohibitive salaries. This does not mean, though, that our players will not be good. They will. But they will not get more than they can earn, as is the case with a number of companies.

"Our other great saving will be made in our method of distribution. Eliminating the middleman, as we have done, we have reduced the charge against a picture from twenty per cent. to thirty-five per cent. This saving, together with our saving on the players' salaries, will, without a doubt, enable us to sell good pictures at a price that will enable the exhibitor to make a profit every time he shows an Art Dramas production.

RADIO FILM OFFERS "SATAN"

The Radio Film Company, 1446 Broadway, New York City, is offering for release a six-reel production entitled "Satan." It deals with the woe wrought by this allegorical personage from the time of Christ until the present and is said to be a well-acted and dramatic piece of workmanship.

The various sets of characters that come in contact with Satan succumb to his tricks and wiles. The modern story is dealt with in the fourth and fifth reels of the production and shows how luxury begets unrestrained lust and violence.

Triangle Turns the First Birthday Mark

Rothapfel, Who Has Been Running Triangles at the Rialto for Almost a Year, Congratulates President Aitken on the Quality of the Productions—Other Prominent Exhibitors Throughout the Country Make Favorable Comments on the Pictures

MONDAY, November 6, marked the first birthday of Triangle. It was just a year ago that the new organization with Harry E. Aitken at its head began the distribution of the products of the Fine Arts, Kay Bee and Keystone studios, on one program—a release of two dramas and two comedies each week.

The end of Triangle's first year and the beginning of its second were bridged over by a structure of enduring soundness—the written and telegraphed congratulations, indorsement and good wishes of several hundred Triangle exhibitors, scattered throughout the states of the union. Some two or three score of these appear in a special double-size number of the Triangle magazine, issued in commemoration of the anniversary.

S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto theatre, wrote as follows:

"As you are about to publish the anniversary number of the Triangle, I take this opportunity to tell you that I have been running Triangle pictures at the Knickerbocker and Rialto for almost one year. I have been in close touch with all of the pictures on the market, and I am compelled to state that for consistency and general excellence. the Triangle program is today without serious competition.

"I attribute the remarkable success of the Rialto, in a great measure, to the excellent service supplied by the Triangle."

Dean and Rhoades' Views on Triangle

From Dean and Rhoades, managers of the Gilham Amusement Company, of Kansas City, Mo., came the following:

"We believe we are best qualified to testify concerning the work of Triangle productions in Kansas City, because we are the only theatre in Kansas City that has used, without break, every play released, and some of them several times. Our faith in Triangle directors and their ideas has been more than justified, and today we and our patrons esteem Triangle plays so highly that we place them in a class by themselves.

"Appeal of story, strength of acting, ability of directing, magnificence of costumes and setting are well-nigh perfectly exemplified in every picture bearing the Triangle trademark. Our patrons long since learned that a Triangle is synonymous with the highest standard of motion picture art. To comment on the rich fun of the Triangle-Keystones is as futile as trying to paint the lily."

William Freedman, managing director of the Metropolitan theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, sent a brief but telling message:

"Metropolitan theatre was for three years the biggest lemon in town. For the past year we have been running Triangle pictures—we wish you could see the crowds now."

Triangle's first year has been marked by many unique achievements in the field of production. Douglas Fairbanks, making his screen debut as a Triangle performer, has shot to the very forefront of the ranks of screen stars, with a rapidity never equalled in the history of the motion picture. William S. Hart has steadily impressed his powerful personality upon the picture-going populace until his name and face are known wherever pictures are shown.

Bessie Barriscale has become, under Triangle direction, one of the greatest drawing cards among all the women stars of the screen. Bessie Love has walked straight from school into the hearts of thousands, who watch for her every picture. Louise Glaum as a siren of the shadow stage has stepped into the very inner circle of "vampire" art. Mae Marsh's ability as an emotional actress is becoming more and more the subject of comment by critics who realize the solid value of good acting in the building of screen success.

C. Gardner Sullivan's Rise

At the Triangle-Kay Bee studio one of the most noteworthy performances in picture play history has been recorded in the meteoric rise to fame of C. Gardner Sullivan, one of the first authors to attain real dramatic eminence through the medium of the photoplay. One after another, Sullivan, formerly a New York newspaper man, has turned out five-reel dramas that have gained both popular favor and the most favorable critical comment.

In the ranks of the Triangle-Fine Arts players a little group of performers stands unique, and has gained more and more eminence throughout the year. These are the Triangle "kiddies," the only group of children working together continuously in one picture after another, and showing dramatic ability as well in their scenes with one another as when playing opposite the older actors.

Keystone comedies have reached a point of development, under Triangle auspices, which has placed them admittedly in a class quite by themselves. The seemingly impossible feats performed by Mabel Normand, Roscoe Arbuckle, Louise Fazenda, Mack Swain and other daredevils of the Keystone studio have no explanation—they simply are, and many exhibitors assert in their congratulatory telegrams to Triangle, that they can find nothing else in their class.

President Aitken's commentary on Triangle's anniversary was:

"We are glad our exhibitors feel as their telegrams show they do about the year that is past. We expect to produce better pictures during our second year."

Fox Has Nine Different Productions in the Works

Ten Stars Hard at Work in the New Jersey Studios—Einar Linden Breaks Into Poetry and Writes a Pean to Theda Bara's Eyes

NINE different productions, five in the East and four in the West, are being filmed now by William Fox's directorial staff.

The stars acting in the New Jersey studios are Theda Bara, June Caprice, Virginia Pearson, Valeska Suratt and Gladys Coburn; across the continent, William Farnum, Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh, and Alan Hale and Gretchen Hartman, who will be featured together in a forthcoming photoplay.

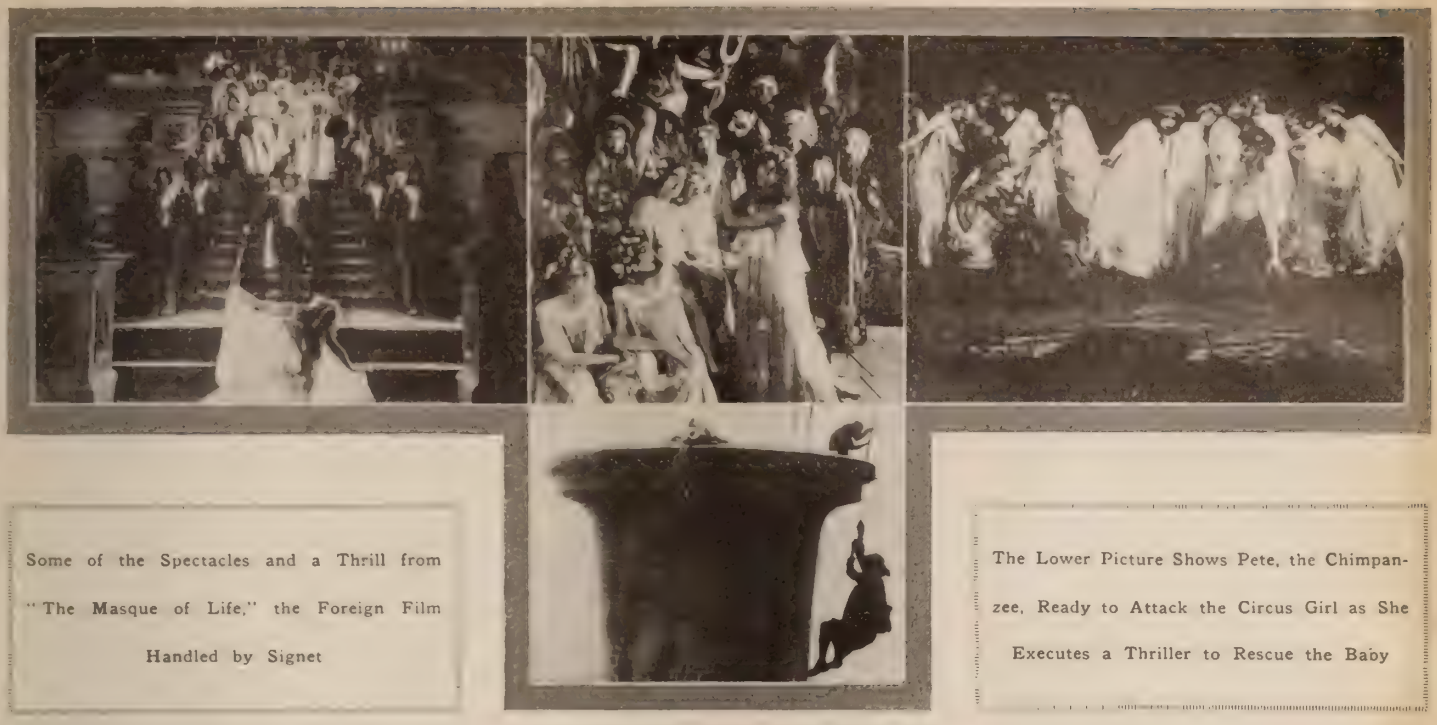
Miss Bara's picture will present an extraordinarily capable cast. Chief among her supporting players are Walter Law, Einar Linden, Glen White, John Webb Dillion and Alice Gale, all of whom had prominent roles in William Fox's picturization of "Romeo and Juliet."

Einar Linden was so enchanted by Theda Bara's wonderful eyes that he has written the music for a song dedicated to the distinguished actress, under the title of "Those Perilous Eyes."

One of New York's well known music publishers will soon have the publication on sale. Mr. Linden is not a tyro in this field, by any means as he wrote both music and libretto for the operetta, "Le Jardinier," and was a noted figure in European grand opera before he came to the legitimate stage.

Valeska Suratt's photoplay, under the direction of Will S. Davis is proceeding rapidly. Herbert Heyes has the part opposite. Others in the cast are Claire Whitney, John Charles, Joseph Granby, Charles Edwards and Oscar Nye.

"Jealousy," a recently completed Suratt screen play, is released by William Fox on November 20.



William Sheer, remembered, among other things, for his portrayal of Skinny, the Rat, in "The Regeneration," has a character part in the new Gladys Coburn picture and will do several daring stunts.

Virginia Pearson is doing a film which deals in part with prison life. One of the novel studio sets erected for it last week showed the girls' workship on Blackwell's Island.

Reed Heustis, publicity representative for the Fox Film Corporation on the Pacific Coast, is the author of the scenario which Frank Lloyd has in work for Gladys Brockwell.

SOTHERN DRAWS CROWDED HOUSES

While Minneapolis has always shown a partiality for the regular film stars her theatre-goers have a keen interest in stars of the speaking stage and an especial interest in E. H. Sothern whose "If I Were King," will always be remembered. His first appearance on the screen in "The Chattel," was the occasion for crowded houses at the Lyric for the week. Minneapolis wants to see more of Sothern.

Some of the Spectacles and a Thrill from "The Masque of Life," the Foreign Film Handled by Signet

The Lower Picture Shows Pete, the Chimpanzee, Ready to Attack the Circus Girl as She Executes a Thriller to Rescue the Baby

ANCHOR FILM BEGINS ITS FIRST PICTURE

The Anchor Film Corporation, chartered in Freeport, New York, has begun work on its first production, "Hell Hath No Fury—" in which Grace Davidson will be starred. Miss Davidson already has had experience before the camera, while her natural talent and beauty assure her marked success in the featured part of the production.

"Hell Hath No Fury—" will be produced under the direction of a man well known in the motion picture trade from a story written by James A. Stiles, who besides being well known in theatrical and newspaper circles, is a member of the board of directors and holds the position of general manager of the company.

The Anchor Film Corporation owns its own property on South Main street, Freeport, L. I., where its present plans embrace the production of six five-reel features during the coming year to be released on the open market. The officers and directors of the company are: Smith Cox, president and treasurer; William C. Miller, vice-president; Franklin C. Granger, secretary, while Mr. Stiles and Raymond Miller complete the directorate.

SEVENTY-FIRST ATTENDS "BOOTS AND SADDLES"

The premier showing of the B. S. Moss photodrama, "Boots and Saddles," a screen version of Eugene Walter's great play at the New York theatre on the 26th, was marked by a visit of the Seventy-first Regiment of the National Guard of New York, who marched in a body to see this photodrama, whose locale is laid on the Mexican border, for the past few months the campaigning ground of the regiment. Here they saw on the screen many of the scenes through which they lived for several months. The families and friends of the guardsmen were present, and all in all, it was a gala evening for the regiment.

"Civilization" Rights Sold in Five Big States

Joseph M. Gaites, Well-Known Theatrical Manager, Buys Rights for Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, West Virginia and Delaware—Sale Made by Hiller and Wilk

THE A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., have bought the rights to "Civilization in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, West Virginia and Delaware at a price said to be very close to $250,000.

The competition for this territory was keen and sustained, dozens of foresighted experts fully aware of the enormous drawing power of the Ince spectacle offered large sums for the states named above. None, however, was in a position to take them all in one group at the terms demanded by the owners. It was due to the persistent efforts of Messrs. Hiller and Wilk, brokers in the transaction, that the deal was finally consummated after three months of ceaseless negotiations.

Already, under the management of Joseph M. Gaites, the offices of the A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., are being swamped with inquiries, offers and bonuses for this production, and Mr. Gaites is organizing a campaign of publicity and promotion in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia that will be a model of efficiency, dignity and truth worthy of the world's foremost example of the motion picture art. Managers everywhere in the United States seem to be fully aware that Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization" transcends in cost of production, in reproachless motive, in historic and educational value, and in sheer beauty any of the few great spectacles ever projected on the screen. The people of New York and the other cities where it has been shown were unanimous in their emphatic approval of the amazing picture.

Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization" is the one great film-spectacle that has for all its intensely human appeal, its astounding scope of subject and its reverential suggestion of Divine guidance for mankind, does not for an instant trench upon racial prejudices, sectional antagonism or sectarian beliefs. It speaks with equal power and truth to all races, all sects, all classes of men, women and children, and because of this universal appeal "Civilization" will be as potential in every city, town and hamlet in America or Europe as it has already proved itself to be in the few great cities where it has been shown.

The New York offices of the A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., are at 907 Longacre Building, and the Philadelphia offices at 1225 Vine street. Other offices will be opened by the Fontana corporation in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Baltimore.

RUSSELL WILL REMAIN WITH AMERICAN FILM ANOTHER YEAR

William F. Russell, featured in Mutual Masterpieces, is to remain with the American Company for another year, as contract for this period has just been made with the popular screen actor by President Samuel S. Hutchinson.

Mr. Russell is one of the first legitimate stage actors to give up a career there for the screen, and his first work was under the Biograph banner. He went to the American Company early in 1915 to play a featured part in "The Diamond from the Sky" serial in sixty reels. But recently he completed work in a sequel to this well known serial. For more than a year past Mr Russell has played the leading part, and directed the production of a number of American five-reel subjects. Some of his recent releases are: "Soul Mates," "The Highest Bid," "The Strength of Donald McKinsey," "The Man Who Would Not Die," "The Torch Bearer," and "The Love Hermit." His coming release is "Lone Star."

Mr. Russell is one of the most popular stars of the Mutual program according to reports from exchanges and the big mail he receives daily.

Morosco Photoplay Reaches Its Second Birthday

Among the Most Prominent Stars Who Have Appeared in the Pictures Brought Out by the Company, of Which Cecil B. De Mille Recently Became President, Are Anna Held, Lenore Ulrich, George Beban, Kathlyn Williams, Myrtle Stedman and Fritzi Scheff

NOVEMBER 9th marks the second anniversary of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company. From its inception in the motion picture industry this company took its place in the front ranks of feature producers and has continued on its steady course, always striving to better its high standard of product which it established from the beginning.

Through it success in improving its own high mark of excellence in productions and its departure from the conventional the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company has proved itself to be an important factor in the advancement of the general tone of the photoplay industry. It has been responsible for making the appearances on the screen of many internationally famous stars of the stage possible and has established many new ideas in the way of novel effects, settings and studio stagecraft.

Some of the perfection evidenced in its photoplays on the Paramount Program is due to the application of the best known efficiency methods to the mechanical end of the company's studios in Los Angeles. Those who are familiar with the old time conditions at the studios still marvel at the businesslike manner and lack of waste at this West Coast plant. Then again, productions are staged here with a thoroughness rarely noticeable elsewhere, even at this time of modern film art. For instance, it is the company's policy to insist on exact reproductions, both as to sets and furnishings, or the things they portray. Sets are built, not faked with cheap substitutes. The fact that the art and technical departments of these studios, as well as the manufacturing department, are in a class by themselves is admitted by all professional people in the Los Angeles districts.

Among the most prominent stars who have been presented on the screen by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company are Anna Held, Lenore Ulrich, George Beban, Kathlyn Williams, Myrtle Stedman, Fritzi Scheff, Rita Jolivet, Vivian Martin, Constance Collier, Lois Meredith, Elsie Janis, George Fawcett, Cyril Maude, Blanche Ring, Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant, and others of equal fame. Among its releases are included such well known successes as "Pasquale," "The Heart of Paula," "Peer Gynt," "Kilmeny," "Help Wanted," "The Tongues of Men" and "The Code of Marcia Gray."

The selection of Cecil B. De Mille to the Presidency of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company as announced recently, speaks well for the further advancement of this brand of screen plays as well as the industry in general. Mr. De Mille, one of the four organizers of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, has evidenced on the screen since the inception of that company the fact that he is a master of photoplay production. That the future output of the Morosco studios may confidently be expected to be greatly enhanced as a result of this affiliation is readily appreciated. Two years is not a long time to become established as one of the most important factors in such a gigantic industry as this, but it has proved ample time for this accomplishment as far as the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company is concerned.

BIG ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN FOR ALICE HOWELL

An active campaign is being conducted by the Universal Company in Canada through the Publicity and Service Department for the popularizing of Alice Howell, the L-Ko comedienne. This is being waged through newspapers, circulars and direct advertising. W. A. Bach, when questioned on the subject remarked "So successful has our campaign been up to date that in northern Ontario Alice Howell is now preferred by the audiences to Chaplin, which is certainly saying a great deal."

New Corporation to Enter South American Trade

Concern Will Provide Exhibitors There with Best Films on Market—Will Purchase Available Pictures from All Concerns

WITH the idea of developing the South American picture field the South American Films Corporation has been chartered in the state of Delaware for $1,000,000 with T. T. Bartleme as president, E. T. Chapman as vice-president and treasurer and L. R. Thomas as secretary. Harry Grossman, a man well known in the trade, is to be the guiding spirit of the organization and will act as purchasing agent in New York City.

The officers of the company are thoroughly acquainted with South American conditions and rightfully believe that territory there can be thrown open to the high-class picture product of North America. The headquarters of the concern will be in New York, while the main exchange of South America will be located in Buenos Ayres, Republic of Argentine. By the first of the year the corporation expects to have one million feet of film ready to ship to South America.

Mr. Grossman and the officers of the company talked over the proposition with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "It is not our idea," said Mr. Grossman, speaking for himself and associates, "to unload a lot of junk film on the South American exhibitor. He gets that now. His films are scratched, worn out—practically the poorest the American producers turn out. The public of the southern republics is crying for good feature shows and the exhibitors want enough stuff that they may change daily.

Barbara Castleton (Unicorn)

"The South American Films Service Corporation will not confine itself to the distribution of the pictures of one manufacturer or of one program. It wants features and short subjects from any and all programs. Contracts have already been signed with a number of producing companies and before long we will be in a position to announce just what pictures we will handle.

"Although our main office will be located in Buenos Ayres, it is not our intention to limit our activities in the distribution of film to the Republic of Argentine alone. This though is naturally the most fertile field, as the people there are the most advanced of all the Latin-American republics. We will not touch Brazil, but we plan to do business in practically all the other republics on the continent."

Asked as to whether the corporation intended handling a line of accessories as well as pictures, Mr. Grossman replied: "That is not yet settled. We are only beginning now and our present plans include only the handling of film. Doubtless though if the situation warrants it we will complement the film supply by theatre furnishings. The houses down there now are very much like the North American houses were several years ago. The machines are antiquated, only one is in use in each house, and as it is generally known each reel of film shown is divided into four parts in order to conform to the box-office policy.

"These are things which only time can change. The South Americans are willing to be shown, but doubtless the business of showing them will be a slow one. President Bartleme will shortly go to Buenos Ayres to set about the opening of an exchange and, as plans are now, he will remain there to handle that end of the business. Mr. Chapman and Mr. Thomas will transact the larger part of the business at this end of the line."

"Oliver Twist" with Marie Doro from Lasky

December 11 Is Date Set for Release of Screen Version of the Ever Popular Dickens' Novel, Which Has Held the Hearts of Millions of Readers for Seventy-five Years—In the Cast Are Hobart Bosworth in the Role of Bill Sykes and Elsie Jane Wilson as Nancy Sykes

THE Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company announces December 11 as the release date for its elaborate adaptation of Charles Dickens' famous novel, "Oliver Twist," in which Marie Doro is starring. Not only is "Oliver Twist" one of the most successful and most popular works of England's greatest novelist, but the fact that Miss Doro is to play the title role of this Paramount picture gains added significance from the fact that she scored one of the most distinguished triumphs of her stage career in the Liebler all-star presentation of the play during the Dickens Centenary in 1912.

At that time Miss Doro was accorded remarkable praise by the critics who declared her Oliver to be sweet, pathetic and appealing. This is the third time that Marie Doro has appeared on the screen in adaptations of plays in which she created a sensation on the stage, the Famous Players having already presented her in adaptations of "The Morals of Marcus" and "Diplomacy." The success which she enjoyed in these previous performances justifies the producers in having great expectations for this third similar endeavor.

Hobart Bosworth, Tully Marshall, James Neil and Raymond Hatton are among the supporting cast.

Bosworth will play the great role of Bill Sykes, the morose, hard-headed, brutal animal. Those who have seen this distinguished character actor's work on the screen in the roles of ruffians and strong characterizations will realize how finished a performance may be expected from him. The celebrated Fagin, one of the most notable of stage roles, will be in the hands of Tully Marshall, who is expected to repeat in his interpretation of a character made famous by the names of great actors, the success which he has won on the stage and screen in his great dramatic roles.

The Artful Dodger will be played by Raymond Hatton; James Neil is Mr. Brownlow; Jack Sacker is Charles Bates; Robert McKenzie is Fangs, and Elsie Jane Wilson is Nancy Sykes. Other equally well-known players have been assigned to the other roles which are dear to the hearts of all lovers of Dickens.

The adaptation of the novel was prepared by James Young, who also directed the production for the Lasky Company.

The history of "Oliver Twist," as a play is fascinating, for with it there are connected some of the greatest names in theatrical annals. The story was originally published during 1837 and 1838 in Bentley's Magazine, of which Dickens was for some time the editor. It was dramatized almost immediately, and we find the name of the great Charlotte Cushman mentioned as starring in the play in 1839.

In 1852, the ever-popular Maggie Mitchell played Oliver and Fannie Wallack appeared with her as Nancy. Others who have appeared in the play at various times are: E. M. Holland, Helen Western, James A. Herne, George Holland, Rose Eytinge, Amelia Bingham, Elita Proctor Otis, Fanny Davenport, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, and others of equal note. The most notable performance of the play in recent years was that already referred to at the time of the Dickens Centenary in which Miss Doro scored such a great personal success. Others in that cast were: Nat Goodwin, Constance Collier, Lyn Harding, Olive Wyndham, Courtenay Foote and Fuller Mellish.

There is behind this photoplay adaptation the ripe tradition of seventy-five years of stage production, and the leading characters have been developed by some of the greatest actors of the last three generations. From this rich store of material the producers have gathered the wheat and discarded the chaff until the five-reel photoplay, "Oliver Twist," stands as one of the greatest achievements of motion picture production, and ranks among the best pictures that have ever been released on any program.

CECIL B. DE MILLE BREAKS A PRECEDENT

For the first time since he joined the Jesse L. Lasky forces on the Pacific Coast as dierctor general, Cecil B. DeMille has been so impressed by the merit of two Lasky productions as to send the following telegram to Mr. Lasky at the New York offices of the company:

"Have just witnessed showing of Mae Murray in 'The Plow Girl' directed by Robert Leonard, and Blanche Sweet in 'The Tides of Barnegat' directed by Marshall Neilan, and am taking this means of informing you that they are away above average and both directors deserve special credit. Prophesy that 'The Plow Girl' and 'Tides of Barnegat' will be exceedingly good Paramount releases."

It is especially significant that such enthusiasm should have been aroused in the mind of Mr. DeMille by "The Plow Girl" and "The Tides of Barnegat" because of the fact that he is accustomed to ship the Lasky productions east without any comment whatever, his criticisms being reserved for those who are directly concerned in their preparation for the screen.

The Lasky officials have notified the Paramount Pictures Corporation of the receipt of the wire and are now impatiently awaiting the arrival of the prints from the Coast.

INCE FINDS LEADING MAN FOR ENID BENNETT

Alfred Vosburgh is to be leading man for Enid Bennett, Ince's New York "find," in her first Triangle picture, now under way. He was in some of the earliest Kay Bee and Broncho dramas made at Inceville.

STEINER TO ANNOUNCE NEW FEATURE SOON

William Steiner, of the Photo-Drama Corporation, will in the near future announce their new production.

Bluebird Management Outlines Plans for Its Pictures

General Manager of the Company Says That His Concern Is Starting to Distribute Features Independent of the Regular Program, Through the Agencies of Its Own Exchanges—"There Is a Demand for Special Releases," He Declares

THE management of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., has given out a statement covering some important points in the plans of that successful organization and its purpose for the future. That Bluebird intends to expand beyond the usual activities of the average program organization will be good news to exhibitors who have established that program as a regular part of their service.

"We started out to 'put our program across,'" says the announcement, "and having accomplished that much we are going on to other and greater things Bluebird intends now to undertake the marketing of anything in films that comes up to the Bluebird standard; we may distribute serials, one and two reel comedies, cartoons, or any subject that we can secure provided, first of all, that it represents Bluebird quality.

"We are starting now to distribute super-features, independent of our program, through the agencies of our own exchanges. There is a demand for special releases and we begin supplying this demand with "The Eagle's Wing," to be released early in December, exclusively through our own branches. Our various managers, scattered throughout the country, will handle this super-feature in exactly the same manner and method adopted by state right buyers who purchase specific territory for big features.

"We are satisfied that our branch managers are just as good showmen as the 'state righters' and with our own men handling our own features we will have full control of our own property at all times. 'The Eagle's Wing' will be a feature of personal interest to every American citizen, and Rufus Steele has developed a patriotic subject in a masterly manner. Industrial preparedness is the theme of the play, and by consent and aid of the U. S. Government, scenes taken in munition plants show the production of war munitions of every kind from the manufacture of a fuse to the casting of the largest guns ever produced in the world.

"The feature really visualizes the idea of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, of which Thomas A. Edison is chairman. Every factory, mill, foundry or plant used in manufacturing has been supplied by the Government with blanks upon which confidential reports are being made.

"The industrial scenes in Mr. Steele's picture have all been taken in plants that were originally built and operated for peaceful manufacturing—cannons from boiler foundries, caps for time fuses from watch factories, and field-kitchens from textile plants. Carrying these scenes in a vigorously patriotic story, linked with an engaging love interest, to blend stirring entertainment with the lesson of preparedness and loyalty.

"'The Eagle's Wing' is only one of several features we have in preparation for release as 'Bluebirds Extraordinary.' But we shall not neglect the program in these enlarged operations; rather will we bend our efforts to make even better pictures—always better Bluebirds—that the program itself may fulfill the expectations aroused by the special features.

"Subjects will be varied, the productions will represent the best money can create, and with stars to fit the roles we are pluming ourselves on the results we confidently believe will follow. The exhibitor who links his fortunes with Bluebird will not be disappointed in the outcome. Our national advertising campaign will be extended and we will 'deliver the goods' to back our advertised claims of superiority in photoplaying."

DURANT SIGNS CONTRACT WITH INCE

H. R. Durant, who for two seasons directed the scenario department of the Famous Players Company, has recently been placed under contract by Thomas H. Ince and will in future provide material exclusively for Triangle-Kay Bee stars. Mr. Durant will not, however, join the colony of Triangle editors and authors on the Coast. His headquarters will be in the Longacre Building, New York.

Mr. Durant comes under the Triangle banner with a record of striking achievements. Previous to his connection with the Famous Players he was for five years editor of the All-Story Magazine. He has had five productions on the legitimate stage, is the author of over two hundred short stories and novels, and has written more than sixty features for the Biograph, Equitable, World, Universal, Famous Players and Triangle-Fine Arts. In addition, Mr. Durant was for a number of years play-reader for A. H. Woods, picking some of the biggest winners that astute manager has produced.

BARBARA CASTELTON STARTS CRUSADE

That long-suffering word "movie" as used to described motion picture production, is to be wiped out of the dictionary, (that is if it was ever in there) if Barbara Castelton, the attractive and gifted young leading woman of the Unicorn Film Corporation's new feature, "When Hands Are Idle," has her way. Miss Castleton waxes indignant against the habit "Head" writers and reporters have of referring to her chosen art as the "movies" and is forming a committee of well-known actresses to call upon New York editors and ask them to discontinue the use of the word.

UNICORN BUYS "JIMMY DALE"

President Ike Schlank, of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, announces that this concern has acquired the rights of "Jimmy Dale, Alias The Grey Seal," by Frank Packard, the author of "The Miracle Man," which in dramatic form, was one of the biggest successes ever seen on Broadway, and which is still playing to crowded houses all over the country.

The serial, which was produced by the Monmouth Film Company, is in 16 chapters, and will be backed up by an extensive newspaper campaign, this story appearing in twelve hundred of the most prominent newspapers of the country.

CARLSTROM BRINGS FLIGHT PICTURES TO GAUMONT

The remarkable flight of Victor Carlstrom from Chicago to New York had one interesting sidelight that brings the motion picture industry into the record. Pictures of the aviator were taken at the Chicago aviation field, then sealed in a container and marked for delivery to the Gaumont Motion Picture Company, New York. The pictures were taken by the Chicago cameraman of this company for its news reel, The Mutual Weekly.

Carlstrom made the small package fast to his 200-horsepower military biplane. In this fashion the film picturing the scenes attendant upon his departure were brought to New York with only two stops, Erie, Pa., and Hammondsport, N. Y. At the New York terminus of the flight a Mutual cameraman waited. He caught all the ceremonies attendant upon the arrival of the airman, received the film taken in Chicago, and hurried with his precious records to the Gaumont Laboratories at Flushing, N. Y. Here they were developed for immediate showing on Broadway.

"TURNED UP" TO BE RELEASED BY THE FEELY

A five-part picture, "Turned Up," featuring Nat C. Goodwin and Flora Finch, assisted by a cast including Billy Quirk, Augustus Phillips, Mildred Manning, Estelle Mardo, Eddie O'Connor, Lina D'Avril, and Charles Brandt, will be released by M. M. Feely & Co. on a state right basis.

The picture was adapted and produced by Walter Macnamara.

This picture has many features, among which is an alligator fight, a tropical island and cannibal scene; also the whole millionaire colony at Palm Beach at the height of the winter season, with Robert Goelet, the Vanderbilts, and Charles Schwab, easily recognized in the picture.

OHIO BOARD PASSES "IT MAY BE YOUR DAUGHTER"

"It May Be Your Daughter," the picture controlled by the Moral Uplift Society of America, has been passed by the Ohio Board of Censors. Mr. Beck, one of the officials of the company who took the picture on the road to show exhibitors and exchanges stopped at Columbus to secure this important decision. After the private showing to the board it was screened for the trade in general. Good reports on the bookings of the feature are coming in from all the branch officers of the Moral Uplift Society.

CHAPMAN HAS QUIT THE BIG V

Charles D. Chapman, better known to the large circle of friends which he has made during his thirteen years with "Vitagraph" as art and technical director, is now in the open market for himself, having severed his connection with "Big V" last week. "Chap" began his career in stock and vaudeville, appearing in Vitagraph pictures thirteen years ago, and has been with Vitagraph through the continuous growth of that organization up to the present time when he decided to give some of the new developments in the motion picture field the "once-over."

Trade Showing of "Witching Hour" in Two Weeks

Sets Which Required the Advice of Numerous Interior Decorating Experts Caused Director Irving to Devote Much Time to Details Throughout the Picture

"SEVEN reels of mighty dramatic action," is the way the Frohman Amusement Corporation typifies its latest release, "The Witching Hour."

"Not once during the entire seven thousand feet does Director George Irving resort to sensationalism, as the term applies to pantomime," says an official of the company.

"Drama and yet more drama, is the principal tenet and the production of the famous Thomas classic, involved more actual mental and physical labor than any three former Frohman productions. Rehearsals of scenes that lasted throughout an entire day, before the camera clicked.

"Securing of various properties which coincided with the original author's ideas of what would constitute a gambler's art collection.

"Sets which required the advice of numerous interior decorating experts and lastly, a legion of small details which Director Irving devoted as much time to as was essential in the largest episodes.

"The necessity of handling the leading role in a peculiar manner, as outlined in the scenario, and which gave to the part a strange complexity, caused Mr. Sherrill to asign the role to C. Aubrey Smith.

"The casting of 'The Witching Hour' demonstrates to what extent an independent producer must go to attract a market.

"C. Aubrey Smith, Marie Shotwell, Robert Conness, Jack Sherrill, Helen Arnold, and Etta De Groff are the principal factors. Mr. Smith, Miss Shotwell, Robert Conness, and Mr. Sherrill have enjoyed the distinction of starring in former successful features, while Miss Arnold came to the screen, selected by authorities because of her extreme fitness.

"The result is so highly gratifying that William L. Sherrill, head of the Frohman Company, feels entirely safe in announcing 'The Witching Hour' as the best of their screen dramas."

"The Witching Hour" will be given a private showing at a Broadway theatre within the fortnight.

South American Film Men Buy Rights to "Civilization"

Within Forty-eight Hours After Landing in Buenos Ayres, J. Parker Read, Jr., Cables Home Office That He Has Sold the Picture for Brazil and Uruguay

J. PARKER READ, Sr., who left New York some thirty days ago to represent "Civilization" in Buenos Ayres, cabled within forty-eight hours after landing that he had sold the rights to Brazil and Uruguay. He reported that bidding was spirited and in consequence he was able to establish another record.

J. C. Searcy, film magnate of the Republic of Panama, made a special trip to New York to purchase the rights of "Civilization" for Panama, Costa Rica, and Jamaica. Immediately after the deal was closed, Mr. Searcy embarked for his home port with five prints in his possession.

J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation, has just selected three special representatives who will shortly leave for Cuba, Porto Rico, China, Japan, the Philippine Islands, and India to close negotiations that have been pending for the rights to "Civilization."

ADVISORY COMMITTEE FORMED

The organization of the Chicago advisory committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was effected last week by Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the association, and Randolph C. Lewis, the publicity director. The meeting was held on November 3 and John R. Freuler, president of Mutual, was elected the Chicago chairman. Plans for the Chicago organization were proposed by Mr. Elliott similar in detail to the plans for the advisory committees all over the country.

Among those present at the first meeting were: John R. Freuler, Maurice Choyniski, Lewis Frank, Donald Bell. W. R. Roxbacker, Alfred Hamburger, William J. Dunn, and Frederick Ireland. The second meeting of the new committee will be held on Thursday of this week at the offices of the Mutual. The next advisory committee to be formed will be the one taking in all of the California film interests.

DIRECTORS IN EAST MEET TO FORM ASSOCIATION

A meeting was held at the Hotel Astor last week among the motion picture directors of the east for the purpose of organizing a directors' association similar in every respect to the one now in existence on the Pacific coast. The new association is to be known as The Motion Picture Directors' Association of New York and is for the purpose of banding themselves together for the protection of their interests. The new organization is not a labor union in any sense nor have the directors any grievances to present at the present time.

Murdock MacQuarrie, came on from the coast for the purpose of organizing and perfecting the new organization. He was accompanied by Burton King. Charles Giblyn, Travis Yale and Del Henderson all delegated as recruiting officers for the new fraternity, which includes nearly one hundred and fifty recognized directors. The organization will be a secret one generally devoted to the uplift of the silent drama and the better mutual understanding between various factors in the business.

THIRTY DETROIT HOUSES ORGANIZE TO COMBAT EXCHANGE RULINGS

An association of about thirty neighborhood theatres has just been organized in Detroit and several meetings already held, whose object is said to be to combat some of the recent rulings of the film exchanges.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

San Francisco Exchanges Note Big Increase in Business—New Concerns Rapidly Getting Under Way

WITH scarcely an exception film exchange managers at San Francisco, report the best business in many months. The men on the road are meeting with good success, and an unusually large number of visitors are coming to town to inspect late releases and arrange for service for the fall and winter season. The result has been that local exchanges have shown marked activity of late and optimism is riding high.

The Artcraft Pictures Corporation has completed arrangements whereby its space in the Pacific Building has been doubled, and in addition storage room has been secured elsewhere for the large amount of advertising matter that will be carried. Arthur S. Kane, the Western manager, is still here, and Local Manager C. M. Simmons is back from a tour through Southern and Central California.

The office of the United Film Service on Taylor street has shown considerable activity during the past week, Manager Graff having been visited by M. A. Levy, of the Unity Film Sales Corporation. The serial, "The Yellow Menace," has been well placed here, and other new subjects are expected shortly.

Assistant Manager J. W. Allen, of the local Progressive exchange, recently underwent a minor operation in a hospital, but is out again and is boosting Paramount service stronger than ever. "Business is getting better all the time," he said, "and the program idea, with its protection, is appealing to exhibitors more and more. While we are not shouting much about our advertising aids to exhibitors they are proving very successful."

Nat A. Magner is home again from a brief trip and is getting ready to make some announcements of more than ordinary interest to the trade. In the meantime good success is being met with in booking the large feature productions he controls.

Within a short time a new film exchange will be in the field with some feature productions that promise to be of much merit. The De Luxe Film-Lasky Corporation has taken over offices at 783 Market street, near Fourth, and has fitted up neat quarters for film exchange work. The first release will be the "Conquest of Canaan," the Frohman production, and it is planned to have a line of high grade comedies. Mark Leichter, who is a member of the firm, is a part owner in the Rex theatre on Polk street.

The Pathescope Company, which recently removed to larger quarters at 717 Market street, is meeting with good success in introducing its machines and films. Arrangements were recently made by Manager Johns with the Wiley B. Allen Company, a large music house, whereby the Pathescope is being demonstrated at free concerts given by this company on Kearny street.

The scope of operations of the Independent Film Exchange on Golden Gate avenue is being enlarged, and a large stock of supplies is now in place. George Chamberlain, who conducts this exchange, believes that a good business can be done in this line, as many exhibitors express a desire to secure service at the same place.

The tremendous success of "The Common Law," shown recently at the Portola theatre at advanced prices, has resulted in a flood of bookings, as quite a number of exhibitors waited until the first showing to make up their minds. The production was shown for two weeks at this downtown house. The office of the All Star Feature Distributors, which has the Clara Kimball Young productions, is almost swamped with work, the absence of Miss Rubenstein on her Eastern tour being keenly felt.

"BEAT BOOK" FOR "V" SALESMEN

George Balsdon, manager of the New York Vitagraph V-L-S-E Exchange, has put up an enormous map of Greater New York, which covers an entire wall of the salesmen's room. This is divided off into blocks and districts, and colored tacks dot its surface to signify what has or has not been done in each district and theatre. Spirited discussions around this huge map are frequent, especially during the Saturday sales meetings.

Another idea put into operation by Mr. Balsdon is his "Beat Yesterday" book. In this book each day he puts down the total deposits and the total advance bookings, and, as the name signifies, it is constantly his endeavor and that of each salesman to see a bigger figure under each column in that book every day.

At the end of the week the daily totals are added to give the totals for the week. This book is printed up to take care of every day and every week for six years. Therefore, it is possible to compare one day's business to a corresponding day last week, last month or last year, and to compare the weekly results in the same manner.

One of the features of the new quarters of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., in the Musical Building on Market street, is an exhibiting room, equipped with a player-piano. This is located adjoining the offices and Manager H. E. Lotz intends that use shall be made of it at any time that exhibitors may desire to review any of the productions in stock.

The Masterpiece Film Attractions is the name of a concern recently incorporated here by Oscar and Jacob Samuels and E. Solomon, with a capital stock of $20,000.

J. L. Warner, who recently purchased the California rights to the "Crisis," states that inquiries are pouring in and that a big business is assured.

TEXAS EXCHANGEMEN GET TOGETHER

C. Reed, manager of the Fox office in Dallas, is now in New York attending the convention of exchange managers of the Wm. Fox organization.

Joe Gilligan, popular roadman for the Pathe exchange, is in Dallas for the first time in several weeks. Messrs. Tomlin and Brown, brother roadmen of Joe's for the Pathe concern, happened in about the same time. First time they'd seen Joe for "many moons," according to Tomlin.

John D. Jones, formerly of the Crystal theatre, Greenville, and latterly with the Grand Opera House, Amarillo, is now roadman for the Mutual Film Corporation of Dallas.

SPITZER, IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF, EXPLOITS "WAR'S WOMEN"

The Cummings-Spitzer Feature Film Company has established itself in comfortable quarters in the Bank of Commerce Building, Washington, D. C. Under the management of N. H. Spitzer this exchange is exploiting the states right film "War's Women." The territory covered is Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, District of Columbia, and North and South Carolina.

Before taking up his present field Mr. Spitzer was with Universal, Fox, and Clara Kimball Young. In exploiting "War's Women" Mr. Spitzer enters upon business for himself. He speaks most encouragingly of this film and its popularity. In every house it has been placed it has had long runs with capacity or overflowing houses. It has already been presented in the Capital City with like results. A three-week engagement has just been booked by Albaugh's theatre in Baltimore. Two prints are being kept busy all the time.

At a recent exhibition of "War's Women" a man fainted at the cruelty of the scenes depicted and was hastened to the Casualty Hospital. The film has won praise for its realism and as a preachment against the horrors of war.

Alliance Exchange in Dallas Is Making Rapid Strides in Southwestern Film Circles

NOT two years ago, the Alliance Film Company of Texas, opened for business in Dallas, with a small room rented from the old Alco Company. James W. Hill, Jr., and W. L. Lowe formed the company; and when first opened, the office handled the "deceased" Alliance program for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Their concern was one of a modest nature—the opening unheralded by four-page inserts in trade papers—it was one of the first exchanges in Dallas that was begun along "strictly business" lines.

Some months ago, Mr. Hill purchased the interest of his partner, Mr. Lowe, and is now operating the exchange himself.

Mr. Hill left Dallas during September for New York, and again unlike the usual garden-variety of film man, he did not visit his competitors and tell them "I'm going up to get a bunch of 'big' stuff." And now, since he has landed some of the really good film not already in the Southwest, he still is not "tooting the horn from the housetops."

"I have been looking for some time," said Mr. Hill, "for scenics of unusual beauty and educational value, and feel sure in signing up for a weekly release for the next year with the Educational Films Corporation for the Robert C. Bruce scenics. I can satisfy the increasing demand for the best scenics released on the market."

To get in touch with the exhibitors in his territory he is sending out a very artistically arranged folder in which he announced the releases, beginning November 4, of the first six Robert C. Bruce scenics.

The Christie Comedies and "The Mysteries of Myra" will also be handled by Mr. Hill.

MORROW TO MANAGE ARTCRAFT IN NEW ORLEANS

Hoyt G. Morrow, formerly representative of the General Film Company in New Orleans, has been appointed manager of the Dallas exchange of Artcraft Pictures Corporation, distributing Mary Pickford productions. Mr. Morrow succeeds John J. Rotchford, who has resigned to devote himself exclusively to enterprises which were forming when the Artcraft organization was effected. As he is thoroughly familiar with Texas, southern Oklahoma and Louisiana, west of the Mississippi, through his experience in New Orleans, Mr. Morrow expects to keep several prints of "Less Than the Dust" busy in that section after November 6, the date Mary Pickford has announced for the release of her first Artcraft production.

The New York exchange has already outgrown the original quarters assigned to the manager, Arthur G. Whyte and Charles S. Goetz, his assistant, and they are now installed in spacious new offices on the seventh floor of the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue. Large vaults and extensive storage room for the mass of accessories required in this territory are conveniently located.

Al. Lichtman, general manager for Artcraft, spent several days last week in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, with B. C. Cunningham and Samuel Plame, the respective exchange managers. Mr. Lichtman reported that the bookings in these branches were a sure indication that the State of Pennsylvania would contribute its share to the formidable list of exhibitors that all the managers in the United States and Canada are constantly increasing.

"HOME" ATMOSPHERE IN OFFICE OF SPURRIER

Frank Spurrier, the manager of the Vitagraph exchange, Washington, D. C. (formerly the V-L-S-E), believes in making his office have an atmosphere of "home." So once a week the entire force meets and "talks things over," freely discussing business, conduct of individuals, finances, advertising, and ideas for the improvement of the office. Mr. Spurrier has also established an honor roll system for each department, whereby all may see how each department stands according to points deducted for errors or added for bright ideas or progressiveness. The clerks state that this is a great incentive, and makes for good fellowship and co-operation in office work.

Mr. Spurrier recently invited all his employees to dinner at Costello's. This meant that fourteen men had the jolliest time of their lives.

A curious condition exists in the Vitagraph office in that every member is a member of a Masonic order. Even Miss Baily, the bookkeeper, is the daughter of a Mason. This fact just leaked out when Mr. Spurrier received his degree of Commandery in the order.

S. P. TAUBE RETURNS TO TORONTO

S. P. Taube, well-known in both Eastern and Western Canada, has again returned to Toronto from Montreal, where he has been with the Famous Players Company for some time. Mr. Taube is now engaged with the same company selling Christie Comedies, and the latest reports credit him with booking these pictures in the Regent theatre of Toronto.

Serials Doing Big Business in Iowa, Report of Des Moines Exchangemen—Business in Flourishing Condition

C. H. STOMBAUGH, manager of the General Film Company in Des Moines, recently did a little traveling. He first took a two-day trip to Minneapolis, where he did some important business. One week later he went across the state to Omaha, where he conferred with Manager Taylor of the Omaha General office.

Exchangemen regret very much that C. E. Smith, Metro manager, has to leave the Des Moines territory, but he leaves with their best wishes for a successful future. It is not that the local movie men regret Mr. Smith's advancement, but they hate to lose the personality and prestige he adds to the local field. As president of the Des Moines Screen Club, Mr. Smith put that body on its feet. The best of luck is extended to him in his Chicago office.

The Bluebird quartette is the latest at the office of the Laemmle Film Service. Since the recent social function at the home of D. B. Lederman, manager, this quartette has been making plans for an extensive repertoire of songs. The members of the quartette are: William "Bill" C. O'Hare, who travels, Edgar Peel, head booker, Herbert Billings, assistant booker and Charles Stevenson, publicity manager. This group of singers is getting ready to entertain at the next social gathering of the office force.

L. A. Sheridan, Pathe manager, has issued a challenge to any exhibitor in the State of Iowa, to show him a serial of better merit than The Shielding Shadow. To back up his claim Sheridan has a five dollar bill ready for any exhibitor who can beat him out of his statement on The Shielding Shadow. Mr. Sheridan made this statement before a group of exhibitors recently, and—to quote Mr. Sheridan—"Before the picture had been finished they all wanted it and had forgotten all about the five dollar offer."

D. B. Lederman, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, recently took a four day jaunt on the road in southern Iowa. It is not very often that Mr. Lederman gets away from his office, but when he does he makes the most of it. He returned with some good business, he reports.

Reports from various exchange managers indicate that serials are the most popular form of pictures selling in Iowa. C. E. Smith, recent Metro manager, said that his company was doing record business with The Crimson Stain Mystery, while L. A. Sheridan at the Pathe is just as enthusiastic regarding The Shielding Shadow. Other exchangemen report much success with their serials.

No new additions have been made to the recently organized Des Moines exchange of the Mid-West Photo Play Company, according to L. A. Blank, manager. Mr. Blank has been so busy endeavoring to get his new corporation successfully under way that very little of his recent time has been devoted to the exchange.

JAKE WELLS PURCHASES EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS

Jake Wells of Lynchburg, Va., who controls a chain of theatres in several Southern states, announces that he had purchased the rights in Lynchburg and Richmond for the new Mary Pickford films, and the Metro production of "Romeo and Juliet," featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

Exclusive exhibition in the two cities is carried in the contract. Mr. Wells several months ago paid $16,000 for the exclusive rights in Lynchburg and Richmond and Norfolk for the Kleine serial, "Gloria's Romance," in which Billie Burke was featured. The price for the features recently purchased is said to exceed this amount.

The newest acquisitions will be shown in Richmond at the Colonial theatre, and in Lynchburg at the Isis theatre.

With the Exhibitor

This Exhibitor Wants to "Start the Ball a Rolling"

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.

William A. Johnston,
Editor Motion Picture News,
729 Seventh Ave.,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—

Of all the film editors, I believe you write the most direct editorials and have the best facilities for obtaining much needed reforms along exhibiting lines in the film industry. I was particularly impressed with the array of figures you published a week or so ago, showing statistics of the motion picture theatres in the United States. It gives the big men of the business the opportunity to gauge the right lines on which to work.

Any one conversant with real facts knows that the majority of exhibitors are laboring under burdens of expense which make it impossible to get an adequate profit and continue in the business. This ought not to be, and I believe it can be remedied in most cases at least. I also believe that you may be able to act the part of "doctor" through the columns of your Motion Picture News.

In order to start the ball rolling, I shall mention a few facts. When the business first started as a big industry, during the years 1907-8, no posters were used outside of the theatres. From no expense at all in that direction, the exhibitor is now spending probably an average of $6.00 per week. Heralds weren't used; so he likewise is encumbered with that expense. He is asked to buy a great number of "stills" for the features, as well as to post 24-sheet Stands at his own expense in his neighborhood. The burden of newspaper advertising has been added.

I believe that practically all of the above expenses should be eliminated, and that it can be done without being detrimental to the business. Theatrical companies have always furnished posters gratis to the local theatre manager, and I see no reason why the film manufacturer should not do the same thing for the exhibitors. Where picture houses are located on the main business streets, the bulk of their business is transient. In residential neighborhoods it is a steady clientele that isn't persuaded by picture advertisments to go and see the show. So in both these cases the newspaper, end could well be eliminated. The Herald medium is only throwing away money.

I acknowledge that I am making very radical statements, but I shall back them up by asking: Do the Rialto and Strand, as well as other leading picture houses throughout the country, do all of the things that I have enumerated?

My purpose isn't to ask you to go "hammer and tongs" and advise these changes, however. I merely want to create a department in your paper; put it in charge of some experienced exhibitor with a well known reputation, and invite the views and correspondence of exhibitors from all parts of the country to discuss points in question as well as other reforms. The film journals have had departments wherein were discussed all matters pertaining to projection, music and other incidentals, but, to my mind, the most essential of all is the business end, for if that end isn't taken care of properly, naturally all of the others will fail. The whole future of the business rests entirely with the exhibitors; they are the ones who should not allow themselves to be saddled with all kinds of extra expenses such as has been and is the case at present. All that is wanted is a little team work, and I certainly hope that you will see your way clear to acting as captain of the team, so to speak.

Yours very truly,
Francis R. Dooley.

We print herewith the kind of letter we hope to receive in car-load lots. It isn't because this friend is good enough to say the News is doing a good work in its analysis of film conditions for the benefit of the trade and the exhibitor; it isn't because this is the particularly well written and carefully thought out letter that it is; it isn't because friend Dooley flatters us by asking us to be the "cap'n of the team" that we say this is the kind of real "dope" we want to be handed. It IS that friend Dooley speaks FACTS, speaks from knowledge of the business, and right or wrong in his opinions he gives us something to START from and the minute you start going, if you have a place to start from and a goal to start towards, you are SURE to come out in the light somewhere. So we are going to analyze this letter and ask our exhibitor friends to pile in on both sides and let us hear from them on the much discussed question of "exhibitor helps."

Mr. Dooley thinks the exhibitor is already burdened with too much expense for advertising. He says heralds do no good and he does not believe the big houses find them necessary. He says the residential theatre is supported by a steady clientele and should not have to spend a large portion of its income in trying to get the business away from the other fellow. No, he didn't say that, but that is the point—the milk in the cocoanut—and we want to hear what the rank and file of exhibitors say about this. Can we have brotherly love instead of competition; can we look forward to halcyon days when the exchange will not only ship the films to us when advertised, but supply us with a billing of posters as well? NO, we CAN'T. But, friend Dooley, your letter goes a long way toward bringing about a feeling between exchange and exhibitor which will get us as near to the goal of mutual confidence and genuine co-operation as it is possible to get.

That last paragraph where you say "My purpose isn't to ask you to go 'hammer and tongs' and advise these changes" tells the story. You write in the spirit of open-minded suggestion of something for the general good, and whether your idea of what is best for all is right or wrong, that kind of expression of a wish to approach the matter in a calm and analytical state of mind is the keynote of accomplishment.

The motion picture industry is the fifth largest industry in the United States today. The theatre is the outlet for all this wonderful and almost inconceivably rapid growth. No matter how many films are produced, the limit of use for them is the number of theatres in actual operation. And as Mr. Dooley says, the theatres cannot operate indefinitely unless expense is regulated by income. And if the theatres now operating are to continue in the business, it would seem as if there must be some curtailment of the unending extravagance of modern methods of sustaining business. This extravagance begins at the studio.

A star attains a popularity which causes her to be in universal demand. No longer will ordinary productions suffice. She must outshine all other stars or be forever

TWELVE TORONTO THEATRES CO-OPERATE WITH WILLIAMS COMPANY IN ADVERTISING

Twelve of the Toronto theatres co-operated with the R. S. Williams Company of that city in a unique plan whereby the Williams Company advertises the new Edison Phonograph company and the theatre advertises their program.

This plan was in the nature of an Edison Week and the names of the various theatres appeared in the advertisement with their programs following and concluding with the statement that in this house the new Edison would be demonstrated in addition to the regular program. Mr. Trestrail, advertising manager of the R. S. Williams Company, is to be credited with this unique idea.

OMAHA SCREEN CLUB PLANS TWO BIG BALLS

At a meeting of the Omaha Screen club last week J. W. Taylor, treasurer for the ball held last June, gave Secretary Kirk of the Screen club a certified check for a considerable sum left over after all expenses of the ball and convention had been paid. Immediately plans were started for two more big balls and a convention.

One ball will be held this winter, but whether the convention, to which every exhibitor in Nebraska will be invited, will be held in connection with the winter ball, or at a separate date in the summer is not yet decided. A decision will be made soon.

disgraced. Tens of thousands of dollars are spent making "super" productions, and who pays the bill? The public? Oh, no. The exhibitor pays, for his public knows nothing of the ambition of the star, or of her managers. They want to see the star. They will pay to see the star. They don't register a complaint at the magnificence of the newest productions, nor send a kick to the theatre box-office because the town is billed like a circus to let them know their favorite has reached the zenith of success. They come around, of course, and pay more money than they ever paid before to see this star. Will they come back? If the play suited them, yes.

But have these people found a new source of income or where are they going to get the wherewithal to pay these new prices to see their favorite star? The answer is, like the answer to many another seemingly impossible conundrum—"It can't be done!" In other words, the result of present tendencies in the film business, right now, seems to point to the survival of the fittest, and either fewer theatres and fewer plays at higher prices, or a return to less ambitious expense ratio of production to income. We want the opinion of exhibitors on all these points. It is almost sure to be right. And we are sure if the exhibitors make their voice heard loud and clear the producers will listen very attentively and a spirit of fairness and careful study of conditions without prejudice will go far toward bringing about the millennium which friend Dooley hopes to see.

Texas Amusement Managers' Association Holds Enthusiastic Meeting for Organization Purposes

THE first annual meeting of the Texas Amusement Managers' Association was held in the Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturers Association auditorium, Dallas, Oct. 25. When the meeeting was over, the exhibitors were sent away with more "bees buzzing in their bonnets" than at any previous meeting of a similar body. The meeting was full of life, and here and there through the various talks and speeches made, a smattering of fireworks was injected, stirring the smouldering flames in the breasts of the motion picture men of Texas, against those responsible for some of their many troubles.

The livest topics of the meeting were "censorship" and "Sunday opening." In addition to these, another important question before the meeting was the organization of the association to state-wide proportions, which was accomplished before the meeting adjourned.

The organization work has been done by Robert H. Campbell, a prominent figure in fighting Sunday closing in Texas, who is the assistant to the president of the organization.

At 1:30 P. M. a general conference was had in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturers Assn. building, where a program of addresses and discussion was heard. M. A. Blackburn called the meeting to order, presiding in the absence of the president, E. H. Hulsey.

The opening speech, by E. T. Peter, was on "Co-operation and Affiliation;" followed by A. Charninsky, who spoke on "Organization." The talk by Mr. Charninsky was a strong one and right to the point. It drove home the object of the meeting. Although not an exhibitor himself, but connected with a local vaudeville house, Mr. Charninsky has long been identified with the exhibitors of Texas.

He emphasized the need of organization now, so that they might be heard at the next State Legislature when the Sunday closing bill will come before that institution for consideration.

J. S. Phillips, of Fort Worth, spoke on "The Theatre and the Public," and brought out some very important, thoughtful points. Jas. W. Hill, Jr., of the Alliance Film Company, next spoke on "Censorship Evils," and decried the methods of certain varying censor boards. Mr. Hill also brought out fully the damage of censorship to American rights even if the application were on the best possible plane.

S. G. Howell, editor of Motion Picture Journal, Dallas, spoke on "The Theatre and the Press;" Robt. H. Campbell spoke on "The Sunday Law;" Laurence Stewart of the Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, followed with a live talk on "The Show House Manager."

C. A. Clegg, executive officer of the Mutual's Dallas office, took for his subject "Action," and spread throughout his talk was that spirited, straight-from-the-shoulder wording that sank deep in the hearts of his hearers.

The officers of the association are E. H. Hulsey, president; Geo. M. Blackburn, vice-president; Leon S. Gohlman, recording secretary; W. D. Nevills, treasurer; David Bernbaum, sergeant-at-arms. Members of the executive board are Geo. M. Blackburn, P. G. Cameron, E. H. Hulsey, W. E. Weatherford, S. Von Phul and Phil H. Greenwall. The Finance Committee is composed of Messrs. Von Phul, Weatherford and Nevills. Assistant to the president and organizer, Robt. H. Campbell.

Dallas will continue to be headquarters of the organization for the State of Texas.

Among those present at the meetings were E. J. Lamkin of the Savoy and Colonial theatres, Greenville; E. V. Richards, Jr., Saenger Amusement Co., Shreveport, La.; L. M. Ridout, Star theatre, Denison; Andrew Zuccaro, Hippodrome theatre, Fort Worth! Wm. Batsell, Jr., King and Queen theatres, Sherman; J. E. Patrick, Star theatre, Winnsboro; Peter Jecker, Princess theatre, Victoria; J. S. Phillips, Odeon theatre, Fort Worth; Henry Oscar, Calvert; Jack Lilly, Hippodrome theatre, Commerce; Jno. Snively, Princess theatre, Paris; Tom Binion, Hoo Hoo theatre, Lufkin; J. E. Martin, Lyric theatre, Mt. Pleasant; A. O. Hamilton, Dalhart; Grant and Sheppard, Ruby theatre, Plainview; Mack Murphy, Opera House, Sweetwater; J. B. Clayton, Monogram theatre, Childress; J. Dillon, Healy theatre, Fort Worth; J. E. Newman, Crystal theatre, Greenville; B. C. Bell, Dixie theatre, Galveston; P. C. Crown, Crown theatre, Houston; J. E. Wallace, Majestic theatre, Austin; R. C. Brown, Van Alstyne; J. J. Hegman, Crescent theatre, Temple; J. M. Robb, Lyric theatre, Big Springs; B. Bell, Gem theatre, Palestine; J. A. Lemke, Crystal theatre, Waco; Le Roy Bickel, Rex theatre, Waco; J. B. Powell, Elk theatre, Marshall; J. I. Carter, Crystal theatre, Pittsburg.

SMOKER WILL BE HELD BY CLEVELAND SCREEN CLUB

The Cleveland Screen Club at their recent luncheon picked the Elks' hall for a smoker, and set the date for November 14. The chorus and principals of the burlesque company at the Empire that week will entertain, together with other stage and picture talent. Otherwise, it's to be a stag party.

STEFFES DENIES CHARGES MADE BY OPERATORS' UNION

William A. Steffes, of the Northern theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., denies the charges made against him by the local unions which were printed in a recent issue of Motion Picture News. His policy was declared unfair to organized labor in that he refused to discharge a non-union operator who had been in his employ for three years. Mr. Steffes writes, "At any time the Operators' Union feels inclined to give my operator a union card (not a permit) I feel satisfied that he will become a union man."

Cleveland League Will Discuss Serials at Next Meeting

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Cleveland held its regular weekly meeting last week at its rooms in the Republic Building.

Sam Bullock read two letters of considerable vital interest, which he, as secretary of the organization, had received. They were from Mr. Lamotte Smith and Mr. Beverstock, president and vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Ohio, tendering their resignation from office. As this affected the entire State, it was moved that these letters be referred to the National organization in New York. Mr. Bullock also had in his possession a circular letter from the Civic League, asking the exhibitors to contribute to a campaign fund for a paving bond issue.

The appeal was made on the grounds that the motion picture man should support whatever is for the good of the city. That the picture man is a public benefactor by nature, and not by necessity, was made evident when one of the exhibitors announced that he had already shown slides in his theatre advocating the bond issue for repaving the streets. This not only shows the civic importance of the motion picture exhibitor, but it also shows the public spirit of these men who unasked and unapproached, put on slides advocating a proposition to improve local conditions. In lieu of any material contribution to the campaign fund, all exhibitors volunteered to boost the proposition on the screen.

Mr. Ernest Schwartz, who, with Mr. Ben Sawyer, represent the league legally, made a brief report on the three cases which he has in court. The Maheu case, where the operators were cited for contempt, has not come up; in the Milo case, the operators were enjoined from passing fire cards or congregating in crowds before the theatre, because the owner operates his own theatre, his own machine, and his own music. Mr. Schwartz says that this is the time for the exhibitor to cast off the shackles of unionism or never will they be able to resist the demands of operators, musicians and bill posters in the future.

The members of the league showed an unusual interest in the common good, and the meeting adjourned with the decision that the main topic for next week be a discussion on the merits of serial pictures.

CITIZENS' MOTION PICTURE LEAGUE FOR CINCINNATI

The formation of an enlarged Screen Club or Citizens' Motion Picture League under the head of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce for the promotion of the popularity and interests of the motion picture business, is under way in Cincinnati. Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Screen Club, which is composed chiefly of film men, realize the necessity of obtaining the full co-operation of a number of influential men and women of Cincinnati, who are interested in pictures.

The plan has been favorably received by both organizations and will be submitted to the Chamber of Commerce in the near future. Popularization of ideas which will lend themselves to the advancement and protection of the motion picture business as a whole will be the object of such co-operation as is proposed under this new organization.

The idea was expressed by Charles Weigel, a prominent Cincinnati exhibitor, in an address several days ago at the meeting of the Miami Valley Exhibitors' League in Dayton, O. A large number of Cincinnati exhibitors and exchange men attended this meeting at which plans of co-operation were discussed.

A LOT FOR THE MONEY—IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Never showing a picture over two reels in length, never giving a show over four reels in length and never charging over five cents admission is the record of the Unique theatre in Des Moines. Is it worth while? Last Sunday, with a two-reel Chaplin release and two reels of Universal service the Unique did the largest business in its history, and had people waiting in its lobby before each show.

An average of twelve shows a day is given. This record is believed to be one rarely equalled in any city of the size of Des Moines—and certainly one that a lot of theatres envy.

BAN ON JUVENILE ATTENDANCE PARTIALLY LIFTED IN BALTIMORE

The Baltimore Health Department has partially lifted the ban on children attending motion picture performances. The new ruling permits children over nine years old to go to theatres. This ruling has been a big aid to the local picture men, particularly in the neighborhood locations.

The matinee performances are very materially affected for the better. Up to the present, children under thirteen years old were not permitted to attend picture performances. There is a report current that the ban will be entirely lifted either next week or the week following.

MOTION PICTURE THEATRES AID TO SAVE "ZOO"

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has enthusiastically entered into the publicity campaign to "save the zoo" and will use their screens, which appeal to 200,000 persons daily, in an effort to raise $125,000 by public subscription to purchase the Zoological Gardens from the Cincinnati Traction Company. Some months ago the corporation announced that it was operating the beautiful park, which is one of the chief points of interest in Cincinnati, at a loss and would be forced to sell it. The possibility of having the fine collection of wild animals taken from the city, at once aroused a public cry.

Every organization of the city at once entered into the campaign to raise this money which will be carried on during November and December. Arrangements for the showing of slides and pictures and collection of funds from motion picture patrons will be made by a committee consisting of President F. L. Emmert of the League, Managing Secretary H. Serkowich, Charles Weigel, Amos Foster and I. McMahon.

A nominating committee to place two tickets in the field at the election of the League in December, was chosen as follows: Herman J. Bley, chairman; Thomas Riley, Charles Weigel, Otto Luedeking, and Dr. Otto Dieckmann.

Cabaret and Colored Band for Entertainment at Ball in New York on November 29

THE ball which will be held in Madison Square Garden, Thanksgiving night, November 29, promises to be the biggest social event of the season for the members of the moving picture fraternity.

Last year between twenty and thirty thousand people attended, and the doors had to be closed at 8:30, because of the crowd. This year the jam promises to be greater than ever and it is feared that it will be necessary to close the doors earlier than last year.

All of the boxes with the exception of six have been sold and over seventy applications have been received for those that remain.

Among the concerns which have bought boxes, and the number taken are the following: Metro 26, Universal 9, Pathe 8, Vitagraph 5, International 3. From one to three boxes have also been taken by the following: Essanay, Brenon, Feature Film Company, Sherman Elliott, V-L-S-E, Powers, Simplex, Unicorn and Kalem.

The contract for decoration, involving an expenditure of over $6,000, has been awarded to the W. H. Masten Company of this city. During the evening six of the leading New York firms will conduct fashion review of imported gowns which will be shown on living models. One of the novelties this year will be a cabaret, which will be held in the basement from the time the ball opens until closing. A colored band consisting of fifty-five pieces will provide the dance music, and one of the new stunts will be the singing of the band members, while the film people and their friends dance the night away.

Three prizes of $100, $50, and $25 respectively have been offered to the three manufacturers who provide the most novel stunt for the evening's entertainment.

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

CALIFORNIA.—Hanford: A change in management of the Hanford Opera House has been made, the leasehold and equipment of the theater having been sold by C. Roberts to Weaver & Shelton, theatrical men of San Francisco. The house is to be renovated throughout and will be conducted as a moving picture and vaudeville theatre.

Eureka: The Portola theatre has been opened by Joseph Turcio, a well-known musician.

San Juan: E. Giacomuzza has taken over the management of the San Juan theatre, succeeding O. Brixen.

Monterey: A new theatre is being erected for J. N. Rice, who is now conducting the Rex theatre, and will be opened in about two months as the Strand theatre.

Dinuba: The Mission Opera House, conducted by Walter Evans, has been remodeled and renovated for the winter season.

Santa Cruz: A new Motiograph machine has been installed in the Grand theatre.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

Capitalize Your Front—It's Your Biggest Asset

By M. Kashin

IN previous issues of THE NEWS I have told how, on an investment of a few dollars, I have realized hundreds—at least five hundred per cent. a DAY on capital invested. Can you tell me of any other business but the moving picture show where a five hundred per cent a day investment is considered of too little importance to attract investors? And yet that is the fact which I want to bring home to the readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS who are not getting all possible use of the front of the house. I don't care how pleasing your theatre may be, or how good the show itself, on the INSIDE, if you don't get the people in, what's the use?

The average picture theatre represents a very heavy investment, and one which must be realized on quickly. Location and capacity are two main factors in success, and with location you pay a rental and license on the front of the house, which is high or ridiculously cheap according as you use that front to best advantage.

I do not wish to say the exhibitors all over the country do not at once appreciate the value of getting the people into their houses, but how can this value be gotten out of the front? That is the question. And when I first set out to solve this and find a way to make money out of this investment, I was surprised at the quick and immediate response I got for every bit of pains I took about it. Of course, hanging a big six sheet, like every other theatre in the neighborhood, may help business if the six is attractive.

But I set out with the idea that the ordinary paper and lobby display furnished by the exchanges did not bring out the thing which would pull dollars and people into my theatre. And so I set about to "get them in." If you read my previous articles, you will remember that I used the principles of motion, to attract attention, and of an appeal to a special class of patronage, where possible, for everyone likes to be singled out and feel you are appealing to him or her in the first person.

Lobby Display "Close-Up" of Picture Itself

In the "copy" for "Wanted A Home" an idea was literally "pictured" with just the same kind of "business" as we find in the pictures themselves. Take, for example, the enlarged reproduction of a want-ad, and the "close-up" of the sad and wistful girl, with the tramps looking over the fence, in another scene, as a comedy touch. If you can get the same pulling power—what we hear referred to so often in the picture reviews as "punch" (now it is getting to be called "pep")—into your lobby display as into the pictures themselves, you will have capitalized that too frequently neglected part of your business, the lobby front, and the results will surprise you. Everyone who passes your theatre can be induced to come in, if he is not directly on his way to do some particular thing, and if he cannot come in right now, if you appeal to him in such a way that he has a picture in his mind of an attractive place he wants to go later, he will come back and often bring many with him. The mere stopping of a crowd at your doors will not get business, necessarily, but even that will help.

Capital Invested Ridiculously Small

The average top limit of cost of the displays I have been telling about is less than twenty dollars. Twelve and fifteen will cover the ordinary work and materials, because we are not after what is considered a special work of art, we are after the psychological result, produced in the cheapest possible manner, just for a day, perhaps. We want to attract attention in a way that is appropriate to our purpose. This week I will show you pictures of my display on "Fighting Blood." Now it might have been possible to have made this display cheap and sensational, but that is not the idea of thus "capitalizing" the lobby. I don't want to drive anybody away. I want to attract, with, as I have stated, the same element of attraction that will hold them with the picture itself when it is seen on the screen. In this display note the combination of the two main themes—the man with red blood, the type your patrons like so well, and the sentiment of "My Old Kentucky Home."

People, all classes, like sentiment and thrills properly mixed. All-sentiment, or all-blood-and-thunder will not appeal to the masses, the great body of theatregoers. No good picture fails to have the right quantity of each of these two elements properly balanced. And so this display on "Fighting Blood" got the money. The big figure of the man tense and indicating "action" stopped the passer-by instantly. The suggestion that the man was fighting to defend his "Old Kentucky Home" in some way would naturally follow. You will note especially that there is never any "fake" in these displays. They take only the real live heart-interest theme from the picture itself and make of it advertising "copy" of the pulling kind, published not at a dollar an inch more or less in the newspaper but at a flat rate plus only your thought and trouble, in your own medium of display, the lobby front. These displays will not average in cost more than any exhibitor is willing to spend for everyday use of posters, photos, etc., inclusive of the banner. The combining of the banner with the big figure, one merging into the other, is merely a mechanical detail, a way of economizing space and getting the display right out where it cannot be passed by without seeing it. At the same time, the large figure calls attention to the banner above, and makes the display overhead "connect" with the eye-catcher below.

A Close-up of the Man

Can Be Done by Any Exhibitor

The main thing I want to bring out is that this sort of "capitalizing the lobby" can be done by any exhibitor, anywhere. There is no town too small or too large to have its local genius who can produce these roughly painted figures, and in most instances the simple expedient of "cut out" using stiff cardboard, properly braced with one inch strips, cutting the figure from a large poster and mounting it can be resorted to. What counts and gets the money is the idea, which will occur to anyone who will sit down and analyze the picture. Draw on the whole theatre staff for the "idea." The producers usually furnish some little novelty, or in their press matter give a basis for the "idea," which simply then wants to be enlarged.

As I said above, the lobby display offers a free advertisement by the use of a "close up" of some big scene or scenes in the picture. And the bigger you can enlarge this idea, the plainer you can make it to the people who will stop to give you an opportunity to interest them, the surer these people are to come in and want to see the whole plot worked out around the selected scene which induced them to come in.

I want all who read this to be thinking of how they can make use of this enormous capital invested in theatre lobbies which is now going to waste in many places. I am doing what I can to help, through these articles from time to time in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and I hope any exhibitor who finds inspiration in following my work will help the cause along by telling the editor of the NEWS all about it. If you have turned these ideas into money, help along the next man. When we get the money from the pictures, we will have still better pictures.

WOMAN STARTS CIRCUIT OF CHILDREN'S PROGRAMS

It has remained for an Ohio woman to start a children's moving picture circuit. Bertha May Thompson of Springfield, Ohio, is the enterprising person. Her program will be initiated at the Clifford, a "legitimate" theatre in Ravenna, Ohio. She has signed up a circuit of theatres in the towns and cities of the state to devote the mornings, afternoons and when possible, evenings, to her program for children and women.

Fairy stories, some of them adapted by Miss Thompson, travel pictures, comedies and the most suitable regular dramas, will be shown once a week. Under her plan she can rent the pictures at a greatly reduced rate by taking them for long time schedules.

DETECTIVE AGENCY WATCHES AUTO IN FRONT OF THEATRE

Manager Frank Schafer of the De Luxe theatre, 656 S. Alvarada street, Los Angeles, has induced a detective agency to have plain clothes men watch automobiles in front of the De Luxe theatre to prevent theft of rugs, wraps or other articles left in the machines, and thus created something to advertise.

The service of the detective agency is furnished without cost, except the consideration that the agency's name be carried on a slide in connection with the announcement that machines are guarded. This feature will undoubtedly help to increase the automobile trade of Mr. Schafer's theatre, which is located in one of the best residence sections of Los Angeles.

Big Money Drawing Stunts for Showing of "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Rainbow Princess"

FRANK DOWLER, Jr., manager of the Alcazar theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn., can prove that there is just as much "pep" in the Southern exhibitor as any of his Northern brethren can boast of. And it must be in the people of this beautiful Southern city, too. For his latest stunts pulled capacity business. Mr. Dowler is manager of the Signal Amusement Company, which owns most of the theatres in Chattanooga, and is a firm believer that all the picture business needs is something new stirring all the time.

He was one of the first exhibitors in the South to adopt the color lighting scheme inside the auditorium, that dims and changes the lights to harmonize with the color tint in the film showing at the time. He specializes on music "for the picture," and the perfect sympathy of the audience with the theme of the play is greatly aided in every way, much to the advantage of the money coffers of the Signal Company.

So it is not surprising that Romeo and Juliet should call for special "inspiration." An attractive "balcony," across the entire front of the lobby, festooned with real ivy, and representing the famous scene which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were enacting on the inside, called instant attention to the theatre by day. But the night effect was the "real thing." Red and blue "spots" were located across the street from the Alcazar, and all the shades from dark blue to purple were obtained, the regular lobby lights of the theatre being darkened for this novel effect of a stage set in the middle of the streets of a busy metropolis. Turned 'em away, of course. And the cost was mostly time and patience.

The result was so highly satisfactory that something had to be done on the nearest unusual picture following "Romeo and Juliet." This was Paramount's "Rainbow Princess." The entrance to the theatre was turned into a real circus tent, with sawdust and all, and "fake" scenery converted the box office into a circus wagon. Oil canvas, and a light frame, with wheels "faked" on each side, made everyone stop—stare—and, of course, come inside to see the "show." We were promised pictures of this, but could not keep the story long enough to wait for the cuts. Take advantage of this idea, now.

BAND IN THE PICTURE TO PLAY FOR THE PICTURE

As a special attraction with Ann Pennington in "The Rainbow Princess," Manager Earl Crabb of the Strand theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., is planning to have the Hawaiian orchestra which appears in the picture, play during the evening. The orchestra, which was engaged for the picture, is playing in Buffalo at the Teck Cafe.

EXHIBITOR'S HOUSE PHILOSOPHY

Every exhibitor who expects to prosper, or even to survive, must seriously and continuously study his business.

Insist on having a disciplined staff. The atmosphere of success must be kept up. Keep everybody and yourself busy.

A clear and steady picture followed by one jumpy and out of focus denotes a manager who does not watch his screen.

To use the vestibule for advertising purposes means scientific treatment, originality, and minute attention.

Lastly, put as much thought into your advertising methods as you do in selecting your pictures.

"SNOW WHITE," FROM EDUCATIONAL AND SOLD ON STATE RIGHTS, MEETS WITH SUCCESS

"Snow White," a delightful fairy tale picturized in four parts and offered by the Educational Films Corporation of America on a states right basis, is meeting with great success. E. W. Hammons, vice-president of the company, in speaking of this picture said, "I have had a great many inquires about this picture from exhibitors who want to book it for special children's matinees.

"Some of these exhibitors have obtained the backing of the local school authorities, who will dismiss the children before the regular hour in order to attend the special afternoon showing."

Every help in the way of attractive advertising matter has been prepared.

Zenith Feature Film, Minneapolis, has bought rights for Minnesota and Wisconsin, and Eskay-Harris Company has the rights to New Jersey.

SOL LESSER MAKES FIFTH TRIP FROM COAST

In the interest of the All Star Features, Inc., and the big possibilities for expansion which his eastern office has brought forth, Sol Lesser is making his fifth trip across the continent this year.

Stopping en route at his Denver and Chicago offices, he will transact the necessary business incumbent on his purchase of the Clara Kimball Young franchise for the coast, will confer with George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, regarding "The Little Girl Next Door," and then in Philadelphia in conjunction with Leon D. Netter, he will center his attention on the exploitation of "Purity."

In New York besides conferring with Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph — V-L-S-E, regarding "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which that company is marketing, it is rumored that Lesser has something big up his sleeve, the results of which will be made public as soon as matters crystallize.

Allen Sells "Yellow Menace" Rights to Merrill and Harwell

Buyers, Who Are Well Known in the East and the West, Get New York City and State Territory for Unity Serial

CHARLES W. ALLEN, president of the Unity Sales Corporation, closed a deal this week, whereby William L. Merrill and H. W. Harwell purchased the distributing rights of "The Yellow Menace" serial for the City and State of New York, as well as the franchise rights for various other features to be produced by Unity.

Both Mr. Merrill and Mr. Harwell are well known to the trade in this section, both having had wide experience as exchangemen. Mr. Merrill was formerly manager of the New York exchange of the Unicorn Film Service, where he developed an extensive acquaintance with the New York exhibitors. He also owned and operated for a long time the Independent Film Exchange of Minneapolis, and there is perhaps no exchange man in this section or in the West who is more widely known.

Mr. Harwell is also a former manager of the New York exchange of the Unicorn Film Service and is possessed of an enviable reputation in the exchange and exhibiting branches of the film business. He was formerly manager of the C. P. Walker Syndicate, the Western Canada Theatres Company, and has also represented the Mutual Film Company in Ontario, and subsequently was manager of the Universal office in Montreal.

The offices formerly occupied by the Unity Film Service in the Godfrey building, 729 Seventh avenue, have been taken over by Messrs Merrill and Harwell, and the exchange will be operated under the name of the Unity Film Service. Besides handling "The Yellow Menace" and other Unity features, the new exchange will handle any state rights films that give evidence of sufficient returns. These gentlemen are now in the market for any attractive offers on films that are for distribution through independent exchanges. Negotiations are already under way for the purchase of the New York rights on several feature productions, which are in the market now, and further announcements will be made within the next few days. Messrs Merrill and Harwell have already taken charge of the offices and are at home to their friends.

Warren Kerrigan, Roberta Wilson, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Neva Gerber, Charles Perley, Fritzi Brunette, Betty Schade, Lloyd Whitlock, Murdock MacQuarrie, Edyth Sterling, Harry Carey, Edith Johnston, Wallace Beery, Belle Bennet, William V. Mong, Gale Henry, William Franey, M. K. Wilson, Edith Roberts, Harry Carter, Lois Wilson, Lee Hill, Ben Wilson, Frances Nelson, Marie Walcamp, Jack Holt and Eddie Polo.

The feature of the week, of course, is "Liberty," the fourteenth two-reel episode of which "A Modern Joan of Arc" will be released with Marie Walcamp, Jack Holt and Eddie Polo in the cast. This most timely of Universal serials, dealing with events on the Mexican border, was written and produced by Jacques Jaccard.

Besides the principals it includes Neal Hart, Maud Emory, Bertram Grassby, G. Raymond Nye and L. M. Wells. The story of "Liberty," novelized by H. H. Van Loan, is running in the New York Evening Mail, San Francisco Chronicle, Boston Traveler, Salt Lake City Herald-Republican, Montreal Herald and in more than 300 large town newspapers throughout the country.

On November 13 Roberta Wilson will appear in "The Heritage of Hate," a five-reel Red Feather drama written by Walter Woods, scenarioized by E. J. Clawson, and produced by Burton George. William Quinn, Lillian Concord, Eileen Sedgwick, Alfred Wertz, Betty Schade, Paul Byron, and Betty Hart appear in support of Miss Wilson. On the same date Eddie Lyons, and Lee Moran co-star in "Knights of the Bath Tub," a one-reel Nestor comedy scenarioized by Charles J. Wilson from the story by Dorothy Barrett, and produced by L. W. Chaudet. Fred Gamble and Priscilla Dean appear in support of the Nestor stars.

November 14 is the release date of "Honor Thy Country," a Gold Seal three-reel patriotic drama, featuring Neva Gerber and Charles Perley. There will be no regular Victor release this week, although a Special Victor, "A Case of Beans," a comedy featuring Fritzi Brunette, will more than offset this omission.

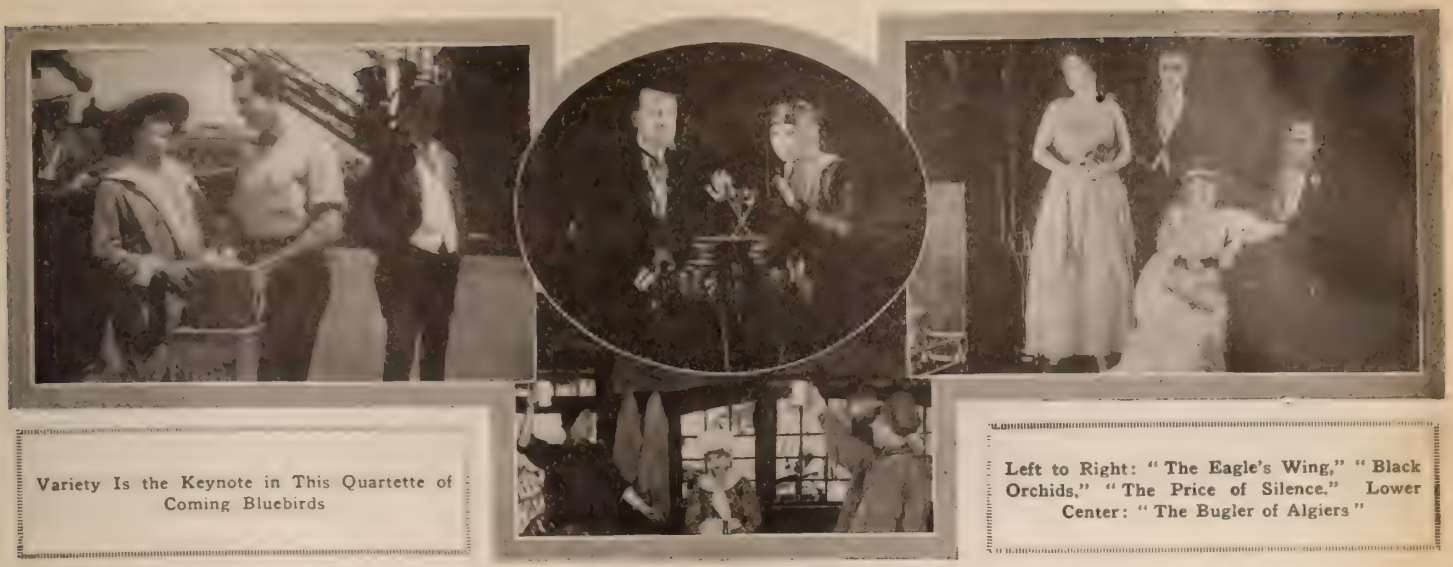
The L-Ko two-reel comedy, "A Million Dollar Smash," will be released on November 15, together with No. 46 of the Universal Animated Weekly. There will be no Laemmle release on this date. Lucille Hutton plays the lead in the L-Ko. On this date J. Warren Kerrigan plays the lead in "The Torment," a Special Big U drama, with a good plot and unusual theme.

Murdock MacQuarrie and Edyth Sterling are featured on November 16 in "Life's Maelstrom," a Big U two-reel human interest drama written by Murdock MacQuarrie and produced by Jay Hunt. Bud Chase, Harry Ham, G. A. Williams, W. L. Rodgers and Mrs. Jay Hunt appear in support of the principals. On the same date Betty Schade and Lloyd Whitlock, co-star in "The Diamond Lure," a Rex drama written and produced by John McDermott. Rex Rosselli plays an important role in the production. The Powers split-reel release of this date consists of "Motor Mat and His Fliv," a comedy cartoon, and "Ceylon," another of the famous $250,000 Dr. Dorsey educationals.

On November 17 Harry Carey and Edith Johnston, co-star in "Guilty," a two-reel Imp slum drama scenarioized by William Parker from the story by Ben Cohn and produced by Henry McRae. E. N. Walleck, L. C. Shumway, Peggy Coudray, Lee Hill and Marc Fenton enact the other principal roles.

"Kewpie" Morgan appears in person on the same date in the Nestor comedy, "A Capable Lady Cook," written by Harry Wulze and produced by Wallace Beery, who takes a principal role with Belle Bennet. T. Moreno appears in support of the triumvirate of stars. There will be no Rex release on November 17; instead the Special Big U, "The Long Search," an Indian and Western drama, will be put on the program.

"The Son of a Rebel Chief," a two-reel Civil War drama written and produced by William V. Mong, will be released on November 18, under the Bison brand. Mr. Mong takes the principal part, supported by Nellie Allen, Marc Fenton and Harry Holden. On the same date Gale Henry and William Franey, co-star in "Their First Arrest," a Joker comedy produced by W. W. Beaudine from the story of Smythe Addison. Milburn Moranti, Charles Conklin and Lillian Peacock also appear in the picture. There will be no Laemmle release on this date.



On Sunday, November 19, Millard K. Wilson and Edith Roberts, co-star, in "Lost in Babylon," a Rex drama written by Harvey Gates and produced by Mr. Wilson. Malcolm Blevine appear in support of the principals. On the same date Harry Carter, Lois Wilson and Lee Hill appear in the Victor comedy-drama, "Her Chance," which was written by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude. Wilbur Higby, Velta White and Lillian Concord appear in support. "The Thread of Life," a Special Imp two-reel melodrama written by Joseph Gollomb and produced by Ben Wilson, also will be released on this date. Frances Nelson appears with Mr. Wilson. This feature contains a fire scene which should make it of great interest to exhibitors and fans alike.

THIRD INSTALLMENT OF ALASKA PICTURES IN PICTOGRAPHS

The third installment of the pictures secured by Dr. George Burbank Shattuck, Professor of Geology in Vassar College, which he secured during his Alaskan tour a few months ago, will appear in a forthcoming release of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, showing some unique and interesting scenes along the principal waterways of Alaska, the Yukon and Tanana Rivers.

"VAMPIRE AMBROSE" IS A TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

So compelling in effect are the eyes of "Vampire Ambrose" in the new Triangle-Keystone comedy of that name that ice melts beneath his gaze, leaves wither and die on the trees and maidens follow him about wherever he goes.

The leading role in "Vampire Ambrose" is played by Mack Swain and this comedy, directed by Fred Fishback, is one of the funniest in the Ambrose series.

Because of the mesmeric gleam of Ambrose's orbs, he succeeds in winning wives away from their husbands, sweethearts away from their betrothed, grandmothers away from grandfathers and mothers away from their children.

Ambrose romps out of one complication into another one, and is the hero of one big thrill after another.

"MISS GEORGE WASHINGTON," WITH MARGUERITE CLARK, NOT TO APPEAR IN FAMOUS PLAYERS SUBJECT UNTIL NOVEMBER 20

"MISS GEORGE WASHINGTON," the story of a girl who could not tell the truth, in which Marguerite Clark is to star, has been designated by the Famous Players Film Company for release on the Paramount Program, November 20th. Though originally intended for the program in the latter part of October, when work on the production was actually begun, it was found that several elaborate settings which had not been included in the schedule would be required and the picture was necessarily delayed.

This is the photoplay which marks the first appearance of Marguerite Clark since her renewal of contract with the Famous Players, in the face of repeated reports that she was to desert the screen and return to the stage.

The story itself deals with a young school girl who finds it easier to fib her way out of predicaments than to tell the truth and face the music. Of course the gift of lying becomes a habit and she is soon in such a plight that she prefers to tell a lie rather than to tell the truth. Her real troubles begin when she introduces two total strangers to her mother as husband and wife. It looks like an easy way out of a scrape when they are all surprised in a perfectly innocent prank and of course the girl does not dream that these two will ever meet again.

But they do meet—right in the girl's home, and the complications which follow are amazing in their swiftness and intensity. Matters reach a climax when "Miss George's" mother attempts to force a reconciliation between the young "husband and wife" in order that they may occupy the same spare room. Enter at about this time the real fiance of the "wife" who finds her in her "husband's" arms for the purposes of a mock reconciliation which is staged in the morning after the "happy couple" have succeeded in eluding each other for the night. It is said that Miss Clark does some of the cleverest work of her career in this swiftly moving farce and that she shows clearly the benefit of her long vacation this summer—the first which she had had since becoming a Famous Players star two years ago.

"THE EAGLE'S WING" IS "BLUEBIRD EXTRAORDINARY" FOR STATES RIGHT PLAN

"THE Eagle's Wing" will be a "Bluebird Extraordinary," released independent of the regular program, on the states right plan, by Bluebird Exchanges. Rufus Steele wrote the story and secured the authentic scenes, taken in munition plants, by aid and consent of the U. S. Government. A pictoral reflection of "Industrial Preparedness."

Gertrude Glover and Richard Travers in Essanay's "What I Said Goes"

"Black Orchids," directed by Rex Ingram, will have Cleo Madison as its featured player. To be released on the Bluebird program in December.

"The Price of Silence," presenting Dorothy Phillips in the leading role. To be a Bluebird program release in December.

"The Bugler of Algiers," in which Ella Hall returns to the Bluebird program Nov. 27, with Rupert Julian and Kingsley Benedict featured with her. Written by Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, in collaboration with Perley Poore Sheehan, and published under the title of "We Are French."

"NANETTE OF THE WILDS" IS NEXT FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM WITH PAULINE FREDERICK

"Nanette of the Wilds" is announced as the next Famous Players release featuring Pauline Frederick to be released on the Paramount program, November 27. Willard Mack prepared the story for this picture and this popular dramatist and actor assumes the leading male role opposite Miss Frederick. The locale is the Canadian northwest and Director Joseph Kaufman and his entire company are now at work in the identical part of the continent in which the action transpires.

"Nanette of the Wilds" tells the story of the daughter of a leader of a band of smugglers who has been taught to entertain a fierce hatred for the members of the Northwest Mounted Police. Pierre, a notorious law-breaker, friend of Nanette's father, kills a member of the force and Nanette shields him. Then enters O'Brien, the cleverest member of the Northwest Mounted Police, who is put on the murder case. He traces Pierre to the door of Nanette's cabin. After this Nanette learns that the true reason for Pierre's crime was not heroic at all and gradually her heart softens towards the members of the force in general and O'Brien in particular.

General Film Program Offers Many Good Things for Week of November 13-18

IN the week of November 13-18, inclusive, "The Temptation of Adam," in three parts by Selig, will be ushered in on the General Film program. In this drama, Kathlyn Williams and Guy Oliver have the leading roles. "A Second Story Ringer," a Vitagraph comedy in one part will follow and then will come a reel of Selig-Tribune dealing with all the important news of the world. This will be followed by a Biograph one-part drama, "Near to Earth," featuring Lionel Barrymore.

A two-part Essanay drama, "Not in the News," presenting Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth will be the first picture thrown on the screen, Tuesday, November 14. This will be followed by Kalem's one-reel comedy, "The New Salesman," featuring "Ham," "Bud," Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch.

For the following day, an Essanay split reel of Canimated Nooz Pictorial and a scenic reel will be first shown. Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby will get the spot light in a Vim one-reel comedy "His Wedding Promise." "The Mystery of the Brass Bound Chest," the fifteenth episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco" will be screened then and in this Marin Sais and True Boardman have the titular roles. Biograph will close the day with a three-part drama "Lord Chumley," presenting Lillian Gish and Henry Walthall.

Selig-Tribune with all big events will usher in the program for Thursday, sharing honors with a Vim one-reel comedy, "Pipe Dreams," in which Kate Price and Babe Hardy provide the fun.

A Knickerbocker Star Feature, a drama in two parts, "The Target of Dreams," presenting Frank Mayo, will be the first picture seen Friday, November 17. Then will come Kalem's "Grant, Police Reporter" under the caption "The Rogue's Pawn" with George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby in the feature roles. "The Luck of Jane," a Vitagraph one-reel comedy will be next, followed by a Vim comedy of equal length, "Good and Proper" presenting "Pokes" and "Jabbs."

"His Moral Code," a three-part drama in which Lillian Drew and E. H. Calbert have the leads, will usher in the final day of the week. This will be followed by a Vitagraph three-part drama featuring Donald Hall in "The Man Who Went Sane." Then will be seen an episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series, with venturesome Helen Gibson in some daring feats. The week's program will close with a Selig one-part drama, "The Girl Detective," presenting Robyn Adair and Victoria Forde.

VIVIAN MARTIN BEGINS "THE WAX MODEL"

CLOSELY following the completion of Vivian Martin's forthcoming Pallas Pictures vehicle, "The Right Direction," which will be released on the Paramount Program in the near future, the popular star commenced activities on her newest production, "The Wax Model."

This story, by the well-known fictionist G. Very Tyler, created considerable attention in "The Smart Set" about a year ago and offers an admirable subject for Miss Martin in the characterization of petite Julie Davenant, the vivacious little daughter of a Parisian dancer. The character also provides the star with various opportunities to display her dramatic talent in several tense scenes which call for unusual emotional ability in contrast to the usual capricious nature of the flirtatious Julie. Fourteen gowns are being used by Miss Martin in this picture.

A feature of the new Martin photoplay is the unusual number of elaborate sets required by the story, the most pretentious of which is an immense view of the fashionable shop of the Frenchman Hermineux with its mirror-paneled walls, rich furnishings and large plate-glass showcases containing costly gowns. Another exceptional set representing a large drawing-room and conservatory, occupies the entire floor space of stage Number Two at the Pallas studios. Various artistic scenic and lighting effects are also being staged.

Thomas Holding, who recently became affiliated with the Pallas organization and has gained much prominence in the photoplay world under the Famous Players' banner, appears opposite Miss Martin in the role of Melville Ilchester, the handsome Englishman, who falls in love with Julie. Particular care has been evidenced in selecting each member of the cast, which includes Helen Jerome Eddy as Helen Ilchester, Pietro Buzzi as Hermineux, and Marion Sievers as Julie's mother. The production is being staged under the chief direction of E. Mason Hopper with James Van Trees in charge of the camera work.

"ENLIGHTEN THY DAUGHTER," FROM IVAN

Ivan Abramson, director-general of the Ivan Film Productions will shortly begin work on a new feature entitled "Enlighten Thy Daughter," which he promises will be a most extraordinary picture. The cast embraces such well-known players as Katherine Kaelred, Marie Shotwell, Zena Keefe, Louise Horner, Frank Sheridan, James Morrison and Arthur Donaldson.

The next year will see Mr. Abramson at work on a number of special features, while he will produce twelve six-reelers.

DISCOVERY OF LAW OF GRAVITATION SHOWN IN PICTOGRAPHS

COMEDY and the clay modeler's art is combined in a plastique representation of Sir Isaac Newton's discovery of the law of gravitation, which will be shown in motion pictures in a forthcoming release of the Paramount Pictographs, the "magazine-on-the-screen." In this wonderful addition to scientific knowledge that an apple falls downward and not upward, was discovered by a most peculiar accident, in which Sir Isaac and his pet dog played the roles of the leading male characters.

Ashley Miller, a recent addition to the art department of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, has supplied in this picture the exact details of how this was accomplished and which has never before been made public. It has always been supposed that the incident was one of great gravity, judging from the results that followed, but as a matter of fact it was a most frivolous affair, and the only occasion on which Sir Isaac was known to have lost his dignity.

McCLURE PLAYERS ANSWER CALL TO COLORS

When motion picture audiences go to see "Pride," the second of the McClure series, Seven Deadly Sins, in which Holbrook Blinn is to star, they will see Le Comte de Frais and La Baronne d'Arboz moving through the play with all of the dignity necessary to their noble roles, but the players who created these parts, Guido Colucci and his wife, Lena D'Avril, will be overseas, doing their bits for the Allies.

Mr. Colucci is an Italian reservist, who before his connection with McClure Pictures, appeared in Metro, World and Ivan Pictures. Recently he was featured by Edison in a five-reel feature, "The Tell-Tale Step." Just as he was completing his work in "Pride" he received word that his class had been called to the Italian colors, and he stepped out of his role of Count to serve as a common soldier in the ranks.

His wife, whose stage name is Lena D'Avril, played La Baronne d'Arboz in "Pride." She is a French girl, and was well-known in Paris as a dancer before coming to this country. When her husband marched away, the wife realized that a place near her husband in that shell-swept country was better than the fascinations of studio life in peaceful America, and so she went with him to become a Red Cross nurse.

Mutual Weekly Sweeps Broadway with First Pictures of Submarine

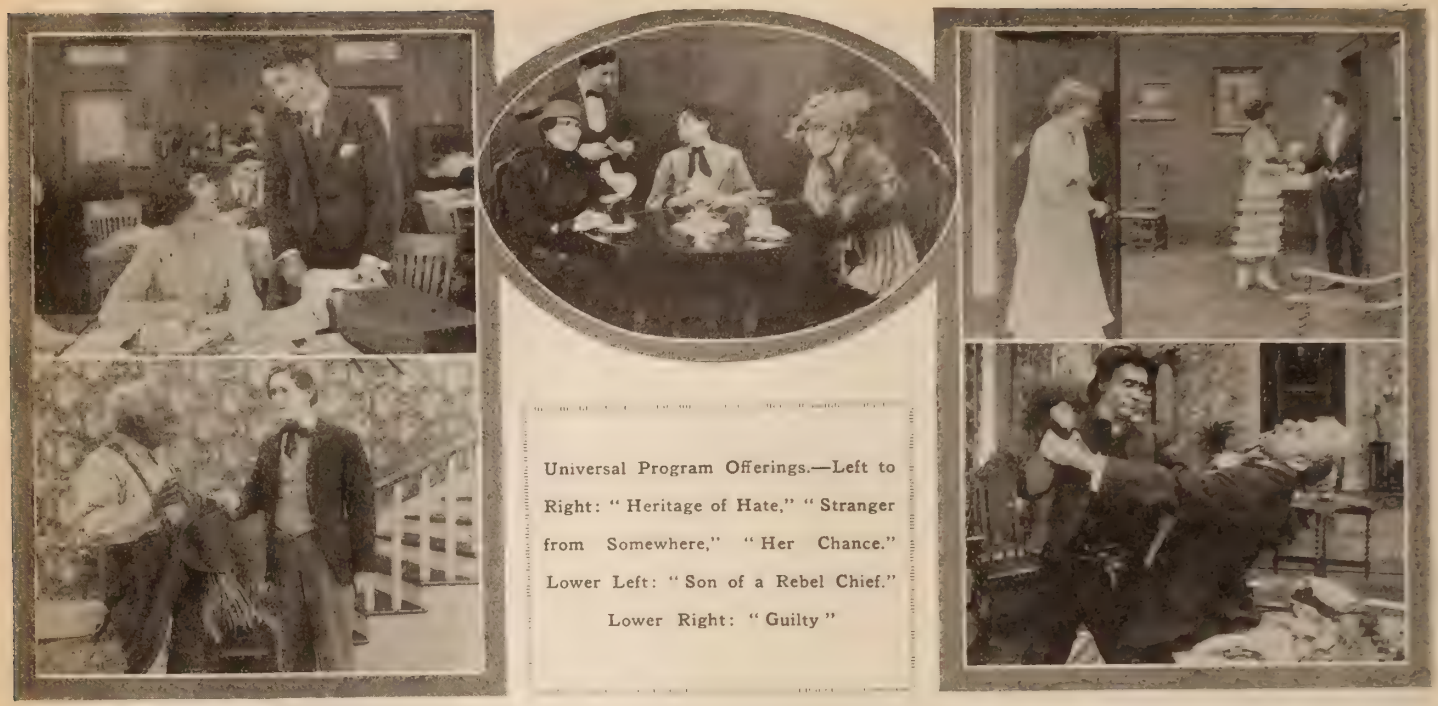
THE Mutual Weekly was rewarded for having used a special train in rushing its editor to New London to get pictures of the Deutschland by having a clean sweep of Broadway with its film late the same afternoon. The whole episode illustrates the trouble taken by the Gaumont Company, manufacturer of the reel, to secure absolutely the latest news and put it on the screen at the earliest possible moment.

At 2 o'clock Wednesday morning Editor Pell Mitchell was awakened by a telephone call from one of his news sources. He had already visited New London to learn how to work in an emergency and also knew the times the regular trains departed. Remembering that the next train left at 4:41 and was so slow a local that it did not reach New London until the middle of the morning, Mr. Mitchell had no hesitation in ordering a special train from the New Haven railway. By the time he reached the Grand Central station with a cameraman an engine with a combination coach and baggage car was waiting for him.

Arriving in New London, the Mutual men went at once to a high building overlooking the Deutschland's berth and shot a number of feet from that point of vantage. Mr. Mitchell had previously picked out this spot as one from which he could get a picture without interference. The rest of the morning was spent in negotiating with the authorities for other pictures.

The return to New York was made on an express train arriving at 3:10 P. M. Mr. Mitchell had his own Scripps-Booth car waiting and made the run to the Gaumont Laboratories at Flushing through crowded traffic in less than 30 minutes. From the time he reached New York until the film was developed, titled and printed only one hour and thirty-five minutes elapsed. The film was hurried back to Broadway, and at half past five spectators in leading motion picture houses were viewing the celebrated German undersea boat which only that morning had reached New London. What they did not see was the bill for the cost. It figured out over $10 a foot.

VITAGRAPH RELEASES ON GENERAL FILM PROGRAM



During the week of November 13, the Vitagraph Company offers two single-reel comedies and a three-part Broadway Star Feature on the General Film program.

On Monday, 13th, the release through the General Film exchanges is "A Second Story Ringer," a one-reel comedy. "The Luck of Jane" is listed for the 17th.

A Broadway Star Feature, "The Man Who Went Sane," featuring Donald Hall, is released on Saturday, the 18th. This three-reel production is an intense drama which was directed by Thomas R. Mills and tells a story of a man who finds his real self after a life which has promised good to none. Other releases are "The Fasters," one-reel comedy, November 20, featuring Mary Anderson, directed by William Wolbert, written by Paul West"; "Justice a la Carte," one-reel comedy, November 24, directed by John Robertson; "Taking the Honey Out of Honeymoon," one-reel comedy, November 27, directed by George Plympton, written by George Plympton and C. Graham Baker.

"The Garden of Allah" Is a Spectacle of Large Scenic Proportions and Will Be Completed by Selig Before First of Year

A CAST of star players headed by Helen Ware, thousands of supernumaries, several hundred Arabs, caravans of camels, and entire streets built of stone in exact imitation of desert towns of the Sahara are but items in the most massive motion picture spectacle the Selig Polyscope Company every made, namely "The Garden of Allah."

William N. Selig, who supervised all plans for the filming of Robert Hichen's novel has stated that "The Garden of Allah" is the very last word in motion picture production from his studios. His assertion is supported by Colin Campbell, the director, who has stated that "The Garden of Allah" is the most expensive and the most artistic production he ever directed. This must be going some when "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "The Crisis," "The Rosary" and other productions produced by Mr. Campbell are taken into consideration.

It is stated that there is not a scene and not a subtitle in the Selig production that is foreign to the book, "The Garden of Allah." From beginning to ending the wonderful atmosphere and plot of Robert Hichen's work is retained in every detail.

Helen Ware takes the role of Domini and Thomas Santschi enacts the part of Boris. They are ably supported by a cast of players which includes Al W. Filson and Eugenie Besserer as Lord and Lady Rens; Harry Lonsdale as Father Roubier; Cecil Holland as Hadj; James Bradbury as the Sand Diviner; Frank Clark as Father Beret; Will Machin as Captain de Trevignac; Little Billy Jacobs as the child, and many others.

There are many unusual lighting effects, many colorful scenes, and the photography is said to be clear-cut and beautiful. Among the more thrilling situations in the drama can be named the desert sandstorm; the charge of the Bedouins upon a defenseless caravan; the fight at night in The Street of the Dancers; the meeting between Boris and Captain De Trevignac, and the forecast of The Sand Diviner.

For the scene in "The Garden of Allah," exclusive permission was granted the Selig Company to film the gardens of the Santa Barbara Mission, which are startling in their beauty and grandeur.

The story of "The Garden of Allah," it will be recalled, is a particularly strong one. The novel is considered a classic and Mary Anderson scored a triumph in a stage version of the novel before the screen version was written by Gilson Willets for the Selig Company.

Scene from "The Devil's Double" (Ince-Triangle)

Domini Enfinden, when her mother eloped, and her father died cursing religion, went to Beni-Mora, an oasis near the African desert of Sahara in an endeavor to find peace—to forget her many sorrows. There the woman of thirty-two years, meets a stranger—a man of mystery. Their friendship finally ripens into love and they are married. Finally, Domini finds out who her husband really is. Then comes her sacrifice, a wonderful one, and the return of conscience to her husband.

Helen Ware is given every opportunity for strong emotional work, and she is ably supported by Mr. Santschi. Their love scenes together have been termed powerful in every respect.

"The Garden of Allah" will be released before the first of the year in ten reels. There will be a special musical score and elaborate exploitation.

TOM MIX PLANS DARING FEAT FOR "TWISTED TRAILS"

In "Twisted Trails" the three-reel Western drama in course of production, Tom Mix will attempt a feat that has never been performed and probably will not be duplicated, for not every actor thinks so lightly of his own safety as does Tom Mix.

Over a seventy-five foot chasm Mix has placed a fallen tree of ordinary size, and over this foothold he will ride a horse. One false step and it would be painful to contemplate the fate of both rider and horse.

GEORGE LE GUERE ELECTROCUTED—ALMOST

George Le Guere, playing the leading male role in the McClure series "Seven Deadly Sins," reaches the electric chair in the third number entitled "Greed." He gets in this precarious position through his constant endeavors to save the heroine, Eva Leslie (Shirley Mason) from trouble. The sinister character of the play which is portrayed by Nance O'Neill, manages to release him, in the nick of time of course.

"THE SUNBEAM," FEATURING MABEL TALIAFERRO, METRO RELEASE FOR NOVEMBER 27, ADAPTED FROM STORY BY SHANNON FIFE

The Metro play, "The Sunbeam," with Mabel Taliaferro as star, will be released November 27. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., is the company producing this picture for the Metro program. Edwin Carewe directed "The Sunbeam." The photography was done by A. A. Cadwell.

"The Sunbeam" is Miss Taliaferro's first photoplay since her other feature, "The Dawn of Love." It is the joint product of Shannon Fife and June Mathis, who provided the artist with "God's Half Acre." Mr. Fife wrote the original story of "The Sunbeam" and Miss Mathis adapted it for the screen.

The part of Prué Mason, "the sunbeam," is taken by Miss Taliaferro. Prue lives with her old grandmother in a crowded tenement district. Working with her in a candy factory, and living with her and "Granny" is Danny O'Maddigan, a product of the reformatory.

Across the hall lives a young widow, Ellen Rutherford, with her little son, Bobby, who is the grandson of Stephen Rutherford, the rich candy manufacturer for whom Prue and Danny work. The old man had disinherited his son when he married beneath his station. At the risk of losing her position, Prue, "the sunbeam," determines to make Rutherford wake up to a sense of his responsibilties.

At first he refuses to listen to her, but fate aids Prue in her plans, and an automobile accident results in placing Bobby under his grandfather's roof. Prue's method of keeping him there, and of getting Rutherford's permission for his mother to join him, forms one of the prettiest episodes ever written for the screen.

Miss Taliaferro, as Prue, is supported by a distinguished cast including Gerald Griffin, the veteran "globe-trotting actor," who plays Rutherford; Raymond McKee, who plays Prue's youthful sweetheart; Gladys Alexandria, a recruit from the dramatic stage, formerly leading woman in "The Miracle Man," and Mrs. Breyer, who plays Granny. Underworld characters are played by Louis Wolheim, Eddie Reddway and Daniel Bertona.

SELIG CHANGES NAME OF NOVEMBER 6 RELEASE

"So Shall Ye Reap" is the name of a Selig production to be released Monday, November 6, in General Film Service. The name has been changed from "As Ye Sow." The production, "So Shall Ye Reap" is of unusual excellence, and according to advance reviews, one that will attract any motion picture audience.

Triangle November 26 Releases Include "The Devil's Double"

WILLIAM S. HART and Lillian Gish are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for the week of November 26th. Mr. Hart appears in a Kay-Bee production of original plot and primitive strength, entitled "The Devil's Double," written for him by J. G. Hawks. Enid Markey and Robert McKim are featured in his support. Miss Gish has a vehicle well suited to her personality in the Fine Arts production of the "The Children Pay," written by Frank E. Woods and directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

"The Devil's Double" is the story of the regeneration of "Bowie" Blake, ex-outlaw, faro-dealer and man-killer through the strange influences that bring him into contact with a beautiful and spiritual woman. Van Dyke Tarleton, a painter of genius, becomes broken in health through overwork upon his masterpiece, "Lucifer, Son of the Morning." His beautiful wife is his inspiration for all the high qualities in his work, but he is unable to find any model with a face wicked enough to pose for Lucifer.

He is ordered to the desert of Arizona by his physician, and in Tophet, one of the worst towns of the border, meets "Bowie" Blake, the bad man, who typifies for him the exact reproduction of Lucifer in the flesh. He tries to get Blake to pose for him, but is repulsed. He then urges his wife to win the gambler's consent, and after a dramatic meeting Blake agrees to pose to please the woman who has tamed his savage spirit by her gentle and idealistic nature.

In "The Children Pay" Lillian Gish takes the part of Millicent Ainsley, the eldest of two young girls whose lives are badly handicapped because of the neglect of their parents, whose selfish interests have culminated in a sensational divorce. The girls grow up under the guardianship of an old servant, but are looked upon with suspicion by the neighbors who spread cruel bits of gossip about them. A young lawyer named Craig, who comes to fill a temporary vacancy in the local school, takes an interest in the welfare of the girls, and when they are summoned to court to figure in the final settlement of their parents' divorce, Craig volunteers to represent them. Although the girls desire to live together and know that they will be extremely unhappy if forced to separate, the court is obliged to award one child to the mother and the other to the father. Conditions under the new arrangement soon prove intolerable, however, and the children run away together. They are brought to court again. As a way out of their dilemma, the judge suggests that if the older girl were married he could award her the custody of her sister. Craig, whose unselfish devotion has won Millicent's love, proposes and is accepted. Thus their troubles end.

MAX LINDER COMING HERE TO MAKE COMEDIES FOR ESSANAY

Max Linder, the comedian, is now on his way to America from Liverpool, England, to take up his work in Essanay pictures. Mr. Linder sailed Tuesday, October 31. On his arrival in New York, he will be met by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay and will then proceed to Chicago, where he will commence work on a new line of comedies.

Mr. Linder's work is probably better known on the continent than it is in the United States. For the French Pathe company he produced comedies for eleven years and most of these were handled by the Pathe Exchanges on this side of the water. His popularity abroad is shown by the fact that one company is now negotiating with Mr. Spoor for the release of all his film on the continent. A representative from China and Japan has bid for the pictures also.

Two years ago Mr. Linder quit the stage and studio and when the war broke out offered his entire personal fortune and services to the French government. He acted as a scout both in the automobile and aeroplane services, furnishing his own machines. While on an aeroplane expedition he was seriouly wounded and lay in a military hospital for several months.

It was in the hospital at Contrexville that President Spoor opened negotiations with Mr. Linder through H. A. Spoor, European representative of Essanay. Mr. Linder was loath to leave the services of the French army but finally decided to devote a large portion of his salary to the cause.

Four Single-Reels Regularly Every Week Is Gaumont Plan—The Program for Week of November 12

THE second week that Gaumont releases four single reels through Mutual opens with "Reel Life," No. 28, Sunday, November 12. The leading subjects for this issue include pictures of the routine life of our coast guards, as well as their activities when a storm has wrecked a vessel near the shore. A second section shows how the cost of living has advanced in recent years. The diagrams are based upon Government data.

The second single reel of the week brings to the screen the second number of the new release, "Tours Around the World," November 14. There are views of the Russian Arctic port of Archangel, during six months of the year the port of entry for Russian war munitions from the Western World. Next comes pictures of Amsterdam, and the third section shows Rouen, well behind the firing line in France. The fourth is distinctly scenic, showing the Gorges of the Vesubie River, a torrent in France's Maritime Alps.

The third release, November 15, shows Hot Springs, Ark., in the "See America First" series. The springs are on a United States Government reservation, insuring that the property is so well kept up that the pictures are of rare beauty. On the same reel is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic, animated by Harry Palmer. It is called "Back to Youth," and depicts the humorous results that follow the taking of a bottle of "elixir of youth" by a decrepit old man.

The fourth Gaumont single reel is The Mutual Weekly.

CURRAN OF THANHOUSER AS AN AUSTRALIAN

Thomas A. Curran, the villain in "The World and the Woman," starring Jeanne Eagles, which will shortly be released by Thanhouser on the Pathe program, is an Australian. He came to San Francisco while yet young and there entered into stock and vaudeville, playing the cities on the Pacific Coast. At the expiration of these engagements he returned to his native land and toured the Antipodes in musical comedy.

In 1912 he returned to the United States and had prominent roles in the play, "Oh, Oh, Delphine" and "Excuse Me." His attention was then drawn to motion pictures and after several engagements with Metro, Universal and Famous Players he joined the Thanhouser forces. He has appeared in "Inspiration," "Silas Marner," "The Pillory," "A Modern Monte Cristo," and "The Vicar of Wakefield."

A Few Characteristic Scenes from "Love's Law," Released November 27

"Yellow Pawn" Is Vehicle for Cleo Ridgely and Reid—It Will Be Released on Paramount Program November 23

CLEO RIDGELY and Wallace Reid, who have won success in the Lasky production "The House of the Golden Windows," "The Selfish Woman," "The Love Mask" and "The Golden Chance," are to be co-starred on the Paramount Program in "The Yellow Pawn," which is scheduled for release on Nov. 23. It is seldom that two stars who appear jointly achieve such remarkable success as these two youthful players have won in the short time that they have been appearing together.

In "The Yellow Pawn" Mr. Reid plays the role of a young artist and Miss Ridgely is a girl who, though in love with the artist, marries a lawyer at the instance of her father, who represents himself as being penniless. Believing that Allan Perry, a prosperous district attorney, will be an ideal match for his daughter Kate, old Mr. Turner persuades the girl to marry him, despite the fact that she has lost her heart to James Weldon, a young artist whom she has met quite by accident.

Perry soon develops an insane jealousy of his wife, and she is wretched. Weldon becomes famous, and Perry takes her to the artist to have her portrait painted. Tom Weldon, an impecunious brother of the artist, discovers that Kate and James are old friends, and sells the information to Perry. Perry, however, fails to discover any irregularity in his wife's conduct.

Weldon's servant, Sen Yat, catches Tom in the act of robbing his master's desk, and stabs him in the struggle which follows. Circumstantial evidence points to the guilt of either Kate or her sister Marian, and Perry determines to employ a ruse in order to ascertain whether or not the artist is really in love with his wife. Sure in his own mind that such is the case, Perry is on the point of shooting Weldon from a gallery in which he is concealed, when he is stabbed by the faithful Oriental, who then declares that it was he who killed Tom.

All barriers now removed, Kate and Weldon are at last united. Among those in support of the stars are William Conklin, Tom Forman, Olive Golden, C. H. Geldert and George Webb.

"THE CRISIS" OPENINGS TO BE SIMULTANEOUS

"The Crisis," William N. Selig's pretentious photoplay drama, the selling rights for the entire United States and Canada of which have been acquired by Sherman-Elliott, Inc., will be given simultaneous presentation in many of the important cities of the country according to plans which have just been perfected for the various premiers.

The Sherman-Elliott Company has arranged with territorial buyers for the simultaneous openings of the ten-reel feature in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, New Orleans, Memphis, St. Louis, and Jackson, Mississippi, as well as in the principal cities of the East, possibly including New York and Philadelphia and Boston on or about November 19-24. Each of these openings will be exploited "the Sherman way," exceptional facilities having been provided the exhibitor in the way of a most complete line of paper, photos, heralds, lobby displays, and other advertising matter with numerous selections to choose from.

In addition to these metropolitan or big town showing, a number of the state right buyers contemplate sending out road companies, a conservative estimate placing the number of "Crisis" prints actually in use by December 1 at fifty.

Warner Attractions has California and Arizona rights to "The Crisis."

ALICE BRADY'S CHRISTMAS PRESENT TO PUBLIC

Alice Brady in "A Woman Alone" will be a World Film Corporation, Christmas present to the public, having its release on December 25, which is Christmas Day this year, according to habit.

"MEASURE OF A MAN" IS A BLUEBIRD SET FOR NOVEMBER 27 RELEASE

"The Measure of a Man," will be released November 20 by Bluebird and "The Bugler of Algiers" is set for distribution November 27.

J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely will be co-stars in "The Measure of a Man," produced by Jack Conway among the redwood trees of California. Norman Duncan wrote the story and Maud Grange provided the scenario. In this feature Kerrigan has the best role he has ever appeared in, impersonating a "fighting parson" who converts a lumber camp to right living by exhorting them when they will listen and by chastising them when they will not heed.

Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, collaborated with Perley Poore Sheehan in writing "We Are French" the story upon which "The Bugler of Algiers" is founded. Ella Hall returns to her Bluebird admirers in this feature after an absence of over three months. Rupert Julian directed the piece and will be Miss Hall's leading man, with Kingsley Benedict featured, Patriotism and loyalty is the inspiration of the characters in this feature, an incident in one of the episodes prompting the picture-title "The Bugler of Algiers."

On December 4 Hobart Henley and Gertrude Selby will lead a Bluebird company in the presentation of "The Sign of the Poppy" in which Mr. Henley plays a dual role. Cleo Madison will make another Bluebird appearance during December in "Black Orchids," a production written and directed by Rex Ingram with Wedgewood Nowell and Howard Crampton chief in her support. "The Price of Silence" will be another December Bluebird, introducing Dorothy Phillips in a story written by W. Carey Wonderly and directed by Joseph De Grasse.

UNICORN IN NEW HAVEN SHOWS "BILLY WEST SPECIALS"

During the past week, the New Haven, Conn., branch of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, under the management of John Pavonne, gave a screening for the trade at the Comique theatre on Church Street, of the first of the "Billy West Specials."

The first, which is entitled "His Married Life," depicts the misfortunes of an unhappy Benedick whose better half is a woman of an unusually strong character.

Mr. Pavonne will give weekly trade showings of all the subjects released by the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, including, "When Hands are Idle," a sensational drama of contemporaneous society, featuring Barbara Castleton, the former star of Madame Sherry, and other stage successes.

STIRRING SCENE IN COMING WORLD PRODUCTION

Through the witchery of a beautiful girl who is mad, a coast beacon is neglected by its keeper and a ship goes ashore, forming one of the stirring episodes of "The Madness of Helen," a World-Brady picture play to be released November 20. Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell are the stars in this production.

"The Vampires," Episode One, "The Detective's Head," Will Reach the Screen on November 23

THE first episode of Gaumont's long heralded "The Vampires" will reach the screen through Mutual, November 23. This is called "The Detective's Head," and is a complete story in three reels. Were the story of the voyage of the film to America told in detail it would prove as entertaining as the most exciting chapter of this photoplay novel.

Being the story of the great French crime trust, the pictures were made in Paris and wherever throughout France the mysterious bandits had operated. The film was sent to America through the war zone, and narrowly escaped the celebrated U-53 which was in its path off Nantucket. However, every episode is safely in America now, and will be released weekly.

The first episode is called "The Detective's Head." A detective sent from Paris to St. Clement to investigate a crime supposed to be the work of the Vampires, mysteriously disappears. His headless body is found, and Philip Guard—the hero of the screen novel—undertakes to solve the puzzle of the missing head. He is a reporter for a prominent Parisian daily, and brings to his work a reportorial nose for news and youthful enthusiasm. The part is played by Edmond Mathe, one of the matinee idols of France.

Another important character destined to appear in the entire novel is Normandin, pires who joins Philip Guard, is attempting a member of the outer circle of the Vam- to bring them to justice. Through him a pleasing comedy element is introduced, something spectators are coming more and more to appreciate no matter how tense the drama.

UNITY SALES CORPORATION WILL RELEASE NINTH EPISODE OF "THE YELLOW MENACE" AS "THE CRYSTAL GLOBE"

THE Unity Sales Corporation will release the ninth episode of "The Yellow Menace" Serial this week, under the title of "The Crystal Globe." A new turn in the thrilling events of this picture takes place in this episode, since the action revolves more around a battle of wits than actual hand to hand conflicts and their murderous results, which have characterized many of the earlier episodes.

The War Department is amazed to learn that Ali Singh has stolen a plan of our eastern coast defenses and the drawings of a new gun just invented are also missing. Manning and his secret service aids are urged by the government to use every means to recover the stolen property from Ali Singh and his band of daring assistants, but the government agents are subjected to terrible danger before they are able to accomplish any results. The papers are recovered and the action is revealed in a powerful scene which is enacted on the top of a high building.

In this episode also we see Ali Singh revealed in his role as master of mysticism, to which he resorts with telling force, Najla being his victim. Because of her anxiety for the safety of Manning and his associates, Ali Singh believes that by applying his knowledge of the mysterious power of mysticism he can force her to disclose the secret of Manning's new abode. The unlucky girl in terror is made to submit to Ali Singh's gruelling examination, and by compelling her to gaze in a crystal globe the secret hiding place of the government agents becomes known to Ali Singh.

The treatment of this subject is handled in a very novel manner in this episode, and its introduction is sure to appeal to moving picture devotees.

"Bobby Bumps at the Circus" Is a Paramount-Bray Cartoon Drawn by Earl Hurd, Released November 23

EARL HURD has added another extremely funny animated cartoon to his already long list of successes in this line in the Paramount-Bray cartoon, "Bobby Bumps at the Circus," which will be released by Paramount Pictures Corporation as one of "its little features" on November 23rd.

Bobby Bumps, while out on a stroll runs across the posters of Bailum and Barney's circus. As he is giving them the once-over, his little pup begins to scratch himself and Bobby also gets the habit. Then the pup inquires if it is a flea circus.

Bobby then asks the animal keeper if he may carry the water for the elephants. He carries about twenty buckets before his little pup finds out that the keeper has been switching elephants on him. Bobby empties the contents of the last two pails on the keeper then runs home and tries to separate his father from the price of two tickets to the circus.

His father tells him to run along and play as he cannot be bothered until he has finished balancing his books. The old man then goes out to light his pipe and Bobby and the pup balance the books and call pop in to take a look. Papa walks in to find Bobby and the pup juggling the books on their feet. They drop the books on the floor as pop almost has a stroke of apoplexy.

The old man then chases them to the circus tent and Bobby and the pup crawl through. As pop goes to crawl through the circus bouncer lets him have the horse-whip over his rear elevation. Bobby and the pup think the circus is tame so jump on one of the horses and show the crowd how acrobatics on horseback should be performed.

Bobby brings down the house and is invited to the manager's office, who wants him to accept a roll of bills, but just as he is about to take them his pop pokes his knob in the window and yanks him out. One of the bills is dropped to the floor and as Bobby's faithful pup is about to pick it up he has a few choice dog visions of devils and angels, but finally decides to pick it up for the sake of his young master.

Bobby is stretched over his father's knee, and as the old man is about to open the throttle the pup jumps up to the window sill and deposits the $500 bill to the old man, who forgets the spanking due his son as he lovingly caresses the banknote of his native land.

BLACKWELL ISLAND WORKSHOP DUPLICATED IN A FOX FILM

One of the novel sets erected in a William Fox studio duplicates the workshop for girls on Blackwell's Island. The scene is incorporated in Virginia Pearson's new screen drama which Kenean Buel is filming.

Leap from Balloon Is the Thrilling Episode in "The Awakening"

THE big thrill in the seventh episode of Pathe's serial, "The Shielding Shadow," produced by Astra, is the leap from a balloon into the sea. This episode is entitled "The Awakening," and is announced for release on November 12.

This is another big chapter with a runaway balloon set on fire in the clouds by a time-bomb. Leontine's escape in a parachute and Ravengar's descent hand-underhand down the anchor rope before making his dizzy drop into the sea, will keep audiences straight-backed and breathless to the last foot of the picture.

That interest-compelling character, One Lamp Louie, again becomes Sebastian's active tool. It is he who makes the attempt on Leontine's life. After her entrance in the balloon race, Ravengar, her mysterious protector, is imprisoned in the house of Bianca, queen of the underworld.

The race starts, and when the balloon carrying Leontine and the man who she thinks is her mechanician is high in the air, it catches fire. Leontine with the parachute lands in the water safely, and her companion does a sensational drop into the sea near her. She rescues him, and drags him to her floating parachute.

She then discovers that he wears a wig. When he is unconscious; she takes it off and recognizes her rescuer as her mysterious friend, Ravengar. How did he escape from his cellar prison?

Lester E. Matt, manager of the Strand Photoplay Company, of Flint, Mich., says: "I am sure this serial will down all records for this theatre."

Marguerite Clark Fibs Delightfully in "Miss George Washington," a Famous Players-Paramount

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THIS is a true story. It is told in a letter from a settlement worker in a large Canadian city, that shows the ethical influence of motion pictures upon a young and impressionable mind.

In a Canadian city a Band of Hope meets every Monday in the poorer quarter of town. One day a pale-faced little boy placed a note shyly in the teacher's hand, asking that she pray for Earle Williams.

She agreed to add him to her prayers. The boy seemed very grateful and said that he had begun to be a better boy since trying to do the good things done by Mr. Williams. Among such things, he said, were helping an old lady across the street telling the truth, etc.

Interested in this trait in the child, the teacher secured him light work after school hours with a doctor friend of hers. Things went smoothly for a while. But one day the boy came to her in distress, saying he had run away from the doctor.

The reason for this was that the doctor, wishing to take a nap, had instructed the lad to tell people he was not in. This was too much for the little chap. To the teacher he sobbed that he could not tell lies—that Earle Williams could not tell lies, and that Earle Williams would never be able to think well of him if he did. However, the boy was induced to go back to the doctor and resume his duties, the doctor promising he would not expect him to do anything that his hero might not do.

That the child had been deeply affected by the good qualities he saw in his screen hero was more positively demonstrated a few days later. He came to the teacher in tears, and gave her a purse containing $450 in cash and valuable papers that he had found. He confessed that he had kept this for three days, tempted to retain it for his poverty-stricken father, mother and sister, but that his thoughts of Earle Williams had finally compelled him to resist.

The boy is now at a country home under medical attendance by the doctor. His young life is ebbing fast, for he has long been suffering from heart trouble and is tubercular. The letter was written to Mr. Williams because of a wish the boy has expressed several times. It is that after he dies a little present that he has laid aside may be sent Mr. Williams if he will accept it.

It is hardly necessary to say that Mr. Williams has written expressly for this little boy's eyes an earnest and comforting reply.

Oysters on the Half Shell

While filming some thrill scenes in "The Secret Kingdom," the Louis Joseph Vance serial, being produced by Vitagraph, Charles Richman, Arline Pretty, Dorothy Kelly, Wm. Dunn and De Jalma West, and a dozen others of the company felt the pangs of hunger.

Director Charles Brabin had the party of Vitagraphers out on the water at Huntington, L. I., on an oyster boat. They were working, under pressure, to complete the scenes they had undertaken. They were far from shore. Lunch time arrived. There was no lunch.

It is now time to pause amidst the dismay to explain that an oyster boat is equipped with a dredge forward. When not being employed for motion picture purposes, an oyster boat finds use for the dredge. Mr. Brabin whispered to the oysterman. "Sure," said the latter.

There was a rattling of ropes in blocks, the dredge dropped, and a haggard crowd with eyes on the water waited.

It is pleasant to relate that the oysterman had aboard a couple of dozen cartons of oyster crackers. They served elegantly to eat with five or six bushels of oysters brought up from the bottom of Long Island Sound. That's all, except that Charles Richman won the oyster opening contest.

In the forthcoming feature picture, "The Little Brown Sparrow," directed by Paul Scardon, three of Vitagraph's child actors do a daring stunt. At least the script called for a daring stunt, and the picture will show it being accomplished. But the best part of the thing is that the feat was done without the slightest inconvenience to them.

Earle Williams will start work this week in a Blue Ribbon Feature entitled "Arsen Lupin," an adaptation for the screen of the well known detective story. Contrary to a notice sent out last week, Marguerite Bertsch will not direct Mr. Williams in this production. To her has been assigned a new production with the dainty Anita Stewart in the title role. Paul Scardon will produce the picture and has already planned the details of sets, costumes and made other necessary arrangements.

Lillian Walker plays the title role in a new Vitagraph feature which is being directed by Wilfrid North. Jewell Hunt, who has won many friends with her characterizations in Vitagraph pictures, will be seen in this film with Miss Walker.

Anita Stewart has completed her last scenes in "The Girl Philippa" and will immediately start work in a new feature which is remarkably well adapted to her type. The story is that of a young girl and the dainty star is delighted with her role. Marguerite Bertsch will direct Miss Stewart in this picture.

John Robertson, who has been seen in a number of Vitagraph films, is now a full-fledged director. His first picture, now under way, has in its cast the popular English star, Peggy Hyland, Marc MacDermott and little Bobby Connelly.

The mystery of Pauline Frederick's frequent disappearance into the wilds of Mountain Lake, N. J., under the guise of a vacation has at last been explained. The Famous Players star was not vacationing after all, but was hunting locations! She had been given a copy of the script of her next picture, which is a story of the Canadian Northwest written by Willard Mack, and she had quietly proceeded to spend part of her leisure hours in seeking out suitable spots in which to stage the exterior parts of the picture. When Joseph Kaufman, who is in charge of the production, visited the locations under the guidance of Miss Frederick he declared that any time she tired of playing before the camera he would give her a position as his location scout.

No More for Owen Moore

Owen Moore stood waiting for a dinner scene in "Princess Zim Zim" in which he is being co-starred with Irene Fenwick by the Famous Players. Suddenly Del Henderson shouted for salad and the property man came forth bearing a huge bowl of lobster salad which he handed to the actor who was playing butler. It had just been sent over from the hotel across the street and looked irresistibly appetizing. "Confound it," groaned Moore, "and I just had two plates of ice cream for luncheon."

Louise Huff, having played an ultra-modern young lady in the Famous Players adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," is now going to play one of those delightfully quaint types to be found in the period concerning which the great Dickens wrote. This mere matter of shifting from one period of time to another over night is one of the easiest things which the motion picture star does, and Miss Huff, who has been a Quaker girl, a farmer's daughter, a waif rescued from the sea and other interesting types within the past year, has little difficulty in meeting the requirements of any director.

By a mere hair's breadth, a thrilling movie stunt by the players in Consolidated Film Corporation's serial, "The Crimson Stain Mystery," was prevented from becoming a tragedy the other day. It was the good right arm of Eugene Strong, the juvenile, that saved the day, and to that same right arm Eugene Strong and Ethel Grandin owe their lives.

Director T. Hayes Hunter and the company were taking the climax of the thirteenth episode of the serial. The scene was the Harlem River and a bridge spanning it. Ethel Grandin was kidnapped by the Crimson Stain gang and taken in a launch up the river to their hang-out. Eugene Strong gave pursuit and conceived the idea of lowering himself by a rope from the bridge to the river below. When the launch reached him he was to grasp Ethel Grandin in his arms and be hauled up by his friends on the bridge.

The stunt was done successfully. But just as Eugene Strong and Ethel Grandin were about to be pulled over the railing of the bridge the rope broke and they dropped. With quick presence of mind, Mr. Strong threw out his right arm and grasped the first thing that came within reach—a support of the bridge.

Mabel Taliaferro, Metro star who now is at work in the Rolfe Studies under the direction of John H. Collins on a new production which deals with society blackmailers, has received letters from Redfern, Paquin and Callot asking her to pose for them in gowns designed for next season.

The letters state that many women noted for their beauty have been considered by the famous dressmakers, and that Miss Taliaferro has been chosen as one among thousands.

Kid Broad Gets Realistic

In the Metro-Quality studios the other day "Kid" Broad, former featherweight celebrity, was going through a boxing scene with Andy Thompson for the Metro serial, directed by W. Christy Cabanne, in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are the stars.

"You've got to get more action into this," said Cabanne. "Now, Andy, you taunt the Kid just like John L. Sullivan used to do. You swear at the Kid and keep slapping your thigh with one hand and yelling, 'Come on, you mucker. Come on, you coward. Come on and fight.'"

Andy did. He yelled as if he meant it, and he kept creeping up toward Broad, not observing a wicked gleam in the former fighter's eye.

"You're a mut," yelled Andy. "Why don't you fight? 'Featherweight' was a good name for you." Then——

Biff! Out shot the Kid's left and down toppled Andy. When he came back from "Dreamland" Broad was leaning over him, with tears in his eyes.

"Honest, I didn't mean it, Andy," he said. "You talked like the fight was on the square and I forgot where I was and my left ran away from me."

"No more of this 'realistic' stuff for me," said Andy, who refused to go on with the "Fight scene."

While Mme. Petrova was at work recently at the Popular Plays and Players studios, on a forthcoming Metro feature, as yet unnamed, she noticed at the entrance a gray haired woman. As no one paid attention to the stranger the star went to her and asked:

"Is there anything I can do for you?"

"I am looking for work," she replied.

Mme. Petrova called Director Burton L. King and said:

"Here is just the type for the aged prima donna in our next picture."

"Oh, I could play that," spoke up the old lady, "years ago, before either of you were born, I was prominent in light opera."

The old lady got the part. She was a famous contralto fifty years ago.

Every man has some specialty or other, but George Melville of the Metro forces has a specialty that will not cause jealousy among his friends. Mr. Melville, who is one of the ablest character actors in the film world, specializes in stage dying. No matter what sort of a picture he appears in he always "dies." The directors say that he "dies better than any actor they know."

Officials of the Rolfe studios are rejoicing in the discovery of the remarkable talents of Mary Taylor, a dainty blonde of great emotional power. Miss Taylor will be seen in "The End of the Tour," a Metro-Rolfe feature play of theatrical life on the "one-night-stands," in which Lionel Barrymore will be starred. She will have the opportunity to display several phases of emotion, since in the new production she takes the part of three different women in a barn-storming company playing "Camille."

One of the most amazing scenes ever depicted on the screen is contained in "The Jockey of Death," the first of the Adventure Series of the International, which will be released on November 15. So realistic is the scene that one of the participants, Mlle. Evelyn, broke her ankle, but gamely continued until the action was completed.

Admirers of Harry Fox, who plays the part of Jimmy Barton, the energetic and resourceful reporter in the International's photoplay series, "Beatrice Fairfax," have begun to wonder if there is anything thrilling, daring or heroic that Harry cannot do. They will find out in the thirteenth episode of "Beatrice Fairfax," "The Ringer," that there is a limit even to his chivalry.

Mrs. Vernon Castle, who is appearing in the International's new preparedness serial, "Patria," had a narrow escape from drowning last week in Lake Cayuga, at Ithaca.

Mrs. Castle, who is an expert swimmer and diver, was doing a water scene, which is a part of one of the episodes. Although the sun was shining brightly and the air was warm, the water of the lake was icy cold. Mrs. Castle did not realize this fact when she dove from the side of a steamship into the lake. The shock was so great that Mrs. Castle became unconscious and sank.

Milton Sills was on the deck of the ship full clothed. He jumped overboard, rescued her, and with the assistance of other members of the "Patria" company, hurried Mrs. Castle to her home. She suffered from the shock during the remainder of the day, but fortunately escaped any serious after effects.

Mary Charleson, who is playing in support of Henry B. Walthall in "The Truant Soul," his next feature, prides herself in being a capable cook and housekeeper. Miss Charleson lives with her mother a short distance from the Essanay studios in Chicago. She is enthusiastic over her part in this picture.

Bryant Washburn is now at work on a 3-reel production at the Essanay studios. Mr. Washburn has just completed two features, "The Prince of Graustark," taken from George Barr McCutcheon's famous sequel to "Graustark," is now about to be released with this popular star in the title role. Marguerite Clayton takes the feminine lead. Shortly after "The Prince of Graustark," "The Breaker" will be offered. This was taken from Arthur Stringer's story and Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig appear in the leading roles.

The life of a picture actress is by no means a bed of roses. For instance, Nell Craig had to earn part of her salary recently by pronouncing the words "triskardekaphopia" and "hyperpyrexia," while the camera clicked. It was in "The Breaker," five-act Essanay feature in which she plays with Bryant Washburn.

A few weeks ago while scenes were being filmed for "The Chaperon," the Ainsworth Essanay actor went hunting for partridges in the Green Bay territory. He was arrested for hunting without a license and fined, even though he did not get a bird. Now he is spending two weeks in North Dakota for ducks. He has just completed "Not in the News," a 2-act drama, and "The Chaperon," a 5-act feature, and will begin work in another feature on his return.

A thrilling fire scene, the burning of a sanitorium in the hills, forms one of the big moments in "The Truant Soul," Henry B. Walthall's next Essanay feature. Mr. Walthall, who played several scenes in the midst of the blaze, escaped with slight burns about the hands, while Mary Charleson, his leading woman, was compelled to become the target of a fire hose when her dress became ablaze. The scenes were taken at night, a building being constructed in a woods outside Chicago. City firemen were on the scene ready for action and found plenty of opportunities to help.

Alice Brady and Montagu Love in "Bought and Paid For" (World)

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Nov. 1.

WITHIN the next week the work of completing the Keystone studio will be taken up when contractors begin the construction of a new administration building. Plans now prepared provide that this shall be fireproof steel and concrete structure of three stories, at the cost of approximately $100,000.

The new building is to be erected at the southwest corner of the present plant and will be built over and around the structure which houses the offices at present. In this manner the improvements will in no way affect the continuation of work in every department.

In the past year buildings for all other departments at the studio have been built, and with the completion of the administration building, which will require approximately four months, the comedy factory will have ideal buildings throughout. The factory's enclosed stages and other buildings necessary will all be of fireproof structure.

Mack Sennett has found need of additional executives and has added John L. Waldron to the Keystone staff. Mr. Waldron was for many years connected with the management of production for the Biograph Company, and he arrived in Los Angeles Friday to take up the position of personal representative of Mr. Sennett, who was for some time affiliated with the Biograph organization.

Kerr Is Made Studio Manager

Harry L. Kerr, who for almost two years has served as assistant business manager to George W. Stout at the Keystone, has been appointed studio manager for the Mabel Normand Feature Film Company, and this week took up his new duties. Kerr first came to the Keystone organization to serve as auditor, but after thoroughly systematizing the business department, he continued as assistant to Mr. Stout. It was due to Mr. Kerr's exceptional work at the Keystone that he was appointed business manager by Mack Sennett for the Mable Normand plant.

Polly Moran, Keystone comedienne, is in a Los Angeles hospital suffering with a broken arm, her right side badly wrenched and the ligaments of her ankle badly injured, as the result of a fall from a horse while working before the camera in Griffith Park. The injuries will cause some delay in the completion of the Keystone comedy being made by Mack Sennett and featuring Mack Swain.

Business Manager George Stout of the Sennett-Keystone studios has spent a greater part of the past week in the vicinity of Bakersfield selecting locations for a production soon to be made.

Billy Norris, star of the "World of Pleasure" Company, now playing in Los Angeles, was entertained royally by his former legitimate stage acquaintances at the Keystone one day this week. Fred Mace and Charles Murray took the guest in charge and showed him the mysteries of the "bruise" factory.

Big Set at Keystone

A quarter section of the mammoth Keystone open air stage is occupied by a mammoth set built for the first Roscoe Arbuckle comedy to be made since the heavyweight comedian returned to the coast. The set is a marvel for detail and contains a bakeshop, kitchen, retail salesroom and a luncheonette and soda fountain of a delicatessen. There are tubs and tubs of dough, piles of sacks filled with flour, hundreds of pies, cakes, cookies and luscious French pastry, all in place waiting the call of action. Arbuckle will play the part of the cook, Al. St. John and Alice Lake taking the other principal parts. In the direction Arbuckle will be assisted by Ferris Hartman.

Beachwood Park, natural amphitheatre, which served as settings for the spectacular presentation of "Julius Caesar," with an all-star cast of stage celebrities from the film colony, has been leased by the Mabel Normand Company, and there a western mining town setting has been erected. The buildings for this number about thirty and consists of all kinds from the small shack of the miner to the hotel, general stores, saloon-gambling resort-dance hall. Practically all of the buildings are now completed and filming of the scenes here will be commenced shortly by Director Dick Jones.

It was demonstrated last week that the management of the Famous Players-Lasky Hollywood studio plans to smash all records in the reconstruction of this producing plant. On Saturday a plot of ground was used until late in the afternoon for an exterior set which was "struck" that night. In the morning a staff of carpenters began work on a new open air stage, and twelve hours later had completed one 75 x 250 feet. In that short time foundations were laid, diffusing up-rights and supports were placed that the stage could be used the first thing the following morning. The work had been well planned, the men served with luncheon on the grounds in shifts of fifty, and it is said not a minute's time was lost. Contract has been made for the erection of the new administration building and work on this is to be commenced shortly.

New Lasky Writers

The Lasky scenario department is to be augmented by the addition of two more writers, Cathrine Carr, who has been affiliated with several well-known companies, and Charles Main, perhaps best known for his short stories, are expected shortly in Hollywood. This will increase the staff of writers to seven, including Harvey Thew, who is serving as editor, and Jeanie McPherson, who devotes all her time to the preparation of stories for Director-General Cecil B. deMille. The other writers are George Proctor, Thomas J. Geraghty, Charles Sarver and Burt Jenkins.

The Morosco feature play being produced by William D. Taylor, with House Peters and Myrtle Stedman as co-stars, has been titled "The Happiness of Three Women." Peters appears as a bachelor and former sweetheart of Miss Stedman, whose husband, taken by L. W. Steers, is of a decidedly jealous nature. A series of incidents happen which bring the bachelor and the wife together in compromising situation, which create jealousy and make it impossible for the bachelor to prevent his friend from being railroaded to prison for the crime of another. The other women roles referred to in the title are being played by Lucile Ward and Daisy Robinson. The supporting cast includes William Hutchason and Milton Brown.

Beban Back on Coast

George Beban has returned to the coast to take part in Morosco-Pallas Paramount subjects, and the filming of the first will be begun in a few days. This has the temprary title-role of "Mother Mine," and Donald Crisp, who produced "Ramona" and "The Eyes of the World" for the Clune Company, will be in charge of the direction.

E. Mason Hopper is now working with the scenario department in the preparation of the working script for the next Vivian Martin Paramount subject which will be titled "The Spirit of Romance." Filming of this will be started within the next week.

At the Morosco-Pallas studio it is announced that the next vehicle starring Kathlyn Williams will be "The Woman with the For-Get-Me-Nots." Work on this production will not be started for several weeks.

With practically every department at Universal City thoroughly systematized and materially bettered with respect to efficiency, attention is being turned to the scenario department, where under the supervision of Eugene B. Lewis, manager of production, and his assistant, William Gibson, new plans are being introduced that will greatly aid the writers in preparing future productions. Besides personally editing the scripts for all the larger films, Mr. Lewis has in the past week written four stories, two of two reels and two of one reel each.

Another means of adding efficiency has been devised by General Manager H. O.

Davis, and is being put into operation immediately. This provides for the finishing of the floor of all stages at U City with a waterproof material after they have been smoothed down to resemble ballroom floors. Each stage will be laid out in sections, and each section will have a different floor design. In this way it will be possible to erect a set on any design desired and do away with the constant refinishing of the floor to suit the set. It is estimated this will save the company approximately twenty-five thousand dollars annually.

Beveridge Expected at "U" City

Albert J. Beveridge, former senator from Indiana, is to come to California and spend a month at U City as soon as the election is over, according to statement made by the well-known Hoosier following a visit at U City this week. Former Senator Beveridge stated his day at the film capital was the most interesting that he had spent since he left the battlefields of Europe.

Henry McRae has been placed in charge of directing the remaining episodes of the international boundary serial "Liberty." This change was made on account of the illness of Jacques Jaccard.

Director George Cochrance has in production at Universal City a two-reel drama entitled "The Edge of Things." A chorus girl returning home after a season on the road finds her younger sister has been wronged by an unscrupulous employer. To gain revenge she makes the acquaintance of the man's son, wins his affections from the girl he is engaged to marry, and then informs his father and fiancee that he is paying attention to another woman. When they arrive at the girl's apartment the father is made to decide whether he will marry the sister he wronged or the girl marry his son. The father marries the sister. Roberta Wilson is the sister, Molly Malone the son's sweetheart, Jack Nellson the son, Cleo Madison the chorus girl and Daniel Leighton the father.

"Blood Money" is the title of the two-reel western drama being filmed at U City under the direction of F. A. Kelsey. A man accused of a bold robbery enters a saloon and holds up the sheriff and other occupants and escapes. Injured by a fall from his horse he drags himself to a camp where the husband takes him prisoner and compels his wife to go for the sheriff. The husband gets the reward, and while he and the sheriff are intoxicated the wife releases the prisoner, who is innocent of the charge against him. The sheriff and husband are killed in a fight, and later the wife is given a home with the man she liberated. Harry Carey and Louise Lovely are the featured players.

Douglas Gerrard is busy with the filming of "The Organ Grinder," a two-reel drama with Italian atmosphere. An organ grinder comes to America in search of his wife who had eloped with a musician, and to gain revenge for the death of their child. After a long search he finds and kills her. The youth, who was infatuated with the woman, returns to his sweetheart, and the story ends with the organ grinder playing his favorite melody in the garden after the lovers are reunited. Besides directing, Gerrard is playing the leading role. Maude George plays the part of the wife, Ruth Clifford the sweetheart and Albert McQuarrie the lover.

"Her Redeeming Ordeal" is a two-reel drama being filmed by U Director John McDermott. It is the story of a wife, who thinking she is neglected, becomes infatuated with a man about town, who proves to be the leader of a gang of crooks. They plan to elope, and on leaving the hotel are arrested. In a fight the woman makes her escape and is later recognized in her home by the detective. Believing she has learned a lesson the man keeps his silence. Malcolm Blevins, L. S. Shumway, Agnes Vernon are the principals of the cast.

"Pirates of Phantom Bend"

Fred Church is playing the featured part in a two-reel melodrama, "Pirates of Phantom Bend," which holds the attention of Director Henry McRae this week. The scenario is by William Parker and gives Church the role of an author in search of a quiet spot that he may continue with his work. He is held up, and in following the clue to discover the highwayman he comes upon kidnappers who are holding a wealthy mine owner and his daughter from Mexico for ransom. He finds ways of liberating the two, and by the aid of officers captures the bandits. In the end the author finds sufficient material for a new romance with himself as one of the central figures. Supporting Church are L. M. Wells, E. N. Wallock and Edith Johnson.

A one-reel Universal melodrama is being filmed by Donald Macdonald and is known as "His Precious Jewel." It pertains to the theft of jewels by man and wife, and the imprisonment of a ward who threatens to betray their acts to her sweetheart, the owner of the jewels. The girl escapes, tells her sweetheart of the theft, the couple are wed, and then the girl's guardians are notified that the stolen jewels are paste. Edith Roberts and Lee Hill play the principal parts.

Director Lynn Reynolds has written the one-reel story, "Mother," which is being produced by Ruth Ann Baldwin. It is of the type of stories Reynolds has been writing and producing in five reels, and portrays the mother love of a woman whose children have gone to their own homes, and fail in their busy days to set aside her birthday to attend a dinner at "home." They meet, and each learns that the other had expected one to be there, and finding that both are absent, they plan a surprise and take the places of their photographs at mother's table. Mary Talbut takes the part of Mother.

"The Messenger of Peace" is the title of a one-reel character sketch featuring Allen Holubar, who is directing the production. It is the tale of a girl who weds against the wishes of her father, and in later years when left alone by an absconding husband, she returns to her father's home, and her child so wins the heart of the cruel parent that he finally decides to welcome the two when the child will not stay unless its mother remains. Jack Mulhall plays the juvenile lead, Ruth Corbin is the child and Agnes Vernon the old man's daughter.

"Voice on the Wire"

The third episode of "The Voice on the Wire" series gives Ben Wilson, taking the role of Montague Shirley, the criminologist, additional mysteries to solve. The criminologist aids a friend in the recovery of an automobile, and while driving it to her apartment, a bomb placed under it explodes. While explaining the cause of the disturbance to the police, he learns that his friend is in grave danger of being killed by a mysterious disembodied hand. Several hours later while at a seance he finds a hand to resemble the mysterious one. Still later in the day he learns that his friend is contemplating a yachting party, and after a running fight along the river he makes it possible for the friend to safely start on his journey. (Aside from that he has a quiet day.)

Louise Glaum, Triangle-Kay-Bee Star, in a Forthcoming Release

Glimpses from "Bungling Bill's Bow Wow," a Vogue Burlesque. Center: Bill and the Bow Wow

A new plan for a wife to secure payment ordered by the court is exposed in the two-reel comedy, "Easy Alimony," written and being filmed by Captain Leslie Peacocke at U City. To tip off this new plan would be telling secrets that would tip the hand of this comedy producer. There are three principal characters in the comedy.

Upon the completion of "Easy Alimony," this organization will make the one-reel subject, "The Wonderful Tooth," being a comedy concerning the misfortunes that befell a theatrical troupe and their decidedly new methods of raising money to reach the next town. The star's diamond set tooth is the inspiration for the idea, and a poor broker is the victim.

"His Night Out"

"His Night Out" is a two-reel comedy featuring the DeHavens. It is the story of a lad who forgets promises, and suddenly finds himself engaged to three. The first requires no money, the second a goodly sum, and the third even more. He decides to forget the maid who does not demand that he have coin of the realm, and wins the amount necessary at gambling. It is then he meets the third, and goes back to win an additional amount, but fisherman's luck falls to his lot, and while the three girls are waiting at the churches he slips back to the first one, after making excuses to the others that he is penniless. The scenario is by C. J. Wilson, Jr.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are playing the featured part in a thanksgiving Nestor comedy, titled "The White Turkey," which was written by Bess Meredyth, and is being produced by Louis Chaudet. The fun the city boys have in capturing the turkey in order to win the hand of a fair one offers numerous comedy situations decidedly appropriate for these popular players.

W. W. Beaudine, director of Joker Comedies, is directing one written by Carl Coolidge, late addition of the Universal scenario staff, titled "Two Doors and a Nut." Scenes are laid in an apartment house where wife, pajama clad, is locked in the hall by the door slamming. Rushing into another apartment she discovers it to be the home of a sculptor and attempts to pose as one of the models until the sculptor leaves. The artist tells of his experience to the husband, not knowing he was speaking of the man's wife. The husband finds the story true, plans murder by so placing a gun that it will fire upon the first who opens the sculptor's door. A dog prevents a crime. The usual Joker cast appears.

Changes in Yorke Norroy Series

Joseph DeGrasse will within the next few days complete the filming of "The Piper's Price," with Dorothy Phillips and Lon Chaney as principals, and will next take up the making of "The Wrong Side of Paradise." Both of these subjects consist of five reels, and are from adaptations prepared by Ida May Park.

Lynn Reynolds and company of U players, including Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hernandez, are now at the Grand Canyon of the Colorado taking exteriors for "The Man with the Peanut Soul."

Herbert Rawlinson, who has been absent from the U studio because of injuries sustained in a fight scene more than ten weeks ago, is now able to resume duties, and has been cast to play a featured part in "The Scarlet Crystal," being produced by Director Charles Swickard.

An early Kay-Bee Triangle production will be "A Gamble in Souls," in which Dorothy Dalton appears in a featured part of a barbary coast girl who cannot learn to understand a minister's meanings until they are brought together on a desert island. The early part of the story takes place in San Francisco where the girl was seen at a dance hall, and first meets the evangelist. From here they are transplanted to a Pacific Ocean island where they come to understand and eventually love one another. The play is spoken of as extraordinary in point of plot and staging, the latter being completed under the direction of Walter Edwards. Wm. Desmond takes the role of the evangelist, Charles K. French a theatrical manager, and P. D. Tabler takes the character part. This is one of the most costly five-reel productions made at the Ince studios. In addition to there being many elaborate sets, weather conditions on California coast islands made necessary a delay of three weeks in filming exteriors.

Vivian Martin (Morosco)

Director Reginald Barker and thirty Ince studio players are spending a week at Pine Crest taking exterior scenes for a detective drama written by C. Gardiner Sullivan. Wm. Desmond is the star of this production, and Margaret Thompson plays the leading feminine role.

After Correct Detail

In order to secure correct detail for an operation, Director Charles Miller sent a requisition for a physician or two to aid him in supervising the scene for the first Thomas H. Ince subject presenting Enid Bennett as star. Miss Bennett takes the role of a blind girl who recovers sight by an operation. The supporting players of this Ince subject are Jack Gilbert, Charles K. French, and others, including Alfred Vosburg, who was this week engaged by Mr. Ince to appear in support of Miss Bennett. Vosburg was formerly with the NYMP organization, and has since played for other coast companies, his most recent engagement being at the American.

Walter Edwards this week made a five hundred mile trip to El Centro, California, accompanied by a corps of players and technical men to secure one scene for production completed several weeks ago. The scene in question required a view of cotton fields, and the long trip illustrates the expense sometimes necessary to secure an atmospheric scene.

Pearl White to Star in Latest Pathe Serial

Universal Popularity of This Young Star Shown in Selection of the Title "Pearl of the Army"

ASK any motion picture fan to name one Pathe player only and nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand the answer will be quick and direct "Pearl White." More than any other player is the little star identified with Pathe productions. Not only does she lead in length of service but she has starred in Pathe's greatest successes—"The Perils of Pauline," "The Exploits of Elaine" and the other "Elaine" serials and "The Iron Claw." In France she is reported to be the idol of the French soldiers, who, while on furlough, throng the theatres where "Les Mysteres de New York" (The Exploits of Elaine) is playing. In Porto Rico she crowds the theatres. In Bombay she figures frequently in the newspapers. From Scotland comes a letter from a newspaper editor asking for the story of her life, and he runs it on the front page of his paper. Similar instances of her popularity could be quoted ad infinitum. And now Pathe announces that Miss White is to star in a new serial, the most elaborate yet, "Pearl of the Army." The choice of the title shows a recognition of the great drawing power of the star.

Miss White has been with Pathe for over four years. Prior to her getting into pictures she was, though very young, leading woman of a stock company playing road engagements. The hard work so told on her that her voice gave signs of leaving her, and her physicians ordered a rest. Miss White could not be inactive, however, and believing that the silent drama with its work of an entirely different nature would be equivalent to a vacation, she applied for a position in the Pathe studios in Jersey City. The casting director liked her looks and employed her. That was the beginning of fame and fortune for Pearl White.

When the "Perils of Pauline" was first considered the question as to who was best fitted to be the star received the most serious consideration. Much money was to be spent in production and advertising, and the venture was a new one for Pathe, leading into uncharted waters. It was essential that the girl chosen be not only of exceptionally good appearance and undoubted talent, but also nervy enough to take the most dangerous chances. That the choice of Pearl White was a most fortunate one no one will deny. "The Perils of Pauline" made film history. It was followed by the even greater successes, the three "Elaine" serials, and most recently by "The Iron Claw," which to use a colloquialism, has been a "clean-up." That Miss White has been a most potent factor in the success of all of these serials is stating it very modestly.

Her career has been so interesting that it is hard to compress her biography into the limits of a single paragraph. She was born in Missouri, and got her start in things theatrical by playing "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" that great nursery of histrionic talent. After many years experience with road companies she obtained an engagement with a circus, where she remained for several years. She then went back to road shows again and played with some of the best (and worst) companies in the business. How she got her start in pictures has already been described.

With her as the star "Pearl of the Army" should be an even greater success than those other Pathe serials with which she has been identified. And besides, Louis J. Gasnier, president of the Astra, which is producing the new serial was director on "The Perils of Pauline," and Edward Jose, her director, was also her director in "The Iron Claw."

Costello and "Crimson Stain" Continue to Make Hit

CHARACTERIZED by his old time vim, dash and fire, Maurice Costello, star in Consolidated Film Corporation's masterful superserial, has made the biggest hit of his film career.

When Mr. Costello returned to the screen world last summer after an absence of several months, there were some who declared that his popularity had suffered by his absence, and that he would not be the same drawing card again. When the announcement was made that Mr. Costello was returning to the screen, he was deluged with letters and telegrams of congratulations from countless fans all over the world.

The first screen star to be so designated Maurice Costello is still one of filmdom's most popular actors. For seven years he was with Vitagraph. There is no doubt but what the success enjoyed by Consolidated Film Corporation with its first production "The Crimson Stain Mystery," is due in a great measure to Mr. Costello, for from the moment it was announced that Mr. Costello was to star in "The Crimson Stain Mystery," contracts began to pour into the main offices of Consolidated at 1482 Broadway, New York, even before exhibitors had seen a screening of the first episode.

Mr. Costello's role in "The Crimson Stain Mystery," that of Harold Stanley, a young newspaper owner, who has dedicated his entire efforts to the apprehension of the mysterious Crimson Stain gang who are perpetrating atrocities unhindered, in the great city, is precisely the sort of role which has made Mr. Costello the popular screen idol of countless millions.

NATHAN HIRSH HANDLING "CIVILIZATION" FOR NEW YORK AND WESTCHESTER

Nathan Hirsh, head of the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation of 130 West 46th street, suddenly shot into the limelight by acquiring the rights to "Civilization" in Greater New York and Westchester. When the deal was consummated, Al. H. Woods, who controls the picture for the State of New York turned over to Mr. Hirsh $24,000 worth of bookings in the City. The demand for "Civilization" bookings in Greater New York, has probably never been equaled in the history of motion picture marketing.

There were many bidders for the City rights, but Mr. Hirsh's bid was accepted because of his shrewdness and business ability supplemented by spot cash.

Nathan Hirsh has had very considerable and successful experience in booking features, and his energy and close attention to details find scope in putting out "Civilization" amongst New York exhibitors. These latter have shown a wonderful keenness to book the picture, which thanks to the foresight and judgment of Mr. Hirsh has been exceedingly popular this election time, and moreover as the European war shows no signs of stopping, is bound to continue its popularity unabated for an indefinite period. The Civilization Feature Corporation is the name of the new concern handling "Civilization," and Mr. Hirsh is its president and general manager.

"PATRIA" COMPANY LEAVES FOR LOS ANGELES

Mrs. Vernon Castle and forty other members of the company producing "Patria" the preparedness serial of the International will leave next week for Los Angeles, where a number of the scenes will be taken. The party will go by special train, and will make the trip to the coast without any but the necessary stops.

Louis Joseph Vance, the playwright and author, who wrote "Patria" left Saturday for Los Angeles. He will select the locations and personally superintend the taking of the pictures.

Many of the scenes in the later episodes of "Patria" are laid on the Pacific Coast and in Mexico. They depict the efforts of Japanese and Mexicans to secure control of American munitions plants and defenses. It is for these pictures that the trip to the Pacific Coast is being made. Several side trips into Mexico will be made to secure the proper settings there.

In "Patria" some of the scenes were taken at Newport, others along the Massachusetts coast; some at sea, off Sandy Hook, still others were posed in Buffalo, while many are laid in Washington Square and Fifth avenue, New York. These scenes all occur in the earlier episodes. They have been practically completed, and will be ready to be shown to the public when the first episode is released on December 4. Then will follow the later episodes with the Western and Mexican scenes.

Harper Brothers Help Exhibitors with "Seventeen"

Influential Publishing House Co-operates with Famous Players Company in Stimulating Public Interest in Screen Version of the Tarkington Novel

AFTER a special exhibition of the Famous Players adaptation of Booth Tarkington's celebrated novel, "Seventeen," which was given for special representatives of Harper and Brothers, the publishers of the popular book, the publishing house voluntarily wrote the producers the following enthusiastic endorsement of the photoplay:

"It is gratifying to see Willie and Lola and Jane and May Parcher step out of the pages of Booth Tarkington's book and bring with them to the screen so much of the charm they had in the novel. Jack Pickford, we think, will be particularly popular as William Sylvanus Baxter, and Louise Huff shows very successfully the tantalizing sentiment of the baby-talk girl. Where you were able to get such a dog for the negro we don't know, but he certainly is fine. Your whole picture, indeed, shows to a remarkable degree the youth and summertime humor of Mr. Tarkington's story."

H. A. Sherman, of Sherman-Elliott, Inc.

The admiration of the publishers for the adaptation does not rest here, but takes the much more active form of a plan for the joint exploitation of the book and photoplay by the agents of the publishers and the exhibitors, respectively.

When the Famous Players obtained the rights to adapt Tarkington's story it was suggested that the co-operation of the Harper dealers be enlisted in the exploitation of the book simultaneously with the appearance of the picture in the various theatres throughout the country. Quick to see the advantages of such an arrangement, and spurred on by the merit of the production, the publishers have proceeded to circularize their various representatives. The advantage of this dealer co-operation to the local exhibitor can readily be seen, as the linking of his publicity activities with those of the Harper dealer will inevitably result in more than doubling the net result obtained. Especially is this true in view of the fact that the appeal of the book store is sure to reach a great many persons who are not regular motion picture patrons, but who will be interested in seeing this popular novel as it is transmitted to the screen.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation, in circularizing exchanges on the subject of co-operating with the book stores, not only advocates joint advertising campaigns in the local newspapers, but also suggests that the exhibitors be advised to secure extra posters for the purpose of supplying the local stores with them. These are to be used in working out window displays in the book stores. In return for this valuable assistance from the store, it is suggested that the exhibitor run a slide on his screen mentioning the name of the bookseller who is handling the novel.

In this way mutual benefit is derived by the theatres and the store at a minimum expense. There is no limit to the possibilities offered by this joint exploitation, according to the amount of time and energy which the theatre manager and the bookseller are willing to put into it. The opportunity is a rare one for the exhibitor, as he has the backing of an influential publisher in the boosting of his show.

DAVIS REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS FOR UNICORN

Manager H. M. Davis, of the New York branch of the Unicorn, announces that the volume of business in the New York territory during the past week exceeds by twelve and one-half per cent, the returns rolled up by this branch since the inception of the Unicorn service.

S. M. Moscow, manager of the Boston branch, reports that throughout New England conditions have been unusually good—a fact which Mr. Moscow attributes to the prosperous conditions in the manufacturing sections of this sector of the country.

Edward McKim, who is directing the "Billy West" series of comedies, which will consist of twelve features of two reels each, has just completed the latest of these productions which bears the title, "The Star Boarder." It details the adventures of the agile Billy when he becomes a "paying guest" at a fashionable refectory.

Another important feature to be released by the Unicorn shortly is "When Hands Are Idle," starring Barbara Castleton. The picture portrays the great social danger surrounding childless women who have plenty of money and are surrounded by every luxury, and who still find time hanging heavy on their hands.

SUNBEAM FEATURE STARRING TY COBB COMING SOON

Work is progressing rapidly on the feature being made by the Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation by Director George Ridgwell starring the famous baseball player Ty Cobb. This will be a six-reel picture entitled "Somewhere in Georgia," and was written especially for the star player by Grantland Rice, the well-known sporting writer. Director

Ty Cobb in "Somewhere in Georgia"

Ridgwell has expressed unusual satisfaction over the work of Cobb so far. As for Ty himself, it is thought that he probably will go on with picture work after the completion of "Somewhere in Georgia," that is when he is not otherwise occupied playing baseball.

GEORGE ORTH RETURNS TO NEW YORK

George Orth, director of comedies, who completed several one and two-reel subjects for the Atlas Film Company of Detroit, has returned to New York and is considering several offers.

Left to Right: Lewis J. Selznick, Herbert Brenon and Carl Laemmle, Lessees of the Broadway Theatre, New York

Selznick, Laemmle and Brenon Take Over Theatre

Acquire Broadway for Long Term for Exclusive Showing of Their Features—"War Brides," Starring Nazimova, First Attraction—Premiere to Be Held November 12

Lewis J. Selznick, Carl Laemmle, and Herbert Brenon, motion picture producers and heads of three film organizations, have, in association with each other, taken over the Broadway theatre at Broadway and Forty-first street, and will make it a house of "runs" for their screen productions.

The first film drama to open at the Broadway under its new control will be Herbert Brenon's multi-reel presentation of Nazimova in "War Brides" by Marion Craig Wentworth. This is the first production made by Mr. Brenon since he finished "A Daughter of the Gods" for William Fox and formed his own film corporation. This is also Nazimova's first screen appearance.

Following the run of "War Brides," Mr. Laemmle will present the Universal Film Corporation's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," after which Lewis J. Selznick will present Clara Kimball Young in a multi-reel picturization of "The Foolish Virgin" by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Birth of a Nation."

Herbert Brenon, the producer of "War Brides," has achieved a brilliant success in his direction of Nazimova. It might be added that his best producing capacities have been revealed in the making of this work. An immense amount of money has been spent on "War Brides," but even that is secondary to Mr. Brenon's handling of Nazimova.

"War Brides," as Herbert Brenon has produced it, is the most compelling argument for woman suffrage ever presented on stage or screen. It is likewise a splendid pictorial argument for peace. Mr. Brenon has carefully avoided making a battle picture. "War Brides" on the screen expands into a gigantic social panorama taking in all of the large and small elements of human life without the actual grewsomeness of screen battle.

Beginning Saturday night, November 11, the Broadway will be re-decorated and beautified in appearance. New stage settings will be installed, handsome new fittings put in place. The orchestra will be enlarged and the house staff of ushers given a new and distinctive dress. The opening performance of "War Brides" will be held on Sunday evening, November 12.

William J. Hanley Goes to Spain, France and England

He Will Stop at Barcelona and Madrid to Dispose of "Civilization" Rights in Spain and Portugal—A Private Showing of the Picture Will Be Given to Royalty

WILLIAM J. HANLEY, well known in the theatrical and motion picture business of Europe and America for the past twenty years, sailed for Spain on the S. S. Monte Video, November 6th, as a special representative of Thos. H. Ince's "Civilization." Mr. Hanley will stop at Barcelona and Madrid for the purpose of disposing of the rights to "Civilization" in Spain and Portugal.

From Madrid Mr. Hanley will go direct to Paris where he will arrange a special showing for the many Paris buyers who have flooded the New York office with inquiries for the rights to France. Then he will go to London and meet J. Parker Read, Jr., General Manager of the Harper Film Corporation, who will make a flying trip to London to negotiate the British rights.

Mr. Read is proud of having secured Mr. Hanley for this important mission to Europe and states that his reason for selecting him was his unimpeachable record and splendid reputation for integrity and sound business judgment. This will make Mr. Hanley's ninth trip to Europe. He is a fluent linguist and speaks Spanish, French and German like a native. This accomplishment equips him particularly well for the important duties he is undertaking for the Thos. H. Ince interests.

Mr. Hanley is to give a private exhibition of "Civilization" for the Infanta Isabella, at her palace in Madrid.

ABSENCE OF KERRIGAN AFFECTS PRODUCTION OF "U" PICTURE

J. Warren Kerrigan, whose contract with Universal expired on the twenty-fifth of October, has failed to report at Universal City since that date and as a consequence work has been halted on the production of "The Mysterious Mrs. Musselwhite," being directed by Lois Weber. Unless the actor returns to his position, a serious loss will be caused Universal, as all the scenes in which he appeared will have to be remade. Harrison Ford, late of Lasky, has been selected to take Kerrigan's place.

Unjust Censorship Conditions in Kansas Arouse Ire of Exchangemen

C. S. EDWARDS, manager of the Pathe Exchange at Kansas City, reports that his billing business for the past week was the largest since the opening of the exchange. "The Shielding Shadow" is booking better than ever, and it was necessary to make a new print to take care of the demand. Howard Jameyson, assistant manager of the Pathe exchange, is making a tour of the territory in Oklahoma, and is turning in good reports.

Charles Whitney, a new road man for Fox at Kansas City, recently returned from his first trip through Arkansas and Oklahoma. Mr. Watcher, manager of the company, says that he has done good work in the territory and has proved his ability to handle the position.

Mr. Morgan, manager of the Unicorn Film Sales Corporation branch at Kansas City, reports that he will demonstrate his new releases in the old Grand Opera House at Seventh and Grand, which is now used as a moving picture house by Elliot More.

P. H. Goldstone, manager of the new Federal Film Company, which has just opened in Kansas City, in the Boley Building, has just returned from a business trip to Omaha, Nebraska.

G. H. Bowles, who has charge of the publicity and advertising of the Kansas City branch of the Universal Film and Supply Company, reports that the sales service department has been getting good results, and in connection with this department, Mr. Bowles reports that he has instituted a fifteen inch multigraph sheet, which will be sent to the exhibitor with every two-reel feature, with five-reel Red Feather productions, and with serials. This sheet will contain a good newspaper story, a model advertisement, and other suggestions regarding programs and plans to interest the public. This sheet is part of an advertising campaign to boost the Universal pictures.

F. L. Kiltz, manager of the Kansas City branch of the Mutual Film Company is now back on the job after several days of illness. Mr. Kiltz says that Kansas censorship is tightening, and it is becoming harder every day to get his productions past the censorship board.

Even productions which formerly were passed, now have scarcely a chance. Formerly any play with a redeeming feature in it, or with a good closing scene, was allowed to pass, but now censorship is applied to every act in the picture, and it is almost impossible to get anything passed at all. A production of the Mutual Film Company, "Purity," was recently rejected, but will be made over again, and another attempt will be made to get it past the Kansas censorship board.

Other exchanges in Kansas City are feeling the results of the tightening in the Kansas territory also. Mr. Robertson, manager of the World Film Company branch at Kansas City, reports that he has also been having trouble getting his pictures past the Kansas board. One of the recent rejected ones being "The Revolt."

Mr. Robertson is of the opinion that exhibitors in Kansas, who are already beginning to clamor for more pictures with "meat" in them, will not submit to such strong censorship much longer. Every film company in Kansas City has come out opposed to such uselessly strict censorship.

OREGON TOWN WANTS TO IMITATE BIG PLACE WITH CENSOR MEDDLERS

By a provision of a new city ordinance the city of Corvallis, Ore., now censors all moving pictures and a board of censorship has been appointed consisted of the following: W. F. Caskins, Mrs. S. L. Henderson, Mrs. E. W. S. Pratt, Mrs. R. H. Huston and Rev. C. L. Cleves. The board received and favorably passed the "Little Girl Next Door."

OHIO CENSORS PEEL THEIR EYES FOR ALLEGED VIOLATIONS

Renewed vigilance, on the part of the Ohio State censors in enforcing their dictates, is seen in instructions to Cleveland officers to report all instances where exhibitors fail to use the regulation length of censorship leaders on film. Every downtown Cleveland exhibitor has had a caller in this connection, and the campaign will doubtless be carried to the suburbs without delay.

By Concerted Effort Texas Exhibitors Elect Judge Favorable to Motion Picture and Sunday Exhibitions

IN the defeat of Judge R. M. Harper and the election of Judge W. M. Morrow for the judgeship of the Court of Criminal Appeals, the motion picture interests in Texas at last realize their power in politics.

Judge Harper rendered a decision some time ago, concurred in by Judge A. M. Pendergast, that not only the manager, but every employee of a picture house, was liable to prosecution for working in an "open" theatre on Sunday. The decision came about in a case of a Fort Worth exhibitor, under the old antiquated Sunday law, which makes it an illegal act to open a place of amusement where admission is charged, sell ice cream and other cold drinks, groceries, and a long list of other things.

In Dallas some time ago, some cases were tried under this act, resulting in acquittal for the exhibitors—and prompt dropping of other cases by the county attorney. The same thing occurred in Houston, and some other towns. In Fort Worth and Waco, the ministers have been exceedingly busy and a constant agitation is stirred up about Sunday picture shows, resulting in a number of cases being on the docket continually.

In a talk before the Texas Amusement Managers' Association meeting in Dallas recently, J. S. Phillips of Fort Worth, spoke at length of the now known power of the motion picture in a political way and predicted that in future all candidates would give some thought to the motion picture man.

Slides advocating the candidacy of Judge Morrow were used in probably two hundred picture houses in Texas—and the result is that Judge Morrow defeated his opponent by over 35,000 votes.

In his talk, Mr. Phillips said "We certainly helped elect Judge Morrow, yet he is not 'lined up' with us as his enemies have said—he is an honest, thinking man; and we expect from him only justice and that brand of equality to our trade that is meted out to others regarding Sunday opening."

QUEBEC THEATRES TO HAVE SUNDAY SHOWINGS

Authentic report has it that theatres in Quebec Province will remain open on Sunday, if the action of the Casino theatre, Sherbrooke is unquestioned. Mr. Grequire, manager of this house, states that he has had his lawyer go fully into the question, but there is nothing in the laws of the Province to prevent them from opening on Sunday.

Montreal shows at present remain open seven days in the week, therefore it seems very likely that theatres in the Province will follow suit.

PARAMOUNT ADDS GRACE WYNDEN-VAIL TO ATLANTA, GEORGIA, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

Grace Wynden-Vail was recently added to the publicity department of the Southern Paramount Pictures Company, Atlanta, Georgia, distributors of Paramount Pictures in that section. She is one of the best known publicity women in the United States, having been born in Madison, Wisconsin, and educated in the public schools in that city, and later, in the State University of Wisconsin.

Her newspaper work started during her school life, when she contributed dramatic criticisms and feature stories to the Wisconsin State Journal and later, to the Chicago Tribune. Following a romantic runaway marriage to Edwin Vail, a popular stock leading man and director, Mrs. Vail took up publicity work.

Combining stage work with the publicity end of the profession, Mrs. Vail spent her first year on the stage as a member of a "Romeo and Juliet" company. Seasons in stock, a season with "Modern Eve," and a successful jaunt into vaudeville, doing a single singing and piano act, brings Mrs. Vail to her association with Norman Hackett, as press woman in Atlanta and Nashville. This was followed by a year as Publicity Manager of the Crescent Amusement Company's theatres through Tennessee. Since then, Mrs. Vail has contributed to magazines particularly under the name of "Sally Ann," and has written a few scenarios.

ADVENTURE SERIES, FIVE REELS IN LENGTH, BY INTERNATIONAL

The International plans to release in the near future a series of adventure pictures five or six reels in length. They will be released on the fifteenth of each month. The first picture of the new series will be called "The Jockey of Death," and is scheduled for release November 15. It is a story of the circus in which thrills are said to follow each other in rapid succession.

Robert Thorne has illegally seized a large estate. Fifteen years later he is visited by Henry Claremont, the nephew of the man he poisoned and the cousin of the little countess, whom Thorne had hired a gypsy to abduct. Thorne plots to have Henry killed by falling over a cliff, but the latter recovers from his injuries and learning the true circumstances resolves to find the Countess Elda.

Knowing that she must be with some circus, he creates a daring act called "The Jockey of Death," and luckily gets an engagement in the same circus in which Elda is a high wire performer. He meets her and the two conspire together as to the means of effecting her escape. At the end of her act she climbs a rope to the roof of the circus building where Henry meets her. During the flight which follows they perform many daring feats including a dive from a high railroad bridge, crawl onto a barge over the propeller, scale the trusses of another bridge, and reach a thrilling climax by riding a bicycle on a wire across a wide river. They finally escape and informing the authorities of the identity of the real plotters, take possession of their ancestral estate.

Eight New Divisions Forming in National Association

Producers' Section Increased by Addition of Following Companies: Keystone, Gaumont, Thanhouser, Arrow, Erbograph, Crystal, Wharton, Kalem, McClure, Evans and Others

THE week just passed has been one of great activity for the National Association. Eight new divisions are in the process of formation and there was an appreciable increase among the producing companies. The producers have been augmented by the following concerns: Keystone, Gaumont, Thanhouser, Arrow, Erbograph, Crystal, Niagara, Wharton, Kalem, McClure, Evans, United States Motion picture Corporation, the Desert Film Company and Frank Powell Productions.

The following groups have organized and applied for charters: The Slide manufacturers of Greater New York and Kansas City, the machine manufacturers, the electric light and equipment dealers, the lithographers, the screen manufacturers, and the carbon manufacturers.

The suggestions incorporated in the organization of the slide manufacturers for a method of procedure and the objects to be obtained are as follows: Standardization of the industry, a mutual working agreement and co-operative arrangement, an interchange of data regarding credits, employees and raw material houses, standardization of prices with a fixed minimum, the elimination of free samples and free original designs, the elimination of free slides, the elimination of useless and wasteful advertising, no intereference with competitor's employees, the elimination of knocking and illegitimate competitive methods, duplicating and imitating another's design to be strictly prohibited, legitimate methods only to be employed in securing business, all special discounts to be discontinued, total elimination of graft in any manner, presents and other contributions to the man who gives out the business, establishment of a general buying committee with consequent saving to all members, general advertising campaign boosting "Made in New York," lantern slides, all disputes or grievances to be properly presented before entire branch to be settled by a majority vote, and a strict observance of all the rules and regulations of this branch as well as the by-laws and constitution of the National Association.

The organization of the actors' division has been set in motion, and when its executive committee is named it will appear as the announcement of an all star cast.

FAMOUS PLAYERS STILL BUYING SCRIPTS

In accordance with the recent announcement that the termination of the Famous Players Film Company $100,000 scenario offer does not mean the cessation of the purchasing activities of the various producers on the Paramount Program, there comes the news of the purchase of several scripts from well known authors by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Among these is "As Men Love," which was bought from Lois Zellner. The work of Miss Zellner is already well known to the motion picture public, as she is the author of "The Innocent Lie" which was produced by the Famous Players some time ago.

Two photoplays have been purchased from Paul West, well known magazine writer, playwright and scenarioist. They are "The Deliverance" and "Each To His Kind." From Charles Tenney Jackson there was purchased "Golden Fetters," and "Making a Name" has been bought from Shirley Burns. Roswell Dague has sold "The Turning Point" to Famous Players-Lasky, making six scripts purchased by the producers since the termination of the Famous Players' record-breaking offer.

AL GREEN, SEASONED IN EXPERIENCE UNDER CAMPBELL, IS MADE DIRECTOR BY SELIG

Al Green, said to be the youngest of motion picture directors, has been summoned from the Selig studios at Los Angeles to Chicago by William N. Selig. For years, Green was assistant director to Colin Campbell. Later Mr. Green was promoted by Mr. Selig to a fullfledged directorship.

He has been with the Selig Company for over five years and accompanied "The Ne'er-do-Well" players to the Panama Canal zone, where scenes for that production were filmed. Mr. Green also plays a part in "The Crisis," and was assistant to Mr. Campbell when "The Crisis" was produced.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

WE learn from our Boston correspondent that Manager Sories of the Park theatre has a new assistant in the person of one John Hickey and also that John is new to the picture business. The item goes on to say that he is a college man and athletic swimmer and that he once held the lightweight boxing title in South America. Not that we doubt John's ability to fill the position of assistant manager in the least, but we are burning to know what else he can do.

Poor Olga Olonova, who vamps in "The Crimson Stain Mystery," is mourning the loss of a complete selection of zoological celebrities owing to the carelessness of Chip, a nasty canine who knocked over the glass cage containing them. And now everyone is looking for the Whistling Woophenhah, the Garrulous Grehinehi, the Crying Candle Stick and the Laughing Lavuhuiaha, for Olga has offered a reward for the return of the little alliteratives. The reward is a kiss, perhaps its to be given á la vampire. Well, Olga, the Garrulous Grehinehi, is secreted in the corner of our desk blotter. Mr. Sladdin will inform you that we sit in the northeast corner of the editorial department, that we have blonde hair and shave in the morning. Ten o'clock would be about the right time.

The recent earthquake in southern California didn't hurt the Keystone plant at all, but Frank Hayes slipped into a crack in the floor and was lost for three hours. Well, what became of Slim Somerville or hasn't he shown up since?

A motion picture producer is angling for the services of Fay Bainter, the star in the current Broadway attraction, "Arms and the Girl." William Harris, Jr., who holds an eight-year contract with Miss Bainter, has been offered $100,000 in cash to assign his contract with the actress. Refused at first the company came back with a larger offer. Miss Bainter is an excellent actress and we hope she gets a chance at the picture soon.

As someone truthfully remarked there are a number of good laughs in the motion picture business, but they only arrive once every so often. During the last week quite a few people have handed us enough of them to last for a full year.

When George I. showed this picture to Walter H. Irwin he said, "Mr. Irwin, here is a future branch manager," again showing that salesmen are born, as well as made, to which Mr. Irwin replied smilingly, "Well, you know this is a permanent organization. If he's as good a worker as his grandfather, he'll get there all right."

Note the proud demeanor of papa. Gandpa is laughing at one of those English jokes, to which baby gurgles his approval.

WHAT ABOUT THAT SENSE OF HUMOR?

The following lines on Francis X. Bushman appeared in a British trade journal:

"Descended from?"
"The Bushmen."
"Favorite country?"
"France is."
"You use your second name?"

"You are popular?"
"My rise was Metro-otic."

If we survive we'll print another one of these next week and more after that.

Russell Bassett of Famous Players went to register for the coming election.

"Name?" queried the clerk, and on being told he remembered from last year that Mr. Bassett was an actor. And then he came to the "business address" column. "No business" called the clerk as he passed that by.

"Hold on," said Mr. Bassett, "I have a place of business," and he gave the clerk the address.

"Oh!" replied the clerk, "moving picture business. That's different."

Whereat, according to Mr. Bassett, the whole room laughed. But cheer up Mr. Bassett, they laugh at us too, when we tell them about our job.

All the News That Fits, We Print Longacre Square, N. Y., November 4, 1916

EDITORIAL

The gentle art of subtitle writing seems to have few able sponsors. We would like to know just why it is that the wording of these all-important portions of the motion picture is with very few exceptions so grossly neglected. Producers go to the trouble of fixing their subtitles up with all sorts of decorations that are more or less artistic, but they are inclined to neglect the real reason for a subtitle—that is to explain in good English.

We suppose the ideal motion picture will some day arrive minus all subtitles whatsoever and then there'll be nothing to worry about on this score. But just now pictures seem to be depending a good bit on the printed inserts to put certain points across, so it might be a good idea if they were given a little more attention.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY-MOROSCO-PALLAS PHOTOPLAYS ARE DONATED TO 69TH REGIMENT BAZAAR

A complete program of motion pictures has been donated to the current charity bazaar at the 69th Regiment Armory in New York by the Famous Players-Lasky-Morosco-Pallas company, through the courtesy of the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company. A daily change of program including a feature, Paramount Pictographs, Burton Holmes' Travel Pictures, Black Diamond Comedies, and Bray Cartoons, is being offered at the Famous Players-Lasky Theatre at the armory, where large attendances give evidence of the popularity of Paramount Pictures.

The bazaar will run until May 15th and many social and military celebrities have already enjoyed the photoplay feature of the affair. The screen program for the first week included such Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas attractions as Fannie Ward in "The Gutter Magdalene," Marguerite Clark in "Molly Make Believe," George Beban in "Pasquale," Pauline Frederick in "The Spider," Blanche Sweet in "Ragamuffin," Dustin Farnum in "David Garrick," Gladys Hanson in "The Straight Road," and Lenore Ulrich in "The Heart of Paula." Autographed photographs of the stars, novelties and lithographs have also been donated by the Paramount producers and Sherry and an elaborate program is being prepared for the second week of the bazaar.

BAREN IS IN CHARGE OF IVAN PUBLICITY

L. Lawrence Baren, formerly publicity manager for "To-Day," which had quite a run at the 48th Street theatre, New York, about two years ago, and who has since been connected with film companies in New York and Chicago, has become director of the publicity department for the Ivan Film Productions, Inc.

Mr. Baren has been connected with theatricals for the past twenty years, and has directed the fortunes of such stars as Blanche Walsh, Bertha Kalich, Jacob P. Adler and David Kessler.

For the past year Mr. Baren has had an independent exchange in Boston, Mass., handling independent films.

He has started a vigorous publicity campaign in the interests of Ivan productions.

UNCLE SAM BOOKS PARAMOUNT SUBJECTS FOR EXHIBITION IN BARRACKS

At the request of the commanding officers of Governor's Island, New York, Paramount Pictures will be shown at certain intervals throughout the winter at the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks. The first picture shown was on Sunday, October 15th, the subject being, "The Daughter of MacGregor." Paramount Pictures have been arranged for every other Sunday, beginning November 3rd. Paramount Pictures have been shown at government posts before. The William L. Sherrill Feature Film Company regularly furnishes service to several army posts in New York State. The showing of the pictures is made a big event at the Barracks on Governor's Island.

"Give Them What They Don't Expect"—Feuillade

A Succession of Quick Surprises Is the Methods Employed by Director of the "Vampire" Series, Issued by Gaumont—First Episode Illustrates His Point

THE baseball slugger's homely explanation to "hit 'em where they ain't" is somewhat of a paraphrase of Louis Feuillade's method of writing and directing a French detective photoplay. "Give them what they don't expect" is his recipe. That it is a successful one is readily understood from the popularity of his Gaumont productions, notably "The Vampires." Mr. Feuillade is the rare combination of photoplaywright and director with ideas.

"No matter how good the director, he cannot make a good picture out of a poor story," said Mr. Feuillade in discussing the photoplays soon to be released as a Mutual series. "Hence, the working out of suitable plots is the first requirement. In a detective photoplay there can be no methodical advance, because then the spectators would anticipate the climax, and the steps that lead up to it. In writing 'The Vampires' I crowded it with unexpected incidents and unusual twists of plot. It is the continuous element of surprise that keeps the spectator keyed to the intense pitch of interest that a detective photoplay demands.

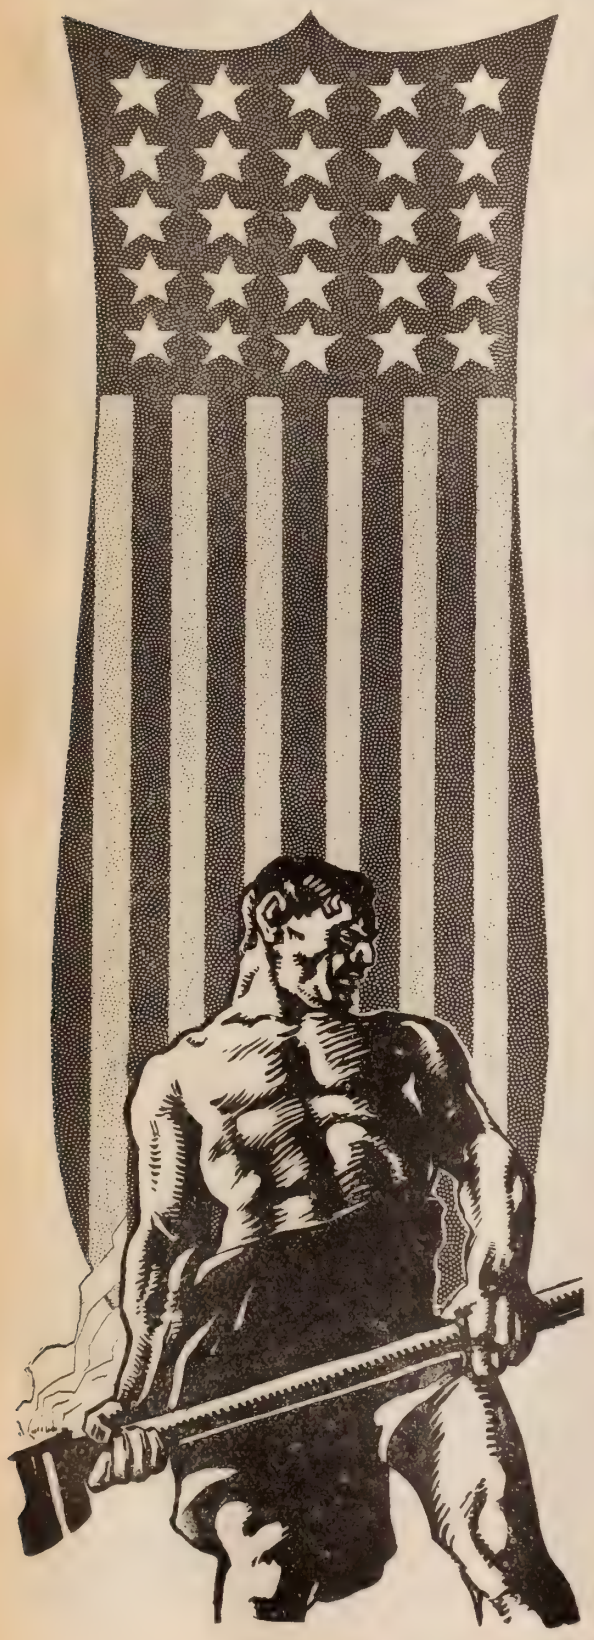
"It is the natural bent of the spectator to sag back into a state of passive acceptance of what is transpiring upon the screen. The only way to prevent this is to shock him. By shocking him I mean to give him an unexpected turn in the story which stimulates his mind. A detective story lends itself best to this method of keeping interest at fever heat, since it is a comflict of wits and sometimes of strength between two sharply differentiated forces.

"I believe that the director who writes his own stories has an immense advantage over the one who must take a manuscript originated and prepared by some one else. He gets better what in English you might call the 'feel' of the story. He knows his possibilities as well as his limitations, and writes accordingly.

"In a detective photoplay the possibilities are limited only by what the spectator can be made to accept as plausible. If you study the matter carefully you will find that much more can be 'put over,' if I may be pardoned some forceful American slang, in a detective photoplay than in any other branch of the silent drama.

"The first episode in 'The Vampires' will illustrate the point I am making. I open it with the theft of the papers revealing some secrets of The Vampires. Spectators now have some idea of the gang, and that the reporter is trailing them. Then I have the papers found on Normandin, the office messenger, showing that The Vampires have a spy in the newspaper office. Before interest can lag, I send the reporter to fathom the mystery of the disappearance of Detective Durtal.

"He chances upon Dr. Nox, finds the empty hiding place behind the picture, receives the mysterious note, finds Mrs. Simpson robbed, and discovers her jeweled cigarette case in his pocket in such rapid succession that the spectator is hurried along breathlessly. It is this continuous, unexpected activity that makes the successful detective photodrama."



"ALL MAN" IS STORY OF A WASTER

The young hero of "All Man," an approaching World Film picture, is a New York waster whose exasperated father "fires" him out West and tells him not to come back until he has made good. Exciting things begin to happen until father calls him home and is proud of him. Robert Warwick is the young hero and Mollie King the sweetheart he plucks from the flood.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" GETS PREMIER IN PRISON

The first audience to witness Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For" was composed of the inmates of Great Meadow Prison at Comstock, N. Y., on Election Day. It was given in response to a letter from the librarian at Great Meadow to William A. Brady, from which the following is an extract:

"For months we have had an insistent demand from the men for pictures with Alice Brady in them and we write you to ask you if you would kindly furnish us film on a few Tuesdays during November and December and January and if on some occasion you would let us have a picture with Miss Alice Brady in it."

To this Mr. Brady immediately replied by wire that he would not alone give the Great Meadow men an Alice Brady picture, but would make the occasion a regular "first performance on any stage" by presenting "Bought and Paid For" before them in advance of its showing anywhere else.

LAEMMLE DENIES MERGER WITH SELZNICK

The announcement that Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and Lewis J. Selznick have jointly engaged the Broadway theatre, New York, for the exhibition of their features has given rise to numerous rumors that the entire interests of the two film men will in future be merged. Mr. Laemmle denies these reports emphatically.

It is reported that Mr. Laemmle is the promoter of a plan to establish a chain of picture theatres, cigar and drug stores throughout the United States. "The fact that the Universal and the Selznick interests have leased the Broadway theatre," stated Mr. Laemmle, "for the showing of 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea' means just that and nothing more.

"For several years past I have contemplated engaging a Broadway theatre continuously for the exhibition of Universal productions. I made a special effort this year, but owing to the great demand for theatres by successful legitimate attractions found it impossible to do so except at a large financial loss which would have resulted during the intervals when the theatre would have been "dark" pending the preparation for exhibition of successive Universal productions. By combining with the Selznick enterprises, however, the photoplays of both concerns can be shown alternately without any wait between.

"Jimmie Dale" Series from Monmouth Starts November 27

E. K. Lincoln, Edna Hunter, Paul Panzer, Doris Mitchell Starred in Robin Hood Melodrama Under Webster's Direction

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Monmouth Film Corporation that the first episode of the "Jimmie Dale Alias The Grey Seal" series will be released Nov. 27, the succeeding episodes to appear at intervals of one week thereafter. E. K. Lincoln, Paul Panzer, Edna Hunter and Doris Mitchell take the leading roles in this series of pictures which are produced under the direction of Henry Mc Rae Webster.

"Jimmie Dale Alias the Grey Seal" is a story of New York's underworld and high society. It is a series of melodramatic episodes, each one complete in itself, yet each one continuing on a certain main theme. Jimmie Dale is a society man who champions the cause of the poor and needy. He is a combination of Robin Hood, Sherlock Holmes and Arsene Lupin, who robs from the rich that the poor may profit and who sponsors the cause of the oppressed when Justice seems in the wrong.

His various "crimes" committed in the cause of the right are done by a character the police know as the Grey Seal, hence the title. Of course the fearless hero lays himself open to innumerable dangers and there is romance and mystery besides. In short "Jimmie Dale Alias The Grey Seal" has all the essentials necessary to make a successful series and the producers have every confidence that it will meet with the approval of the trade.

George M. Cohan Is Latest Star to Enter Pictures

Well-Known Actor Will Not Only Be Featured in Vehicles Brought Out by Artcraft, But Will Write Scenarios, Besides Appearing in His Stage Successes

GEORGE M. COHAN has decided to enter the motion picture field. The announcement is made by Artcraft Pictures Corporation on the eve of its first release, Mary Pickford in "Less Than the Dust." For several weeks Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, has been promising that Mary Pickford would soon have a famous companion in the Artcraft circle, which he describes as the foundation of a system "to handle the headliners in motion pictures." Certainly George M. Cohan is a headliner in any branch of the amusement field.

Besides the preliminary announcement of the formation of the George M. Cohan Film Corporation is the statement that in addition to his services as producer and player Mr. Cohan is to devote much of his time to writing for the screen.

Work on the first production of the George M. Cohan Film Corporation will begin at once. Mr. Cohan will, of course, appear as the star and the vehicle will be one of his most successful plays. The selection will be made from the group which includes "Little Johnny Jones," "45 Minutes from Broadway," "The Governor's Son," "The Miracle Man," "The Yankee Prince," "George Washington, Jr.," "The Talk of New York," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Hit the Trail Holliday," "The Man Who Owns Broadway," "The Little Millionaire" and others.

As a writer of popular musical comedies and in more recent years of serious plays Mr. Cohan has achieved a position as a writer for the stage which is fully as lofty as the niche he made for himself as an actor and producer.

Walter E. Greene, speaking of the arrangements for the George M. Cohan productions, said:

"Every one within the motion picture industry has a definite conception of the great potency of Mr. Cohan as a popular idol. Every motion picture exhibitor throughout the United States is asked more frequently why he does not show motion pictures either written by Mr. Cohan or in which he appears than any other of the hundreds of questions which the picture fans delight in asking. The reply that he has always refused to act has never been entirely satisfactory to them.

GAIL KANE A PERSECUTED HEROINE

A mock marriage after which the groom seeks to blackmail his wealthy victim forms the groundwork of "The Man She Married," in which the World Film Corporation will soon present one of its star casts, with Gail Kane, Arthur Ashley, Montagu Love and Muriel Ostriche. Miss Kane will not be a villain in this screen drama, but a persecuted heroine.

WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS IN METRO PRODUCTION

Prominent in the support of Julius Steger in "The Stolen Triumph," a five-act Metro-Rolfe feature now being produced under the direction of David Thompson is Marie Reichardt, one of the best known character women of the legitimate stage.

Miss Reichardt began her stage career in Europe as a child, and came to this country from Germany twenty-five years ago to play ingenue roles at the Irving Place theatre. She remained with the stock company there for eighteen years, playing every sort of role from maids to grande dames and from girls to old women.

Her debut on the English speaking stage was with David Warfield, in "The Return of Peter Grimm," in which she had an important character role. She remained in the support of Mr. Warfield for four seasons, and last year was with Elsie Ferguson in "Margaret Schiller."

In "The Stolen Triumph," Miss Reichardt has a role which brings into play all her talents for natural character portrayal.

WORDS FROM EXHIBITORS FOR MUTUAL WEEKLY PLEASE GAUMONT

The success of a film company's output can be gauged by what exhibitors report. The Gaumont Company is particularly interested in its four single-reel releases and has been watching the mail for unsolicited expressions of opinion.

Among recent comments are these about the Mutual Weekly: "Pleasing to my patrons," Marvin Wise, Odeon Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.; "Has all the weeklies beat," W. D. Scoville, Idle Hour Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.; "Essential to my program, wouldn't be without it," E. C. Helman, Victoria Theatre, Springfield, Ohio.

Robert Warwick Acquired by Selznick Pictures

Former World Film Star to Head His Own Company Under the Direction of Ralph W. Ince—Radical Change to Be Made in Type of Pictures in Which He Will Appear

THE name of Robert Warwick was added to the roster of Selznick Pictures stars this week through the transaction between Lewis J. Selznick and Harry Rapf, president of the Robert Warwick Film Corporation. Rumors that Mr. Warwick intended to leave the World Film Corporation to produce pictures at the head of his own company have been circulated for several weeks, but no definite announcement has been made till now.

Mr. Warwick is the first male star to be acquired by Mr. Selznick for his new enterprises. He will be presented along lines identical to those in operation for the Clara Kimball Young, Herbert Brenon, and Norma Talmadge productions, appearing in about eight big features a year, each of which will be made from stories by authors whose names in themselves constitute box office attractions. Two noted novels are under consideration for Mr. Warwick's first offering but the titles cannot be announced until it is definitely decided which will be used first.

Wayne Avey (Thanhouser)

Mr. Warwick will be presented in plays of an entirely different character from those in which he has been appearing under his old management. Both the star and his new directors feel that his talents have not been used to the best advantage heretofore and that the selection of scenarios has been unfortunate. The new Warwick productions, therefore, will be planned on a different and far more lavish scale than any in which he has been seen on the screen.

Mr. Ralph Ince, who recently left the Vitagraph Company to produce pictures at the head of his own corporation, has made special arrangements with Mr. Selznick and Mr. Rapf to direct the first of the new Warwick features. The selection of the story will be made within a few days and work will begin immediately at the Biograph Studio, which has been taken over by the Selznick enterprises.

Warwick's most noted film plays were "The Face in the Moonlight," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "The Man of the Hour," "The Dollar Mark," "Friday the Thirteenth," "The Heart of a Hero," and about fifteen others. There are still four completed Warwick pictures to be released by the World Film.

KLEVER PICTURES OBTAINS VICTOR MOORE

Arrangements have been entered into between Victor Moore and Klever Pictures, Inc., whereby Mr. Moore will be starred for a term of years in one-reel comedies to be known under the brand name of "Klever Komedies." The program release will be announced later.

Foreign Film Handled by Signet Is Pretentious Combination of Spectacular and Sensational —National Advertising Campaign Handled by Hesser

"THE Masque of Life," the sensational foreign picture being distributed by the Signet Film Corporation, has proved itself a great box-office success during its run at the Park theatre, New York City. It has many points in its favor as a special attraction for advance prices. It combines the spectacular and the sensational in a manner which has pleased the crowds from the start. There are big pageants and gorgeous ballet scenes in addition to the thrilling feats performed by the leading actress and Pete the chimpanzee.

The stealing of the baby by the chimpanzee, who pursued by a crowd of people runs with his prize up a 360-foot chimney, is the biggest thriller in the release. Evelyn, the heroine of the story, follows the monkey up the guide line and there does battle with the crazed chimpanzee for possession of the baby. In the latter part of the release there is a series of spectacular fire scenes inside the circus building. The burning of the lion cage is one of the big moments.

Though it must be admitted that many of the scenes go beyond the point of pleasurable excitement and become absolutely harrowng in their intensity, there seems to be no doubt that the people who have witnessed the film like such things when they are well done as in "The Masque of Life." The national advertising campaign is being handled by Edwin B. Hesser, who is known for his work in publicizing Metro pictures in Canada.

"INTOLERANCE" DOES BIG BUSINESS ON COAST

Advices from San Francisco and Los Angeles convey the interesting information that D. W. Griffith's new spectacle "Intolerance" is standing them up in these cities. Last week's receipts at the Columbia theatre, in the Golden Gate City, showed an increase over the best week "The Birth of a Nation" had at this house, of $3,000. Last Saturday's matinee at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, broke the former record attendance of the house by $200. The night's receipts topped by $150 the best gross ever earned at this theatre by a motion picture. Los Angeles has been the home of some remarkable successes, "Peg o' My Heart" among them, but from present indications, "Intolerance" is going to outdistance them all. The papers of both cities have given pages of praise to the play; the Los Angeles Bulletin of October 19 being moved to discuss the work in a page editorial.

"YEARS OF THE LOCUST" WILL SHOW FANNIE WARD IN AMAZING NUMBER OF GOWNS

When "Years of the Locust," a Lasky-Paramount picture now in the course of production, is released, Fannie Ward, its star, will be seen in an astounding collection of gowns—worn one at a time, however. The story for this picture was written by Albert Payson Terhune. Mr. Terhune was not aware that Miss Ward was to be the star when he evolved the plot and wrote into the script the series of gowns to be worn by the lead, but as it happens the popular Lasky star did not have to purchase any addition to her wardrobe.

Mentioned in the scenario are morning negligees, four street costumes, afternoon gowns, tea gowns, ball gowns, opera cloaks, furs for driving and motoring, girlish frocks, riding habits and all the hats, parasols and shoes to accompany them.

CHARLES RAY SEEN IN NEW ROLE

"The Honorable Algy," the latest release from the studios of Thomas H. Ince, at Culver City, shows Charles Ray for the first time in a light comedy since he came under the Ince banner. Ray's chief fame was won in juvenile and weakling parts, and this new role will give the young man a chance to demonstrate his talents along other lines. Ray is supported by the following cast: Margaret Thompson, Marjorie Wilson, Howard Hickman, Charlie French and Thomas Guise.

THEATRE BOX NAMED FOR ALICE BRADY

As the result of a voting contest carried on among the movie fan patrons of Harry Davis' Grand Opera House, Pittsburgh, one of the lower proscenium boxes has been named in honor of Alice Brady. The voting continued for a week at polling places provided in the lobby exactly like those made use of in political elections, and was open to participation by all patrons, men, women and children. Miss Brady's name will be blazoned upon the box door as large as life.

DISTINGUISHED GATHERING WITNESSES SHOWING OF TRIANGLE STAR FILM

On October 24 a notable gathering of international celebrities visited the Triangle projection room to witness a showing of "Our American Boys in the European War," the film of the American Ambulance Field Service.

Among those present M. Lausanne, editor of the Matin, and Madame Lausanne, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. Seth Barton French, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Miss Elizabeth Jordan, editor of Harper's, arquis de Polignac, M. Marcel Knecht, Lieutenant Z. Pechkoff, of the Franco-American Flying Corps, who had an opportunity to see himself on the screen; Captain A. Piatt Andrew, Inspector General of the American Ambulance Field Service; Mr. Henry D. Sleeper of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Irving Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Irving Anderson, and a number of special writers and well known editors.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who was to have addressed the audience, found that she was restrained from telling of the splendid work of the ambulance, by having sold her story to a magazine, for a large sum which she turned over to the Field Service.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY GIVEN TO LASKY FORCES BY MARIE DORO

A Hallowe'en party was given by Marie Doro at her home at Rock Cranny Ranch to which all the members of the Lasky studio forces were invited. The invitation specified that each guest was to come in some sort of costume and when they arrived, Miss Doro proceeded to take pictures of them with her own motion picture camera.

A New "Stingaree" Series Is Kalem Plan

Wright Induces Hornung, Famous English Author, to Write More Stories with the Australian Bandit as the Chief Character—True Boardman Will Appear in His Old Role—Second Edition to Be Released in Fifteen Episodes of Two Reels Each

CABLE negotiations between New York and London extending over a period of three months were brought to a successful conclusion early last week when E. W. Hornung, creator of "Stingaree" and "Raffles," cabled his consent to write a new series of "Stingaree" stories for the Kalem Company.

True Boardman, who gained popularity in the title role of Kalem's original "Stingaree" series will again be seen in the same role.

Ever since the completion of the original "Stingaree" series of twelve two-act episodes, Kalem officials have been striving to put through plans for another series.

The difficulty confronting Kalem in inducing the celebrated English literary light to write a new series of "Stingaree" stories may well be imagined. Mr. Hornung's plans for the coming year had all been laid out and allowed no opportunity to take the pen in hand again to weave new adventures of the picturesque Australian bandit. In fact, the first cabled inquiries to Kalem's English representative, made at the conclusion of the releases in this country, brought a reply that made the project seem hopeless.

Hornung Finally Agrees

But, spurred on by the continued urging of exhibitors, Kalem kept doggedly at the task. Then, a month ago, the following letter was received from the English representative: "'Stingaree' is now ready for release in this country and we have just completed the advance showing of the picture to buyers. We have also held a special series of exhibitions for Mr. Hornung and a number of his prominent literary friends.

"I now think we have a ray of hope in seeking to have Mr. Hornung write new stories. His enthusiasm over the picturization of his stories and especially the faithful portrayal of 'Stingaree' given by True Boardman is unbounded. I have promised another showing for him next week of several of the episodes. If any one thing prevails on him to give us more stories of 'Stingaree' it will be the pictures themselves. I can't describe his praise and enthusiasm to you."

In his final moment it was the screen productions that caused Mr. Hornung to lay aside his important plans to take up the further career of "Stingaree." The original stories were published in short story and book form by Scribner's, but by the payment of a staggering price Kalem has induced Mr. Hornung to write original screen plots for the new adventures.

"So far as I know," declared Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, "this is the first time on record that an international literary worker of the prominence of Mr. Hornung, has undertaken to write original stories for a motion picture series. I feel that the facts speak for themselves and it is not necessary for us to indulge in highly colored adjectives to impress the importance of our achievement on picture people. To exhibitors we know that it will be sufficient to say that they will get another 'Stingaree'—that is the answer to their hundreds of letters. But we feel that they will also appreciate the tremendous efforts which we had to put forth to induce so prominent a writer to take one of his most famous characters and write a new series of his adventures originally for motion pictures.

"'Stingaree' is probably the first motion picture series ever planned, the success of which was guaranteed from the start. Why, we have only to secure the first-run bookings promised by those exhibitors who have been urging us to produce more 'Stingaree' adventures to have an assured success."

The new "Stingaree" will be in fifteen episodes, and as with the original series, each two-reel release will tell an absolutely complete story. The "second edition" will also be produced at Kalem's California studios.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"Less Than the Dust" Is a Typical Pickford Picture

ARTCRAFT'S initial offering had its premiere Thursday morning at the Broadway theatre, when a representative audience gathered to welcome the first production with this popular star. The real test was to be whether such lavish staging would detract from the simple charm which has always been this star's particular asset. And the verdict was unanimous that little Mary registered equally well, whether as a ragged American girl, a poor Italian waif, a pathetic daughter of the Sun, or a Hindoo worshipper of heathen gods.

It was Mary Pickford, in a role of genuine pathos that transcended race, color, or casts, which was viewed in "Less Than Dust." We know Little Mary's ability to register intimate personal contact with every member of an audience, from the moment she appears on the screen. And "Less Than Dust" is no exception to this rule. We have learned to love her little tricks of intimacy, and I believe to resent equally some obvious imitations from other stars. And every time we see her in a new role we are surprised at ourselves for the enjoyment we take in her repetition of the same pleasing heart catches for which we willingly pay an extra price at the box-office.

We even laughed at her discovery of the spring seats in the chairs in the big English manor, as if we have never seen this one-time favorite "business" a dozen times previously. We chuckled and smiled at the mixing of the shoes of the natives outside the temple, the suggestion that the English bath was a "sacred pool," and her mistakes of etiquette which included eating her dinner from her lap and removing her waist following the example of a male passenger on the ship during the shuffleboard game, with a dozen other charactistic touches which give her a clutch on our sympathies.

Good comedy is evidenced in the scene with Little Mary in the bath tub.

As it is to be assumed the audience drawn to this picture will come first and last to see Miss Pickford, it is well that the story opens with Rahda in her simple native dress as a little castaway, an orphan adopted by the swordmaker, Ramlan. We find her surrounded with the native low-caste Hindus of whom we get an intimate and rather pleasing view in their home life and customs. The sacred cow, and the custom of removing shoes upon entering the temple are cleverly woven into the plot with an abundance of comedy and pathos, until we are thoroughly acquainted with the erratic and troublesome disposition of the little girl who is to be the center of the story.

The real plot begins with the posting of a notice by the British authorities, requiring all the natives to be vaccinated, which causes an uprising in which little Rahda takes the active part of the one to give the alarm by ringing a great bell. During this mutiny the Captain, who has befriended her from the beginning, is wounded and would have been killed but for her quick wit. She turns away from his murderous intent a native who is about to finish the Captain.

The mutiny results in the imprisonment of the swormaker, Ramlan, and Rahda then sets out to rescue him. At this stage Ramlan tells her the secret of her birth, that she is English and not of his people, and she goes to her faithful Babu, who has taught her the English tongue, and is assisted to return to her English relatives and claim her inheritance. This results in the discovery that her Captain is a nephew of her grandfather, who has disinherited her father, known as "The Derelict," and a love plot is then introduced for a final climax in which she marries her Captain.

"Less Than the Dust" has several moments of interest, but without Mary Pickford we can say positively we could not endorse the play as a "super" production. We do say that as a vehicle for Miss Pickford, audiences everywhere will say it is as pleasing a Pickford production as has ever been shown. The Pickford "touch" appears and reappears with a regularity that keeps the audience in a most sympathetic humor, and every bit of interest created by the star herself, in Rahda as the main character of the story, is genuine and well sustained. It is Mary Pickford that will make "Less Than the Dust" live up to the extensive advertising and exaggerated claims which we know will be made for this production from Maine to California.

All in all there will be no disappointment in "Less Than the Dust" from any angle except the point of view that the producers have not done the impossible. They have not found any wonderful vehicle that carries any more charm than Pickford can always be depended on to have in any good Pickford play. They have spent liberally, but have not exceeded the greatest of Pickford's previous successes. We say this with all respect to the aim of these producers to give us the best possible from this artist.

Competent support is given Miss Pickford by David Powell, Frank Losee, Marie Alden, Mario Majeroni, Francis Joyner, Russell Bassett, and other well known picture players. But there is only one real role in this production—it is Rahda, played by Mary Pickford. And the play, as giving Miss Pickford every opportunity to display every imaginable emotion from smile to tears, is adequate and satisfactory. It will be a sure box-office winner, and it will send patrons away happy, but we would not advise an overadvertising of the grandness of the production beyond the truthful representation that it is Mary Pickford at her best, and in a play that is magnificently and lavishly produced with a character role that gives Little Mary a full chance to twitch the heart strings of any audience. Rahda is a character of wonderful sympathy, which holds well through seven reels. But the plot of the play itself is disconnected and we doubt if the average audience will find a deep interest in a single character or event portrayed beyond the personal charm of the star role. Which goes to show how much Mary Pickford is endeared to us all.

"THE PRICE OF FAME"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ALTHOUGH the construction of this picture is artificial—it is hinged on the device of double exposure—it offers opportunity for some brilliant work by Marc MacDermott and a supporting cast of uniform excellence. Mr. MacDermott has given no finer example of his command of expression, and his ability to hold the spectator. We cannot imagine any audience which will fail to be interested in the performance he gives.

Naomi Childers, in the feminine lead, and L. Rogers Lytton, as the heavy, contribute vastly to the effect which the picture exercises. Others are Mary Maurice, Logan Paul and Mr. Quinn.

From a story by Franklin B. Coates, Director Charles J. Brabin constructed an acceptable technical vehicle for his players. The story could not possibly stand by itself; it is made reasonably convincing by the characterization, which is sharp and well-defined. A less skillful actor than Mr. MacDermott would have failed to draw, as he does, a sharp distinction between the two brothers whom he portrays. That is the peculiar excellence of his work here.

The story tells how John Thatcher, a failure and a drunkard, but a man of fine spirit, throws his talents into the balance in aid of his brother William, who is rich, powerful, but a man of small ability.

"THE PRINCE OF GRAUSTARK"

(Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

EXHIBITORS whose patrons like a swift moving drama laid mostly in a mythical George Barr McCutcheon kingdom will do well to consider "The Prince of Graustark." The picture has been very capably directed by Fred E. Wright, who also made the adaptation.

Bryant Washburn appears as the romantic Prince Robin, giving a finished and pleasing performance. Marguerite Clayton is a satisfactory heroine, while Sidney Ainsworth draws a real character sketch of the phlegmatic Count Quinnox, Ernest Maupain, Florence Oberle and John Cossar are the other principals.

Of course, the events depicted in "The Prince of Graustark" could never happen in real life, but once the spectator gets the angle of romance, he is not worried about the reality or the unreality of the story itself. Humor, a deal of suspense, and plenty of action characterize this picture. In addition, the settings and details of production have been carefully attended to.

Blithers Loses the Battle

In view of the widespread popularity of the McCutcheon novels —a fact which can again be used to good advantage by the exhibitor in advertising "The Prince of Graustark"—the barest sketch of the plot will suffice. Prince Robin is doomed to marry the Princess of Dawsbergen, but he insists upon making his own choice. Going to America to negotiate a loan for his kingdom, he meets Millionaire Blithers, and the girl. He thinks the latter is Blither's daughter, but a neatly contrived chain of circumstances finally disclose her true identity. She is none other than the Princess.

"THE DEVIL'S DOUBLE"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WILLIAM S. HART has a strong hold on the public and for legitimate reasons too. He can make the time-honored bad man a convincing figure. His many characterizations of such personalities lay stress on that. He is distinguished; perhaps that sums up his success. But to our mind the members of the Ince scenario staff treat Mr. Hart's popularity lightly. It is a thing that can be spoiled for all the good work done by the actor. It's been a long, long time since we have seen him in a picture that doesn't close with the player the center of a terriffic struggle between the good and bad. So when "The Devil's Double" was shown we felt practically certain at the beginning of the first reel that in the last he would be beset with an encounter of conflicting emotions. And regretably our expectations were not disappointed. If they had been "The Devil's Double" might have called forth superlatives. As it is though it is very much like Mr. Hart's previous pictures, it has no originality in its construction. It would certainly be a fine picture if it were Mr. Hart's first but it isn't and Mr. Hart is popular. Give him something a little different the next time.

When one turns to other angles of "The Devil's Double," one finds that they also are like those of the former pictures. But with these cases there are no strings attached to their meritoriousness. The photography, the locations and the several scenes of the lawless western town are as good as could be desired.

J. G. Hawks prepared the scenario and his plot deals with the bad westerner, a half sane artist and his wife. On a trip through the west the artist sees "Bowie" and using his wife as a go-between secures him for his model of Lucifer. He soon sees that "Bowie" loves his wife and to bring the devilish look into the model's eyes he takes to insulting her. "Bowie" stands it for a while and then has to quit. Later he returns to their cabin to find the artist murdered and two bandits fighting for the woman. He proceeds to do away with both of them in a fierce encounter, but from this shock the woman emerges with a beclouded brain. "Bowie" cares for her until she regains her health and then sends her back to the east with a promise that he will come after her some day.

In support of Mr. Hart appear Enid Markey as the woman and Robert McKim as the artist.

"PEARL OF PARADISE"

(Mutual-Pollard—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

DISPLAY of feminine charm, unadorned and again adorned, with an adaptation of the familiar back-to-nature story, and a liberal use of the privilege of having the character "dream" that would otherwise be improbable, makes an interesting and exciting tale with Harry Pollard and Margarita Fischer as the principals, Joseph Harris as the father, Gomez, and Beatrice Van as the other girl. J. Gordon Russell as the piratical Capt. Van Dekken deserves special mention for the well staged fight scenes in which he and Dellow (Harry Pollard) divide honors.

A fanciful story is based on the early disappointment in love, of Gomez, who murders the dissipated husband of the mother of Yulita, whom he has brought up in perfect ignorance of conventions. Yulita wants to adopt John as a companion in a manner innocently embarrassing, and there the real story begins. Life on this desert isle is punctuated with the arrival of Captain Van Dekken, who seeks to force his attentions on Yulita, with the opportune punishment of Van Dekken by John, and the burning of the house and leaving of the Captain, later, to his fate.

The story is one of romance and adventure, fairly well tied together, introducing in the first reel the tragedy of Gomez' early life, his employment as a toreador with a few scenes of a bull fight, and the struggle in the tower. Yulita displays her well known personal charms, of grace and figure, to considerable advantage, in various dances, and some very passionate love-making is registered in the scenes where she would persuade John to give up his intention of returning to New York. An effective and unusual ending is Yulita's good-bye which John does not know is a real farewell for all time, as she sinks beneath the waves, rather than endure the life which the return to the island would mean for her.

"WITHOUT A SOUL," FROM WORLD, A REISSUE OF "LOLA"

WORLD FILM CORPORATION is shortly to reissue another Clara Kimball Young release entitled "Without a Soul." This was produced about a year ago by James Young from Owen Davis' play "Lola," and was put out under that name. The picture has been re-edited and re-titled and on the whole makes a most satisfactory five-reeler. The subtitles are decorated with art work, apropos of the printed lines.

The plot hinges on Lola, the daughter of a doctor who has perfected an invention that will restore life to a dead body, providing it is brought into use soon enough. Lola is killed in an automobile accident, but it brought back to life by use of the instrument. She does not, however, retain her soul which was loving and kind before. She becomes a harsh, mercenary woman of the world and leaves her father to enter on a life of excesses. She returns when she learns that she has not much longer to live to demand her father to restore her life again after she dies. But he, seeing that his invention provides only physical animation in a dormant body, destroys it.

Miss Young is given a role of wide range in "Without a Soul" and she handles it carefully, keeping well in character. Her support consists of James Young, Alec Francis, Edward M. Kimball and others.

"THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN"

(Thanhouser-Pathe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FOR "The World and the Woman," Philip Lonergan brought into play a theme which under ordinary circumstances would be unsuccessful in convincing many people. His story is based on the healing of the sick and crippled by the treatment of Faith. The viewpoint of the Faith healer is upheld and expounded. It is not unlikely that because of its theme the picture will be of great interest to those of this belief. To other sects and to those who go to the theatre without any thought of religion but to be purely entertained, "The World and the Woman" should score effectively. For despite the natural limitations of the theme, Mr. Lonergan has written a scenario of good dramatic flavor, sustaining of itself and while the basic principles of the picture may not convince all, the story will certainly entertain.

Incidentally "The World and the Woman" marks the first appearance of Jeanne Eagels on the screen. As the woman who pulls herself up from the streets until she gains an exalted position in a small town community through the practice of her healing, Miss Eagels registers every point of her character with a skill and charm that will win her many admirers. She is a real actress and at the same time a real beauty. One's attention is about equally divided between her talent and her attractiveness.

The story has a good many startling surprises, strong climaxes and unexpected happenings. A clubman, at a loss for a maid to send to his mountain lodge, at the suggestion of his companions takes a woman of the streets and gives her the position. She reaches the mountains, makes friends with the natives, regains her health, and then her master comes up. He is attracted by her beauty and makes advances. She leaves him for the friendship of one of the mountain homes. Then by an accident discovers that she has the power of healing.

After having effected several cures a certain woman comes who has been crippled by an automobile belonging to one of the city man's companions. The woman starts to give her new patient treatment, but in the midst of it, the city man enters and denounces her. Her ability to heal is gone. The crippled woman's husband denounces her as a fraud. The climax is reached when the husband discovering the identity of the man who drove the car that crippled his wife attacks him. But while they fight the woman's healing power has returned and she cures the wife. The husband discovers this in the midst of the fight and lets his victim go. This man, the one who first set the woman on the downward path at last asks her to marry him and she accepts.

As produced by Eugene Moore, "The World and the Woman" is given a setting of great realism. The cabaret scenes that open the picture are handled elegantly. The various vaudeville numbers are shown and they are interesting to look at. The mountain scenes are well done. There are crowds here too, and wherever Mr. Moore has handled them, he has done so most efficiently.

The supporting cast which is uniformly good is comprised of Boyd Marshall, Thomas A. Curran, Wayne Arey, Grace de Carlton, Carey Hastings and little Ethelmary Oakland.

"EAST IS EAST"

(Mutual-Turner—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

HERE is a production with Florence Turner in a role closely allied to a Bowery tough. Can you imagine it? As a character play the types apparently ring true, they are doubtless real to London "East." And this product of London "East" cannot adjust herself to a residence in London "West," where refinement and social conditions so entirely different prevail.

The heart interest centers on the two main characters, the girl and the boy brought up in the environment of the "East," who find themselves separated by the hand of fate, which places the girl in the social environment of the "West." She yearns for the good old days, and her former "pal." And he meanwhile, on money furnished by her, becomes very successful "in trade," and then repudiating "trade" goes to great sacrifice to raise himself to her new station in life. Then the awakening comes. She is wooed for her money. He reads of her engagement to the scion of aristocracy, and retires discouraged to his old haunts. She learns of the insincerity of her suitor, and repudiates everything, including the fortune to be hers if she would become "refined." In his sincere love she finds final happiness and contentment.

It is hard to imagine Florence Turner in a character role of this sort, and it may be hard for some audiences to understand the English sentiment of this play, but it can be stated that the work of all the company rings true and barring the continental plot, we have fine action and a well sustained interest. Opinions will differ as to whether this is better than an average production.

The wonderful English garden spots add materially to the matchless photographic composition of the many out-door scenes.

"A RESTLESS NIGHT"

(Mutt and Jeff—Split Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS comic cartoon shows Mutt's efforts to get rid of Jeff, who persists on snoring throughout the night. He locks him in the wash tub, hangs him out the window and fastens him to a clothesline but he still hears the snore. Finally a cat, angry at the noise, loosens the pin that holds him and he plunges downward, falling into a water barrel. But even there Jeff persists on sleeping and likewise snoring.

Although this release doesn't contain the usual humorous plot of the other Mutt and Jeff pictures, it manages to get many laughs due to its one humorous situation and the many forms in which it is presented. The animation is inclined to be a little bit jerky in some of the scenes, although never is it continuous enough to be annoying to any great extent.

"A STRANGER FROM SOMEWHERE"

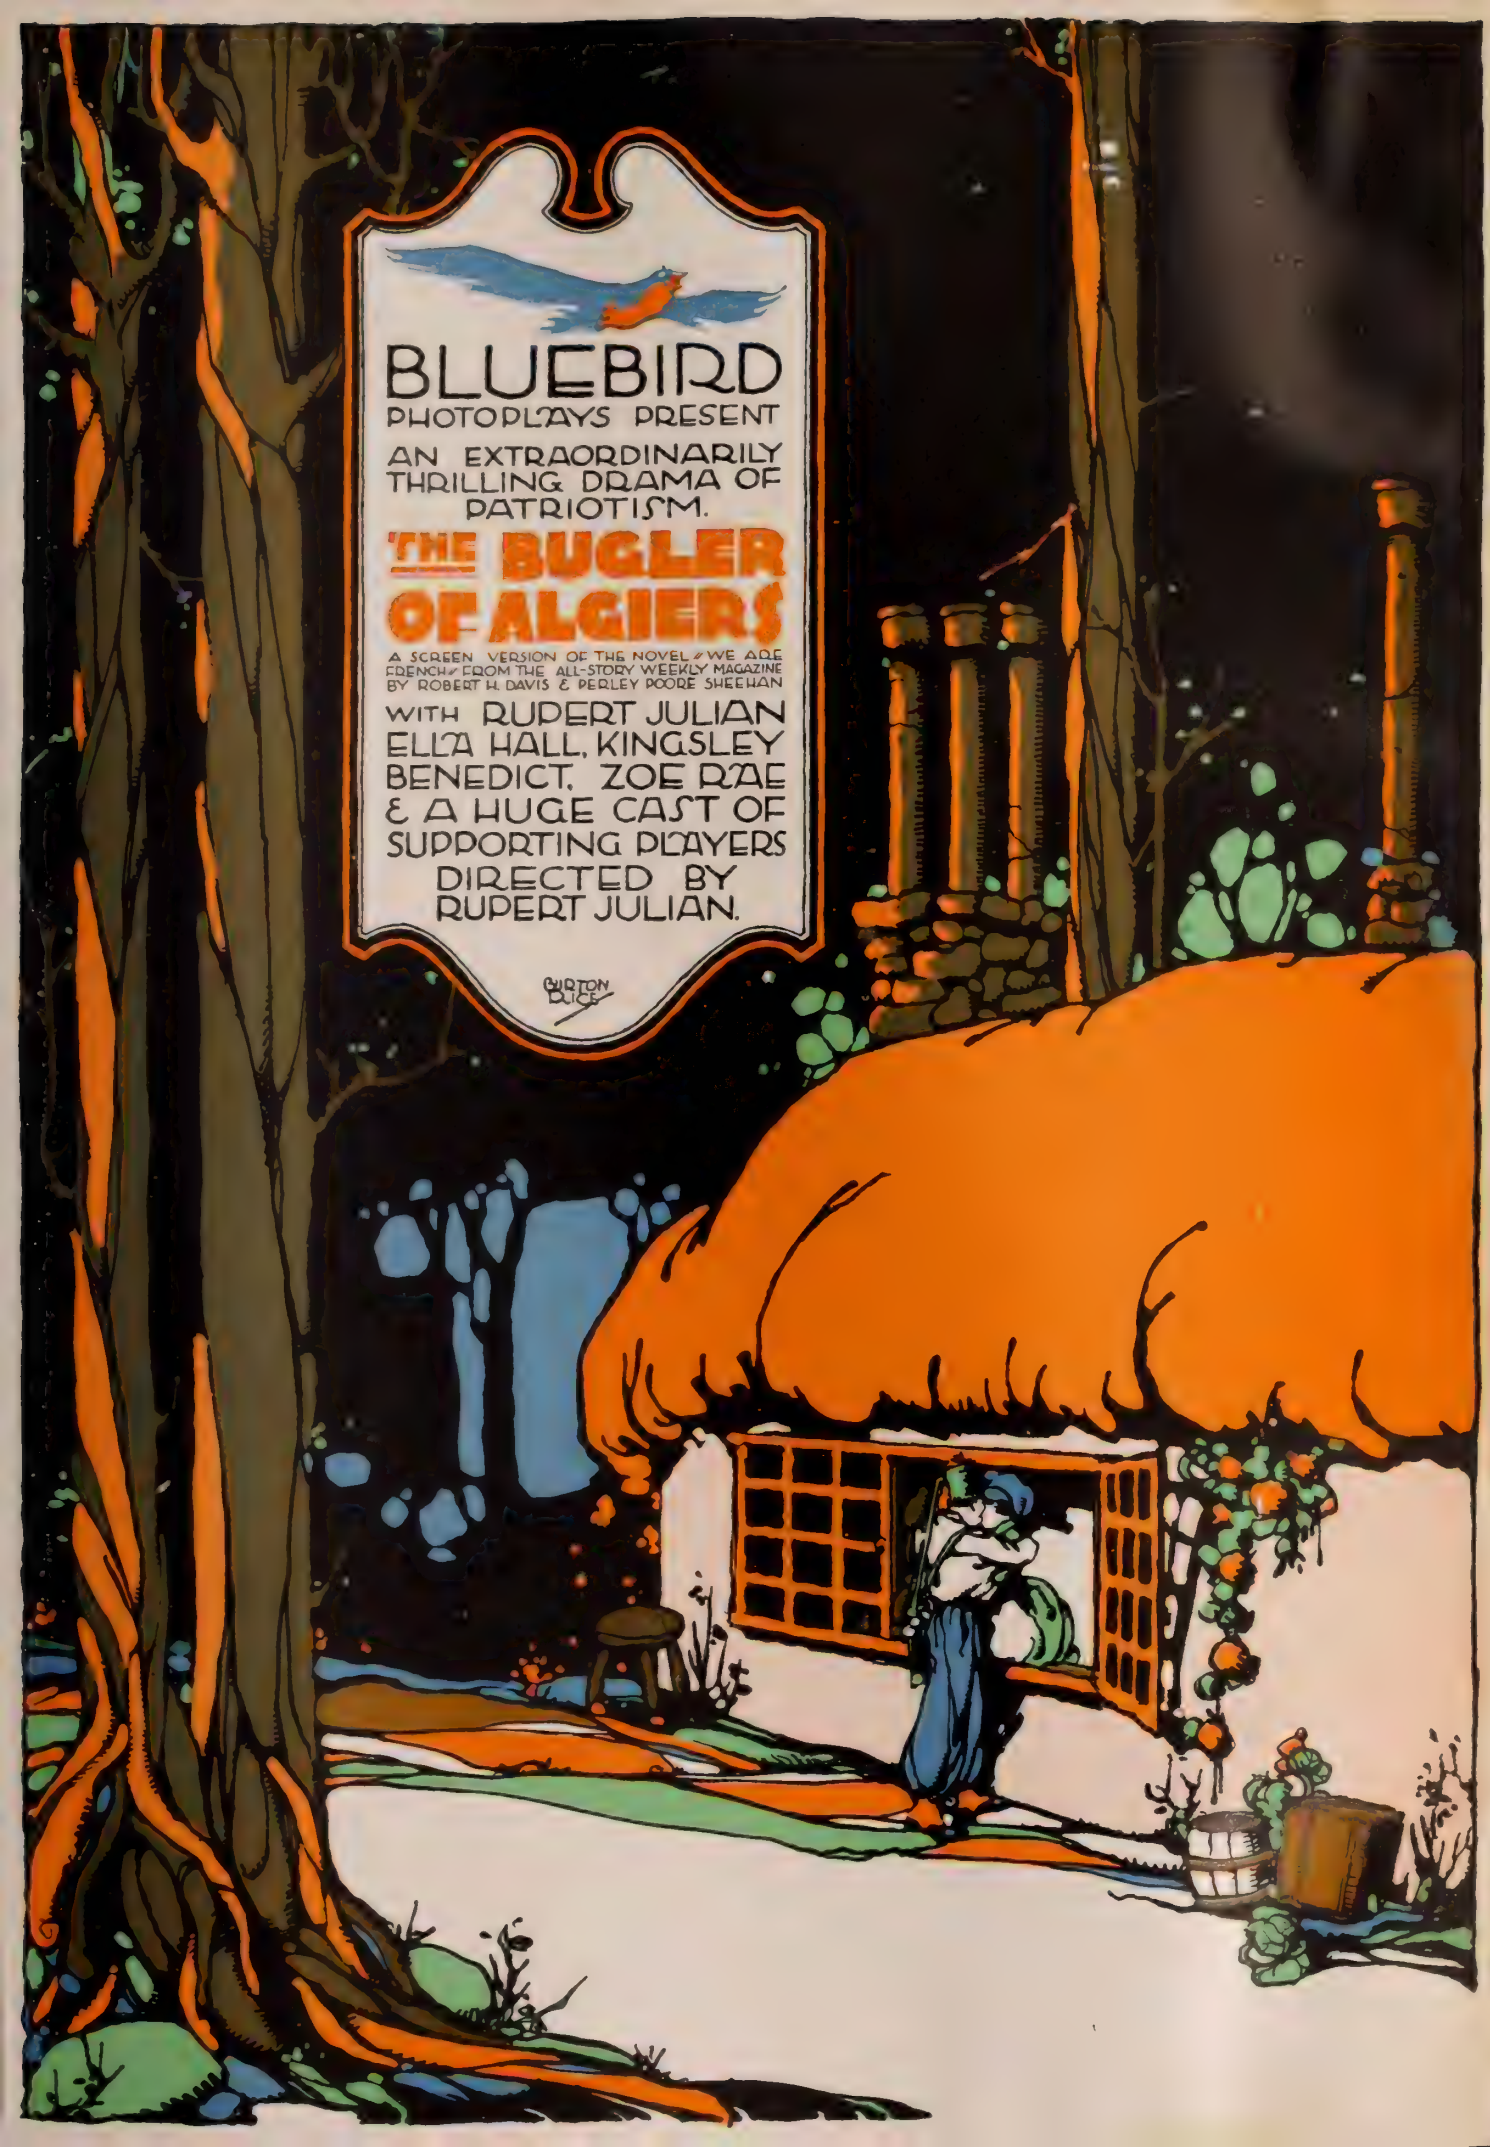
(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

GIVE a fellow who is madly in love with a sweet young thing a double and he and the double are both going to get in a wild lot of mixups that can not help but be funny. This is the situation in "A Stranger from Somewhere." It has a lot of comedy in it and a fair amount of suspense, a sufficient amount to get the five reels over without a drag, which is doing a great lot in this day of inadequate stories. The comedy in the picture is all of the genuine sort. At some of it you are supposed to laugh. At some of it we think the producers meant you to thrill, but you laugh anyway and whole heartedly, too, so what's the difference.

The scenario was prepared by Willis Woods, that scenario writing combination which once worked as two—F. McGrew Willis and Walter Woods. A westerner in an eastern city is introduced. Crooks think he is an easy mark but they never once get the upper hand. A member of their band is the exact double of the Westerner and so they rig him up and send him to pay court to the stranger's best beloved. From there on it is one case of mistaken identity after another until at last the crooks are vanquished and the stranger and the girl are united.

Looking for Courage to Propose



The direction was in charge of William Worthington who had as his principals Agnes Vernon and Franklyn Farnum. Miss Vernon is quite genuine in her role, while Mr. Farnum has two on his hands, and does both of them nicely, drawing a distinct dividing line between the two. The scenario was arranged so as to put to rout all thought of possible confusion regarding the stranger and the crook. And there is no double exposure either which is a good thing. Claire McDowell, Helen Wright, Arthur Hoyt, and Barney Furey have the other principal roles and do well.

Two significant BLUEBIRDS. Concrete examples of the BLUEBIRD policy of "The Play's the Thing." Two BLUEBIRDS that mark positive and progressive achievement in the production of perfect photoplay entertainment.

"The Measure of a Man" is significant because the drama is based on a big human story, written by that American master-writer, Norman Duncan. Staged in the Big Woods of California, it is vast and powerful, big with a bigness that is overwhelming. Faithful realism has been attained by giving even the minor parts to actors of the very first rank.

"The Bugler of Algiers" is a beautiful exposition of patriotism, friendship and true love. It is one of the most significant pictures ever presented. Its appeal is world wide. In sets, atmosphere, direction, photography; in that quality of charm which causes an audience to lose itself in the fascination of the play, "The Bugler of Algiers" is supreme.

"The Bugler of Algiers" was originally intended for a State Rights proposition. It made so strong an appeal to the BLUEBIRD executives that an enormous sum was paid for the privilege of releasing it under the BLUEBIRD brand. Remarkable as is its cast, including as it does four full-fledged stars, "The Bugler of Algiers" is a notable example of what can be accomplished under the BLUEBIRD policy of giving first importance to the PLAY.

If you are so fortunate as to have a BLUEBIRD contract you have only to wait until these magnificent plays come to you. If you have not, why not put yourself in line by an immediate communication with your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or

THE CITY HALL THEATRE

A MOTION picture theatre in the financial district of New York sounds strange to some of us, nevertheless, at 31 to 33 Park Row, there is a modern house which rivals the Strand in program. On this site in 1798 the first theatre in New York was built. J. J. Holland was the manager of this quaint old theatre.

Coming out of the past to the present we will go into detail of the City Hall, or the downtown miniature Strand. This theatre opened its doors to the public on September 30, 1916. Louis Sheinhart of 194 Bowery, New York, designed the building and M. Shapero and Sons built the place. The house is absolutely fireproof, constructed of brick, terra cotta and steel. The outside measurements are forty-eight by one hundred.

A large cast iron marquis puts the desired effect to the entrance. David Weinstock, who has had wide experience in the motion picture line, is managing director of the City Hall. This theatre contains a spacious lobby well decorated. A wainscoting of marble about three feet high is seen on the lobby walls. Paneled mirrors are above this wainscoting and are four feet in width. Now for something new in decorations, above these mirrored walls there are hand painted subjects of a historical nature. The figures are striking.

Entering the theatre itself through metal doors the decorations demand attention. Harmonizing with the lobby there are large paintings on the walls bordered in gold frames, recalling historical events of old New York. The lighting fixtures are the best and most artistic to be found anywhere. Many drop lamps hang from the plaster ceiling giving the interior a rich atmosphere. The general interior illumination is of an amber color, which seems to be very popular in the better class of theatres. The office and propection booth is reached through a door to the right upon entering.

The capacity of this theatre is 530. The seats contained are of genuine oak, leather upholstered, spring cushioned and equipped with a self raising decive found to be very efficient. These seats were manufactured by The A. H. Andrews Company. Ample exits assure absolute safety. The projection booth is asbestos and well equipped. The two Powers machines (6-B) contained explains the unusual clearness of the pictures.

The length of the throw from this booth is about seventy feet. The music is furnished by the Kimball Orchestral Organ costing eight thousand dollars. A typhoon ventilating system has been installed.

Heat is maintained in the winter by a system put in by the Ideal Heating Company. The indirect lighting system is used in this house. Mr. Weinstock personally selects all the features shown at this theatre. Among the features used are V-L-S-E, Kleine, Pathe, Mutual and others. The prince of admission at all times is fifteen cents. The manager always thought that the people of downtown New York wanted a motion picture theatre á la Strand, and judging from results he had the right idea. His business acumen in this particular is constantly verified.

MEYERS DEDICATES MARCH TO PARAMOUNT THEATRE OWNER

HARRY W. MEYERS, a well known musician and composer, conductor of the Stanley symphony orchestra, has written a clever march, called "The Stanley March," which he has dedicated to Stanley V. Mastbaum, owner of the Stanley and other Paramount theatres in Philadelphia and that vicinity.

The evening that the march was rendered for the first time in the Stanley theatre there were rounds of thunderous applause, and so popular has the march become that it is being played in practically every Paramount theatre in Eastern Pennsylvania this week. The weekly house organ of Paramount's Philadelphia exchange reproduced the entire march and circularized it among the exhibitors. Many theatre managers have had their orchestras render the march with success.

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM SERVICE

"The Heart of Virginia Keep." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Nov. 11.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Not in the News." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Nov. 14.)—Now shown for review; the story follows: Elliott Dexter and his brother are released from prison. The former resolves to lead a decent life; the latter determines to be a criminal. Years later Elliott has become a bank president and the husband of a fine woman who knows his past. Elliott's brother, unknown to him, blackmails his wife. One night the brother comes to Elliott's house to get money. In the darkness Elliott, thinking him a burglar, shoots and kills him. He is exonerated and the reporters never learn the real story. Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth are the principals.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial, No. 19." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Nov. 15.)—Supplementing Wallace Carlson's burlesque news weekly, are 500 feet of scenic taken at Lake Tahoe, California.

"His Moral Code." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Nov. 18.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Estelle Bland, a nurse, engaged to Dr. Armstrong, an interne. Ewing, a wealthy idler, is injured and comes under Estelle's care. He falls in love with her, and pictures to Armstrong what he can do for the girl, compared to the struggle she must experience as a young physician's wife. The doctor loves her so much that he gives her up and leaves for the West. Thinking Armstrong has deserted her, the girl marries Ewing. In the years that follow Ewing proves himself unworthy, and Estelle divorces him, returning to her old position at the hospital. Armstrong has established himself as a physician in the West. On a visit he finds his former sweetheart and takes her with him on his return.

Appearing in the cast are Lillian Drew, E. H. Calvert and Edward Arnold.

"The Temptation of Adam." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Nov. 13.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Girl Detective." (Selig. Sat., Nov. 18.)—This release was made some time ago, and has many defects not found in more modern productions. The story, acting and technical details are elementary, consequently the film will get by only with very indulgent audiences. The cast is composed of Robyn Adair, Leo D. Maloney, E. J. Brady, Eugenie Forde and Virginia Kirtley.

To buy his girl a ring, Taylor steals some money from a mining company. Knowing that the theft is detected, he makes it appear that Kirkland, the paymaster, was the thief. A girl detective is called in and by finding a very obvious clew, proves Taylor's guilt. Taylor tries to escape on a hand car, but after an unexciting chase in an automobile, Kirkland and the girl detective overtake him.

"The Lone Point Mystery." (Kalem—Hazards of Helen—Sat., Nov. 11.)—This reel contains more than the usual quota of thrills, and they are real ones. We have ceased to worry about Helen. We know she has a charmed life, else she would once too often take her chance with death. When she runs in front of a fast-moving freight and is actually dragged before our eyes under the trucks which take an annual toll from experienced train hands, we have a right to shudder. When she leaps from the cowcatcher of the engine direct into the flying auto, it is so quick we cannot even see it, but we are assured this is the real thing and no trick (don't forget this in your advertising). This story shows how Helen trails a man who tries to beat an insurance company by a fake suicide. But Helen is "on the job," and he is handed over to justice.

"Witch of the Dark House." (Kalem—Girl from Frisco Series—Two Reels, Wed., Nov. 8.)—Marin Sais and the Kalem players have produced here another of their Western features, for this story abounds in thrills of the sort that appeal to general audiences. A band of counterfeiters is discovered in a wonderful dark house, where an old witch keeps watch and guards their secret. Trapdoors, secret alarm signals and numerous other stunts which must have kept some one awake perfecting the scenario, add to the interest. Splendid riding and gun-play, mingled with some exciting chases, furnish plenty of interest of a melodramatic character.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Knights of the Bath Tub." (Nestor. Mon., Nov. 13.)—An excellent comedy number written by Dorothy Barrett and produced with the popular Nestor trio, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean in the principal parts. The story tells of the rich man's son who goes to work learning the business from the bottom up—this time the bottom is the plumbing profession and the hero has a hard time of it, particularly when his eccentric boss lords it over him. Moran in this role cuts a most humorous figure.

"A Million Dollar Smash." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Nov. 15.)—This is a fairly diverting burlesque on the railroad melodrama that moves a little slowly until its big stunt is pulled. This is the blowing of a safe through the side of a railroad station into a passing freight car, and is done excellently and will be sure to get a laugh. There is little other trick work, and its absence is inclined to make the two reels rather slow.

"The Diamond Lure." (Rex. Thurs., Nov. 16.)—A drama written and produced by Jack McDermott that, though a little vague in some of its phases, shows enough originality to put it succesfully across. It tells the manner in which a girl prevented her sweetheart from learning that her father was seized with a temporary fit of kleptomania. The suspense is high throughout this. Betty Schade, Lloyd T. Whitlock and Rex de Roselli are the leads.

"Life's Maelstrom." (Big U. Two reels. Thurs., Nov. 16.)—This is melodrama of the crudest posible sort, in which coincidence is stretched until it is broken and seems ridiculous. It is humorous but not intentionally so. Murdock MacQuarrie, Edythe Sterling, Harry Hamm and Colin Chase are the leads. Jay Hunt has made a weak job of the directing.

"Guilty." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Nov. 17.)—Here the story of the greedy capitalist and his oppressed tenants is presented with a parallel of a socialistic writer and his romance with a social worker among the poor. There is considerable coincidence, shooting, intrigue and heroic deeds committed upon the observer during the two reels, which, to tell the truth, are quite overcrowded. The two threads of plot are rather remote from one another and the picture hardly has enough central action to retain undivided interest. Harry Carey, Edith Johnson, Mark Fenton, Hector Sarno and others appeared in a story by Cohn and Parker.

"A Capable Lady Cook." (Nestor. Fri., Nov. 17.)—Rather a mediocre comedy in which Wallace Beery masquerades as a cook. Beery gets considerable humor into his own characterization, but the whole doesn't hang together with a degree of unity sufficient to amuse over all its length. Harry Wulze wrote the scenario and others in the cast are Bell Bennett and Kewpie Morgan.

"The Son of a Rebel Chief." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Nov. 18.)—This dramatic number is laid in Civil War times and tells of the separation of father and son—the former stays with the South, the latter fights for the North. There is a lot of small fighting depicted which is hardly convincing. In the end the son kills his father as a spy and is at last pardoned by his sweetheart, who realizes the young man was in the right. William V. Mong prepared the scenario for this and he also plays the role of the son, rather poorly we should say. Others are Harry Holden, Mark Fenton and Nellie Allen.

"Lost in Babylon." (Rex. Sun., Nov. 19.)—This is a comedy and defies the old order in that a country girl comes to the city and makes her way without getting into an awful lot of trouble. It makes a pleasing release, although there is little suspense about it. Edith Roberts, M. K. Wilson and Malcolm Blevins appear in the principal roles. The story is by Harvey Gates.

"Her Chance." (Victor. Sun., Nov. 19.)—The snobbish American family and the poor relation—the English nobleman who has changed places with his valet. These are two good stories that combined make a still better one. "Her Chance" is a comedy-drama of the highest type despite its obvious conventionality. Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley did the story, while in the cast appear Lois Wilson, Lee Hill, Harry Carter and Wilbur Higby.

"Liberty." (Special. Two reels. Eleventh episode. Week of Oct. 23.)—This episode of the up-to-the-minute serial entitled "A Daughter of Mars," introduces the realistic wreck of an aeroplane and the usual amount of incidental thrills. Aircraft guns and other military scenes are very well done, and the interest carries through the two reels without a break, ending with the sudden and unexpected seizing of the Mexican sentry by Eddie Polo, who reaches out through the tent and has him choked to insensibility before anyone realizes and without a sound. Liberty escapes from the burning building, to be picked up with her faithful servant by an aeroplane scout, but the enemy soon shatters this hope and we see the plane dip, do a corkscrew fall, and crash a broken mass over a highty precipice. Liberty appeals to the Mexican commandante to be taken to headquarters, where she overhears the countersign and discovers her faithful servant in the next tent. He bides his time, seizes the sentry, and then——

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

"Luke, Patient Provider." (Rolin.)—In this Lonesome Luke undertakes to furnish a hospital with patients, and goes about it by running wild in his flivver. The picture winds up with a wild sort of chase which is fairly diverting, although not as funny as other of Luke's mixups. The business in the main part of the reel is well up to standard.

"Here and There in Spain." (Split reel.)—This half reel shows various points of interest in the cities of Madrid and Seville. The pictures are in color and make a nice showing. On the same reel with "A City's Milk Supply."

"A City's Milk Supply." (Split reel.)—An interesting educational dividing the reel with "Here and There in Spain," that follows a city's milk supply from cow to consumer.

"The Warning." (Wharton. Three reels.)—Creighton Hale as the good-for-nothing son of a minister is the star of this release, which makes its bid for entertainment by way of a dream visited on the youth, which ultimately results in his reform. It is a luridly done story slightly drawn out, in which the sub-titles are supplied by quotations from the Bible. Its production hardly ranks with the short picture of the present day.

"The Shielding Shadow." (Astra. Eighth episode. Two reels.)—There is an assortment of good thrills in this episode of the serial entitled "The Haunting Hand." An electric storm which demolishes a lighthouse is handled to good effect, while a fight between One Lamp Louie and Sebastian which takes place on an iron beam high in the air and which results in the former's death supplies moments of tense suspense. The story moves with its usual rapidity and is most entertaining of itself.

AN ATTRACTION that will bring money into the box office in a golden stream. You know Mrs. Castle's success as a dancer. She is just as wonderful on the screen.

Everyone will want to see this remarkable woman in this remarkable serial, whose patriotic theme is the nation's defense.

THE FIRST EPISODE OF PATRIA WILL BE RELEASED SOON. NOW BOOKING

INTERNATIONAL

THE JOCKEY OF DEATH

INTERNATIONAL announces the "Adventure Series" of five and six reel features, to be released each month.

First is "The Jockey of Death," a thrilling story of circus life.

Dare-devil performers engage in amazing acts of heroism.

Every scene so intensely interesting and every act so daring that the spectators are held spell-bound.

The circus is always welcome.

This picture has all the elements of the circus, plus a clean, wholesome story.

'IT MAY BE YOUR DAUGHTER'

THE POWERFUL VISUALIZATION

That reveals the truth, the way, the life more impressively than parent tongue can convey them. It fulfills a mission the home and the pulpit owe those whom they would safe-guard.

BE PARTICULAR, EXAMINE THE SEEMINGLY LITTLE THINGS ABOUT THE PROJECTOR YOU BUY.

It's the "little" things that make a projection machine give perfect results.

The Projector You Have Been Thinking About—Does it have parts that received a special heat treatment and were ground to insure accuracy? Can you remove the framing device in a second if necessary, are the gears made of solid high grade cold rolled steel?

Does it have, as the MOTIOGRAPH has, all these important points of merit, an enviable reputation and an unequalled record for endurance and economy?

This is a matter of vital importance to you. MAKE SURE.

Where Is the Trouble?

WE have heard for a long time about the troubles which the film manufacturer is having making more than a bare existence. We know the exhibitors as a whole are making money only in certain territories, although there are many exceptions all over the country. We now are confronted with another branch of this great industry which is suffering—

THE MANUFACTURERS OF EQUIPMENT AND WHY?

WE do not mean by this the small manufacturers who started on a shoe string and want the other fellow to carry the burden, but the man who has working capital and is able to do business on a real business basis.

* * *

Here is a letter from one of these manufacturers, written November 1, 1916—received this morning. This manufacturer has been selling our industry practically from its inception.

* * *

"We are selling a wonderful lot of them in ———. My trip last week was for the purpose of collecting the money on the goods but it is terrible the way they put you off for one reason and another.

* * *

Going back to the old days, it didn't matter what account it was we always got our money. Within the last two years you cannot put out a dollar's worth of stuff without being nervous about it. Now with all of this talk about the higher grade of people coming into the business the old fellows, starting from about two or three years ago back to eight or ten, paid their bills better. I should have collected about $4,000,000 on this trip and I didn't come back with much more than carfare."

* * *

WHERE is the trouble? Does it go back to the exhibitor or is it centered in the supply dealer? We have cited before on this page the cut-throat methods of certain dealers who started with nothing on which to do business and who should have been barred from the industry before they ever got in. The manufacturer from whose letter we quote, sells 90 per cent. of his goods through motion picture supply dealers—yet upon his regular credit basis he could not collect from the delinquent accounts even a reasonable percentage of the money due him. This is the experience of a man on the inside.

Not long ago I was asked by a large manufacturer, who was thinking of entering the motion picture field with a commodity which he had ready to go ahead with, how he could best distribute it.

He knew all about merchandising and sales promotion but he stated positively that unless some new method of distribution could be devised he would never enter the field. This is from the outside looking in.

BOTH these people will admit that among our motion picture dealers there are those who are absolutely honest and through whom their goods could be distributed, except that each one of these distributing agencies is handling so many competing lines that by adding more, he could not do justice to any.

* * *

One large distributor, when he was in town recently, told of an experience which he had had not long before. An exhibitor who was building a new house had an order to be placed for two new projection machines. About this time the supply dealer was approached by another man who was soliciting advertising for a curtain program. The dealer turned him down on perfectly legitimate grounds—the circulation was not among the people he wished to reach. The exhibitor with the order came to him and after a long story about "keeping in with the boys," etc., told him that he could have his order for the machines if he used the space. The space was used; the entertainment was over; the dealer 'phoned to see when he should make delivery and was told that the machines had been purchased from some other supply house. It later developed that they had been bought at a large reduction, which our friend would not countenance.

ARE the manufacturer's suspicions correct?
Are 80 per cent. of the supply dealers in our industry dishonest?

* * *

Does the responsibility rest with the exhibitor?

* * *

We hate to admit that any of these things are so, yet there is trouble somewhere and that trouble, as we see it, lies in the fact that each particular branch of the business is working independently of all the others and trying to surround its actions with all the secrecy which can be drawn about them. They are not working together as they should and as the branches of other industries are doing.

* * *

In other words, what we all want to see is an aggressive co-operative movement, so organized that when it is over we will all know where the other fellow stands, which is not the case now.

The Film: What It Is, the Condition in Which It Should Be Received, and the Care That the Operator Should Give It While It Is in His Charge

THIS week I shall endeavor to treat on the care of film, owing to the fact that photographs which I desired to illustrate this week's article with have not arrived, and there has been a general complaint from the operators at large regarding the abominable condition in which film is being received by them.

What the Film Is

In the course of manufacture film is generally made in strips about two feet wide by two hundred and fifty feet long. These strips are passed through a machine which deposits on one side the coating or emulsion which is highly sensitive to the light, called photographic emulsion.

This emulsion when spread on the film has a thickness of approximately 1-1,000 of an inch, making the total thickness of the film about six thousandths of an inch.

When the film has received its coating of emulsion, it is run through a machine which cuts it into strips 1⅜ inches in width and these strips become the film stock used by the producer.

The negative stock is perforated by a specially designed apparatus for that purpose and then, when needed, is placed in the camera which has an intermittent movement, revolving shutter and lens, which act the same as do those of the projection machine, but with this difference: the mechanism of the camera is entirely enclosed and made light proof, so that the only light that enters the camera must enter through the lens, and as the film passes through the camera ¾ of an inch of film stops in front of this lens and is exposed to the light and receives on its surface the object being photographed. Practically sixteen snapshots are taken per second, although this may vary as the camera men do not take the entire picture at the same rate of speed, but that rate is near enough for our purpose.

Developing and Printing

After the negative film has been exposed it is developed, fixed and dried as is done with an ordinary Kodak film, except that the film in this case is run over large "drums" which prevents it from touching or adhering to itself. The room where this drying process is carried on is as free from dust and dirt as it is possible to get it, for nothing is more annoying to a director than to see a picture he has worked hard to produce full of pin holes, which is caused by flying particles of dust in the drying room. These particles of dust, no matter how small they may be, cause much trouble, for some of them may contain metal, which is attracted by the electricity in the film and these particles of metal cause scratches in the film when the film slips on itself or when it gets to the operator, and he in the hurry of rewinding performs what is known as the "pulling down" trick; allowing the film to rewind rapidly without any tension than quickly stopping with his hand or brake the reel being rewound, allowing the momentum of the other reel to pull it taut. And you can readily see that if this is repeated day after day, as it generally is, the film will have a very short life. I know the operator is not entirely to blame, the film exchanges too are quite careless in this respect, oftentimes trying to shift the blame on the operator, for the reason that they will not pay inspectors to do the inspecting as it should be done.

The drying process being completed, the film is then run through a projection machine so that the producer can make any "cuts" he may think necessary, or if need be retake any scene that might not be up to the requirements in photography or detail.

When the film is finally ready, having passed the director, it is placed in the printing machine with the negative in contact with the positive. (The difference between the two being that a different grade of emulsion is used for the positive.) This printing machine also has an intermittent movement and revolving shutter, but no lens. The film is then exposed to a light of great intensity and each picture exposed for a fraction of a second, after which the positive film is developed, fixed and dried, and is then sent to the assembling room where it is put together, each scene in its regular order, joined together, the titles and sub-titles put in, and it then becomes the reel of film.

Damaging Film Due to Carelessness

When we know the fragility of film we ought to realize that it is susceptible to much damage if not properly cared for. A film can be torn, and it can be scratched, especially the emulsion. The sprocket holes too are subject to great strain, more so in those houses where high speed in the projection is the rule rather than the exception.

The largest per cent. of tearing film is caused by this high speed and the patches catching on the sprocket idler rollers or to the teeth of the sprocket itself, which may have become so badly worn as to have "undercut" teeth. Sometimes it is the tension of the take-up which will cause a film to part, but that is not half as bad as it would be should the film part at the aperture, for that would necessitate the shutting down of the projector, leaving a dark screen while the film was being re-threaded, something that careful operators try to avoid.

As I said before the scratching of the film is largely caused by the "pulling down" process. When I said that the operator was at fault in this respect I meant that he was at fault indirectly, for though the film is in his charge and he is responsible for it, too often the actual rewinding is done by an usher who is in a hurry to get back on the floor, for fear that he might miss an opportunity to flirt with some "chicken," or it is done by some "kid" that works his way into the theatre on the plea of being of assistance to the operator, and who when he gets inside devotes all his time to watching the picture being shown on the screen.

A condition like this should not be allowed to exist and if the various operators' locals and exhibitors' leagues would take the matter up it would help to relieve this state of affairs, and would also bring great credit to both organizations as well as increasing the box-office receipts of the exhibitor and giving the operator more credit for cleaner and consequently better projection. Even though the operator does the actual rewinding he must in many cases do so while the projector is running, and naturally he can not be expected to put on perfect projection, rewind and patch film all at the same time. No man yet has been able to do two things at the same time and do them both as they should be. No, indeed. The reel fault is that the manager is unwilling to employ sufficient COMPETENT help in the operating room to do the work as it should be. The operator has all he can do to watch his screen without being called upon to do anything else. And sooner or later the exhibitor will be made to realize this. The exhibitor owes something to the public and his patrons especially for the money he takes from them, and that something is, value for the money received.

Exchanges Owe Something Too

The exchanges likewise owe a debt to the exhibitors and it is up to the exhibitor to see that he gets what he has every right to expect; good film for good money. Don't misunderstand me. I do not mean that an exhibitor who is paying for thirty-day service should receive first-run film, but he should receive his film in fairly good condition, and it is up to you to see that he does so. I know whereof I write, for I have received film thirty days old that could not be in worse condition if it had been run for thirty years, and my employer was paying top price for service too.

The excuse offered by the exchanges was: "We do not get the reels back from the exhibitor in time to examine them." It was hoped that the returning of the film to the exchanges at night would remedy this, but has it? NO, reels are taken from the cases and thrown into the rack under the key number of the exhibitor who is to use them next and there they lie until called for by the carrier. This is with but few exceptions the regular procedure, and it can only be remedied by the exhibitor DEMANDING THAT HE RECEIVE WHAT HE PAYS FOR,

New York Roof Successful after Hard Battle for Patronage

Wave of Prosperity Descended on Place That Was Long Considered a White Elephant—Thronged Nightly with Picture Stars Seeing Themselves as Others See Them—Marcus Loew Planning to Organize New York Roof Club for Benefit of Those Who Object to Standing in Line

ONE of the most unique motion picture theatres in the country is Loew's New York Roof, on top of his New York Theatre, in the heart of New York, at 44th street and Broadway, facing the Astor Hotel. It is open only at night, with the show starting at 8 o'clock, and remains open until 1 a. m. There is no theatre in the country built as this one, for it is a converted dance palace, formerly the Jardin De Danse the cradle of the dance craze which swept the country a few years ago. In spite of the fact that very few changes were made in the interior when pictures were installed it adapts itself ideally to the needs of exhibiting photo plays, and is the "chummiest" and one of the most comfortable theatres in New York.

Here gather nightly the photo players, the directors, the cameramen, and everyone connected with the film industry in New York. Marcus Loew changes his program daily, and for the most part shows the latest releases of the big manufacturers first at New York. The majority of big companies have no other theatre in central New York in which to exhibit their pictures first, and many of them combine the public exhibition with trade showings by booking their pictures into the New York. Vitagraph, Metro, Bluebird, World and sometimes Pathe and other producers show their pictures first at the New York. For that reason the players and everyone connected with the film industry gather nightly on the "Roof" and inspect the latest products of their own and other studios.

Another fact which makes the New York Roof an ideal place for film people is its seating arrangements. The roof is much wider than it is deep, and there is plenty of room on both sides of the seats, where comfortable lounges have been provided. Back of the orchestra chairs, along the entire width of the big hall, are boxes, uniquely arranged, with plenty of room. There is another promenade, but a little narrower, between the last row of box seats and the rear wall. Here, and in the lounging spaces on both sides, players and film people can gather to gossip and converse, move about as they wish, and still see the pictures without interfering with the vision of others. Almost nightly these boxes are filled with celebrities of the film world, stars male and female, great directors, and officials of the film industry.

There are about ten chairs in each box, each chair so arranged that there is plenty of room, and they can be grouped as the occupant wishes. There are 20 boxes, making room for 200 people in box seats. The orchestra chairs seat an additional 1,000.

The main lounging space is to the left of the elevators as one enters the Roof theatre. There is a space large enough to dance in, with a large circular lounge and other comfortable seats, where patrons can smoke and chat. Smoking is permitted in all parts of the theatre. To the left also are beautifully appointed ladies' and gentlemen's retiring rooms.

The decorations of the Roof are a marvel to the beholder. Entering from the elevators the curtain faces one. Stretching far to the left and right are softly lighted nooks with a fountain playing in each, with lights playing on the water, and a painted background for each. In each picturesque nook also a bird cage swings, with a feathered warbler in each, their songs mingling with the gentle splash of the fountain and the music from the big orchestra.

Overhead the steel girders of the roof are concealed by streamers of silver decorations, while huge silver globes hang down, containing the lights, which are rarely necessary. The silver scheme of decorations is carried out further in the trimmings of the nooks on both sides of the curtain, in the frame of the curtain itself, and in the decorations of the posts supporting the top of the boxes. In fact the entire Roof has been called "The Silver Palace."

The opening and operation of the New York Theatre Roof is an example of the uncertainties of theatricals and the romance of the game. The New York Theatre was for years a white elephant on the hands of everyone who tried to operate it. In spite of its ideal location, in the very heart of New York, on a corner which thousands pass daily, nothing placed in there was successful. Motion pictures were tried, then vaudeville, then dollar dramas, and first class productions, but still the public stayed away.

Finally it was announced that Marcus Loew, who has made many a "dead one" come to life by the mysterious magic of his name and ability, has taken the house at a huge rental. He did it against the advice of his friends, yet always had faith in the venture. That was about a year ago. At first it was hard sledding. It took some time for the public to turn its attention to the theatre which had been a dead issue so long. But Loew made changes. The box office, formerly in the lobby, he placed on the edge of the sidewalk, facing Broadway. A monster electric sign, 40 feet high and 60 feet wide, containing over 9,000 bulbs, was placed on the side of the building. Loew told his electrician he wanted the "brightest lights on Broadway" to illuminate the front, and 15 glaring incandescents of 1500 candlepower each were hung under the huge canopy he built over the sidewalk. People began to look. They couldn't help it when they saw that electrical display, which put into the shade all other glittering lights on New York's "Great White Way." Standing far up on Broadway and looking down the front of Loew's New York Theatre glows like a mass of white fire in the surrounding illumination.

Naturally business followed. By this time so many films were being manufactured that Loew could change his program every day. That proved a big hit. He caught the transients, the people with an hour or two to spend in the theatre, and the movie "fans" as well. He booked on the open market, and picked and chose to suit himself. It is seldom one sees a poor picture at the New York. Every film which is shown there is carefully looked over in advance by Loew himself and his picture experts, who receive big salaries for doing just that, for feeling the public pulse, and deciding what picture followers want.

As patronage increased "lockouts" at night became the rule rather than the exception. The theatre was not big enough to hold the throngs. Loew, delighted as a child with a new toy at the success of his venture, stood in the lobby almost every night and saw hundreds turned away because they couldn't get in. He needed more space. Following the passing of the dance craze the Jardin De Danse, the spacious hall on top of the theatre, was empty. Loew went up there one day and looked it over. It had been beautifully decorated by its late proprietors, and the little wizard of the show world saw its possibilities. A big force of

DARK SPOT IN CENTRE OF SCREEN

Ray Magners, Boyertown, Pa.: We are in a dilemma as to the correct condensers to use in our projection machine and hope that you can help us. We have a Power's 5 machine and we get a dark spot in the center of the screen; we are using two 6½ inch condensers, ⅝ cored Bio carbons both upper and lower. The distance between the condenser and aperaure plate is 14 inches. The current is A. C. 45 amperes through a Hallberg A. C. Economizer, and our throw is 70 feet.

Would it be better to use a 5 inch and 9 inch condenser? The carbon holders have mica for washers in nearly all the screws except the main connection. Would it be be better to remove these, and if so, what can I use for washers? I hope you will understand the meaning of this letter, but you may not find everything in its right place, but will try to do better next time. We are soon to open our new house and I hope to see the answer to this real soon.

Answer: You failed to mention the size picture or the focal length of your lens, but nevertheless I will do my best to help you. The dark spot is either due to the lamp being too near or to far away from the condensers or it may be that the tip of the lower carbon is too far in front of the upper carbon. This causes the lower carbon to burn so that it interferes with the light and causes a shadow on the screen. There might be some relief for you if you try a 6½ and a 7½ inch condenser placing the 7½ next to the lamp. I think it is probably due to the latter cause, and if you set your carbons as they should be set for D. C. you will no doubt get rid of the dark spot.

The washers in the lamp are of mica for the purpose of insulating the carbons from the lamp itself; if it were not for these washers you would get a terrible kick when you tried to start your arc, for the simple reason that you would have a dead short and your fuses would go.

Do not remove these washers under any circumstances, except that it may be your lamp has a ground which might be caused by these washers disintegrating, then remove the ones that are causing the trouble and replace them with new ones. Before doing this be sure and test out for grounds, using your test lamp, so you may be sure that the trouble is in the lamp and not somewhere else. The department wishes the new house success and prosperity.

OIL ON FILM ANNOYING

James Barker (name of town suppressed by request): I am using a new 1916 model motiograph and I like it very much, but am terribly annoyed by oily film. I clean my machine every day before starting my show and wipe off all the surplus oil before I start, but it does not seem to make any difference. Can you suggest any remedy, if so, I would appreciate it very much.

Answer: The fault you complain of can hardly be due to the machine for the 1916 Model Motiograph has its Geneva running in an oil tight casing, and unless you oil the rest of the machine to excess there is no danger of oil being thrown on the film by this projector. It may be possible that the film is covered with oil before it gets to you for, sorry to say, there are many operators who do not seem to realize that a reel of film is worth money, and use no care whatever in the handling of it. They seem to think, "Oh, well, I'm only running it to-day, let the next fellow fix it up." I have seen machines that were literally reeking with oil and the lower loom was so long that it was being dragged through an oil bath as it was being taken up by the lower magazine. You say you wipe off your machine before you start the day's run, but are you sure that you do not get too much oil on in the first place? Remember, it does not take a gallon of oil to lubricate a projection machine properly. ONE DROP IN EACH BEARING WILL DO, and if you use the following suggestion you will have no further trouble, if the fault lies with you: "Oil your machine frequently and sparingly, always using the best oil."

One of the best ways I have ever heard of to oil a machine, is to take a large darning needle, break the head off the eye, leaving the two sides of the eye intact. And by dipping this instrument in oil you will pick up just one drop and it may be put in the bearing just where you want it.

Another good scheme for taking up any surplus oil is to place a piece of blotting paper under the mechanism, removing it and inserting a fresh piece each day, this will prevent the film from becoming saturated with oil, should it by any chance touch the machine where it should not. If the film is in an oily condition when you receive it, it might be a good plan for you to clean it by the method which was published in the department a few weeks ago; this will remove the oil nicely and will improve your projection as well as the appearance of the picture on the screen.

TRAVEL GHOST TROUBLE

Elmira, N. Y.: I am running a Powers 6-B machine and am troubled with travel ghost, which I find impossible to get entirely out. When I set my shutter far enough over to take it out on one side I get a little on the other side. It is most noticeable in the titles, and I am writing you for assistance, for I do not believe this should be on a brand new machine. My throw is fifty feet and the picture is eighteen feet. Wishing you success and with best wishes to the NEWS, I will wait to see my answer published.

Answer: You're right, it shouldn't be! The Powers 6-B is, as you say, "some machine," and your whole trouble lies in the fact that you have a very short throw with an extra large picture, which means that you are using a short focal length lens, and this also means that the lens is quite some distance from the shutter, which causes the rays of light to spread considerably before they reach the shutter, which has the effect of reducing the width of the shutter blade. You can take a piece of heavy cardboard and cut out a shutter and place it in position. They gradually cut the two flicker blades narrower, making the main blade wider than that generally used in a three-wing shutter sent out with the machine. Or, if you do not want to take the trouble to do this, you can write to the Nicholas Power Company for their special shutter which they make for just such cases as yours. It is also necessary that you have absolutely no end motion in your shutter shaft. (It took me a long time to find this out; I had the same trouble when I was operating.) The two set collars on either side of the outer boxing must be kept set up snug and close to the casting, as close as possible without causing the machine to bind. Any end motion at this point will cause travel ghost.

OMAHA OPERATORS' UNION TO HOLD BIG BALL

LOCAL No. 343, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., will hold a "Movie Ball" in Omaha December 14 that the operators are confident will surpass any former event staged either by the operators or the Screen club. Last year 1,900 people attended the ball given by the Omaha operators. This year hundreds of tickets have already been sold. Pictures will be taken of the ball. The receipts will go to meet the obligations of the local.

The Omaha operators, organized recently, have forty-four houses using union operators, and only two houses are "out." W. C. Denney, business agent, says that all the large downtown houses are lined up, following rather bitter fights in several cases, and the union workers are now turning their attention to the suburban houses. The Omaha union, where the operator is a union man and the machine is approved by the underwriters, pays for the loss of films. An Omaha theatre recently lost $250 worth of film in a fire, but Denney and the inspector had warned the proprietor that the machine was defective, so the exhibitor lost the $250.

Denney, like other union men, is a strong advocate of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "I want to compliment your paper," he volunteered. "Your printers are union men, because you use the allied printers' trade label. We can't say that for all of the trade papers, and we can't say as strong for any of them as we can for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

RICHARD W. McFARLAND VITAGRAPH'S NEW MANAGER

RICHARD W. McFARLAND, who was the New York representative of the Lubin Company at one time and later assistant treasurer of the V-L-S-E can now be found at the Vitagraph studios in Flatbush. Mr. McFarland has been given the important responsibilities attending the office of manager.

He is admirably fitted for his new position, which calls for not only a technical knowledge of the manufacture of motion picture film but requires a comprehensive understanding of motion picture industry as a whole. Mr. McFarland's modesty prevented his receiving the credit in last week's article which referred to changes in location of several departments at the Vitagraph plant —changes that will tend to promote efficiency in the production of pictures.

His initiation into motion pictures was about twenty years ago when as a next door neighbor he helped Mr. Lubin carry his parlor furniture into the yard. At that time Mr. Lubin used his yard as a studio, his cellar as a laboratory and his neighbors as actors.

He was manager of attractions and purchasing agent for Henry W. Savage for several years, acting in the position of manager of Henry W. Savage's "Madam Butterfly" Grand Opera Company, which toured the country from Maine to California in a special train of twelve cars.

He then managed the Lyric and Adelphi theatres in Philadelphia for the Shuberts. He managed William H. Crane's "David Harum" for the entire run of the play. He was personal representative and manager of Christie MacDonald's "Spring Maid," and then became associated with the Lubin Company as their New York representative.

Mr. McFarland has, in the course of his experiments, perfected several tinting and toning processes that have never been used. It is with such ideas as these, of themselves quite valuable, that his assumption of the duties of manager gives promise of splendid results.

HENDRICK OPENING NEW THEATRE AT CORNING, N. Y.

E. B. HENDRICK, proprietor of the Adelphi and Gem Theatres, Franklinville, N. Y., is about to open a new, modern and up-to-date theatre at Corning, N. Y., corner of Bridge and William Streets, in the brick block being built by the Vielie estate.

The theatre is to be in the rear of the building, with a beautiful lobby, forty feet long, leading back to it. The equipment will be of the best and the decorations elaborate.

and when he receives a reel that is not in as good a condition as he has the right to expect he should return it to the exchange, at once, demanding that they make good, either by furnishing him with another copy or a reel that is in good condition. It would not take long for the exchange managers to awake to the fact that the exhibitor was not to be fooled any longer and there would be a general improvement in the physical quality of film shown on the thousands of screens throughout the country. AND THAT, GENTLEMEN, IS THE REMEDY.

THE 1917 MASTER MODEL

Motion Picture Machine, the projector with hundreds of good points that combine to make up the ideal mechanism for perfect picture projection. Note the pleasing appearance of this model; its strong lines, large head mechanism, roomy lamphouse, vibration-conquering stand. Made in our own factory by skilled workers and under rigid inspection. Guaranteed for a year against defects in workmanship and material. In this limited space we cannot dwell upon the vast number of improvements crowded into this machine. Every conceivable part has undergone changes that make the work of the operator easier, the performance of the projector exceptional and lessen the upkeep charges considerably.

One of the big improvements is the American Standard Motor Speed Control with which 1917 models are equipped. This is a wonderful little mechanical device that banishes the unreliability of attachments actuated by friction or electricity. It is so nice in adjustment that speeds can be modified as to run 1000-ft. reels in periods of time ranging as fast as 8 minutes and as slow as 22 minutes. Can be used with any constant speed motor.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Loren Simmons, operator Princess Theatre, Ottumwa, Ia.: I have been following closely your answers to questions in the Motion Picture News, which is certainly unsurpassed as a magazine for the exhibitor and operator.

I wrote my first letter to you a few days ago, in which I asked for your advice about my rectifier (answered in issue of Oct. 21). Now I would greatly appreciate your advice on a book or set of books which you consider the best obtainable for a young man who is ambitious to become a master of the operating profession. I notice in some of your editorials you do not recommend a young man with less than three years' experience to take charge of an operating room. However, there are exceptions to all rules. My employer hired me in an emergency and offered me a chance to make good. I had had some previous knowledge of the operation of a picture machine, and I had very little trouble in getting acquainted with some of the fine points. I was admitted to membership in Local 534, I.A.T.S.E. (which is now No. 441 under a new charter), and have been working hard to make myself as good as the best. I realize that this will take hard study of all different kinds of apparatus and am more than anxious to get started. Have been in my present position over a year and have the best chance any one could want to make great headway at my trade. Any information you could give me regarding what to study and how to improve my time to the best advantage would by greatly appreciated. There is a question I would like to ask, and it is this: I have a set of Gundlach half-size projection lenses which I cannot bring to an exact focus all over the picture, it being out of focus on one side or the other all the time. Have tried it on both machines with the same results. Another set of exactly the same kind and size on my other machine is perfect. Would you advise a new lens?

Answer: I said this was an interesting letter, and so it is, for here is an operator who is ambitious, one who wants to become "better than the best." He is a member of the union and proud of it, and with the expressed determination of becoming a worthy member of his local by study and hard work, so that he may become a "Master Operator."

Yes, Brother Simmons, there are exceptions to all rules, and while I hold that an operator should have served an apprenticeship of at least three years before being put in charge of an operating room, and, incidentally, the safety of hundreds of people, you have proved that in your case you are an exception. I know that in a city the size of yours it is possible for a young man to do better and more conscientious work than it is in a city of larger population, for in the small town an operator takes pride in his work, for he is known personally by a great number of the patrons of the theatre where he is employed, and this gives him a feeling of importance and responsibility, and fills him with the desire to "make good," and when one has that desire fixed firmly in his mind the chances are most favorable of his doing so. In the larger cities it is not the desire of the operator to become a "Master Operator," for he is little known, and in too many instances he is only filled with a desire to get what he can out of the game (in salary) and cares nothing about his work, only that it is a means to an end, and that is most generally an "end of a perfect day." By that I mean that many operators are what is known as "clock watchers"; from the time they start their first show they are continually watching the clock, waiting for the time to come when they can flash the "Good Night" slide upon the screen. But I am happy to say this condition is fast disappearing and the operator as a whole is doing better work today than at any time in the history of the motion picture industry. For you, who desire to improve each shining hour, I would suggest that you get a set of Hawkins Electrical Handbooks, published by Theo. Audel and Company, 72 Fifth avenue, New York. These books come ten in a set and cost one dollar per volume or ten dollars for the entire set, and the information in them is worth the price many times over. A careful study of these and regular attendance at the meetings of your local, where the brothers should form a class of instruction for its members, and the projection department of the News will help you greatly in obtaining the knowledge you seek. Then, too, it is possible for you to spend an hour or two in the operating room either before the show or after the day's work is done in experimenting; trying out the different suggestions made to different correspondents who are having little troubles of their own, making notes of your experiments for future reference. All these things tend to increase one's store of knowledge, and also gives them a feeling of confidence, so that when trouble of any kind confronts them they are not "fussed."

In answer to your question regarding the lens, it is quite possible that you have had them apart to clean and in putting the different factors back you have reversed one of them. Examine the lens and see that the convex side (the side with the bulge) is facing the screen, being careful to observe whether there is any oil on the surface of any of the combination; if there is, be sure and wipe it off, cleaning the surface of the lens thoroughly before putting it back in the jacket.

I do not think it necessary to purchase a new lens, but if the suggestion I have made does not obtain the results you look for I would suggest that you mail the entire lens to the Gundlach-Manhattan Company, Rochester, N. Y., stating to them your trouble, and they will be glad to remedy it for you. I again want to say that your employer should be proud to have a man like you in his employ, and I would be pleased to receive suggestions from you from time to time as to what you think would be of interest to the readers of this department. For your good wishes to the NEWS and myself, they and I extend our thanks.

THE RITZ, A DE LUXE PICTURE HOUSE, IS IN ST. LOUIS

AN important acquisition to the dominion of motion picturedom in St. Louis will be the Ritz at Sixth Avenue, near Olive. This theatre will open on or about November 27th, and will have a seating capacity of about eight hundred. The lobby of this theatre when completed will be one of the most expensive lobbies in the West. Mural paintings by Theodore Lucks will cover the proscenium as well as on each wall. The painting on the proscenium will represent "The Fete of the Houri" and will measure 20 by 17, mounted on bottoe canvas and framed in ivory. On the right will be a painting representing "The Dancing of Niobe" and its companion piece on the left will be called "Naivette."

An X-Ray indirect lighting system has been installed. The projection battery wil consist of two Simplex machines on a Minusa screen. The attendants will be the pick of the prettiest girls in St. Louis and St. Louis prides itself in having some of the prettiest damsels in the United States. An extensive publicity campaign has been inaugurated by the general manager of this concern, among them being the distribution of photo post cards of the lobby, as it will be. Another and possibly the most valuable in the eyes of its promoters is the fact that they have received permission to place a unique frame with protographs of their leading men and women into the lobbies of the largest hotels, buildings and public institutions.

THEATRE IN WARSAW, INDIANA, IS EXPECTED ON COMPLETION TO BE ONE OF THE BEST IN THE HOOSIER STATE

WHEN the new Widaman-McDonald building at the corner of Center and Indiana streets, Warsaw, Ind., is completed, Warsaw will have one of the most up-to-date photoplay houses in the Hoosier State. No expense is being spared to make the building modern and complete in every respect.

The interurban passenger station will be located in the corner room of the building. A wide lobby leading to the entrance to the theatre will be located just west of the interurban station. The theatre will be in the north end of the building.

The theatre will have a seating capacity of more than 600 persons and will have a stage sufficiently large to stage big productions whenever the management books a road attraction, but it will be primarily a motion picture theatre.

Two motion picture machines and a stereopticon already have been purchased. These will be placed in a specially built room outside the theatre building. The machine room will be concrete throughout, so that there will be absolutely no danger from fire. The picture machines will be motor driven. A Gold Fibre screen, 12 feet wide and 16 feet long, will be installed and new scenery has been ordered from Milwaukee.

The Seeburg Company of Chicago is building a special organ for the theatre which will have thirty-five different effects, including piano and orchestra. It will be one of the largest and finest organs in any picture house in northern Indiana.

The order for seats for the new house has been placed with the American Seating Company.

THE GOODWIN, NEWARK, N. J., WAS NAMED AFTER A CLERGYMAN WHO INVENTED A PHOTOGRAPHIC FILM

THE Goodwin, 863 Broad street, Newark, N. J., was named after the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, former rector of the House of Prayer, Newark, N. J. He invented a photographic film, while experimenting upon a substitute for slides for stereoptican use in his Sunday school. Much litigation with a prominent manufacturing company was the result and a judgment was finally awarded to the widow of the deceased.

The theatre stands on a plot measuring 48 by 115 feet and was designed by William E. Lehman. Abe Feist and Mr. Lehman are the owners of the theatre, which is managed by Mrs. C. S. Webbe. The structure was erected in 1913. The theatre is controlled by the William Y. Webbe Company. Brick and concrete entered largely into the construction of the Goodwin. The theatre is ventilated by a system of fresh air intakes. The heating consists of a warm air system and a blower. Indirect lighting has been installed in the auditorium. The seating capacity of the Goodwin is 750 and the chairs were furnished by the A. H. Andrews Company. Two Simplex projectors are in use for throwing the pictures on a plaster screen 105 feet away. A Wagner converter is part of the booth equipment.

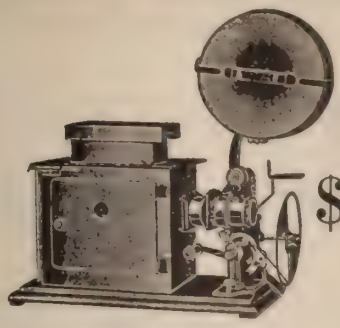
The einterior decoration scheme is renaissance. An American master organ and a Steinway piano are the instruments for playing music to the pictures. In the lobby the management uses two one-sheet frames on each side of the ticket booth for advertising the attractions of the current and coming week. Easels of different shapes and styles of photographs are also part of the publicity campaign conducted in the front of the house.



The dimensions of the lobby are thirteen by fifty-seven feet. Five shows a day are given at the Goodwin, averaging seven reels to a performance. Ten cents is charged in the afternoon and fifteen at night. A small mailing list for the weekly programs and use of the newspapers has been found very helpful in increasing the patronage of the theatre.

BUHLER, MANAGER OF THEATRES CONTROLLED BY THE CENTRAL MARKET STREET COMPANY, IS BACK FROM VACATION

FRANK BUHLER, general manager of the Central Market Street Company's theatres, including the Victoria, Savoy, Market street, Auditorium, Princess and others, has just returned from a two-week trip to Maryville, Mississippi, where he visited his mother. Mr. Buhler also spent time in St. Louis, and other Western cities.

The Victoria has altered its policy for the changing of subjects, and will in future make only two changes a week, Mondays and Thursdays. First showing of Triangle and Metro features will be used.

BING'S HOME ENTERTAINER

Here's a little machine, simple in its construction, and easy of operation, for which there is a place in every home.

It projects motion picture film as perfectly in the home as is possible in the average theater.

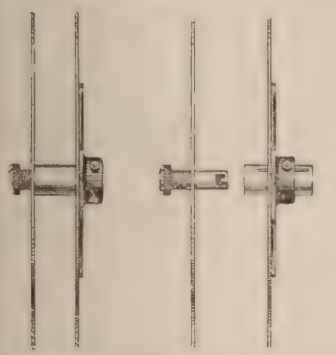
Light is provided by a baby arc, supplied with current from the ordinary electric light socket, controlled through a special rheostat.

The baby arc develops 800 candle power, with about six amperes of current. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Pictures projected are about 6 x 8 feet in size and splendid results are possible with a throw up to twenty-five feet.

Standard size film is used, making every film exchange in the country a constant source of supply for subjects. Reel boxes are of 1,000 feet capacity.

Set up and ready for use, the machine measures 31 inches long, 31 inches high, and 10 inches broad. The lamphouse is 10 x 6. Weight of machine, complete with arc and rheostat is 24 pounds. Packed for shipment, the weight is 55 pounds.



There is absolutely no fire risk—"Safety First" has been the watchword in construction

IN order to make the "Chrono-Chrome" and similar processes more effective as regards the correct reproduction of fast-moving objects a camera is needed having a faster intermittent movement than is found in the customary motion picture taking instrument. The intermittent movement of the average cinematographic camera generally allows a 50 per cent (½ shutter opening) exposure interval and requires an equal period in which to accomplish the substitution of one image for the preceding one, while with some instruments a period of one-third movement and two-thirds exposure is possible. In order to secure sufficient exposure through the red and green filters, cameras are needed having a 6 to 1 or 8 to 1 intermittent, although this fact seems to have been overlooked by the majority of investigators. To secure such a long period of exposure in proportion to the period of movement it might be found necessary, in constructing cameras for color work, to discard the customary claw type of intermittent with which cinematograph cameras are generally equipped and revert to the star and pin-wheel (Geneva stop) type of movement which is utilized in most all projecting machines. The Geneva and sprocket, while seemingly not as suitable as the claw movement for taking instruments, is capable of being so modified as to give almost any desired ratio between the periods of movement and exposure, and has, therefore, to be seriously considered when designing cameras for color cinematography in which light absorbing color filters are employed. With such a camera and a set of tricolor filters through which equal exposures may be given (such sets are now procurable) some of the troubles of the workers on color cinematography would doubtless be eliminated.

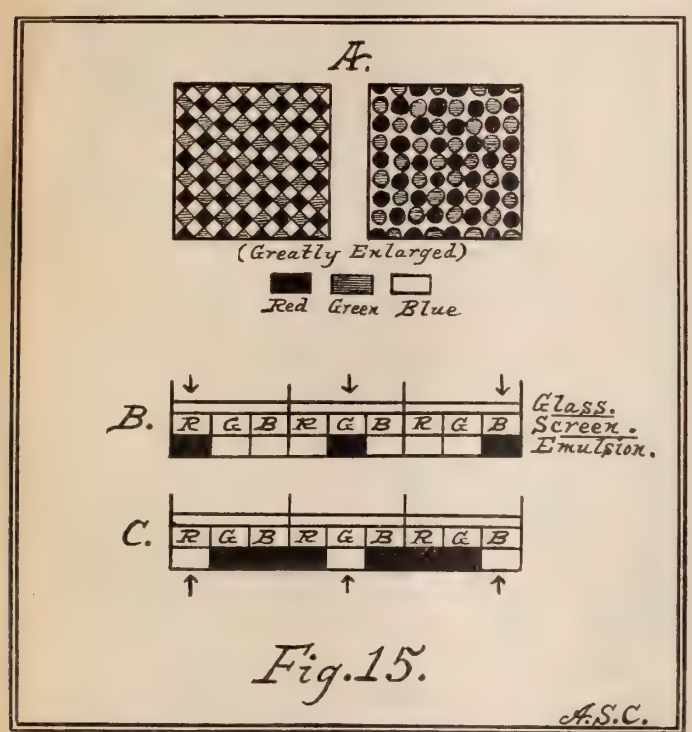

Fig. 15.

A.S.C.

Some Variations of Two-Color Processes

At the present stage of things there seems to be no end to the variations of the additive processes by which inventors hope to give us natural color "movies." We have just seen a film having alternate red and green sensation images (photographed as in the Kinemacolor system), these being colored on the positive film strip by alternate brushings of red and green dye. Upon projection it was ascertained that this modified Kinemacolor, if one may use the term, required the high projecting rate of 40 to 50 images per second to secure a satisfactory coalescence of the vivid colors upon the retina, while, as might be imagined, it would be no easy task to color alternately, with red and green dye solutions, all of the images upon a film subject of average length.

Additive color projection with two lenses, both from two-film strips and from single strips with the aid of prisms, is also being experimented with, and while some pleasing results are possible, it seems a thankless task to lavish time and money upon a process which is not theoretically accurate and can, at best, only yield approximate results. Workers with two color additive systems should appreciate that the proprietors of the Chrono-chrome system could, by omitting one lens and employing two-color filters, put a process in the field which would knock the spots out of most any other two-color system ever demonstrated. It is not likely that this will ever be done, but we go on record as the first to point out the possibilities of the Chrono-chrome projecting arrangement, if used as a two-color process of cinematographic reproduction.

Screen Plate Color Photography

Before leaving the subject of additive color synthesis we must revert to our historical continuity and describe another interesting additive method by which photographic results in natural colors are produced. We refer to the "screen plate" process which, as noted in a former installment, was first outlined by DuHauron in 1868 or thereabouts.

The screen plate color process was not attempted commercially, however, until 1895, when Professor Joly of Dublin issued some screens by the aid of which color transparencies could be photographed and subsequently viewed.

In screen plate color photography we must place, before the sensitive emulsion (panchromatic, of course) of the plate or film, a screen having on its surface lines, squares, circular dots, or figures of other shape, of the primary colors, red, green and blue-violet which act as the color filters. In A, Fig. 15, are shown two typical examples of screen plate patterns, one showing red, green and blue squares, while the other shows red and green discs with the spaces between colored blue.

The way in which a photographic result in colors is secured on a screen plate (or film) will be best understood by reference to B and C, Fig. 15. In B, Fig. 15, the light incident upon the plate is indicated by the arrows. We see that the light from a red object passes through the red filter element of the screen and produces (upon development) an image behind it. Likewise, green light produces a developable image behind the green filter elements of the screen and blue light acts the same on the emulsion behind the blue elements. C, Fig. 15, shows a positive printed from the negative B, Fig. 15. As in all photographic work, this positive is the reverse of the negative from which it

Music and the Picture

The Organ as a Proper Aid in Correct Showing of Picture

J. Van Cleft Cooper, Organist of Broadway Theatre, Writes Instructively and Entertainingly on the Value and Relationship of the Organ and the Picture—The Offensiveness of Being "Churchy" and the Proper Viewpoint of the Organist Clearly Set Forth and Explained

"WHAT shall I play for the picture? This is the question which confronts every organist who sits down at a console in a theatre. And the motto, "Fit the music to the picture," is no great help. It is like saying to a man who wants to acquire strength, "Be strong." In fact each organist must rely largely upon his own sense of the dramatic rather than upon instructions from others, be they never so competent.

The music may be either descriptive or merely an accompaniment to the action. If it be descriptive then it should reflect the atmosphere of the action—serious or gay, sombre or cheerful, humorous or tragic. These various moods must be determined by the organist and he must be quick to appreciate a change of mood and to adapt his music to it. If he can classify his repertoire according to the atmosphere it can suggest or the mood each piece can typify he will find it a great help.

Certain portions of most pictures call for definite, positive characterization and in these spots it is often the case that the action is so rapid and the moods so varying that it is almost impossible to find any set piece of music that will do it justice. Here is where the peculiar value of the organ to the picture theatre is plainly manifest, for the organist can at points like these improvise music that will follow the action very closely.

Also at points like these the organist must depend on his own dramatic sense and woe be the organist who has none. Such an organist will play—as one I heard did play—Schumann's "Traumerei and Romanze" on a slapstick comedy and he may even follow it up, as this one did, with portions of Mendelssohn's Wedding March! Bach fugues and Chaplin comedies were never intended to meet.

One general rule which the organist would do well to bear in mind is that the music should never attract more attention than the picture. Richard Wagner once wrote to the Intendant of a certain Royal Opera House, "Music should do no more than to contribute its full share toward making the drama clearly and quickly comprehensible at every moment. While listening to a good opera people should, so to speak, not think of the music at all but only feel it in an unconscious manner while their fullest sympathy should be wholly occupied by the action represented."

And don't be "churchy." Most organists whose experience has been in church service bring their habit of legato playing to the theatre only to find that it is of all things the least desired. Better a poor selection of music played with a judicious mingling of styles than good music drawled out in the style that tends to drowsiness. As a manager once told an aspiring applicant who said his experience had been all in church music, "Well, church organists don't usually make good in this work." So if you have a "churchy" style go quickly and cultivate another lest the wrath of the manager be your undoing. The only place where the "churchy" style is of any value in the theatre is during a church scene on the screen.

And do not forget that good music in the theatre may be as great a drawing card as good pictures. A loyal organist is as much an asset to an exhibitor as a contract with a good producing company, and he is a wise manager who cultivates such a spirit.

J. VAN CLEFT COOPER, Organist Broadway Theatre.

Editor's Note:

It is always a pleasure to us to receive articles such as the above from those whose work we are familiar with and whom we are in a position to highly recommend. I want to thank Mr. Van Cleft Cooper for his kind co-operation.

It is our intention to have articles on the organ possibilities in the picture theatre appear more frequently in our future issues. We do not intend to deal with the organ exclusively as a picture theatre asset, but knowing that organs of every different type and make are found in many of the picture theatres, we feel that the time has arrived when a discussion of possible musical effects created by this combination of stops or registration, as it is commonly called, would make some wholesome food for thought to those who are endeavoring to make good in playing to pictures.

Mr. Cooper has given us great thoughts which are of value at all times. Every organist seems to think that he understands the organ; nevertheless only a small percentage of them get out of their respective organs the amount of tonal color that is possible. Lack of good registration may limit an organist in possible musical effects, but my experience has taught me that many who do understand registration thoroughly, still obtain nothing but churchy effects. Registration as commonly used by organists in solo playing may also be of the highest class, yet it meets with little approval in the picture theatre.

Not being a competent writer on the organ myself, it would afford me great pleasure if interested organists would write us, giving us concise outlines of certain novelty registration, as well as the proper setting of stops on each manual, together with such musical effects as they know will be appreciated by a picture theatre audience. I wonder if we could not persuade Mr. Cooper to write us an article along these lines.

BIG, NEW, ELABORATE THEATRE FOR ROCHESTER, N. Y.

WITHIN three weeks The Piccadilly, Rochester, N. Y., will throw open its doors and bid for the patronage of motion picture followers in this section of the State. The new theatre, now nearing completion, is the last word in photoplay houses. Its location, on Clinton avenue north, with frontage on both Mortimer and Division streets, is such that it will catch the eye of theatre goers. The Gordon was the first feature photoplay house to be erected in Rochester, and was regarded as a wonder when it was completed. Since then the Regent, on East avenue, has entered the field, and made good. The Regent and Gordon combined forces about a year ago, and since then have been run under the same management. There has been no competition in Rochester for feature films under this arrangement.

The Piccadilly has signed a contract for the Paramount service, and will show the pictures of the Lasky Company, the Famous Players, the Oliver Morosco Company, and the Pallas Picture Company, comprising that service.

The Piccadilly theatre was built at a cost of $250,000, by the Clinton-Mortimer Corporation, which takes its name from the streets on which the theatre faces. William Daininger is president of this company; J. G. Comerford, vice-president; A. B. Headley, vice-president; William S. Riley, treasurer; Walter H. Seeley, secretary and managing director; T. J. Swanton, F. A. Sherwood, W. H. Kline, J. E. Ferguson, H. W. Hart and William Bausch, directors.

The theatre's main entrance is on Clinton avenue north. There is a handsome lobby, with four ticket selling windows, two on the side and two in the center; also the house manager's office, and stairs leading off each side of the lobby, one to the balcony, and one to the boxes. This entrance leads the patron to the center of the house. Broad aisles make it easy to reach any part of the ground floor from this side.

Another entrance to the theatre is found on Mortimer street around the corner, where are two more ticket windows, retiring rooms, and a big lobby. This takes one into the rear of the theatre, facing the stage.

The decorations are a work of art. The heating system is what is known as the mushroom system, ducts in the floor discharging warm or cool air, as wanted, beneath every second chair in the auditorium. The heat is forced in by a huge fan, and in summer time the air may be cooled by passing through water tanks.

The stage, designed and constructed under the direction of Rex Stovel, of Toronto, a well known theatre artist, promises to be a revelation to photoplay goers. The screen will sink through the floor, into a pit, between pictures, and in its stead will be seen a fountain, which will come through the floor to take its place. The orchestra will be seated on a half stage, in front of the screen. Stairs lead up on each side of the stage, through arbors and gates. The whole presents a very pretty effect.

W. F. Bossner has been named by Mr. Seeley as house manager. Mr. Bossner is well known to the photoplay world. He has a reputation as a theatre doctor, and has opened many houses and put them on their feet.

In New York he was with the Paramount Pictures Corporation; in Boston he managed the Park theatre. He opened the Crescent in New Orleans, with pictures, and has had a world of experience in his line.

A big feature is to be made of the music in the new house. Susan Tompkins, of this city, one of the most successful violinists in the country, who is well known in vaudeville, has been named to direct the orchestra. She has gathered an organization of sixteen soloists. In addition to the orchestra will be heard a glorified pipe organ, a choralcelo, in which the pipes are all made of wood, giving it an excellent tone.

There is a large balcony, with entrances from three levels; also a series of boxes on each side, which afford an excellent view of the screen. The projection booth, in the front of the balcony, is so near the screen that the projection distance is short, which will give clear cut pictures. Three of the latest style machines, made by the Baird Motion Picture Machine Company, and equipped with lenses ground especially for them by the Bausch & Lomb Company, have been ordered and are already in the theatre. A Minusa Gold Fiber screen will aid in perfect projection.

At the first level from which there is an entrance to the balcony is a wide promenade, handsomely furnished and finished in elaborate woodwork, with seats all about, and thick carpets, and mirrors. The main retiring rooms for men and women are found on this mezzanine floor. Above is a smaller promenade, similar to the first. The building is of steel and concrete construction, fire proof.

The management speaks proudly of the seating arrangement. Seats twenty-two inches wide, instead of the regular eighteen inches, have been bought, and the rows will be farther apart than in ordinary theatres, giving plenty of space for patrons. There will be no air of crowding. In spite of thus sacrificing five hundred seats, the theatre will have a capacity many hundred larger than any other in town.

Efforts are being made to have the theatre in readiness to open November 25th, the Saturday before Thanksgiving day. Hundreds of men are at work putting the finishing touches on the big structure.

THE BROADWAY IN VANCOUVER, B. C., IS NOW OPEN

THE Broadway theatre in Vancouver, B. C., has just been opened to the public, and takes a firm place as one of the finest suburban houses in British Columbia. The house is situated at Main Street and Broadway, and is owned by the Broadway Theatre Company, Limited, a corporation formed by the following well known picture men, each of whom controls an equal share in the enterprise: W. P. Nichols is president; J. A. Schuberg, vice-president; F. H. Gow, secretary and treasurer, and managing director; and W. P. Dewees, director. Mr. Nichols is managing director of the National Amusement Company, Limited, with a chain of theatres in Western British Columbia; Mr. Schuberg is general manager of the Province and Bijou theatres in Winnipeg; Mr. Dewees is general manager of the Rex Theatre Company, Limited; and Mr. Gow was formerly manager of the old Broadway theatre, located one block away from the new house, and which has been closed since the transfer.

The Broadway has a seating capacity of one thousand, and the chairs are upholstered in leather, seven hundred and fifty being on the main floor, with the balance, including about fifty box seats, in the balcony. White is the color used throughout the house, and potted palms are in evidence in the lobby and foyer. A spacious ladies' room has been fitted up, and the office of the company is also on the premises.

The building is two stories in height, the space not occupied by the theatre being used for stores and offices.

W. A. Gow, brother of the manager, is second in command, and the operating room is in charge of Ray R. Hanson and R. D. Freeman. Paramount pictures will be shown.

SIMON LIBROS REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS WITH POSTERS AND ACCESSORIES

THE National Poster Company of Philadelphia, of which Simon Libros is manager, handling only posters and accessories, not even pictures or postals of stars, finds business on a boom, supplying over one hundred theatres in Philadelphia and about one hundred and fifty outside the city with posters and slides.

Mr. Libros attributes this increase to the fact that theatres generally are now using far more advertising than formerly.

was printed and has transparent spaces where the opaque or exposed spaces in the negative were. If now we place a similar color screen upon this positive with the patterns in correct register and project the result, the projecting light (indicated by arrows) passes through the transparent spaces in the positive and then through sections of the screen which are of the same color as was the light which formed the corresponding opaque patches on the negative. We are thus able to see a representation of the objects photographed in their natural colors and produced by additive synthesis.

Various Screen Plates

Joly's process of ruling fine lines with inks of the primary colors upon gelatinized glass plates was further experimented with by James McDonough of Chicago, who in 1896 formed the International Color Photo Company and commenced the manufacture of ruled taking screens by means of special ruling machines. Promising though the process was, the McDonough concern could not make a go of it, and it remained for the Lumière "Autochrome" plate, introduced in 1907, to popularize "screen plate" color photography. The Autochrome, as is generally known, has a screen of irregular type, composed of a thoroughly mixed layer of microscopically small starch grains dyed orange-red, green and blue, respectively.

The Autochrome was followed by Finlay's "Thames" plate, having a screen composed of colored discs. The Thames plate is no longer supplied, but a screen which is very similar is that of the well-known "Paget" plate, composed of squares of the primary colors. Other well-known screen plates are the Jougla "Omnicolore" and the Dufay "Dioptichrome," while some interesting screens, such as the Krayn (of German manufacture) and the Warner-Powrie (Chicago, U. S. A.), seem to have now become obsolete.

The Requirements of Screen Plates

It is interesting to compare the scientific requirements of screen plate processes with the requirements which must be fulfilled in additive projection in order to secure correct color rendition. McDonough of Chicago appreciated these requirements and set forth two conditions which a good screen plate must fulfill. The "first black condition" requires that the taking screen (ruled or otherwise) should be of a neutral shade, with no color predominating. This is analogous to the requirements of tricolor projection, where our three filters must be so constituted as to produce a white disc on the screen when projected one over the other. The "first black condition" must obtain with a screen plate (or film) in order that the whites may be pure.

The "second black condition" requires that the compensating filter (a yellow filter must be used on the lens with screen plate processes in order to decrease the excessive action of the blue rays) be so adjusted to the emulsion and screen as to produce a deposit of equal density under the red, green and blue filter units. This is comparable to the determination of the exposure ratio necessary to equally render a scale of grays which is always ascertained before making the three separate sensation negatives in tricolor work.

It might be thought that neutrality of color in the screen (the first black color condition) is obtained by altering the depth of color of the screen elements, but if this were done the colors would be diluted with white, and therefore falsified. The taking screen is adjusted for the first black condition by altering the size of the various colored elements—the green generally occupying the greatest area on a good screen plate. The color of the elements for taking screens is adjusted in accordance with the tricolor sensation curves, and any clear spaces between the screen elements must be filled up with black.

To secure the most brilliant colors with the screen plate process the projecting (or viewing) screen should, theoretically, have "sharp cut" elements of pure red, green and blue color not overlapping in their transmissions, as correct taking filters must. As a matter of interest to readers we might state, however, that the "Autochrome" plate, which produces the best results of any color process to date, has gaps between the red and green and the green and blue filter elements of its screen, which is, of course, utilized for taking as well as for viewing.

Screen Ruled Cine Film.

The proposition of producing cinematograph pictures in colors on a screen ruled film appears attractive at first glance, but in practice some difficulties of considerable magnitude become apparent. If we use a separate ruled film or other form of taking screen, we might, with extremely good contact at the exposure aperture, secure a satisfactory negative from which we could prepare a likewise satisfactory positive print. But considering the microscopic size of the colored elements of the projecting screen (several hundred lines or dots to the inch), it is at once apparent that no projector on earth is accurate enough to project the positive with a screen film in contact and maintain them in exact register, line for line, or dot for dot, throughout the length of the picture. Then, again, it might be proposed to coat the colored screen elements onto the emulsion of the film in a manner similar to the "Autochrome" plate. This would necessitate the reversal (by chemical means) of the negative into a positive, and if we required fifty copies of a subject it would be necessary to enact and photograph the scenes fifty times.

The size of the colored lines or dots which comprise the taking (and projecting) screen is another consideration. In the various types of screen plates on the market these vary from 1/300th to 1/900th of an inch in size and are readily visible at a distance of 25 feet when such a film is projected. The size of the elements could not be considered an insuperable drawback to ruled screen cinematography, however, as Colin N. Bennett, the technical editor of our British contemporary, The Kinematograph, has exhibited photo-micrographs of an excellent and very finely ruled sample of color screen film—said to be manufactured by the Vereinigte Kunstseidefabriken A. G. in Germany.

Granting, however, that all other drawbacks incident to screen ruled film were eliminated, there is another handicap, and such a serious one as to put the proposition entirely out of the running. This is the fact that screen plates (or films) cannot—even under the most favorable circumstances—transmit more than one-tenth to one-fifteenth of the light incident upon them. When we compare this with three-color additive projection systems, which, although very wasteful of light, can transmit one-fourth of the incident illumination, it is seen that the screen plate methods of color photography do not well lend themselves to the production of motion pictures in colors.

A study of the history and theory of screen plate color photography cannot fail to interest the student of color processes, but we shall in our next issue proceed to the consideration of the subtractive methods of color cinematography. While the preparation of films along the lines of subtractive color mixing has proven rather difficult, great value will undoubtedly attach to a process which will give us our natural colored images right on the film strip. It will therefore be interesting to see what has been accomplished along such lines.

FLORAL ZONE IS PERFUME FOR THEATRES

THE Exhibitors' Supply Company of Chicago, has recently opened a department for the making of perfume under the supervision of F. E. Forsyth, who is thoroughly experienced in the line of work, having had many years experience in compounding a perfume especially for use in theatres. Several different grades will be carried in stock at all times for use as a spray, with fans or in zones that are placed on the wall.

The name Floral Zone has been selected and all grades of perfume will be sold under that label and carry their guarantee.

A handsomely designed Zone is being supplied which fits flat against the wall, and is made in a floral design colored to match the decorations of the theatre, and has the appearance of part of the decorations.

Preparations are being made to handle a large output of this product, both to individual theatres and supply dealers throughout the country.

BALTIMORE THEATRE REOPENS FOR WINTER SEASON

THE Red Mill theatre, on Lafayette avenue near Gilmor, Baltimore, reopened recently. The theatre has been closed during the summer months, and while it opened temporarily during September, the real opening for the season occurs this week. The house is under the management of James J. McNarama, who represents the estate which controls the property. The theatre is booking special feature film.

NEW PARAMOUNT THEATRE FOR FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.

DURING the first week in December, H. T. Drake will open a Paramount theatre, which will be christened the Strand theatre, in Fayetteville, North Carolina, and which promises to be one of the finest photoplay houses in that state for its size.

Mr. Drake opened his first theatre, the Lyric, about a year ago with Paramount pictures and has increased his business to such an extent that it was necessary to build a new and larger house, twice the seating capacity of the first one. Every modern convenience for a photoplay house is being installed in this theatre.

NEW YORK ROOF A SUCCESS

men was put to work instantly to change it into a palace of motion pictures.

One bitter cold night last November the Roof was opened for the first time. It had been extensively advertised, but still the people didn't seem to take to the idea at all. As they bought tickets they streamed into the theatre, in spite of the fact that a man in the lobby directed them toward the elevators to the Roof. Even when the theatre was jammed to capacity patrons waited rather than go to the Roof. It was too cold on Broadway, and "Roof" sounded even colder to them, so the name was changed to "Annex," but still they came slowly. The same show was presented in both places, but patrons were skeptical. Gradually, however, patronage increased, until during the summer the Roof was crowded nightly when the theatre showed a falling off during the hot months. It is always cool and comfortable on the Roof in summer, with the sides all open to every breeze, and well heated in winter.

The price of admission to the theatre is 10, 15 and 25 cents, and 25 cents to the Roof, which includes either boxes or orchestra chairs. A big symphony orchestra of 16 pieces furnishes music on the Roof.

Mr. Loew is now contemplating the formation of the "New York Roof Club." This will be a unique organizatiion, with motion picture players and others connected with the film industry, and legitimate and vaudeville players eligible for membership. His plan is to issue a membership card, entitling the bearer to admission to the Roof at any time, seven nights a week if the owner wishes to use it every night. This card will cost $10 a year representing dues to belong to the club. In this way the players and others who frequent the Roof will save money, and at the same time avoid inconvenience of standing in line to buy tickets. Several people with whom Mr. Loew discussed the scheme thought it a winner, and he will probably put it into operation

A MESSAGE FROM GARCIA

(Coming Week of December 11th)

A Stirring Romance of Cuba Based on the Immortal Preachment of the Late Elbert Hubbard

Featuring

MABEL TRUNNELLE

and

ROBERT CONNESS

Everybody has heard of the story, made immortal by one of America's greatest literary geniuses, of how an obscure lieutenant won undying fame because he had the courage to serve his country in time of need without question or hesitation. It has been echoed from platform to pulpit throughout the world and has become one of the most familiar of all stories. The service that this hero rendered is the theme of this inspiring picture.

FILMED IN CUBA

"A Message to Garcia" was filmed in Cuba by an Edison Company that was sent to the island for the express purpose of making this picture. The natural scenes create the atmosphere of reality that is so essential to high class productions, and it places the unmistakable impress of quality on it.

A MESSAGE TO EXHIBITORS!

This production, picturing international complications, with its suggestions of impending war, with its appealing and highly romantic love story and, above all, with its inspiring lesson in patriotism, presents all the features most desirable in current productions.

THE COSSACK WHIP

A five-reel feature written for Edison production by James Oppenheim, the renowned novelist, is now booking. It features the beautiful young emotional screen star.

VIOLA DANA

A PERFECT STORY--A POPULAR STAR--A SUMPTUOUS PRODUCTION

Critics and exhibitors everywhere are praising

THE HEART OF THE HILLS

a story of Oriental mysticism in which Conway Tearle, the famous legitimate star, and Mabel Trunnelle, the premier emotional actress of the screen, are featured. Five reels of perfect satisfaction for any exhibitor.

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

NOVEMBER 25, 1916

"The Vampires"—New Gaumont Series Coming November 23

ON THURSDAY, November 23, the Mutual Film Corporation will release the first episode of "The Vampires." This is the new Gaumont series of detective-mystery tales which succeeds the famous "Fantomas" series. The series consists of nine episodes. Each episode is three reels in length. Each story is complete in itself. Paris and its environs are the location of most of the tales. Each episode is crammed with action—thrills—mystery!

A Real Thriller.

The house of Gaumont is famous for its "series" productions. Gaumont directors are noted for the thrills and sensations they can devise and execute. Audiences all over the world have been amazed at the daring deeds performed by Gaumont players. The "Fantomas" series of mystery-detective stories made money for every theatre which booked it. "The Vampires" is conceded to be even stronger—even more sensational—even more surprising and interest-compelling. The theatres showing this new series of sensational three reel plays are sure to be packed at every performance. There is a bit of curiosity and love of the weird and unusual in every man, woman and child. By showing "The Vampires" any exhibitor can appeal to this latent love of the bizarre. Profits are sure to result.

Nine Three Reel Chapters.

"The Vampires" is released as nine episodes, each three reels in length. The first episode of "The Vampires" is entitled "The Detective's Head." It is released on November 23. Bookings are now being taken at Mutual film exchanges. Prompt action is necessary if you are to secure this new series for YOUR theatre.

"Charity?" a Special Offering

The Mutual Film Corporation is soon to release as a special feature de luxe, "Charity?" a seven reel subject produced by Frank Powell. "Charity?" is an expose of modern social conditions. It makes its appeal in behalf of common justice and fairness. It features Linda A. Griffith, wife of David W. Griffith, and known to film fans the world over as "The Biograph Girl." Supporting her in the picture appear such favorites as Creighton Hale, Sheldon Lewis and others. "Charity?" seems likely to rival for box-office value the great Mutual feature "Damaged Goods." It will be available on and after November 27 at all Mutual Exchanges.

William Russell As An Indian Chief In "Lone Star"

Another of the William Russell Series of Mutual Star Productions is the Mutual feature offering this week. "Lone Star" is its title. It is five reels in length. It features this popular favorite in the role of an Indian chief. As a boy he sees his mother die because the Indian medicine-man is unable to drive out the "evil spirits" with which he alleges she is possessed. Shortly afterward he sees a white physician at work and marvels at the difference in treatment. He resolves to become a physician himself. After becoming an interne at an Eastern hospital he meets and falls in love with a beautiful white girl. The girl's father, however, spurns the Indian suitor, rebuking him for daring to love a white girl. Later Lone Star strips the mask from so-called "white civilization" and decides to return to his own people. The girl he loved is taken ill. Lone Star's surgical skill alone can save her life. The father appeals to him for aid. Forgetting the taunts that have been heaped upon him, Lone Star ministers to her. Then, stoically, he packs his grip and departs for the tepees of his tribe. This unusual picture can now be booked at any Mutual film exchange.

Signal Chapterplay a Hit

"A Lass of the Lumberlands," the great new Helen Holmes chapter-play, is growing in popularity with each new release. Chapter four is crammed with thrills. An automobile accident, and a daring crawl by Helen Holmes from window to window of a speeding train are but a few of the thrills in this chapter.

Sequel to "Diamond From the Sky" Is Now Ready for Releas

THE long awaited $10,000.00 sequel t "The Diamond From the Sky" is no ready. Every motion picture exhibito knows what a tremendous success the fa mous serial attained. The triumph score by this production is a matter of histor And now the sequel—an entirely new stor which bids fair to score an even greate triumph—is ready for release. Writers i every state in the union, almost in ever town in the United States, tried for th $10,000.00 prize offered for the best sug gestion for a sequel to the original tal Thousands of manuscripts were sent in Months were spent in going over them Finally the best one was chosen. Th trained scenario staff of the America Film Company, Inc., prepared a workin script from the prize suggestion. Worl of production was then immediately be gun. Now the production is finished. O Monday, November 27, the first install ment of the sequel will be released. Th sequel is in four chapters, each two reel in length. Each chapter is a big featur offering in itself. The four chapters form a tremendously powerful box-office mag net for four weeks.

Old Favorites All There.

All the old favorites of "The Diamon From the Sky" are again in the cast. On after another theatre patrons will recog nize old friends on the screen. Again they will behold Arthur Stanley and Esther Again they will see William Russell a Blair Stanley, the scapegrace, and Char lotte Burton as his beautiful accomplice i crime. Once more they will laugh at Wil liam Tedmarsh as Quabba, the hunch back, and his almost human monkey Quaint Orral Humphreys, as Smythe, th English solicitor, will appear again, alon with all the other almost forgotten charac ters who made the original story so tre mendous a success. It will be a sort o family reunion after a long separation But don't imagine that the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" depends upon its predecessor for its popularity. The sequel is even stronger, more powerful, more sensational and more thrilling than was the tale which it concludes.

The Prize Winner.

The name and identity of the winner of the $10,000 prize will be disclosed only in the films. This feature alone will attract thousands to the theatre showing the pic ture—for there is scarcely a community in the country that hasn't someone in its midst who tried for the prize. Bookings on this great sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" are now being taken at all Mutual film exchanges.

Produced by American Film Co., Inc.

MILLIONS have been waiting for the Sequel to the famous serial—"The Diamond From the Sky." And now it's ready for release. On Monday, November 27th, the first chapter of the $10,000 Sequel will be shown for the first time in theatres all over the United States. This is the Sequel to the most successful serial yet released. This is the film that has been made from the $10,000 prize suggestion. The Sequel is stronger—more powerful—more sensational, than was the original production. It is in four chapters, each two reels in length. Each chapter is a big feature in itself. The four chapters insure tremendous box office receipts for four continuous weeks.

"The Diamond From the Sky" was itself a $10,000 prize story. It ran in fiction form in newspapers all over the country. Millions of people saw it. Hundreds and hundreds of theatres played to capacity business with it as an attraction. A prize of $10,000 was offered for the best Sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky." People in every state in the Union tried for that prize. Thousands and thousands of manuscripts were written. Months were necessary to read over all the suggestions offered. Finally the prize winning suggestion was chosen. The trained scenario staff of the American Film Company, Inc., then set about preparing the working script of the production. This finished, the task of filming was begun. And now it is completed. On Monday, November 27th, the first chapter of the prize-winning Sequel will be released.

All the old favorites of the original production are again in the cast. Arthur and Blair Stanley—Esther and Vivian Marston—Quabba, the hunchback and Smythe, the quaint English solicitor, are all again to be shown on the screen. Popular William Russell—beautiful Charlotte Burton—talented William Tedmarsh—funny Orral Humphreys, are all in the cast again together with many new players. The Sequel is an entirely new story. It is tremendously thrilling, powerfully dramatic, superbly photographed and enacted by the very best cast obtainable. It will pack even more theatres than did the film production which it completes—the original "Diamond From the Sky."

Thousands are going to visit the theatres showing the Sequel to see the winner of the $10,000, for the films alone will disclose the name and identity of the Sequel's author. Bookings are now being taken on the Sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" at all Mutual film exchanges. Be the first in your vicinity to show it. Don't overlook this wonderful opportunity. Don't wait. SHE GREW UP WITH THE MOTION PICTURE

EVERY great movement in the world's history, every great epoch in art and industry, has had its individual who, better than anything else, has represented it. Napoleon was the great light that burned in an age of social chaos; Benjamin Franklin was the great mind that mixed common sense and fiery patriotism in the Revolutionary days; Andrew Carnegie was the genius of steel. When science and art combined to perfect the motion picture—that delicate mechanism by which animation was given to shadows—it was a little girl who opened the hearts of millions by the spark of genius and love expressed on the screen. That little girl was

FROM N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH:

The Inference is Obvious—Unicorn!

An Unsatisfied Demand for Short Film Plays is One of the Trade's Problems.

A serious situation in the motion picture business seems to have arisen in THE GROWING SCARCITY OF SHORT-LENGTH FILMS. Producers who have in mind only the exploitation of stars and the possibilities of metropolitan productions are by way of forgetting the many thousands of small town houses which cannot afford—by reason of small seating capacity and limited attendance—to pay for great features, great names and celebrated productions. The same is true of many of the small neighborhood picture theatres where small prices accompany a general desire for variety.

The short film like the short story or the small painting, has its own advantages. On the regular stage the stars of the drama are seldom within the reach of the small houses or the patrons of vaudeville. These facts make plain the need and the commendability of the short film for the 5,000 to 7,000 lesser picture houses which cannot afford the great features or the star performers, for the simple reason that their theatres are to small and their accustomed scale of prices is to low to permit them to offer the longer and more famous attractions

Dear Sir:

"Where Are My Children"—

I cannot speak too strongly, nor appeal too earnestly, that women, mothers and daughters see this dramatic picture play, with a mission that aims at the pitiable crime and problem of the day.

False modesty and prudery have too long been accountable for the ignorance that brings sorrow and degradation to countless thousands. This play turns on the light and is invincible in the lesson it carries.

Its production should lead to an increased birth rate and a lowered mortality.

Keep the Ball Rolling

AGAIN we cheerfully give over this page to a man who has something to say, with no iron of his own to heat, about the industry in general.

Here is interesting reading. Some bald facts are stated. Some bull's-eyes are scored. We disagree heartily with some of the writer's deductions and statements. But they should invite open discussion and do good.

We have purposely robbed the "With the Exhibitor" department of this letter in order to give it prominence and invite more of this gloves-off correspondence which, we believe, is vastly needed to clear away much of the haze now clouding this industry.

New York City, November 9.

Editor MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

Relative to "Start the Ball Rolling" article on page 3136 of current issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Friend Dooley writes direct to the point and it is to be hoped that exhibitors will take notice and start some reforms along the suggested lines.

The writer is obliged for certain reasons to send in this item unsigned but I hope it will not lessen its hoped for value. I write as an expert, my knowledge having been acquired at close range and covering a period of years, close to many of the "powers that be."

I see what the "powers" mentioned do not see, namely, that the exhibitor is the future salvation of the industry. If he does not make money, the whole structure falls apart.

The theatrical people made the fatal mistake of killing off the small manager and independent stars and thereby killed their egg-laying goose. Let the financial men control the studios; the exchanges; and then the theatres, which one faction at least may now be aiming to do, and they will find themselves with a dead industry on their hands.

That individual hustler, the man who watches his screen, and pleases his patrons, whose dollars are invested, is the necessary part of the structure. Why can't he realize it and act accordingly?

High salaried advertising men, poster department men, so-called efficiency men, sales managers and many other officials are sitting in New York offices devising ways and means to get more money out of the exhibitor's box office for all kinds of posters, photographs, banners, half-tones, programs, heralds, etc. Sales agents are scouring around getting exhibitors to bid against the others for first runs. These are a few of the reasons why theatres are always changing ownership.

Close up the useless theatres. It is far cheaper for two exhibitors to club together and pay the rent of a third theatre and subrent it for a store or garage than to have a third competitor eating into their gross receipts and possibly bidding against them for the first runs.

Regarding posters, most of them drive patrons away. Does the exhibitor realize that he is paying eight and ten cents a sheet for posters that cost the manufacturer on an average of three and a half cents a sheet today, even with the high price of paper?

Does the exhibitor realize that every time he hangs up a one sheet portrait of a "star" he is adding to the value of that actor or actress and to the company managing them? Does he know that in the theatrical business that it is an unheard of thing for the manager to pay for posters? Who made Charley Chaplin, Theda Bara, Francis Bushman and all the other "stars?" Was it not the exhibitor who hung up the posters of these "stars?" And what did he derive from it? A charge ten times as much for service as what he originally paid.

Manufacturers and exhibitors are both making fatal mistakes in advertising and featuring these "stars" above everything else. It will wind up by the acting end getting all the money.

Circus men are admittedly the best showmen in the world. Do they now or have they ever made a practice of featuring human "stars." No, they feature a certain death defying act, or a special animal or freak of some sort, but rarely an individual who would have his value so enhanced by such starring as to cause him to leave for a larger salary elsewhere.

Manufacturers must wake up to the big fact that their big point is to see that the exhibitor makes money. Stop saddling up the extras. Use some discretion as to charge for film service. Charge the big theatre more than the smaller one.

I know of one theatre of the so-called legitimate type, in a town in Ohio, where they played attractions through the week and a feature of a certain film "star" on Sunday. Their gross ran around a thousand dollars every Sunday and they paid for the service no more than the regular exhibitor with a five hundred seat capacity would have to pay.

Where is the sense or justice of such prices?

Prices should not be based on the first run principle but on the size and location of the theatre. A neighborhood house should not pay as much as a business location all-day-showing-house.

Neither should a three hundred seat house pay as much as a six hundred seat house.

By the same rule, a theatre in a town of 3000 people should not pay as much as one in a town of twice the size.

Stop the mechanical cold-blooded system of making prices of so much per day and put a human touch to the system.

Standardize the posters, which will not only get them out at a lesser price but make their grade and quality far higher, and give them free with the service. Cut out the "stills" and lobby photos; eliminate the heralds. Cut out the newspapers altogether just as friend Dooley in his letter suggests, the exhibitor doesn't need any newspaper advertising.

Give him good pictures, so good that the manufacturer can insist that the exhibitor run them for more than one day as at present. In Great Britian all pictures are run three days, why not here the same?

Educate the public to look for nothing more than one reel subjects in a five cent theatre; and not to expect an orchestra in a ten cent house—it can't be done at the price. Perhaps it can be at a 15 cent admission but I won't say it can. No man on earth can give twenty-five cents worth of anything for ten cents and live.

VOL. XIV November 25, 1916 No. 21

The film industry today is in much the same condition as France was during the revolutionary period before the Napoleonic reign. No leader but many would-be leaders. And the same chaotic conditions apply to the film business in other countries as well, notably in Italy.

The writer believes the business is going to be standardized and in an international manner eventually. By this I mean that the manufacturers of all the great countries must have some sort of working basis by which films will be interchanged, thereby admitting of great authors for five reel features and an adequate appropriation for the making of the picture without asking the exhibitor to stand the brunt as is done now.

But simplify all the way through. Make good films, furnish them to the exhibitor and let the screen do the rest. Cut out the press departments, stop spending money telling the public what car such and such a "star" is using. Have more business meetings and less banquets.

Inaugurate a gentleman's agreement in the business. When an exhibitor violates his contract or his given word let the exchange ostracize him thereafter. A few such lessons from several exchanges will either reform him or put him out of business.

The exhibitor should handle the exchange man on same lines, only before acting let him report the matter to the main office.

Another little item is the operator. When he is incompetent and is ruining film, stop the service to that house until he is removed or if the trouble is with the machine, until a new machine is installed.

Let there be unity among the exchange men on these points.

Service should be paid for by the day, no other way; there is no occasion for any other system. Theatrical receipts are always divided between the theatre and the road company every night after the box office receipts are counted up.

All these things are so simple and so easy of adjustment. The great trouble as far as the exchange end is concerned is the eternal changing of managers and seeming lack of authority. Men, who lock themselves up in inner offices here in New York and are harder to see than cabinet officers, are dictating policies about which they really know nothing. All of which has got to change.

The general staff of the film industry is slowly but surely killing it. If the exhibitor will only rise up in his might, the general staff will soon be dismissed.

Exhibitors' leagues are good things, but there is no reason why individual managers should not do many of the things suggested and other things which no doubt will be written on and suggested by others than Dooley of Washington and the writer.

I sincerely hope the exhibitors over the country will avail themselves of your valuable columns to express not only their views but their intention of making moves in the right directions. If my suggestions will be of any help, count on me sending in further contributions along corresponding lines later on.

"Fouche."

In particular we disagree with the writer's statement that the "exhibitor doesn't need any newspaper advertising."

We believe he needs all the newspaper advertising he can judiciously use. Newspaper advertising, like all other advertising, can be wasteful. It can break a man as easily as it makes him; so can any form of advertising, injudiciously indulged in.

But far from not needing newspaper advertising and lobby advertising, we will go so far as to say that in our opinion almost every losing theatre in this country—save only those which because of bad location or overcompetition, or some other such valid reason should never have been built—can be turned into a paying theatre by a good advertising man; and we further believe that the one general and striking weakness of the exhibiting business today is its lack of advertising sense and effort.

But the above writer has started a good-sized ball rolling. Who is next? Wm. A. Johnston.

Comparisons Are Odious

IT is about time we stop comparing pictures with "The Birth of a Nation." Someone—from the public press probably—will begin to laugh at us.

After the death of O. Henry—and therefore his full recognition as a story teller—every new fiction writer of promise or achievement was likened to O. Henry. Such was the riot of comparison that a columnist in a New York daily asked that Madison Square Garden be given over to a convention of all writers "like O. Henry" with Carnegie Hall to be used for the overflow.

We shall soon have to make a special library for pictures like "The Birth of a Nation."

THE loose comparison—it is always loose—is apt to be unjust to all concerned, to the maker, author, director and exhibitor of the pictures. And furthermore such loose comparisons will not advance clearly and correctly the art of the motion picture and the proper critical attitude toward the art.

"THE Birth of a Nation" scored a great triumph—as "The Birth of a Nation." Let us have different pictures scoring equal triumphs. And let them be remembered for just what qualities they triumph in.

"Bigness," for instance, is by no means the sole end of motion picture making. The crying need of the day in fact is for excellent short pictures. In the publication field today, it is well to remember, they are paying more for short stories than for novels.

"BIGNESS" too carries a real danger to the industry, both economically and artistically, as a prominent dramatic critic recently pointed out.

If too many "big" pictures are put out, constantly increased effects and constantly increased expense will be necessary to feed a jaded public taste. The stage went through the same era, and returned sharply to the plays based upon the fascinating realism of everyday ordinary life.

AFTER all the picture and its hold upon the public comes right back to the story and its value. The story, sans bigness, lavish expense, thundering spectacles, sans everything that money and imagination can surround it with—the story alone attracts and holds the public mind and emotion. Wm. A. Johnston.

Hodkinson Organizes $9,000,000 Company

New Concern, Known as Superpictures, Inc., Will Distribute Subjects Not Confined to Any One Producer or Group of Producers—The Officers Are Frederick L. Collins, President of McClure Publications, Vice-President; Holland S. Duell, Secretary; Raymond Pawley, Treasurer

EVER since he resigned as president of the Paramount Picture Corporation, W. W. Hodkinson has been engaged in company with Raymond Pawley in organizing a mammoth distributing corporation which will have a wide and unusual field. In an official statement emanating from McClure's Magazine the scope and plans of this new organization is announced.

The new company is to be known as Superpictures, Inc., and has been capitalized for $9,000,000 under the laws of the State of Delaware. There are $6,000,000 worth of preferred stock and $3,000,000 worth of common.

Hodkinson Is Active Head

Mr. Hodkinson, who founded Paramount and conducted its affairs up to June of this year, and, with Mr. Pawley, is still a director of that company, is one of the best known men in the film business. He will be the active manager of the new enterprise. Mr. Hodkinson has always stood for the best things in motion pictures and his connection with Superpictures, Inc., is a guarantee of its high standard and aims. The officers authorized the following statement setting forth the purposes of the new company:

"Superpictures, Inc., as the name implies, is formed to encourage, finance and distribute motion pictures of quality. It aims to standardize the motion picture distributing business through the maintenance of high quality in its own productions and methods and through the ownership of stock in other distributing concerns. To this end, Superpictures in acquiring a substantial interest in the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the Progressive Motion Picture Company, and the Famous Players Film Company of New Jersey; and, within ten days, will be in active control of one of the three largest distributing organizations in the country.

"Mr. Collins and Mr. Duell, who own a controlling interest in McClure's Magazine and other McClure Publications, bring to Superpictures, Inc., the publicity connection and the financial strength essential to the highest success in this field."

"Superpictures' first release will be a series of seven pictures produced under the auspices of The McClure Publications and starring Nance O'Neill, H. B. Warner, Ann Murdock, Holbrook Blinn, Charlotte Walker and other stars of equal magnitude. This series will be accompanied by a powerful advertising campaign in the important newspapers and magazines throughout the country, designed to establish in the public mind the name and significance of the word 'Superpictures.'"

Output Not Confined to Few Producers

"Superpictures, Inc., will not confine its activities to the output of any one producer or group of producers, but will pick and choose from the product of the best studios those productions which measure up to its standards. These and only these will be called Superpictures. To this end, Superpictures has set aside a large proportion of its capital for the financing of unusual pictures which, in the present condition of film production, might not otherwise reach the public. It is not the purpose of Superpictures to produce pictures, but rather to see that such productions as it stamps with its trademark, are efficiently managed, honestly sold, and adequately financed."

Duell, Warfield and Duell, of 2 Rector street, who represent Mr. Collins and the McClure interests in the suit that is now pending against certain stockholders of the Paramount Pictures Corporation to compel delivery of stock under an option agreement of June 13, 1916, state that the incorporation of the new company, in which Mr. Collins is interested, has no effect on the present litigation, except as it indicates the probable ultimate possession of the Paramount stock in case the action is successful. Mr. Collins' option covers all of the stock of the corporation, and the purchase price is $12,000,000. Examinations before trial in this suit are now being held prior to an early settlement in the courts.

It can be stated authoritively that the large distributing company referred to in the above statement is the Triangle. An arrangement has been effected whereby Mr. Hodkinson, and his associates are to assume the active management of this corporation. Owing to the fact that these arrangements have not been entirely completed it is impossible to print the full details at the present time. However, it is expected that these arrangements will be completed in the course of a week or ten days, when a full and detailed account will appear in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Fox Beefsteak Dinner Makes Banquet History

New York City and Trade Press Tendered an Entertainment of Unusual Proportions—Many Tributes Paid "The Daughter of the Gods"

THE beefsteak dinner tendered to a large representation of the New York City, and the trade press at Healy's Restaurant on Wednesday, November 8, by the Fox Film Corporation takes the lead in the dinner history of this industry.

Such a wealth of entertainment has never been offered before. The dinner opened facing a platform array of Coney Island headliner freaks, and was followed, with scarcely an intermission, by an exceptional array of vaudeville numbers lasting from early until late in the evening.

In response to a hearty toast, William Fox stated that this dinner was given in honor of the motion picture, and its present period of evolution, as signified by "The Daughter of the Gods." Not many years ago, he stated, many connected with the motion picture industry felt it advisable to conceal that fact. Now everyone wished to publish it. He invited the clear understanding and full co-operation of the city press and the press of the country in recognition of the motion picture industry as it stands today. It is now fifth in size; it should be first, he said.

W. R. Sheehan was toastmaster.

George MacManus, the well-known cartoonist, introduced the entertainers, his speeches consisting for the most part of a repetition of "Now listen, this is going to be good."

Brief speeches were made by W. Stephen Bush, Martin Green, William A. Johnston of the New York World, William A. Johnston of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Kenneth Lord of the New York Sun, Tom Powers, the well-known cartoonist, "Wurra Wurra" McHoughlin of the New York World, Stuart Holmes of the Fox Film Corporation, introduced as the greatest movie villain, Louis Poss and Ernest Green, London representatives of the Fox Film.

Many fine tributes were paid to "The Daughter of the Gods" by the various speakers.

MARGARET MILNE TO MAKE SCREEN DEBUT

Margaret Milne, sister of Peter Milne, the well-known motion picture reviewer, has been added to the cast of the first picture that the Van Dyke Company is producing for the Art Dramas Program. This is the first time that Miss Milne has worked in pictures, but she has already had considerable experience on the legitimate stage.

She is a graduate of a well-known dramatic school from which many of our prominent legitimate producers secure their talent. Miss Milne has had several offers to take parts on the stage, but she has refused them all for the screen. Although she is playing only a minor part in the Van Dyke picture, it is confidently expected by those who have seen her work that she will soon be entrusted with leads.

Illinois Advisory Committee Promises to be Active

Frederick M. Elliott, Executive Secretary, Is Pleased with the Outlook for the Branch of the Parent Body—He Bases His Opinion on the Men and the Spirit Behind the Organization—Quick Results Expected in Settling Big Problems

THE Illinois Advisory Executive Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, formed last week under the direction of Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary, promises to be a powerfully active and ceaselessly wide-awake branch of the big parent body. This is the gratified belief of Mr. Elliott himself. Identified with national and international propositions that have called for broad, complex organization, he safely bases his opinion in such matters on the men and the spirit behind any constructive movement; and by this gauge the Chicago meeting gives the most flattering promise.

What was accomplished during the short conference of the various interests and the enthusiastic manner in which it was done, displaying keen appreciation of the big idea around which the industry is being built, show that the men of the Middle West have given to the project considerable thought and appreciative vision. Even while the preliminary steps for organization were being taken, so hearty was its acceptance that batches of memberships were at once pledged.

There have been similar meetings in New York, productive of valuable interchange of ideas and pledged increase or membership, but none of them have excelled this one in the unanimity of understanding and of the spontaneous purpose to bring success. "When we get our proper momentum," remarked one of the members of the meeting at its termination, "we will show you just what Chicago can accomplish in doing wide-awake constructive work. We have the men, the energy and the capacity."

Work Accomplished Quickly

Both in his telegraphic and in his verbal report to President William A. Brady and Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the executive committee, Mr. Elliott was most enthusiastic, remarking particularly the celerity with which the work was accomplished. Coming recently from building in the automobile industry, it was quite natural for him to declare that the Chicago group furnished the very latest efficiency in "self-starting," and this is due, he explains to the practical work and the inspiration of President John R. Freuler, of the Mutual, who issued the call for the gathering and who was unanimously elected as chairman of the Chicago Advisory Executive Committee.

Donald J. Bell, of the Bell & Howell Company, one of the vice-presidents of the National Association and Maurice A. Choynski, a director, also gave valuable aid in the direction of the work. Louis H. Frank, general manager of the Seventh National Exhibition and Correction of the Exhibitors' League, was elected secretary, and the members of the organization committee selected in addition to Messrs. Freuler, Bell and Choynski, were Matterson Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, I. Van Renkels, manager of Bluebird Photo Plays and John F. Bauman of the International Film Service. Mr. Elliott's impressions of this, the first action in essential structure-building of the national body, is interesting in showing how the big idea is taking root all over the country.

"What was accomplished in Chicago in such a short time must furnish a splendid object lesson for all sections to follow" said he. "It is especially gratifying to President William A. Brady and Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the executive committee, who are deeply interested in the development of the 'Advisory Committee Plan,' and who anticipated in a measure, the success of the Chicago formation, but the very largeness of its expression came as a big and agreeable surprise. Chicago is a place where they do big things—the things worth while—and are continually battling against those that are unworthy. The Chicago Association of Commerce, which has awakened splendid public consciousness and has heralded the city all over the civilized world, is a fitting symbol of the spirit and ambition of Chicago. They are proud of the city and to everything undertaken in a large way, they bring this sustaining pride. It was notable that Mr. Bauman, of the International Film Service, in discussing the structure of the new organization, advocated an adoption of the committee plan of the commercial body.

Appreciative Attitude Shown

"Some idea of the appreciative attitude of the men, eager for any service to aid, was furnished by Mr. Bauman, International and Mr. Van Renkels, manager of the Bluebird Photo Play, which announced that despite the fact they were eligible, through the membership of the home organizations, would pay entrance fees and dues as individual organizations. Such a step was entirely voluntary and shows that the salient purpose is to aid in the building and to expedite the work. It reveals, also, a fine unselfish community spirit fused with highly creditable local pride.

"It was especially gratified by the hearty support accorded by the daily newspapers, which have departments devoted to the motion pictures. They gave much publicity to the project, and had special representatives at the meeting. To the standing indebtedness to the Middle West trade publications for their constant and consistent aid was added another obligation, for Motography. The Exhibitors' Herald and the Billboard, besides heralding the occasion, through members of their staff promised staunch support to every constructive movement of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

"Mr. Freuler is sure of the 'momentum of accomplishment' of which one of the members spoke. He has given much of his valuable time, incessantly in demand, to the profit. He recognized its worth, its vital relation to the big, national idea of industrial achievement and is confident that, in a very brief period, all of the principal activities of the business of the entire state will be enrolled. In this confidence he is sustained by every one of the thirty men who were present at the meeting at which the first advisory executive committee was established. They are in it, they heartily believe in it and they are out to make it a banner success."

MEETING OF COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES AGAINST OCHS POSTPONED

The meeting of the committee appointed by New York Local No. 1 of the Exhibitors' League to investigate the charges brought by Fleischman and Goldreyer against Lee A. Ochs, President of the National and State League, which was to have been held at the League headquarters, 218 West 42d Street, New York City, on Wednesday, November 8th, has been postponed to Tuesday, November 14th.

The committee is composed of Messrs. Trigger (chairman), and Ronheimer, Ascher, Ostreicher, Sauer, Meedles, Anson, Samuelson, Flynn.

The charges against Mr. Ochs as made by Fleischman and Goldreyer were published in the November 11th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and have been considered of sufficient gravity to warrant a full investigation.

The meeting is to begin at 11 A. M. and be restricted to the committee and those immediately concerned, together with counsel. Later the meeting may be thrown open to exchange men and members of the local league.

C. S. GOETZ GOES TO INTERNATIONAL

The International announces the appointment of Charles S. Goetz as manager of the recently established Cleveland office, and J. S. Applegate for its Kansas City branch.

Mr. Goetz goes to the International with a wide experience in marketing films. He began his career with Warner's Features as a salesman with Cleveland as headquarters, but was soon promoted to be branch manager at New Orleans, and a little later was made division manager, having charge of the whole Southern territory. From Warner's he went with the World Film Corporation as district manager of the Middle West, with Cleveland again as his headquarters. Within six months he was made sales manager of all branches, with headquarters in New York. He resigned to go with William Fox, and opened the Pittsburgh and Cleveland branches, and then became connected with the Gene Gauntier studio. A year later he joined the Bluebird Company, and then went with the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, and resigned because he saw greater opportunities with the International.

Board of Review and M. P. Advertisers Meet

Certain Types of Motion Picture Publicity Come Up for Discussion at a Meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers Held at Keen's Chop House, New York—The Question of Posters Commands the Attention of the Members

By Sam Spedon

AT a meeting and luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers held at Keen's Chop House, 107 West Forty-fourth street, New York City, on Thursday, November 2, the following members of the National Board of Review, as guests, attended to discuss certain types of motion picture publicity now in use by some of the producing companies: Dr. Cranston Brenton, chairman of the board; W. D. McGuire, of the Board of Review; Dr. Orlando F. Lewis, general secretary of the N. Y. Prison Association; W. Frank Persons, director of the Charity Organization Society, New York; Clarence A. Perry, director of the Department of Recreation, Russell Sage Foundation (the last three are members of the Board of Directors of the National Board); Herbert F. Sherwood, secretary of the Legislative Committee of the National Board.

The Board of Review wished to bring certain matters to the attention of the advertising and publicity men, and it appears their presence at this regular meeting was the most direct method of doing it. This action was prompted by frequent complaints from citizens of Boston and vicinity through the mayor's office; Commissioner of Public Safety, Syracuse, N. Y.; Chairman of Censorship Board, Atlanta, Ga.; Police Censor of Providence, R. I.; Commissioner of Public Safety, Rochester, N. Y.; President Massachusetts Branch Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America; Commissioner Browning of Washington, D. C.; Boston Transcript; Duluth Tribune, Duluth, Minn., and the Tribune, Tacoma, Wash.

Dr. Lewis of the Board of Review acted as spokesman and briefly cited the above complaints and remarks as matters requiring the serious consideration of all motion picture publicity and advertising men.

Arthur James, president of the Associated M. P. Advertisers, said the association would be glad to co-operate with the Board of Review in every way possible. Speaking for the Associated Advertisers, he knew as members they could not afford to jeopardize their recognized standing as advertising and publicity men by violating a principle of the organization.

Mr. Lazarus said that under present standards of production it was difficult to get even a situation from the still pictures to give the necessary "punch" to a poster to make it much more than commonplace. As a matter of fact, the advertising man is put to his wits' end to get a good strong photograph, or incident, to arouse more than a passing interest.

Dr. Lewis asked if it were not possible to get the directors to make stills of the strongest situations in their productions. This was answered in chorus, "It hasn't been possible." While he knew the gentlemen present had in no way contributed to the cause for unfavorable comment, he thought it would be well for them to assist in warning all offenders being abettors to objectionable advertising by appealing to morbid and sordid inclinations.

The Board had investigated many of the complaints, but could not trace any of them directly to the standard producers; in a few instances it had discovered that the digressions and indiscretions were committed by the publicity attaches of some theatres who were more concerned about the public's dollars than morals.

Dr. Lewis asked the Associated M. P. Advertisers present if exaggeration in publicity, misrepresentation of pictures, could not be stopped. Very often the risque in a production was played up to the exclusion of everything else. Posters illustrative of crime, robbery and abandon, regardless of whether they were in the picture or not; this, to say the least, was misleading and disappointing. The patrons saw more on the outside of the theatre than they did on the inside.

The writer, a member of the Association, said: The layman doesn't appreciate the poster from the showman's standpoint. Show advertising must have the display and appeal value to it. Every producer will go to the limit as far as situations are concerned. The trouble is the danger line is drawn so closely that you cannot overstep it and cannot go far enough to convey the strength of a picture by its posters. There is a compromise, however, in the portrait posters of the stars, and they appear to be in general use, but not always attractive.

Arthur James thought much of the cheap and flagrant style of posters could be avoided by using mezzo or subdued tones of colors instead of the positive colors, which are offensive to the eye and artistic sense. This would give us a more refined poster and do away with the gaudy, cheap display so often used.

Refined Posters Sometimes Unpopular

E. Lanning Masters agreed with Mr. James, but said the more refined style of poster had been found in some instances to be unpopular. His company had used them from sketches by Popini, but had been obliged to return to posters of positive and strong contrasts of color. He believed the general public had not yet the artistic sense to appreciate the character of poster Mr. James suggested.

Dr. Lewis asked what percentage of the theatre managers were in favor of the more conservative poster and those not in favor of it. The answer was roughly given: about fifty-fifty, with a shade in favor of the conservatives.

This ended the discussion until it is further taken up by the National Board of the M. P. Industry, which, we believe, is the intention of the Board of Review. The following expression has been forwarded to the National Board by the Associated Motion Pictures Advertisers:

November 9, 1916.

I have been instructed to transmit to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry the following:

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., believing that objectionable advertising, either by producers, distributors or exhibitors, is inimical to the best interests of the industry and the public, request the good offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in discouraging such advertising.

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers believe that any form of advertising, whether trade magazine, newspaper, poster, herald, or lobby display, which improperly exploits sex or violence, or caters to morbid curiosity, is instrumental in arousing criticism of motion pictures as a whole, and induces agitation for censorship.

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers also believe that the exploitation of minor unimportant incidents in a picture as representative of the whole, the facts being distorted in behalf of sex or violence where neither element was intended or existed in the production, is reprehensible not only from the standpoint of truth in advertising, but also from that of the best interests of the industry and the public.

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers believe that if such isolated practices are protested by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry it will have a salutary effect upon the offenders and aid in the elimination of one potent source of censorship agitation, and further will properly express the majority opinion of the entire industry.

Cordially yours,
ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE ADVERTISERS, INC.
E. Lanning Masters,
Secretary and Treasurer.

GAUMONT'S "VAMPIRES" IS SET FOR RELEASE ON NOVEMBER 24

Having given "The Fantomas" series time enough to act as an effective introduction to the Gaumont style of quick-fire detective stories, that company now announces the first release of "The Vampires" for November 24. The series will appear in nine weekly instalments of three reels each. "The Vampires" has never before been shown in America, but exhibitors are not being asked to book a new, unknown series, since "The Vampires" has been successful both in France and in England.

The Vampires are a band of powerful law breakers who have all France terrorized. At the head are men of superior intelligence. They plot so craftily that their reward is great wealth stolen from the rich and murder which remains undiscovered. Against them is pitted an energetic young reporter of a Paris newspaper. "The Vampires" are really the Crime Trust of France. Criminals who seek to work independently are either crushed or taken into the organization. Hence, the reporter is fighting practically single-handed against the cunning ingenuity of a highly organized gang of desperate, resourceful men.

DOMINION FILM OF CANADA IN MARKET FOR SCENARIOS OF ALL KINDS

The Dominion Film Corporation, Limited, 317-319 Pender street, West, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, will soon install four producing companies and are now in the market for one and two-reel comedies and five-reel dramatic stories. J. Arthur Nelson is general manager of the company.

Conditions in England Anything But Prosperous

Prominent and Well-Known Member of Industry in England Writes Concerning Present Condition of the Business in the British Isles—Exhibitor, Renter and Manufacturer Laboring Under Almost Impossible Conditions—Various War Taxes Enormous Burden—Business Undergoing Evolution

The following article has been written and contributed to Motion Picture News by an Englishman well known in the film business in the British Isles. For obvious reasons he desires to withhold his identity. The matters treated of in this article will come as a surprise to many in this country who have been under the impression that business was booming in England in so far as the pictures were concerned. It will be seen that the business in England has evidently arrived, through evolution, to a condition much similar to that existent in this country, and with the unusual obstacles imposed by the war is in anything but a flourishing condition.

"FRIENDS outside the industry are saying it is prospering. Is it? Officialdom believes we are making money, are we? The general public think that the war has been a blessing to Cinematography, has it?

"As long as these fallacious opinions are allowed to exist we shall remain open to fresh taxation, persecution and unfair criticism.

"This article, couched in crisp, mild language, is intended to be a cold survey of the trade during and since the commencement of the war. The changes which have taken place, the almost fatal alterations, the increased handicaps, are set forth without exaggeration, together with a strong appeal to all to help each other and a few suggestions. We must be frank and admit that we do not like the look of things, at the same time we can and surely will face the facts and find solutions of our difficulties.

"Each section of the business has its own troubles, but the exhibitor, although he is, maybe, the most prosperous, demands first place because in this country he represents the greatest capital, he employs the largest number of employees, and is the mainstay of the whole fabric. What then has he suffered?

The Exhibitor's Troubles

"To set forth in brief statement the most poignant troubles, they are: The amusement tax, the daylight saving, the lighting restrictions, and the increased cost of programs. These four burdens are peculiar to the exhibitor and deserve individual, if curt, analysis.

"The Amusement Tax has, without question, pressed very hardly upon exhibitors; it has increased bookkeeping details when labor is most difficult to obtain, it has reduced takings by increasing admission prices at a time when economy is the one thing urged, and has come upon us when onr public is reduced in numbers and in income.

"The Daylight Saving Bill has reduced the earning hours of the Cinema by fully 20 per cent., for it has taken away six hours of night-light per week, which means approximately two evenings.

"Lighting Restrictions have made it most difficult to do business during the remaining night-light hours, for lack of light has kept folk indoors, and even when they have come out, the Picture theatre has lost some of its old attraction, because of its dull and unattractive exterior.

"These three factors are unavoidable, and have come upon us from the outside; they are not even the subject of protest, on the contrary, they are accepted in a proper British spirit as being our part of the common burden.

"The fourth trouble, 'Increased Cost of Programs,' is purely evolutionary. 'The Exclusive Program' has been forecasted by many in writing. The exhibitor is now showing programs of an exclusive nature except for the Current Events. This means increased cost. Keystones, Chaplins, Metro-Drews, Paramount Travels, Bray Cartoons, and all other short exclusives add to Programs Costs, and if the increased cost of these new exclusives amounts to 10 per cent., how is it possible, in addition to other difficulties, for the exhibitor to pay the piper? His takings are down, and his costs are up. Is he prospering? Is he making money? Has the war been a blessing?

"There are other obstacles, such as increased cost of labor, allowances to the dependants of men at the war, railway facilities, etc., but as they are common to all branches they will be spoken of as such; in the meantime the other extreme of the business can be considered—i. e., the Manufacturer.

The Manufacturer's Troubles

"The British manufacturer has been very badly hit, and in three places: The film tax, the distant release date, and the juvenile lead. It is well known that film stock manufacturers look for immediate payment for their goods, so that owing to the Film Tax the already none-too-rich British manufacturer suddenly found himself paying aproximately 33 1-3 per cent. more for his film stock, which is his bread, and at a time when the release date began to drift away into the dim and very uncertain distance. These two factors mean that money spent upon a production now becomes a lengthy investment instead of a rapid turnover, and, in consequence, he is being crippled. The manufacturer is hard hit in three ways: he is prevented from making a profitable and popular line of goods, he has to pay a higher cash price for his film stock, and has to wait much longer for his returns no matter what kind of film he ventures to make.

"The third difficulty may sound odd, but it is none the less existent. It is not possible to make handsome young lovers out of men of over military age, nor yet of medical rejects, and what is a film without the young man.

"These are not his only worries, but they are those for which the war is responsible, and they are enough.

The Renter's Troubles

"Now, to come to the Renter. This branch of the business is also suffering from special war conditions. They can be summed up under very few heads, but they mean more than we can bear. They are: railway facilities, transit boxes, depreciation of the quality of film base, decrease in hire prices, the death of the open market.

"Time was when a renter sent the complete program to the theatre in one box and the same amount of film each time, when the subjects he purchased worked solid for weeks on end and then found another market. Now films are sent in a spasmodic fashion in many sizes of special and expensive boxes, by very irregular and bad train service. No renter passes exchange day without untold anxiety and worry—all caused by contingencies beyond his control. The boxes are causing enormous trouble.

"The depreciation in the quality of film stock is just now causing much worry among renters. For some reason or other it appears that film stock will not last nearly as long as it did in pre war days, yet the renter cannot charge more for his hire nor can the exhibitor pay it. What can the renter man do? His margin of profit will not allow him to purchase twice the number of copies and still keep out of bankruptcy.

"The decrease in hire prices is just as certain as the depreciation in the length of life of the stock. This is due, in the main, to the quantity of film on the market, but for whatever reason, it is certain that the renter will rightly deny that he is doing well or that he is able to bear any more burdens.

"The Open Market question calls for no comment for, as already stated, this article is for home consumption. The war may not be responsible for the condition of that branch of the business, but it has not helped the Open Market Renter, and he is not likely to claim that business is good or that the war has benefited him. He will have no hesitation in making it quite clear that even if he once had a long pocket he is now diving down to the bottom of it, and has nothing to spare.

Universal Troubles

"To come to those things which oppress us all. We are all doing what we can, and ought to support those who have gone to fight. We claim no special sympathy for this, but it is a strain because every man has had to be replaced and frequently at a higher rate of wage. We are all suffering from lack of efficient help. We are all worried over the unsatisfactory conditions existing in transit matters over which we, at present, have no control and can obtain almost less satisfaction when we lodge complaints.

"This mass of worries, both general and specific, is becoming more than we can bear, yet we go on in the same old way, competing and fighting, stealing marches and taking advantage wherever we think we can reap momentary gain. Is it not time we tried to forget that it is not to our eventual good that we should cut-out and bar the other man? Is it not wise that we should go farther than that and try our utmost to help each other?

"Everything points in no uncertain way to the need for economy and co-operation. We have passed the time when the six pences come in quicker than we can spend them, and we have arrived at the Economical Period of the Trade's history. We are going through a time of travail out of which, it is to be hoped, something higher and more virile will be born.

"Some people rush to peculiar expenditures in their dying flurries, but no extravagance will help us now. Cut out the ridiculous salaries, the reckless advertising, absurd prices for films, unnecessary traveling, cut-throat competition and everything unessential.

"Let us compete by backing our judgment, whether we be manufacturers selecting subjects for productions, renters selecting subjects to rent, or exhibitors making selection to appeal to the public; but in these times anyway we must not allow our enthusiasm run away with our judgment.

Get to Know Each Other Better

"Let first-run exhibitor get into touch with first-run exhibitor and arrange for crossovers for a few hours when let-down. Let renter allow this to be done. The same with other run exhibitors. Let all sections of trade loan operators to help each other in these days of shortage. Let those who run trade shows join up so as to avoid the running of three, four and five per day, thereby saving time and expense. Why wait until 11 A. M. to commence a trade show? Members of the business can appear at trade shows by 10 A. M.; it is only the unwelcome general public who would be missing. If shows started at 10:15 or 10:20 two would take place at one theatre —the advantages need no description. In these and other ways it is possible for us to lighten the load and to make it easy for us all to await the end of the war, and to look forward to brighter times."

O'BRIEN JOINS THANHOUSER FOR DIRECTION OF "MARY LAWSON'S SECRET"

John B. O'Brien, for many years with D. W. Griffith, and later noted as Mary Pickford's director, has been signed by Edwin Thanhouser and will begin work immediately at the Thanhouser studios. Mr. O'Brien's first Thanhouser picture will be "Mary Lawson's Secret," a five-reel feature starring Charlotte Walker, to be released through Pathe.

The story is by Lloyd Lonergan, and is a drama of circumstantial evidence, blackmail and love.

Mr. O'Brien is perhaps best known for his Mary Pickford productions, "The Foundling," "Hulda from Holland" and "The Eternal Grind."

In engaging Mr. O'Brien to direct Miss Walker, Mr. Thanhouser is carrying out his policy to produce for Pathe, five-reel features second to none.

Mutual Film Corporation Increases Executive Staff

D. J. Sullivan, in Charge of the Serial Department for Two Years, Is Made Assistant General Manager—This Arrangement Will Enable Graham to Have More Time to Look After Production

RAPID developments and increasing volume of business has moved President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation to make important increases in his executive staff and a reassignment of the home office activities.

D. J. Sullivan, who for the last two years has been in charge of the serials department, has been made assistant general manager of the Mutual. This means in effect that Mr. Sullivan will extend his supervision of the merchandising of serials to cover the entire Mutual output.

J. C. Graham, assistant to the president, will be thus enabled to devote a larger portion of his time to the matters pertaining to production, the alignment and contracting of stars for special productions and related matters. This phase of the Mutual's activity has recently been making increasing demands upon the time and attention of the home office staff. Under the new arrangement Mr. Graham will divide his time between New York, Chicago and the Pacific Coast producing centers.

Incident to the readjustment to take care of the Mutual's greater business the publicity department, under Terry Ramsaye, is being assigned to larger quarters on the fifth floor of the Consumer's building in Chicago, where the Mutual now occupies practically three floors. The staff of "Reel Life," the Mutual's magazine house organ, and the publicity staff have been considerably augumented to handle the increasing publicity load.

The Mutual's output has grown remarkably within the last half year. The Mutual is now releasing two features of five reels or more a week, the usual quota of short-length films, and in addition has a total of four photo-novels and serials either now running or awaiting early release, as well as an important special feature "Charity?" announced and others to come.

Assistant General Manager Dennis J. Sullivan (Mutual)

"The increases in the home office staff, including the re-apportionment of duties incident to the promotion of Mr. Sullivan and reassignment of Mr. Graham," remarked Mr. Freuler, "come because the heavier demands upon us require more specialization, more sharply defined departmental lines.

"Both of my able lieutenants have their specialties and plenty to do. This is a part of our effort to do our utmost for our product and our customers.

"It is the distinct and special purpose of the Mutual Film Corporation to render to the exhibitor 'service beyond the films' all the time. As our industry progresses and competition increases the exhibitor more and more needs the fullest possible co-operation from the distributor.

"In the Mutual Film Corporation with all of its important connections and resources I am seeking to give the exhibitor all possible aid in realizing the utmost from the high earning power of the productions which we put into his house. Every move for Mutual efficiency is a move for theatre efficiency."

DIVERSIFIED SUBJECTS IN GAUMONT'S "REEL LIFE" NUMBER TWENTY-NINE

The Gaumont Company will offer an unusual and diversified group of subjects in issue No. 29 of "Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film, released November 19. The first section shows "Catching Fish for Market" on the Massachusetts Coast. The pictures of weighing, cleaning and packing the fish have added interest, because they show also the gray fish which the United States Government has recently bulletined as being cheap and edible.

With the prices of zinc soaring higher every day, spectators will have an opportunity to see how this now almost precious metal is produced. The pictures were taken of the great Franco-Belgian zinc works at Mortague-du-Nord. Needless to say, these views were taken before the war by the Gaumont Company, since this country is now in German possession. How zinc is obtained by distillation will come as a revelation to people who are unfamiliar with the process.

Tea has been called "the cup that cheers but does not inebriate," and few who have been cheered by it know that it is now being grown here in the United States. Tea was grown in South Carolina, even before the Civil War, and now the industry is showing an interesting commercial development which is pictured in this issue of "Reel Life." The tea bushes are shown, and pickaninnies picking the leaves at the time of maturity. The only machine operation possible, rolling the leaves, is pictured on the screen.

Paramount Announces Program for 4 Months

A Total of Thirty-four Productions for Release in November, December, January and February Is the Plan of the Company—The Consolidation of Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas Makes It Possible—Cheering Words from a Subscriber

A TOTAL of thirty-four productions are given in the Paramount schedule which will be distributed during the months of November, December, January and February. Announcements such as these on prior occasions were made by Paramount for only one month in advance, but by reason of the consolidations that have been effected by Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas, during the past two months, they are now enabled to offer their exhibitors the subjects of their forthcoming releases three and four months in advance.

During this period Marguerite Clark will make three screen appearances and Pauline Frederick two. These two stars recently renewed their contracts with the Famous Players. The other stars who will appear on the program during these four months are Mae Murray, Fannie Ward, Irene Fenwick, Louise Huff, Owen Moore, Jack Pickford, Blanche Sweet, Dustin Farnum, Cleo Ridgely, Wallace Reid, Lenore Ulrich, Marie Doro, Lou-Tellegen, Frank McIntyre, Vivian Martin, Kathlyn Williams, Thomas Holding, House Peters, Myrtle Stedman, George Beban, Sessue Hayakawa, and Theodore Roberts. Of these stars, those who will be added to the list of "the greatest stars on earth," and make their debut in Paramount Pictures during this period are Irene Fenwick and Frank McIntyre.

Next to the long list of stars Paramount points to the exceptional list of productions that are to be presented during this period. Beginning with "Seventeen," Booth Tarkington's novel, the first week in November, and ending with "The Consul" by Paul West, the last week in February, the intervening weeks are filled with the best producing material that was obtainable.

Probably the most noteworthy offering to be presented will be that of "Oliver Twist" a particularly elaborate adoptation of Charles Dickens's immortal work, a Lasky production in which Marie Doro will play the title role supported by an all star cast. This pictorial revival of the great Dickens work will be one of the most magnificent dramatic spectacles ever produced for the screen, and provides Miss Doro with an opportunity to repeat the rare success which she won on the stage revival of the play at the New Amsterdam theatre in 1912.

A second stage success that will permit another popular Paramount star to repeat her oral triumph on the screen will be "Snow White," in which Marguerite Clark appeared in the title role under the management of Winthrop Ames, before Miss Clark made her screen debut. "Miss George Washington," an original story and "Racketty Packetty House," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, another famed dramatic success, are the two additional productions that will be contributed to this list with Marguerite Clark in the stellar parts.

Pauline Frederick will be seen in "Nanette of the Wilds," an unusual character drama, and "The Painted Woman," from the pen of Frederic Arnold Kummer. The latter production is promised to be the most elaborate that Famous Players have ever made with Miss Frederick.

Other Productions

Among the other productions that are contained in the list are the "Martyrdom of Philip Strong," "Unprotected," "A Son of Erin," "The Plow Girl," "The Years of the Locust," "The Yellow Pawn," "Princess Zim-Zim," "The Road to Love," "The Victoria Cross," "The Traveling Salesman," "The Right Direction," "The Redeeming Love," "Betty to the Rescue," "The Evil Eye," "Great Expectations," "The Deliverance," "The Happiness of Three Women," "Lost and Won," "The Show Down," "His Sweetheart," "The Turning Point," "The Conflict," "Each to His Kind," "The Black Wolf," "The Wax Model," "Winning of Sally Temple," and "The Consul."

THE REX,
Bluefield, W. Va.
Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

I have never had a trade paper that I liked so well, for the simple reason that it takes up every branch of the industry and shows more consideration to the exhibitor than any other paper.

It is full of live news each week and I certainly enjoy it. Kindly advise me when my subscription is up so I may renew it.

Very truly yours,
RUSSELL S. WEHRLE,
Manager.

The writers, authors and playwrights who have contributed to this list of productions are among the foremost in the world and include such names as Booth Trakington, Charles Dickens, Edward Sheldon, Blanche Dougan Cole, Paul Potter, James Forbes, Julia Crawford Ivers, L. V. Jefferson, Beatrice DeMille, Leighton Osmun, Hector Turnbull, Paul West, Albert Payson Terhune, Rennold Wolf, Owen Coyne, Frederick Arnold Kummer, Roswell Dague, Jean Barrymore, G. Vere Tyler, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Ruppert Sargent Holland, Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, and Willard Mack.

The releases announced for the four months on the Paramount Program are as follows:

Nov. 30, Famous Players, "Martyrdom of Philip Strong," All Star Cast; Dec. 4, Famous Players, "Princess Zim-Zim," Irene Fenwick and Owen Moore; Dec. 7, Morosco, "The Road to Love," Lenore Ulrich; Dec. 11, Lasky, "Oliver Twist," Marie Doro; Dec. 14, Lasky, "Victoria Cross," Lou-Tellegen; Dec. 18, Famous Players, "Traveling Salesman," Frank McIntyre; Dec. 21, Pallas, "The Right Direction," Vivian Martin; Dec. 25, Famous Players, "Snow White," Marguerite Clark; Dec. 28, Morosco, "The Redeeming Love," Kathlyn Williams; Jan. 1, Lasky, "Betty to the Rescue," Fannie Ward; Jan. 4, Lasky, "The Evil Eye," Blanche Sweet; Jan. 8, Famous Players, "Great Expectations," Jack Pickford-Louise Huff; Jan. 11, Lasky, "The Deliverance," Mae Murray; Jan. 15, Famous Players, "The Painted Woman," Pauline Frederick; Jan. 18, Morosco, "The Happiness of Three Women," House Peters-Myrtle Stedman; Jan. 22, Lasky, "Lost and Won," Marie Doro; Jan. 25, Lasky, "The Show Down," Cleo Ridgely-Wallace Reid; Jan. 29, Pallas, "His Sweetheart," George Beban; Feb. 1, Famous Players, "The Turning Point," Irene Fenwick-Owen Moore; Feb. 5, Morosco, "The Conflict," Lenore Ulrich; Feb. 8, Lasky, "Each to His Kind," Sessue Hayakawa; Feb. 12, Lasky, "The Black Wolf," Lou-Tellegen; Feb. 15, Pallas, "The Wax Model," Vivian Martin; Feb. 19, Famous Players, "Racketty Packetty House," Marguerite Clark; Feb. 22, Lasky, "Winning of Sally Temple," Fannie Ward; Feb. 26, Lasky, "The Consul," Theodore Roberts.

In commenting upon the unusual array of stellar talent and the long list of specially selected subjects contained in the announcement of the next four months Paramount Program, Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation said:

"When the formation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was effected, we made the statement that the combination of the producing forces and mechanical resources of these companies would result in a far greater artistic scope than was possible under the individual management. When the Pallas and Morosco Companies were added to the combination we repeated the placing of all the producers contributing to the Paramount Program under a single executive government would still further obtain greater studio efficiency.

"The preparation of the next four months Paramount Program announced this week offered the first definite test of this theory. I am satisfied that the variety of the subjects included in this announcement, their individual and collective strength, the number of recognized dramatic successes which will be introduced upon the screen during this period, and the capable selection of stars for the proper interpretation of the leading roles of these plays, will make it apparent to trade and public that never before in the motion picture industry have united effort and purpose so largely proven their worth.

"What are the prospects for still greater superiority of merit in Paramount Pictures are indicated by the advanced standard of the productions for the next four months over all preceding Paramount release periods."

DIRECT-FROM-BROADWAY-FEATURES PLACES "DOPE" ON STATE RIGHTS PLAN

The Direct-from-Broadway-Features of New Rochelle, N. Y., of which W. Ray Johnston is secretary and treasurer, announces the placing of its six-reel six star photoplay, "Dope" (formerly booked through the Mutual exchanges) on a state rights plan.

"Dope," it will be remembered, is a protest against the indiscriminate use of habit-forming drugs, and was played by a cast, including Herman Lieb, Laura Nelson Hall, Ernest Truex, William H. Tooker, Gaston Mervale and Christine Blessing.

Mr. Johnston also announces that there is still a small amount of available territory on "Beating Back," based on the story of the life of Al Jennings, as written for the Saturday Evening Post by Will Irwin.

Al Jennings, former bandit, lawyer, and candidate for the governship of Oklahoma, has announced, according to the N. Y. American, that he will again be a candidate for the governorship of Oklahoma at the democratic primaries.

Under the supervision of Arthur Hull this picture is said to have recently played to $19,799 of business in Oklahoma, southern Kansas and northern Texas.

HARRIS GORDON BACK WITH THANHOUSER

Harris Gordon, featured in many Thanhouser productions, who joined Metro a few months ago, has returned to his old love, and is again a Thanhouser leading man. Mr. Gordon is to support Florence La Badie in "Enemies of Society," and will also have an important part with Charlotte Walker in "Mary Lawson's Secret."

Mr. Gordon was born in Glenside, Pa., and was educated at Cheltenham Military Academy at Jenkintown, Pa. The most notable Thanhouser features in which he appeared were "The Picture of Dorian Grey," "The Mill on the Floss" and "The Price of Her Silence."

He is to be seen soon in "The Image Maker," a Thanhouser-made Pathe Gold Rooster play, starring Valkyrien.

Stories for Kalem's New "Stingaree" Series Arrive

First Four Stories by E. W. Hornung Now Being Prepared for Screen—True Boardman to Have Stellar Role—Announcement of Complete Cast Later

KALEM'S Twenty-third street offices are humming with preparations for the new series of stories of "Stingaree," by E. W. Hornung, the famous creator of "Raffles." The first four stories for the new series arrived in the mails from England last week, and already the work of preparing them for production is well under way.

The enthusiasm of Kalem's executives over the successor to one of their most popular series productions has taken new bounds since the receipt of the initial stories. The plots of Mr. Hornung give every evidence that the second edition of the adventures of the Australian bush-ranger will have all the points of popular appeal that caused the original series to score so pronounced a hit. "Stingaree" is once more the debonaire, devil-may-care gentleman-outlaw, a Robin Hood in a modern and picturesque setting. A reading of the first stories to be received would indicate that the new series will contain even more action and tense drama than the first edition.

The second edition of "Stingaree" is probably the first motion picture to pass a censor in story form, but in this case it is Great Britain's War Censor who has O. K.'d the plots. That a sense of humor—or an appreciation of a good story—is not lacking even in a despotic mail censor is shown by a penciled notation across the corner of the first story. It read "Hope I see this story on the cinema screen—Censor." This approval by the august censor is taken as a good omen by Kalem.

As the first step in the production plans the company announced last week that James W. Horne will be in charge of the staging of the new "Stingaree." This is another assurance that the new series will be up to the mark of the original productions since Director Horne held the reins in staging those two reelers. The "Girl from 'Frisco" series from the pen of Robert Welles Ritchie is also evidence of the ability of Director Horne to stage series productions that maintain the interest steadily week after week.

A strong supporting cast is being formed to appear with True Boardman, who will once more be seen in the title role of "Stingaree." The next few weeks will bring full announcement of the other players to be seen in the series and other plans for the productions. It has been definitely decided that the series will consist of fifteen episodes, each of two-reel length. Following the plan that Kalem has developed in this special field, each of the two-reel releases will tell a separate story, with the central character carried throughout.

Within the past week two well-known publishing houses have been in communication with Kalem to learn what arrangements had been made for the publication of Mr. Hornung's stories. The announcement that an author of Mr. Hornung's international reputation had consented to write a series of fifteen stories around one of his most famous characters, especially for the screen, seems to have created a flurry in literary circles. Mr. Wright says:

"There are no authors, stars nor directors too good for the short picture. In arranging with so prominent an author as the creator of 'Raffles' to write original stories for us we have gone a step further even than the makers of long pictures who have been in the habit of claiming a monopoly of those features. It is such steps as this that will wipe from the minds of exhibitors all thoughts of length and leave only a desire for quality when he is making up his programs."

IVAN ENCIRCLES THE GLOBE

Ivan Film Productions, Inc., has contracted with the Hawk Film Company, of 145 West Forty-fifth street, for New York City to distribute all Ivan productions throughout the world except in the United States and Canada.

Mabel Taliaferro in Three Rays from the Metro-Rolfe Feature "The Sunbeam"

CHANGES IN GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

General Film Company announces several changes at its branch offices, and in making the announcement refers to the increased demand for short length pictures featuring noted stars. This policy has been emphasized particularly since George Kleine became president of General Film Company and appears to have justified all expectations.

R. M. Simril has been placed in charge of General Film Company's Jacksonville branch, succeeding H. T. Tucker, who has been assigned to the managership of the Atlanta office, succeeding C. C. Ezell there, who has been transferred to Dallas as successor to D. Prince, who has been named as manager of the Detroit branch, succeeding E. M. Ames, resigned. Effective November 13, P. J. Swift will assume the management of General Film Company's branch at Charlotte, N. C., taking the place of William Conn, who has resigned.

FASHIONS IN GAUMONT'S "REEL LIFE"

Recognizing the women spectators at motion picture theatres are adept enough to copy fashions from the screen when the model is built up step by step, the Gaumont Company begins in "Reel Life," No. 29, released November 19, a series of pictures of how a fashionable gown is made. The method is to place a model on a stand and have the designer build the gown upon her.

In this manner the spectators will be able to see every part of the gown from the formation to the final touch of ornamentation.

VOSBURGH ENGAGED BY INCE

Alfred Vosburgh has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to play opposite Enid Bennett in Triangle-Kay Bee productions. This is Mr. Vosburgh's second connection with the moving spirit of Inceville, having been a member of the old Kay Bee and Broncho companies.

Before the formation of the Triangle, he became associated with another studio, but has now returned to his first allegiance, to be featured in conjunction with little Miss Bennett.

Mr. Vosburgh gained his first knowledge of acting as a "super" in the company of Robert B. Mantell. Later on, while appearing as a butler in a stage production, the leading man failed to put in an appearance, and he was asked to do the part, which he continued in for the following four seasons. Mr. Vosburg says that his best work has been done under Mr. Ince's direction.

LARGER REFERENCE LIBRARY FOR TRIANGLE-INCE STUDIO

An appropriation of $5,000 has been set aside for the installation of a bigger and more complete library at the Triangle-Kay-Bee studios in Culver City. There always has been a research department at the disposal of the Ince authors and directors, but the general expansion of the literary staff has necessitated a commensurate expansion of the book-shelves. Miss Florence Vincent has been appointed librarian.

Race for Universal Trophy Thanksgiving Day

Fastest Automobiles in World Will Compete for Handsome Prize at Uniontown Speedway—Carl Laemmle to Present Trophy to Winner

OFFICIALS of the Universal, including Carl Laemmle, Pat Powers and R. H. Cochrane, have engaged a private car in the special train which will leave the Pennsylvania Station at 6 A. M. Thanksgiving Day for Pittsburgh, where, at the new $1,000,000 Uniontown Speedway, the most famous automobile drivers in America will compete for the solid silver $3,000 trophy presented by the Universal.

The Universal trophy which will be presented to the winner of the 112-mile feature event has been pronounced one of the most beautiful trophies ever offered in an automobile race. It was made by Black, Starr & Frost and is now on exhibition in their show rooms. Made of solid silver, it stands thirty-six inches high and is fifty-two inches around the base.

The Fifth avenue jewelers have been nearly three months making the trophy. Every portion of it was made by hand, and it represents the Universal trademark. The upper portion is a reproduction of the globe used by the Universal, and the Saturn ring which is used in the trademark has been slightly elevated so as to represent the Uniontown track outside of Pittsburgh, which was completed only this month.

The two figures, one on each side of the cup, holding up the track, are reproductions of the Goddess of Speed, while the Goddess of Victory is poised on the toes of her left foot on the top. On the base are reproduced the various stages of locomotion. One side is the first locomotive; on a second the first steamship; the third bears an aeroplane, and the fourth an automobile.

Arrangements are now being made by the Universal to have a scenario written around the race. This will be produced under the direction of one of its best directors, with a couple of its famous Universal City stars in the leading roles. It will be made into a feature picture and every detail of the race will be used in order that those who do not attend may see the actual race on the screen.

The Animated Weekly also will have exclusive privilege at the Uniontown track. The Animated Weekly pictures of the race and presentation of the cup by Mr. Laemmle will be shown in the 2,500 theatres throughout the United States using the regular Universal Program service.

Mr. Laemmle has further agreed to place at the disposal of the Uniontown Speedway officials his scenario and publicity departments to assist in an attractive presentation of the winning car.

The big Universal race will be the feature event on Thanksgiving Day at the Uniontown track. It will run 100 laps of 1⅛ miles or 112½ miles under the rules of the American Automobile Association Contest Board. No car which has not a record of 110 miles an hour to its credit will be entered for the Universal Trophy. Every effort to smash the Sheepshead Bay Speedway records will be made by the drivers, who declare that the Pittsburgh track is the fastest in the world.

President Laemmle, R. H. Cochrane and Pat Powers have been appointed judges by the Uniontown Speedway Association. President Laemmle is considering adding a cash prize of $5,000 to the first winner of the cup in the event that the driver breaks the world's record in competition for the Universal Trophy.

The second race for the cup will be held at the new Speedway track, now under construction at Philadelphia, which will be completed early next year, while the third event will be run off at the Indianapolis track.

BLUEBIRD WILL ISSUE "EAGLE'S WING" AS SPECIAL RELEASE IN DECEMBER

Bluebird will issue "The Eagle's Wing" as a special release early in December, featuring Herbert Rawlinson.

The process of manufacturing various forms of munitions for war purposes are shown in authentic detail, some of the views having been taken with the consent and co-operation of the Government. "The Eagle's Wing" will be a special, and there will be a Bluebird regular released on the week this preparedness feature is issued.

Hobart Henley gets into the Bluebird program December 4, in "A Living Lie," in which he will have Gertrude Selby as his leading lady. In this feature Henley plays a dual role and between the two characters is in evidence practically all the time through the five acts. Charles Swickard produced the feature from J. Grubb Alexander's scenario.

November 27 will be important to Bluebird exhibitors in that Ella Hall will return to the series after three months' lay-off. Rupert Julian directed "The Bugler of Algiers," in which with Miss Hall and Kingsley Benedict he will be featured. Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, wrote the story in collaboration with Perley Poore Sheehan and E. J. Clawson made the scenario. As originally published in All-Story Magazine the title of "We Are French" was given to the story, a caption that does not seem general enough for moving picture purposes.

EDWIN CAREWE, METRO-ROLFE, TO UNDERGO SLIGHT OPERATION

The well-known Metro-Rolfe director, Edwin Carewe, though to all intents and purposes a well man, will walk into Miss Alston's private sanitarium, 26 West Sixty-first street, New York, in a few days to have an operation performed. It is only a slight operation, but Mr. Carewe believed in having repairs attended to at once, and makes no exception in regard to his own frame.

He expects to be in the hospital for a week or ten days, and will then take a trip to Cuba, giving the sea voyage an opportunity to put him in trim for the direction of his next Metro photoplay. This will be a five-reel production with Mabel Taliaferro as star, from the pen of Harry Chandlee, called "Renie of the Hills."

Mr. Carewe has directed Miss Taliaferro in all her Metro plays. During his absence John H. Collins will direct this star in "Jerry of the Emerald Isle," adapted by Edwin Carewe and June Mathis from the original story by John Clymer. Eugene Nowland will direct the next Metro play with her as the stellar attraction. This will be "Threads of Fate."

ROACH AND BRIDE RETURN FROM HONEYMOON

Director-General Hal Roach of the Rolin Company has returned from his honeymoon trip with his bride, who was Margaret Nichols, one of his players. Mrs. Roach was formerly featured in Balboa productions on the Pathe program and in going over to the Rolin forces is a Pathe player still. In addition to real talent she has youth and notably good looks.

Selig Tosses, Figuratively Speaking, $50,000 in the Air

"I Had Received Excellent Reports Concerning a Seven-Reel Production in the Course of Making, But on Seeing It I Ordered It Changed, at That Cost"

"FIGURATIVELY speaking, I tossed fifty thousand dollars out of the window recently," stated William N. Selig in the course of a recent interview. "A seven reel production had been in the course of making, I had received flattering reports as to the merits of the production, reports that sent my expectations soaring. The film was completed and I viewed it. I was disappointed. The story was a good one, the photography was good, there was a very capable cast of players, several stars in fact—but there was something missing, a something which, to my mind, put this production below the par of what Selig Red Seal Plays should be. I ordered the picture remade. That order cost me fifty thousand dollars for that sum was expended on the first production.

"As I stated at the formation of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, I propose to release only dramas of the highest class in that organization. I propose to observe no especial release date. The author of the proposed play, the director, the players, all are to have all time necessary for the completion of finished picture. There is to be no hurry, no risk to complete a production in time for some certain release date. And, above all, the production must be unusual, must have unusual merit like "The Rosary," "The Country That God Forgot," "Into The Primitive," or "Thou Shalt Not Covet," and others of like calibre.

No matter the time or the expense incurred on a production, if it does not measure up to my standard, that production goes into the discard.

"And there can be no excuses on the part of authors or directors that they were hurried. I am giving all time wished for and if this policy together with a liberal appropriation of money cannot result in high class comedies and dramas, well, others will be summoned.

"The Selig Company is now releasing a number of Red Seal Plays through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service and all of them are proving popular. These productions include "The Carpet From Bagdad" with Kathlyn Williams; "The Millionaire Baby," with Grace Darmond; "The Circular Staircase," with Eugenie Besserer; "A Black Sheep," with Otis Harlan; "The Prince Chap," with Marshal Neilan; "The Country That God Forgot," with Tom Santschi and George Fawcett. These and other Selig Red Seal Plays are, according to reports, increasing in popularity.

"There has been a cry to raise the standard in motion picture production. I believe that all the film manufacturers, those of responsibility, are doing their utmost to raise and maintain the art. Productions totaling hundreds of thousands of dollars are being discarded yearly by a number of manufacturers who have believed these productions are not up to the standard of their regular releases. The Selig Company is not releasing features by routine. There may be one release a year or two dozen; it depends on their quality."

Thanhouser's Tenth Gold Rooster Nearly Ready for Release

New Releasing Plan at New Rochelle Studios Has Proved to Be Success—Frederick Warde Will Be Seen in "King Lear" on December 17 on Pathe Program

WHEN Frederick Warde in "King Lear" is released through the Pathe exchange on December 17, Edwin Thanhouser will have issued his tenth Thanhouser-made Pathe Gold Rooster play under the Thanhouser Film Corporation's new arrangement with Pathe whereby Thanhouser releases two features a month.

Mr. Thanhouser is highly gratified with the success of the new plan whereby he concentrates his powerful organization upon the manufacture of only ten reels a month. He has found that the markeet never is bad for a good picture and the big demand for Thanhouser features, which increases with every release, has proved that he is delivering what the public seeks.

Florence La Badie's popularity is such that in order to meet the demands made by exhibitors, Mr. Thanhouser has seen to it that five of his first ten releases were Florence La Badie features. The first Thanhouser-Pathe release was "The Fugitive," by Philip Lonergan, one of the most successful of the ten. The others of the Florence La Badie series were "The Fear of Poverty," by Agnes C. Johnston; "Saint, Devil and Woman" and "The Pillory," both by Philip Lonergan, and "Divorce and the Daughter," a December release, by Miss Johnston. All of Miss La Badie's feature are directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Gladys Hulette's two plays, "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate," by Agnes C. Johnston, met with immediate success, placing Miss Hulette promptly among the few fully entitled to the biggest letters the electric signs can carry. Both plays have been highly praised for their ingenuousness and their wholesomeness. Miss Hulette's personality has distant charm and no other actress has been so successful as she in portraying lovable little girls.

The Thanhouser-Pathe program has been as varied in subject as it has been even in quality. Besides the Florence La Badie and Gladys Hulette features, Mr. Thanhouser has presented Valkyrien (Baroness Dewitz) in "Hidden Valley," directed by Ernest Warde, a story of a white goddess and a tribe of South African idol worshippers, and Jeanne Eagels in "The World and the Woman," directed by Eugene Moore, a powerful drama with faith healing as its theme. These two stories have been hailed with delight by grateful exhibitors, who always are looking for something new.

Frederick Warde's "King Lear" is the most pretentious offering of the first ten Thanhouser-made Pathe Gold Rooster plays. The production is a massive one and the adaption clings consistently to Shakespeare's play.

Fox Branch Managers Hold Second Annual Convention

President of the Company Present at All Sessions, Held at Hotel Biltmore, New York, on Octobre 28, 29, 30—General Manager Sheehan Presides at the Meetings—The Convention Members Attended Comedy Showing at the Academy of Music

ANNOUNCEMENT of new policies in the production and release of photoplays by the Fox Film Corporation was the outstanding feature of the second annual convention of the William Fox district and branch managers and department representatives which was held at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, October 28, 29 and 30.

William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, was present at every session, and in person announced the policies which will be inaugurated immediately after the first of the year. W. R. Sheehan, general manager of the corporation, presided.

An innovation which had been previously announced but which was definitely outlined by Mr. Fox was the release of comedies of which one two-reeler a week will be given to the public, beginning in January. To prove his contention that only the best in comedy will be released by the company, Mr. Fox took the entire convention to the Academy of Music Sunday afternoon where the first of the new pictures was shown to the audience without previous announcement. The manner in which it was received by the large house convinced the delegates that Mr. Fox was right.

A second Fox production that the delegates received enthusiastically was "A Daughter of the Gods," which they saw at the Lyric theatre Sunday night. Wednesday morning the delegates were shown the newest big Fox production, "The Honor System," at the Academy of Music. This picture has not yet been released.

Ernest Reed, of London, England, general representative for Mr. Fox in Europe, addressed the convention Tuesday. He told of the great success of Fox productions in the British Isles, and declared that Britain offers a practically unlimited field for Fox features. Glowing reports were read from representatives in Continental Europe, Austral-Asia and South America.

Following are those who were present at the convention:

District Managers: Harry Leonhardt, Western; Paul C. Mooney, Central; C. L. Worthington, Eastern.

Branch Managers: O. P. Hall, Atlanta; Harry P. Campbell, Boston; J. E. O'Toole, Chicago; Joseph Kaliski, Cleveland; Harvey B. Day, Cincinnati; George C. Reid, Dallas; N. D. Thompson, Detroit; Albert W. Eden, Denver; E. H. Wachter, Kansas City; Field Carmichael, Los Angeles; S. N. Robinson, Minneapolis; J. L. Evans, New Orleans; Jack Levy, New York; Lester Sturm, Omaha; George Dembow, Philadelphia; C. W. Eckhardt, Pittsburgh; W. J. Citron, San Francisco; E. R. Redlich, Seattle; Joe Levy, St. Louis; G. R. Jermain, Syracuse; C. F. Senning, Washington; Mitchell Granby, Toronto; Maurice West, Montreal; Richard Wernick, New Haven; Nat Beier, Newark.

Home Office: Herman Robbins, assistant to Mr. Sheehan; Lewis S. Levin, assistant to Mr. Sheehan; Edward Waldo, auditor; Ewan Justice, publicity department; H. J. Roberts, development department; M. J. Horn, assistant to Mr. Robbins; George Buck, requisition department; Fred W. Lange, foreign department; Morris Greenberger, contract department; Sam Shapin, booking department.

Thomas W. Brady, New York Exchange; G. A. Gray, publicity department; J. F. Durham, publicity department; A. B. Bernd, publicity department; G. B. Spiero, publicity department; Sol Wurtzel, secretary to Mr. Fox; Ernest Reed, London, England. Much important business was transacted.

A. W. Goff to Complete Swing Around Country

Assistant General Manager Has Started on Last Leg of Tour of Vitagraph Exchanges Covering South and Part of Middle West

A. W. GOFF, assistant general manager of the Vitagraph-V.L.S.E., has just embarked upon a trip that will take him as far as Dallas before he returns to New York.

This trip marks the completion of a general swing around the country which Mr. Goff undertook in the interests of Greater Vitagraph and its exchanges early in the Fall. Mr. Goff's first stop will be Philadelphia; from there he goes to Washington. He will visit in turn Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, St. Louis, Omaha, Kansas City, Chicago, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh before returning to New York in time to do his Christmas shopping.

Thomas Meighan (Famous Players-Lasky)

Inspired by the rapid strides that Greater Vitagraph has made since it became the sole owner of the V.L.S.E. exchanges, Mr. Goff will preach the twin gospel of "better and better pictures" and "pictures sold to exhibitors the way they want to buy them."

It is hardly necessary to add that the branch managers look forward to Mr. Goff's visits as a source of inspiration to them in their work, because they realize that through his sound advice their exchanges have rapidly forged to the front.

HEAVY BOOKINGS FOR "THE LIGHT THAT FAILED"

The managers of the various Pathe Exchanges report heavy bookings on "The Light That Failed," the first Kipling book to be filmed. Exhibitors have readily recognized the advertising value of the picture not only because of the Kipling name but also because of the splendid cast, which includes Robert Edeson, Jose Collins, Claude Fleming and Lillian Tucker.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

STUART HOLMES, the man who made villainy a fine art, whose parts in moving pictures have always been about as cheerful as a banshee, sleeps in a circular bed.

The wonder of it all is how one who has left such a black trail behind him on the screen can sleep in anything. If there is anything in the line of finished double-dealing which Holmes has not done, a million movie fans have failed to discover it.

Flick, goes the ash from his cigarette as he palms fifteen or sixteen cards in the deck, including most of the aces, and all the kings, and ruins the hero of the film. A chuckle, and he pushes the beautiful heroine out into the winter snow, or off the mountain precipice. Through one hundred thousand feet of William Fox's celluloid, this master villain has broken hearts and torn apart families, or vice versa, and yet he can sleep.

"There were the crocodiles with their mouths wide open for me. There was I in the midst of them, tied hand and foot. And the men who threw me to them made three swings of the job. How was I to know just when the crocodiles would get busy?"

This from Annette Kellermann, the William Fox star in the million-dollar photoplay, "A Daughter of the Gods," in an interview by Nixola Greeley-Smith in the New York Evening World of November 2.

"One great horrible monster seemed to have his little wicked eye upon me even before I went over. 'Throw my feet toward him,' I said to the men as they swung me out. You see, my feet are skinny, and I thought he wouldn't like them quite so much as if my shoulders and arms were toward him. He might have thought that part of me quite a juicy morsel, you know."

To James W. Adams, a young University of Pennsylvania student, belongs the honor of having the first play he has ever written, accepted by William Fox for that famous screen star, Theda Bara. Mr. Adams is only 23 years old. Comparatively few writers have had such good fortune as Mr. Adams in having a first story accepted.

Mr. Adams is a native of Johnstown, Pa., and belongs to one of the leading families of that section. He was educated in the public schools of that city, and afterward took a course in the State College at Bellefonte.

After spending three years at Bellefonte, the young Mr. Adams was sent to the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia. He has now been there three years, and will graduate in 1918.

If you have never seen a sweatshop in operation, you will in a new William Fox screen play. Several scenes were snapped last week for a forthcoming production, in a big East Side loft, with the actresses substituting for the regular operators.

June Caprice, William Fox's daintiest bit of screenshine, was born in Arlington, Mass., not fifty yards from the very road which Paul Revere used in his famous ride in 1775.

Jane and Katherine Lee, among the most famous children on the screen, were in Pittsburgh last week appearing personally at the showing of "A Daughter of the Gods," at the Pitt theatre, Katherine, age six, avowed that she was glad to make the trip, because "the change from the bright lights on Broadway would be quite a relief."

Gladys Hulette's Thanhouser-Pathe feature "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate," have met with such unqualified praise that exhibitors are clamoring for more of the same. Miss Hulette's next release will be "Her New York," a play by Agnes C. Johnston, author of Miss Hulette's other Gold Rooster plays.

"Her New York" probably will be the next Thanhouser-Pathe release after Frederick Warde in "'King Lear." Supporting Miss Hulette in "Her New York" Riley Chamberlin, Carey Hastings, William Parke, Jr., Robert Vaughn and Ethyle Cooke.

No persons read the weather forecasts more carefully than John B. O'Brien, the Thanhouser director, and Charlotte Walker, star of "Mary Lawson's Secret," which is now being made in the New Rochelle studios. They're looking for storm warnings, for one of the big scenes in Lloyd Lonergan's play occurs at sea in a hurricane and Mr. O'Brien insists upon having a real one.

Mineta Timayo as "Beauty" in "Beauty and the Beast" (International)

Vincent Serrano, Thanhouser star, is famous for his many appearances in the leading role in "Arizona." The other day he received at the Thanhouser studios a letter covered with postmarks and different addresses. Some person had addressed a letter to "Vincent Serrano, Star, Arizona," only that and nothing more, and the post office department had wasted many vain moments looking for a town in Arizona named "Star."

Forgetfulness saved Henry B. Walthall his big $4,000 motor car the other day. Two youthful thieves leaped into the machine as it stood in front of the Essanay studio and speeded away. A policeman halted the thieves on suspicion an hour later.

"Is that your car?" he asked.

"Sure," they replied, "did you think it was the Kaiser's?"

The policeman was about to let the thieves get away when he noticed a manuscript in the tonneau. It was that of "The Truant Soul," in which Mr. Walthall is at work in the Essanay studios, and had been forgotten and left by him in the car. On a "hunch" the policeman called up Mr. Walthall. The youths were arrested and the star's car returned to him.

Laden with one hundred ducks, Sydney Ainsworth has returned to Chicago from the marshes of North Dakota, and the Essanay players are feasting on choice mallard. Recently the Essanay heavy was arrested for hunting without a license in Wisconsin, his home state, while working on a location. So, when he had a chance to go after the birds on a real hunting trip he passed up the home neighborhood and went all the way up to North Dakota. He got one duck in Wisconsin, one hundred in Dakota.

Harry Dunkinson's "Trick watch" likes soup. This alleged timepiece was one which Essanay's bulky comedian purchased in Detroit recently. When he pulls it out to give an inquiring friend the time, the works spring forth. It was at dinner one evening that Dunkinson tried his trick. The works promptly dropped into his consomme.

American "dudes" will see a dyed-in-the-wool Parisian dandy when Max Linder strolls out on the boulevard. He has brought forty-six trunks crammed with the very latest French sartorial cuts here to uphold his reputation as the best-dressed artist in Europe.

In contrast to the baggy trousers, torn coat and aged derby utilized by many comedians, Monsieur Linder, the high priced Essanay star, provokes mirth in the attire of a Beau Brummel—shiny silk hat, frock coat, immaculate trousers, and all that sort of thing.

As a matter of fact the dapper young Frenchman is passionately fond of clothes. He seeks to attain in each article of his attire a distinct personality all his own. In Paris this individuality has given origin to a dress fad in his honor. For instance, there is the Linder tie, Linder shirt, Linder hat, collar, etc. American tailors might take the "tip."

Max changes his attire about every time he walks around the block.

Pauline Frederick killed Willard Mack the other morning and did it so artistically that he showed his appreciation by inviting the Famous Players star to luncheon. You see, Miss Frederick is starring in "Nanette of the Wilds," of which Mack is the author and in which he is also appearing. Mack had spent a good deal of time in planning the murder scene, and was enthusiastic over the manner in which his efforts bore fruit at the hands of Miss Frederick. There is nothing like enjoying one's own death, even if it is only for a Paramount Picture.

With the irrepressible spirit of youth, pretty Louise Huff is hopping nimbly from Booth Tarkington to Charles Dickens. That is to say, Miss Huff was last seen in the Famous Players adaptation of Tarkington's "Seventeen" and will now co-star with Jack Pickford in an adaptation of a Dickens novel.

It is not very often that a girl is proud to be wearing a dress that is four years old, but that is what Marguerite Clark will do when she begins work on the Famous Players adaptation of "Snow White." Miss Clark created a veritable sensation as Snow White on the stage, and now she is going to wear the same beautiful costume which she used in the theatrical production in 1912. Miss Clark was so fond of the dress that she has always kept it, though with never a thought that she would some day wear it in a Paramount Picture.

To Frank McIntyre belongs the distinction of being one of the very last successful stage stars to succumb to the motion picture. The announcement that he would star in a Famous Players adaptation of his great success "The Traveling Salesman" removes him from the almost negligible list of stage celebrities who have not looked the camera in the eye.

There are times to do water stuff and there are times not to do water stuff, if one is to listen to the plaintive cough of Owen Moore. He is playing the part of a young millionaire with Irene Fenwick in the Famous Players production "Princess Zim-Zim." The youth becomes violently intoxicated and decides that a swim is the only thing which will ease his aching head. Edward Sheldon, the author of the script, wrote it last June when everybody was sticking a toe into the water in anticipation of a good swim. Those scenes were not reached until November, and poor Moore plunged into the water with a gasp as it closed icily about him. He is still barking from deep down in his chest as a result of the cold which he contracted, and he declares that he is deeply interested in meeting Sheldon.

Thomas Meighan has arrived in New York simultaneously with an interesting tale concerning his departure from the Lasky studio in Hollywood. It seems that the people at the studio decided to give Thomas a rousing send-off in the form of a party which was scheduled for the second evening prior to his exit. The party was held. In the midst of it Marshall Neilan, who has been directing Meighan, remembered that he had a couple of additional scenes to take and so informed Meighan. By this time is was very early in "the morning of the second day" and after a consultation the director and star decided that it was too early in the morning to retire. Hence the dismay with which the Laskyites who were at the studio promptly at opening time that morning beheld Marshall Neilan and Thomas Meighan arriving at the studio on time for the first time since either had been connected with the company.

Ethel Grandin (Consolidated)

Azimoolah sounds like the name of a new prematurely soured, predigested and generally debilitated brand of milk. But it isn't. It is just the name of one of the characters in "The Victoria Cross" in the adaptation of which Lou-Tellegen is being starred on the Paramount Program by the Lasky Company.

Raymond Hatton wants to be loved! He has been a member of the Lasky forces for two years, but in all this time he has never had the fair, round, powdered arms of an ox-eyed ingenue smear his carefully brushed coat collar, and he longs for the sensation. Hatton has always been sentenced to commit murders, thefts and other depredations which are not conventionally supposed to be rewarded with strangle-hold fade-outs.

The Selig studios, Chicago, are now open. Al Green will direct the production, "The Princess of Patches." Gilson Willets wrote the scenario version of the play. Many of the exterior scenes will be filmed in Louisiana.

The Selig News Weekly has instituted a fashion department, and the latest creations from London, Paris and New York City.

For the first time in all his years of movie acting, Tom Santschi wears a beard in Selig's "The Garden of Allah." However, the beard adorns Tom's chin only in a few scenes.

Little Billy Jacobs, the popular juvenile actor, appears in "The Garden of Allah," enacting several strong scenes with Helen Ware.

Jack Sherrill is to be one of the big features at the Reel Fellows Dance, Chicago, Friday, November 10.

Marie Shotwell will spend a few weeks at her Virginia home, after which, it is thought she will take up film work steadily. She has received many offers since concluding her efforts in "The Witching Hour."

JACKSONVILLE SCREEN CLUB FORMED

Special to Motion Picture News.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 10.

The organization of the Jacksonville Screen Club was perfected when members of the motion picture fraternity and those interested in the indutsry gathered at the Hotel Mason for the purpose of discussing ways and means of making the stay of the visiting movie people to this city a pleasure and formulating plans whereby members of the "Fifth Estate" already located here would be made contented.

The meeting held in the Traffic Club rooms at the Hotel Mason was presided over by W. R. Carter, editor of the Florida Metropolis, who was elected temporary chairman, and was attended by one hundred and fifty motion picture players, cameramen, exhibitors, exchangemen and publicity men. Fred Schierbaum, assistant director of the Kalem Company, was unanimously elected secretary, and addresses were made by Mayor J. E. Bowden, George H. Mason, Louis Burstein, general manager of the Vim Company; W. R. Carter, Harry C. Myers of the Vim Company and Tracy Hollingsworth, motion picture editor of the Florida Metropolis.

Louis Burstein spoke on the value of a club where the motion picture players and people in allied industries could get together and fraternize, and W. R. Carter explained the purpose of the gathering, which he said was to bring those interested in the industry together and make their stay in Jacksonville pleasant. Mayor J. E. T. Bowden said he was particlarly interested in the motion picture people and that he wanted to see Jacksonville a greater motion picture producing center than any city in the United States. He pointed out the cooperation that had been given the producers as well as players by the municipal government, and offered to aid the movement to establish a screen club in every way possible.

The value of a screen club from the exhibitors' and exchangemen's standpoint was talked of by W. L. Whitehead, manager and owner of the Republic and Savoy theatres, and representatives of the General Film, Universal and Consolidated exchanges also delivered addresses. D. Joyce Milberry, of the Motion Picture Exchange, and G. Alfred Walker, business manager of the Juvenile Feature Films Company, who were responsible for the gathering spoke of the value of cooperation between all branches of the industry.

The cooperation of the Motion Picture News in taking care of the news originating from the motion picture people in Jacksonville, was commended, and a vote of appreciation ordered forwarded to that publication. The following committees were appointed: Organization, Storm Boyd, manager Kalem Company studio; Louis Burstein, general manager of Vim studio and Ferdinand Perez, general manager of Eagle studio.

Nomination: H. T. Tucker, manager of the Universal Exchange; Gus R. Barton, manager of the Consolidated Exchange; Harry C. Myers, of the Vim Company; D. Joyce Milberry of the Motion Picture Exchange, and L. D. Joel, manager of the Prince theatre.

"The Easiest Way" Is Bought by Selznick for Miss Young

The Original Drama, Written by Eugene Walter and Produced by David Belasco, Ran Continuously on Broadway for Eighteen Months

FOLLOWING his policy of backing the popularity of his stars with pictures adapted from successful novels and plays, Louis J. Selznick this week bought for Clara Kimball Young the motion picture rights to "The Easiest Way," the drama by Eugene Walter, originally produced by David Belasco with Frances Starr. This play as originally presented ran eighteen months continuously on Broadway.

Mr. Selznick has been negotiating for the rights to this play for several months but it was not until this week that the author, Eugene Walter, came to terms with the producer. The amount involved is large.

"The Easiest Way" will be presented as Miss Young's fourth Selznick-Picture.

Albert Capellani, director general of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation and producer of "The Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin," will take charge of the production of "The Easiest Way." Miss Young's third picture, "The Price She Paid" is being produced by Director Charles Giblyn in order to follow up the Selznick plan of keeping Miss Young continuously engaged and increasing the number of her productions.

The theme of "The Easiest Way" is that a woman who once falls will, when bitterly tempted, always take the easier path to luxury and bodily contentment. Miss Young will be seen as Laura Murdock, who, facing poverty and hunger, becomes the mistress of a man of the world. While spending a summer in the Western mountains she meets another man and learns the true meaning of love. Laura's new suitor knows her entire story but is willing to forgive and make her his wife. The girl's wealthy patron convinces his rival that he should first test Laura's ability to withstand temptation. It is agreed that she return to the city and earn her own living for a year, at the end of which time, if she has not again sought the easier way, the second man is to come from the West and claim her for his wife.

Back in the city Laura bravely returns to the shabby life of rectitude but at last, when face to face with eviction from her lodging house, she weakens and accepts her former patron's proposition to return to his keeping. For taking her back he induces her to write the young man in the West to let him know of her decision. Laura secretly destroys the letter and resumes her comfortable existence in the handsome apartment provided for her by her first lover.

At the end of the year the Westerner comes to New York and finds her living in luxury which she attempts to excuse as the legitimate result of her success on the stage. The great scene of the play ensues, when, just as the deceived Western suitor is about to take Laura to the minister, a latch key rattles in the door and the real proprietor of the establishment enters. Laura is shown in her true colors and her double deceit results in the loss of both men. In the play the curtain is run down on the cynical but tremendously effective situation where the girl, giving up the struggle, orders her maid to lay out her clothes for a plunge into the night life of Broadway.

It is planned to present "The Easiest Way" on the screen in seven or eight reels and the picture will, without question, prove a tremendous drawing card. From the exhibitor's point of view as well as that of the motion picture patron, the combination of such names as Clara Kimball Young, "The Easiest Way," Eugene Walter, David Belasco and Albert Capellani is unquestionably a tower of strength.

Sherman-Elliott Dispose of "Crisis" for Forty-one States

Company Makes Record in Selling State Rights for the Selig Photodrama—Arrangements Are Made for Simultaneous Showing of Picture in Big Cities

FORTY-ONE state rights to William N. Selig's pretentious photodrama, "The Crisis," have been disposed of by Sherman-Elliott, Inc., who controls the selling rights for the entire United States and Canada.

Practically all sections of the country have been sold and deals are pending for the disposal of New York and New England, which will complete the entire sale of "The Crisis."

Among the buyers are: Warner Film Attractions, San Francisco, California, who have acquired the rights for California, Arizona and Nevada and are ready for booking.

A syndicate of well known Middle Western film men have purchased Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia; the name of the leasing firm will be announced later.

The States Rights Company of Jackson, Mississippi, have purchased Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana.

The Master Photo Play Attractions of Newark for New Jersey.

William Sievers, Grand Central Theatre Co., of St. Louis, for Missouri.

A big combination of exhibitors who control theatres over the East are negotiating for the rights for New York and the same combination may include the New England territory.

A well known film corporation of Atlanta, Ga., have contracted for a group of southern states which include, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina.

Arrangements have been made for a simultaneous showing of "The Crisis" on or about November 19 in St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, as well as other principal cities of the East, possibly including New York City.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" A BIG PICTURE

The most remarkable of the World-Brady pictures thus far produced seems likely to be "Bought and Paid For," with Alice Brady as its star.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Nov. 8.

PROGRESS in rebuilding the Lasky studio is going forward unhampered because it so happens all but one director have finished their subjects and are now working with the scenario department in the preparation for scripts for coming photoplays.

The new stage built in record time of eight hours by the contractors, the Milwaukee Building Company, is to be enclosed, and the workmen are now erecting the steel frame and enclosing the 75 by 250 foot space with glass. The foundation and entire floor of the stage was laid in eight hours last Sunday, and is considered the fastest work ever completed at a California plant. The addition of a city block to the Lasky plant is serving a long felt need, for at the present time no less than five large exterior sets are being built there for production work, which will be commenced shortly.

Neva Gerber Entertains Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Furay of San Francisco, at "U" City

William C. deMille is to return to New York where he will again resume his former position as head of the scenario department. When Mr. deMille first went with the Lasky Company, he served in this capacity, later taking up the work of directing. It is probable he will be retained in the east all winter, and in this position will supervise the writing of all Famous Players-Lasky stories.

Director General Cecil deMille has practically completed his Geraldine Farrar multiple reel feature based upon the story of "Joan of Arc," and a private showing at the studio elicited many complimentary remarks from members of the producing staff who were invited to witness the showing.

Plans have been prepared for the new administration building for the Famous Players-Lasky studio, and contract for the construction will be let within a few days. This is to be located in the center of the block midway between Selma Avenue and Sunset Blvd. on Vine street. This is a more central location, and will add to the efficiency of the plant.

Helen Has a Whole Car

Helen Holmes has the distinction of being the only motion picture actress who is furnished with a private Pullman car, a drawing room of which is to serve as her studio dressing room. Director J. P. McGowan of the Signal Film Corporation, has purchased such a piece of rolling stock for the company's future needs, and it has now been altered to serve the company completely for interior coach scenes. A portion has the appearance of an ordinary day coach, another looks like a chair car, still another resembles the standard Pullman and there are compartments.

Instead of the regular incandescent lights, powerful ones suitable for photographic purposes have been installed. On a flat car just in front of the coach is an electric plant operated by power from the locomotive which will furnish the necessary juice. This car may be used in many scenes needed for the company's railroad productions, and will also serve as a private car and dressing rooms for members of the players when they go to distant locations.

The new property of the Signal Corporation will be used first in the sixth episode of "Lass of The Lumberlands," practically every scene of this taking place within the sleeping car at night. The electrical equipment made it possible for Director McGowan to secure both interiors and exteriors of the car while in motion at night, and this is believed to be the first shot of this kind ever made for the screen.

Director McGowan and several members of the company will go to Yosemite Valley during the coming week to secure some exteriors needed for the next episode. The other members of the organization will remain at the studio and will work under the direction of Paul C. Hurst.

Leo D. Maloney, Thomas G. Lingham and William Brunton, all prominent members of the Signal stock company, narrowly escaped death last week when the car in which they were riding was run down by a two-ton truck. All escaped injury with the exception of Maloney who was in the back seat of the tonneau at the time. He was thrown to the pavement and did not regain consciousness for several hours.

The Bessie Barriscale fantastic drama, long heralded as the second edition of "Peggy," has been finished at the studios and is shortly to be released. The title is "Bawbs O' The Blue Ridge." Miss Barriscale takes the part of an uncouth mountain waif whose grammar nearly causes her mis-mating. Scenes are laid in Virginia. The exterior scenes for this were made when Director Charles Miller and the company spent three weeks in the mountains far above Bear Lake Valley. The photographic qualities of the pictures secured by Clyde Devinna, are said to be a "series of Rembrandts." Arthur Shirley takes the masculine lead, appearing in the role of an author who brings happiness to the life of the waif. Monte M. Katterjohn is the author of the story and scenario.

Dorothy Dalton is next to be the star in a drama, laid in the Cape Cod country, from the pen of John Lynch. Director Walter Edwards will be in charge of making this, and with a company is shortly to leave for northern California, where the rugged coast offers scenes very similar to those found near Cape Cod.

William S. Hart has completed the taking of scenes for another western picture in which he takes the part of a gambler.

Lloyd B. Hamilton of Kalem's Comedy Couplet "Ham and Bud"

This is a Monte M. Katterjohn story which gives Hart a number of big scenes and requires a great number of expert riders.

Hawks' Hindsight Helps His Foresight

J. G. Hawks' experience as stage manager for a road production of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," made him a very valuable assistant to Director Raymond B. West when the first act of the famous play was reproduced on one of the big Ince studio stages for a current production. Dorothy Dalton and Howard Hickman are co-starred in this, and Charles Gunn is one of the principal supporting players.

There is a bounty on all kinds of frogs, toads, turtles, snakes and insects at Inceville this week, and members of William S. Hart's "horse opera troup" are doubling their salary in the capture of these. The creatures are needed for a fairy tale vision introduced into the blind girl's story which stars Enid Bennett, being made by Charles Miller. Opposite Miss Bennett in this production will be seen Jack Gilbert, and Charles K. French takes an important part.

Kay-Bee Director Reginald Barker and players including William Desmond and Margaret Thompson are home from two weeks spent at the top of the world in the vicinity of Pine Crest. Barker spent several days in seeking out locations heretofore not used by motion picture companies, and as the result of the hazardous trips made to the locations selected, all members are unanimous in voicing the sentiment that they are fortunate to be home alive. To secure some scenes it was necessary for the players to work with ropes hidden about them so that in case of accident, they would not fall down the steep cliffs.

C. Gardner Sullivan was injured last week while riding at Inceville in search of inspiration and new locations. His mount stepped in a gopher hole, and the versatile writer was hurled over the animal's head. The fall resulted in a badly sprained hip.

Two settings representing scenes in San Francisco, one that of the U. S. custom dock, and the other a street in Chinatown, were built at the Yorke studio, Hollywood, and used for a number of scenes in "Pidgin Island." In all of these a number of extra people were used by Director Jay Hunt. Novel effects secured were street scenes in Chinatown at night in which more than four hundred people took part. Baby Virginia Corban has been specially engaged to play in this Harold Lockwood-May Allison production, and is the principal in a number of emotional scenes in which she learns of the death of her mother. Doc. Pomeroy Cannon, who supported Dustin Farnum in "The Parson of Panimint," has been engaged to play a character part in the present Yorke production.

James L. McGee, Superintendent Selig Zoo

The Bare Plot of "His Model Wife"

Producer Al E. Christie and Director Horace Davey are collaborating in the production of a comedy, "His Model Wife," in which all members of the Christie organization appear. Neal Burns takes the part of Henri de Brush, an artist who wins fame by his painting of a nude woman. The wife seeing this as a private exhibit becomes an admirer of the artist and is introduced. He in turn invites her to his studio. She arrives at a time when he is starting on another picture of the same character as his masterpiece. An old

Fannie Ward in Lasky's "Years of the Locust"

snoop, the pillar of the church, taken by Eddie Barry, seeing the form of a nude woman through the window after noticing Mrs. Newlywed enter, immediately draws his own conclusion and informs her husband, who being of a jealous frame of mind, with old snoop starts in to clear up the mystery. All parties engaged in the chase about the studio, including the poor shivering model, are ultimately brought together, and it ends with old snoop serving as a target for the new work of the artist when it is broken over his head. Billie Rhodes is the wife, and Harry Hamm the jealous husband.

Monte M. Katterjohn, who recently left the Ince Culver City studios where he had written a number of plays for Kay-Bee release, has returned to his first love, and is now beating the typewriter under the watchful eye of C. Gardiner Sullivan. Katterjohn left to accept the head of the department of Essanay Company, but states that he found disagreeable weather in the windy city, which was so disconcerting to literary minds, that he immediately made arrangements to return to the Ince staff.

Ince Culver City studios are to have a very complete library, and an appropriation of $5,000 was set aside this week for the purchase of the first books for this new department. For the past several years there has been a research department which worked in collaboration with the author, but this is to be greatly expanded, and will cover all fields pertaining to motion picture making, photography, and literature. An experienced librarian, Florence

Paddy McQuire (Vogue)

Vincent, has been engaged and will have charge of the new department.

Ince Guest of Honor

Thomas H. Ince was the guest of honor, and members of his staff were included as guests at a dinner given by E. A. Featherstone, Los Angeles millionaire club-man and sportsman, tendered in honor of Ince's return from New York. It took the form of a "duck" dinner, served in the English room of the L. A. Athletic Club. All directors, heads of departments, and stars of the studio were present at the party.

William S. Hart is bemoaning the loss of a beautiful six shooter, which he has used for more than a year in Ince pictures. The loss was occasioned by the director-actor becoming excited while directing a mob scene from the top of a one-hundred-foot platform from where the scene was being shot. He used the gun to fire a signal for action to begin, and then while directing the production through a megaphone, he unconsciously dropped the weapon and the barrel was broken from the handle.

Raymond B. West brought "the mountain to Allah" the other day at Ince Culver City studios. The sun would not shine in the right direction, and after consulting with his watch, using it as a compass, he decided to move the set instead of the sun.

Owing to injuries a number of the Rolin organization is absent from the studios. Harry Todd is in the hospital with one leg in plaster that the ligaments torn loose may grow back in place; Billy Faye has a dislocated knee; Gus Leonard is suffering with two broken ribs, and Lottie Case was injured internally in a fall.

Change has been made in respect to the Yorke Norroy series which was at first placed in the hands of John MacDermott for filming. Each one of the episodes of this picture, which features Kingsley Benedict, will be separate in itself, and Donald McDonald and McDermott will take alternate numbers. McDonald is to take up the filming of the second number of the series.

Telegrams received at the Christie studio bring the information that their comedies are playing in some of the largest theatres of the central west. Included in the list being the New Palace, largest vaudeville house in Minneapolis; the Strand, largest motion picture theatre in St. Paul, and the American at Salt Lake City. The Illinois territory has been sold to Consolidated Players Film Company of Chicago, and

Maude Pavis, Bonavita, and One of the Bostock Lions

Wisconsin to Walter Baier of Milwaukee. It is also expected that the New York territory will be sold within the next few days.

With forty thousand dollars' worth of stories and scripts on hand it is stated at Universal City that no additional stories will be purchased until the present supply is produced. This means the reduction of the scenario department with respect to the several employed as readers. None of the present writers will leave. For the next several months all members of the staff will give their attention to preparing for the screen the stories now owned by the company. Another new ruling said to be effective at the big producing plant is that in the future the officers in New York will read and O. K. every subject before it goes into production. It is also stated that probably all stories will hereafter be purchased through the New York office.

Lynn Reynolds and company of Universal players are home from spending a week at the Grand Canyon of Arizona where they secured about two thousand feet of good negative, fifty per cent of which will be used in the subject "The Man With the Peanut Soul," which features George Hernandez and Myrtle Gonzalez. The photography was in charge of Clyde Cook, and projection room tests show that they contain some very excellent shots. Weather conditions were very favorable during their stay. General Manager H. O. Davis was a member of the party on this trip.

Wells Films "Constantinople"

Director Raymond Wells filming the five reel feature "Constantinople By the Sixth," will by the end of the present week complete the making of all scenes. This story, which is by Wells, was prepared for the screen by Fred Myton, and gives Ruth Stonehouse the role of a girl who runs away from home because her parents decide she shall marry a foppish young man of their choice. She becomes a stowaway and falls in with a young man who is beating his way to Constantinople on a wager and must be there by the sixth of a certain month. The subject takes on a melodramatic phase when they escape from the ship in a life-boat and are dashed upon a desert island where the eruption of a volcano makes possible their liberty. They are finally successful in reaching the Turkish capital on the given date. The subject will contain a number of sensational spectacular scenes including eruptions of a volcano on the island where the wanderers land. Supporting Miss Stonehouse are Jack Mulhall as the youth who made the wager, and Jean Hersholt as the foppish young man. Noble Johnson takes the role of the cannibal chief.

Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is being produced at U City under the direction of Rupert Julian who takes the part of Ebeneezer Scroogs. Others of the cast include Francelia Billington as Scroog's sweetheart, Harry Carter as Jacob Marley, Agnes Vernon as Caroline, John Cook as Bob Crachitt, Lydia Titus as Mrs. Fezziwig and Wadsworth Harris, Dick LeStrange and Tom Figee as ghosts.

A crystal globe purchased by a wealthy young clubman and his wife while on their honeymoon tour of the world, later serves the innocent bride to watch the actions of her husband who tires of her simple ways, and longs for his former gay carousals along the white way and returns to them. After numerous debauches, the husband comes to realize the wayward life he is leading when he sees his life's future foretold by a similar crystal in the stopper of his liquor bottle. The wife retains her purity and daily prays for his return. After a babe is born, the wife sees the face of the Christus in the crystal, and believes this the sign of victory, and is not surprised when the husband returns repentant, filled with love for the woman who has remained true to him. Herbert Rawlinson takes the role of the husband, the featured part supported by Edith Johnson as the simple country girl who becomes his wife, Dorothy Davenport the vampish chorus girl, and Dick Donaew an artist. Charles Swickard is the director of this subject, which is titled :: The Scarlet Crystal," and was written by J. G. Alexander.

"The Best Man" is a three reel program subject being filmed by Donald MacDonald which narrates the adventures of a young man who by mistake went to a wedding in a distant town three days ahead of time. He becomes the victim of a gang of pickpockets and second-story men, but the experience makes it possible for him to serve as a detective and bring about the arrest of all criminals and at the same time save the family of the bride from being robbed. Lee Hill takes the name part, and opposite him is Lois Wilson. Others in the cast are Hayward Mack, Nellie Allen and T. D. Crittenden.

New Western Character Discovered

A new western character has been discovered and this week was introduced in the two reel subject titled "Lem Cooley," made by William V. Mong who played the title part—the circuit barber. Lem in his wanderings from one camp to another sees a holdup of the stage and later comes upon the highwayman just as he is leaving after counting the money secured. The barber discovers the robber left a handkerchief, and being short of towels takes it with him. This later causes his arrest, but not until after he had won the bully's daughter on a wager with her father while engaging in the great American indoor game of poker.

"High Cost of Living" as Felt by the Theatre

FRANCIS DOOLEY, of Washington, D. C., "started the ball rolling" last week with a letter on the "high cost of living" as it is being felt by the exhibitor. On the front page of this issue will be found a letter from an exhibitor who fails to sign his name, but who evidently does know what he is talking about, and we know some of his views will make a ten-strike. We want to keep the ball rolling and call attention here to the main points brought out in this new letter. Don't fail to read the letter itself. If you agree, tell us why; if you disagree let us have your side of the question.

We are sure an open discussion by the exhibitors on such important matters will result in a clearing of decks for action, and get real results. How right is to conquer, actual ways and means, will be found when a clear consensus of opinion is reached.

The most serious charges by this exhibitor against the producers and exchange heads suggest the following:

First, big heads of the industry fail to see that the small manager independently working for his own interest, owning his own theatre, is the mainstay of the industry and can't be frozen out without killing the industry itself. Theatrical history confirms this.

Second, head-office advertising "stunts," pushed to excess, over-stimulate the business with an unhealthy result. Two many theatres, maintained by hot-house methods, means fatal weakness, which is bound to affect the producers.

Third, the body which nourishes a parasite that will eventually devour its own host, is an exact parallel to the theatre which boosts a star or program, and then has to pay such a price for continuing the star or program the house becomes but a dead husk of its former self. There are many such husks of theatres, constantly changing hands, and conditions are getting worse.

Fourth, fixed film rentals, not taking into account the actual available patronage for a theatre, size, nature of patronage, and a hundred other details which only the "human touch" can determine, indicate fatal blindness at the head-office. Frequent changes in local exchange managers indicate the instability of present "system."

These and many other questions, such as standardization, co-operation between exchange men and exhibitors with the ostracism of any member unwilling to "play fair," are effectively mentioned in this meaty letter. That newspaper advertising is being overdone, is suggested—and here it must not be overlooked that the newspapers have "made" the present stars. But have they made the good picture? The house organ, direct to the patron, is what some of the best thinkers in the business have come to.

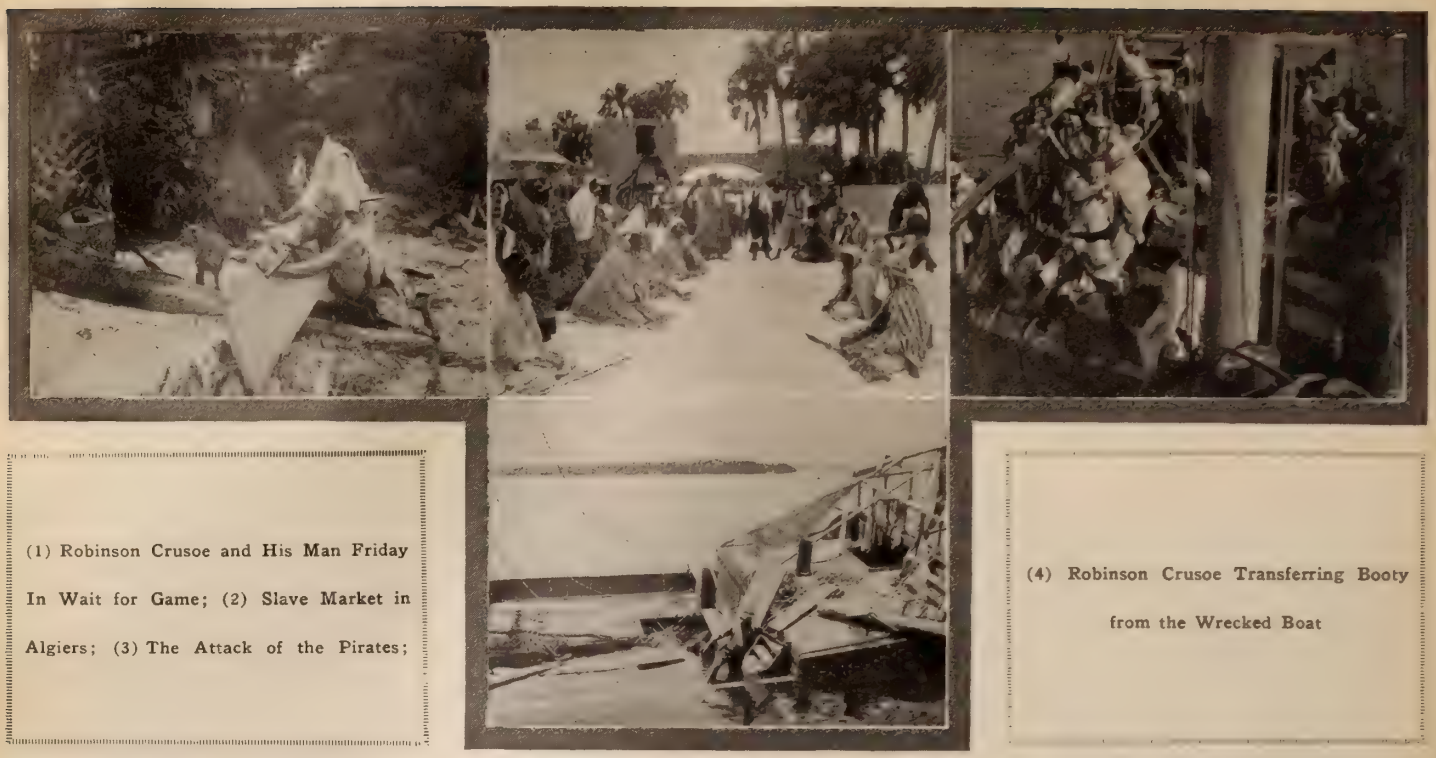
We want to keep the ball a rolling. Let us have many letters, from many more exhibitors, touching on one or all of the subjects so far discussed, or upon brand new topics which will interest all exhibitors. We don't want "literary" correspondence, just heart to heart expressions from one exhibitor to all his brother exhibitors. What do you think about present conditions? Speak out! Do your little or much to help change them, if you believe they should be changed. Write the editor of the News now. This is your paper. Published with the exhibitors' interest always, is its first thought. And this is your special corner to say what you think. We'll expect a letter today.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR SCREEN BALL IN FULL SWING

Arrangements for the fifth annual reception and ball of the Screen Club, which will be held at the Hotel Astor on the evening of Saturday, November 18, are in full swing. Jule Burnstein, chairman of the committee on sale of boxes, reported on November 10 that twenty-two allotments already had been made. King Baggot will be chairman of the floor committee and Frank Carroll will head the reception committee. Oscar Lund will have the direction of the grand march, which is scheduled to begin at 11:30 o'clock. Mr. Lund has designed one formation among others which will represent the initials of the names of the club's three presidents, B. K and Q—King Baggot, James Kirkwood and the present incumbent, Billy Quirk. Twenty-five members of the club are now rehearsing the movement, so that it may be put over without a hitch on the big night. The music will be provided by the Astor's great organ and its concert orchestra.

The grand march will be led by President Quirk and a leading motion picture actress.

Among the boxholders are Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Bluebird Photoplays, William A. Brady, Barry O'Neill, Billy Quirk, Monmouth Film Company, E. K. Lincoln, Edwin Carewe, World Film Corporation, Will C. Smith, C. A. ("Doc") Willat, Adam Kessel, Jr., J. V. Ritchie, Herbert Brenon, Nicholas Power, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Vitagraph, Herbert Blache, Fox Film Corporation, and Paul Scardon and Harry Morey. Two boxes will be reserved for representatives of the daily and trade press.



ARNOLD ADVERTISING PICTURE MAKES HIT

An advertising film which throughout contains an education feature and in practically every scene has thrills that compare most favorably with the greatest startlers of melodramas, has been prepared by O. K. Parker, director of advertising for the Arnold Motor Car Company, Los Angeles, and was shown last week at the Los Angeles auto show as one of the big entertainment features of the annual exhibit.

The film is titled "Death Valley Dodge and Its Mountain and Desert Travels." The two reels show trips through Yosemite Valley, over the glacial moraine regions of the high Sierra Mountains, over California deserts, and from the top to the bottom and vice versa of the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Prior to the showing of the picture in California, a copy had been sent to the Dodge Brothers plant at Detroit, which resulted in arrangements for the making of a number of prints to be furnished dealers of this brand of motor cars.

"Death Valley Dodge" which is a familiar car to practically every Los Angeles motorist, was so named because it was the first small car to successfully cross the great American Sahara in May of last year. Every effort to test the strength of the car has been made, the intention of the owners being to send it over every difficult drive in the southwest. The film shows the car's hazardous trips over regions without roads. It ends with a race between the "Death Valley Dodge" and a Southern Pacific train when the automobile attains a speed of sixty-two miles an hour.

In one scene the car descends a thirty-seven per cent. grade filled with boulders two feet in diameter, and another leaps down a four-foot embankment and then runs at the rate of thirty miles an hour through water two feet deep.

FOX TAKES PARK IN NEWARK, N. J., FOR PICTURES

Special to Motion Picture News.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 13.

The Park Place theatre hereafter will be known as the Terminal theatre, and will be reopened Monday, November 13, as a motion picture playhouse, under the control of William Fox. The playhouse has undergone extensive interior decorations, the elaborate stage setting installed equalling the splendor of the interior of the Academy of Music in New York.

"To entertain" is the announced policy Mr. Fox will pursue, and, with this end in view, he is completing arrangements for programs of highest worth. The outstanding feature will be photoplay productions of superior quality. Besides this there will be a concert orchestra, which Mr. Fox has already assembled for this theatre. A new mammoth pipe organ is being installed. The management is also arranging for the appearance of special vocal and instrumental artists with each program, which will be changed every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

MARY PICKFORD RECEIVES LETTER BY AEROPLANE MAIL CARRIER

Mary Pickford had the unusual distinction the past week of being the only star in the amusement world to receive a letter in the United States demonstration of carrying mail by aeroplane from Chicago to New York, the flight being made under the auspices of the New York Times. Added interest was given by the fact that the letter came from the faculty and students of the University of Chicago inviting Miss Pickford to be their guest at the winter dance just before the holidays.

Mary Pickford also received cards of greeting from the motion picture editors of Chicago, and Jones, Linick and Schaefer predicted that the engagement of the Artcraft production, "Less Than the Dust," at the La Salle would be big.

Elaborate Titles Will Be Used with "Witching Hour"

"In Many Respects They Are Different from Anything Seen on the Screen," Says an Official of the Frohman Amusement Company—Smith Goes Abroad for Another Locke Script

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation will use a number of elaborate titles with "The Witching Hour."

"The titles are unlike, in a great many ways, anything heretofore displayed in a screen production, and serve well their purpose in this instance of maintaining the dignity of the story throughout," says an official of the company.

"'The Witching Hour,' therefore, will serve two purposes. It will bring to light a powerful seven-reel dramatic feature in which there is no resort to the extra-sensational.

"Throughout the seven parts, dramatic action is the entire theme. There is not an instant where the spectator will not be refreshed by a powerful dramatic situation, a tremendous emotional climax or series of counter plots, so closely interwoven as to make the play more than a strong story—a mighty dramatic document."

C. Aubrey Smith, who plays the principal part, that of Jack Brookfield, sailed for Europe last Saturday to confer with W. J. Locke as to the procuring of another of his stories, and in all likelihood will return with another script for the Frohmans.

Exhibitors and Exchangemen Discuss Trade Questions

They Convene with Purpose of Launching Organization in New York to Settle All Differences—Exchangemen Declare That a Certain Class of Exhibitors Treat Them Unfairly

AT a meeting held last week by the Film Club, exchangemen and exhibitors of New York City got together to discuss relations existing between themselves in the New York locality and surrounding districts. The original purpose of the meeting was to inaugurate an office similar to the Hoy Reporting Service of Chicago, a concern which acts as mediator between the exhibitor and exchangeman whenever difficulties arise.

The exchangemen brought in the argument that there was still a certain class of exhibitors that treated them unfairly whenever the opportunity was presented. It will be the duty of the Film Club to preside over such cases when they are brought to light and render an equitable decision. A committee made up of eighteen exhibitors and twelve exchangemen will act on the cases. In other words the Film Club will assume the duties of a Supreme Court between the exhibitor and exchangeman. The exchanges are only waiting the sanction of such an organization from the exhibitors' locals.

At the meeting the question of return express charges was broached by the exhibitors. Although the exchangemen had made it clear that no previous differences were to be mentioned at the meeting, they listened to the arguments on express charges and finally agreed that decision would be left to the manager of each exchange. This settlement of the difficulties that have long been brewing on this question is regarded as most decisive.

EARLE WILLIAMS STARTS WORK IN "ARSENE LUPIN"

At the Greater Vitagraph Studio in Brooklyn work has already commenced upon "Arsene Lupin," with Earle Williams in the title role. Paul Scardon, who so successfully directed Barney Bernard and Peggy Hyland in recent productions, has been named to handle this important story.

RUSSIAN SETTING FOR ANITA STEWART'S NEXT

In her forthcoming picture, "The Girl Philippa," Anita Stewart was "Somewhere in France." In a picture she has just begun she is to be in Russia.

The story is "The Glory of Yolanda," by Maibelle Heikes Justice. Miss Stewart will play Yolanda. Her leading man will be Evart Overton, while others in the cast include Denton Vane, John Ardizonia, Anna Brody, Bernard Siegel and Mr. Turin. This drama is being directed by Marguerite Bertsch, who has just completed the directon of Earle Williams in the Curwood story, "The Soul Master."

BILLIE BURKE'S BABY MAY BE NAMED "GLORIA"

On Monday, October 23, Billie Burke, star of George Kleine's motion picture novel, "Gloria's Romance," became a proud and happy mother. The tiny edition of Billie Burke was ushered into the world at the Hotel Ansonia in New York City exactly at 3:15 o'clock, Monday afternoon. At that moment Mr. Ziegfeld was superintending the rehearsals of his new all-star show at a downtown theatre. It was some time before he could be found and the news imparted to him, but upon learning of the arrival he promptly dropped everything and hurried to the side of Billie.

And now for the real news of the event. Several days before baby Ziegfeld was born, her fair mother told Ada Patterson, of the New York American staff, that if the baby was a girl, there was every likelihood in the world that she would be named "Gloria," after the role that Billie last appeared in.

Billie Burke

Billie Burke and Mr. Ziegfeld were married quietly in Hoboken in April, 1914. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Enzelfeld and so carefully were the arrangements for the ceremony made that no one outside the parents of the principals knew of it for several days. Miss Burke appeared in "Jerry," the play in which she was starring at the time, the evening of her marriage and it was some days later before the news of the wedding leaked out.

Six Hundred People Mostly Children Attended the Opening Matinee of Pathe's "The Shielding Shadow" at the Pastime in Toledo

Masterpiece Film of Missouri Buys "The Crisis" Rights

Company Will Control Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia—Price Paid Is $100,000, Says Sherman

THE Masterpiece Film Corporation, of Missouri, has purchased the rights of the Selig featurè film, "The Crisis," for the States of Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia. The price paid, it is stated by Harry A. Sherman, of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., was $100,000.

H. P. Wolfburg, who has been affiliated with the General Film Company, for the past seven years, will be in charge of the booking of "The Crisis" for the above-named territory. It is said to be the intention of the Masterpiece Film Corporation to book "The Crisis" as a first-class road attraction, playing the best theatres. The production will be widely exploited. Mr. Wolfburg is known among film men as a "live wire" in every sense of that meaning, and it is anticipated that there is a great future in store for "The Crisis."

Harry A. Sherman, president of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., arrived in Chicago, Ill., last week for a conference with William N. Selig. Mr. Sherman is enthusiastic over the outlook for "The Crisis," and again predicts that the Selig film will prove one of the most popular film dramas of the past few years.

"'The Crisis' has everything," declared Mr. Sherman. "There is a fine plot, a wonderful cast, and, above all, a great big story. 'The Crisis' is more than a series of beautiful pictures—it is a drama of American life and of American people.

"We expect to open in Chicago just as soon as an appropriate theatre is engaged," said Mr. Sherman. "Perhaps premier presentations of 'The Crisis' will be made simultaneously in New York City and Chicago. I shall open my Western offices in Chicago within the next week or so. Their location will be made known at the proper time, and I am enthusiastic over the outcome."

"Faust," from California Motion Picture Corporation Is Nearly Ready

THE film adaptation from the opera "Faust," which has been for many months in the making at the studios of the California Motion Picture Corporation, San Rafael, is now nearing completion, and, according to announced plans, will be released for indefinite runs this winter in several of the leading cities of the country.

The scenario was from the pen of Captain Leslie T. Peacocke. The adaptation, according to the producers, religiously follows Goethe's original and Gurnot's operatic versions.

The star of the production is Beatriz Michelena, the celebrated prima donna, whose insistency, ever since her screen debut, that the greatest of the operas be adequately produced in film version, is largely responsible for the present endeavor. As Marguerite, Miss Michelena will find it necessary to add a new type to her already long and diversified list of motion picture heroines.

Something of the demand that is said to have been made upon Miss Michelena's talent and emotional responsiveness may be gathered from the fact that the big theme of the screen story is Marguerite's fall from innocence, her tribulations, as pictured in Goethe's drama, and her final redemption.

HYLAND AND MACDERMOTT CAST TOGETHER

Peggy Hyland, after finishing "Her Right to Live," and Marc MacDermott, after finishing his work in "Whom the Gods Destroy," are working together for their next appearance in a drama by Maibelle Heikes Justice, called "The Grand Duke." The title role, however, will be played by little Bobby Connelly. Others in the cast are Templar Saxe, Brinsley Shaw, Mrs. Remley, Harry Southwell, Miss Nellie Spitzer and Miss Curley. John Robertson, is in charge of the direction of this Vitagraph five-reel production.

True Boardman in Three Poses from Kalem's "Stingaree," a Series Which Is Still Bringing Big Business to General Film Exhibitors

"CIVILIZATION" AND THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

Four years ago, when President Wilson was a candidate, considerable use was made of the fact by the film companies, and short length subjects, including his portrait, found their way on the programs. The motion picture films had for some years even anterior to this played some little part in presidential contests.

This year, however, the picture entered the arena as a factor which was set to help the cause of one of the candidates. This candidate was President Wilson, himself, who asked the country to re-elect him.

"'Civilization' the Thos. H. Ince spectacle played no inconsiderable part—it would be ridiculous to say in determining the result—but in the accidents, if not the essentials of the contest," says an official of the company. "It will be recollected that in October last President Wilson received Mr. Ince at Shadow Lawn and congratulated him on having produced such a splendid film as 'Civilization' in the form of a message to Humanity, which letter was copied and added to the film. A very large number of prints of 'Civilization' with the Presidential endorsement and Mr. Wilson's portrait was shown in various parts of the country during the closing days of the contest.

"Mr. Ince, himself, at Culver City, Cal., together with large numbers of his staff, worked hard and heartily on the Democratic side. It is not mere conjecture, but a reasonable probability that this picture operated to influence large numbers of votes in favor of President Wilson.

"During the penultimate phase of the Presidential campaign, a news item was written and about to be sent out with the startling caption '"Civilization" Wins the Presidential Election.' This effort of imagination was probably not overdone."

FROHMAN AMUSEMENT WILL SHOW "HOUR" THIS WEEK

"The Witching Hour" is being assembled, and will be ready for display about Nov. 14. A trade showing will be held, in all probability at the Strand theatre during one morning of that week.

"Girl from 'Frisco" Going Strong in West

Marin Sais and True Boardman Forced to Tour Southern California Theatres on Demand of Exhibitors

MARIN SAIS, "The Girl from 'Frisco," and True Boardman, her co-star in that Kalem series, received a taste of their former stage life during the past few weeks on a tour of California theatres. The personal appearance of the stars on the stages of the photoplay theatres have been met with enthusiastic crowds at each of the dozen houses thus far visited, while eight more are on the list.

Neither the Kalem Company nor the stars was directly responsible for the plan of having the players make a circuit of the theatres. Since the success of the Kalem series of the West exhibitors have been frequent visitors to the Kalem studio at Glendale, which is under the management of Director James W. Horne. Four weeks ago a committee representing the Southern California exhibitors booking the series from the Los Angeles General Film Exchange, declaring that "'Frisco" had become the most popular feature of their programs with their patrons, requested a possible personal appearance.

Though it meant a considerable sacrifice of time Miss Sais and True Boardman readily assented to the plan and have been appearing at the houses possible to reach without delaying operations at the studio. With the series extended to twenty-five episodes, the studio force is now kept working at top speed.

The requirement for unusually elaborate and different settings in each of the two-reel episodes of the series makes the demands on the studio force especially exacting. For "The Reformation of Dog Hole," the episode released October 11, Director Horne found it necessary to construct the entire main street of the fictitious town of Dog Hole. In "The Yellow Hand," issued the following Wednesday, some weirdly realistic settings in the interior of Chinese joss-houses called for the outlay of much time and expense.

The story of "The Yellow Hand" is built on the theme of Chinese immigration and involves the operation of the mysterious Dragon Brotherhood. Two hundred Chinese players were engaged for the production by Director Horne, most of them appearing in the vast temple scenes, while a few have parts of importance, in which they were seen to good advantage.

PETROVA'S NEXT TO BE VENDETTA PLAY

On the shores of Long Island, not many miles from the heart of Manhattan, a Corsican village soon will appear. It is a setting for scenes in a vendetta play in which will appear Madame Petrova, the Metro star. Director Burton L. King of the Popular Plays and Players studios, accompanied by assistant director, Edward James, has selected an ideal site which commands a wide sweep of sea.

Some new and substantial effects are to be obtained, but as to these Mr. King and Mr. James are silent, since the play is yet unnamed. The village will have everything that a village should have except an election. There will be a market place and a church, and Mr. King will see that the humblest store is built solidly and well.

VITAGRAPH WITHDRAWS TWO PICTURES FROM PROGRAM

Two Greater Vitagraph productions scheduled for release have been withdrawn from the announced program, as they did not measure up to Vitagraph's standard of excellency.

Each of these features was produced with the usual care and attention. The stories were by prominent and successful authors and seemed adaptable for screening, the characters appeared to be well cast, the direction was good, and every scene photographically was excellent. After each of these features had been assembled and edited, the executives noted particularly that the stories seemed to be well told, but that there was something about both that raised a doubt as to their ultimate success from the box office standpoint.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Butner, Triangle in Washington, D. C., Is Successful Nominee for President of Exchangemen's Association

J. H. BUTNER, manager of the Washington branch of the Triangle Film Corporation, was the successful nominee for the presidency of the Exchangemen's Association selected at the meeting held at the National Press Club Monday evening, November 6. A Nominating and Steering Committee appointed at the preceding meeting brought in recommendations for a slate, which also included the following officers, who were agreed upon by the full membership, and will serve during the ensuing twelve months: L. M. Day, Metro Film Service, vice-president; E. G. Evans, Mutual Film Company, secretary-treasurer; Sidney B. Lust, New Film Exchange, sergeant-at-arms; and Fritz B. Wathne, International Film Service, chairman of the Executive Committee.

The managers of all film exchanges in the District of Columbia offering a regular film service to exhibitors are eligible for membership in the new organization, and at this meeting eleven of the big companies were represented, an even dozen sitting down to the tables that had been set for the dinner in the club's grill room. After words of greeting by Mr. Butner a very excellent spread was attacked, for the hour of meeting had been set for eight o'clock and appetites were ravenous.

The first regular business was the organizing as a permanent proposition, and there then followed discussions covering the new fire regulations proposed by Fire Marshal Nicholson, and the free shows suggested for the children of the city by the Federation of Women's clubs.

It was brought out at this meeting that many of the managers are disappointed with the action taken by Mr. Nicholson in urging what they believe to be are drastic regulations which will serve to greatly inconvenience the exchanges without bringing about any needful results, and accordingly a committee was appointed to take the matter up with that official and with the several people who have announced a willingness to erect a film building that would comply with the regulations, to see in what shape their plans are and to be ready to report back to the full membership at the next meeting to be held two weeks hence. On this committee Frank B. Spurrier was appointed as chairman, and D. F. O'Donnell, L. M. Day, E. G. Evans and George R. Mayo as members.

Mr. Spurrier also brought up the matter of the children's matinees, and it was agreed by all those present that they should attend the joint meeting with members of the Federation of Women's clubs to be held the following Wednesday at the New Ebbitt House.

Other matters of purely local and personal interest were discussed following which an adjournment was taken. Clarence L. Linz, a newspaperman, who has been more or less actively connected with the film industry in Washington, was unanimously elected an honorary member of the association in recognition of his services in bringing about its formation.

FULLER GIVES PRIVATE SHOWING OF LEW FIELDS PICTURE FOR ACTORS IN ST. LOUIS

George W. Fuller, manager of the World Film Exchange, at 3626 Olive street, St. Louis, with the co-operation of William Sievers of the Grand Central theatre, gave a private showing of "The Man Who Stood Still," at the Central, reecntly, to Lew Fields, the star of the feature, and the entire company of players taking part in the musical comedy showing at the time in a St. Louis theatre.

Mr. Fields had not had an opportunity of seeing himself in the film, and to make it convenient for him and his supporting company the performance was given after the theatre had closed to the public, at eleven o'clock at night. Several film and newspaper men were invited, and the select audience, though small, received the film with enthusiasm, and all declared the acting excellent and the story a strong one.

A few days after the midnight matinee, George W. Fuller resigned as manager of the St. Louis branch of the World Film Corporation, and departed for Pittsburgh, where he will assume management of the Pathe Exchange in that city.

Jack Weil was summoned from Detroit to take charge of the World Film office in St. Louis. Mr. Weil formerly lived in St. Louis, and he says he anticipates seeing his old friends and acquaintances with much pleasure. He steps into a well organized business office, where an ever increasing demand for Brady-made pictures has been thoughtfully and carefully considered and fostered.

MUTT AND JEFF EXCHANGE GROWS

The two comic characters Mutt and Jeff are the cause of the Mutt and Jeff Film Exchange adding more space to their already spacious offices on the tenth floor of the Godfrey Building.

A beautifully arranged projection room has been constructed in the additional space for the showing of Mutt and Jeff cartoons.

The rapid growth of this company is entirely due to the demands of exchanges and exhibitors for Mutt and Jeff subjects.

Boland Opens Booking Office for Out of Town Exhibitors in Los Angeles

J. M. BOLAND has opened the first booking office in Los Angeles for out-of-town exhibitors, and will represent thirty-two managers of Arizona houses in the selection of programs for their theatres. He has opened offices at 730 S. Olive street, Los Angeles.

The All Star Feature Film Exchange, Los Angeles, announce the purchase of rights for Rocky Mountain states on the seven-reel feature "The Libertine." First showing will be made in Los Angeles within the next two weeks.

The partnership heretofore existing between Charles Klopot and Jacob Cone in the ownership of the California Comedy Film Company with exchanges at Los Angeles and San Francisco, has been dissolved. Mr. Cone retains the Los Angeles exchange, and Mr. Klopot the one at the Bay City.

The Warner Film Attractions has moved its Los Angeles exchange from Eighth street, and in the future will occupy a portion of the room at 731 S. Olive street with the California Comedy Film Company. William Bernard, formerly of Fox and Metro Los Angeles exchanges, is now manager for the Warner Attractions.

TAYLOR BACK IN OMAHA AFTER CHICAGO CONFERENCE

Manager Taylor of the General Film Company exchange in Omaha, Nebraska, has just returned from a conference with F. C. Aiken, division manager at Chicago. Branch managers from over the Middle West met to take up future releases and prospects in general. Mr. Taylor declares the General's releases in his territory will be of better quality than ever before and will have stars in one, two and three-reel productions—something greatly desired by the little exhibitors, a class largely in the majority in Omaha's territory. The service will meet every requirement, says Mr. Taylor, and adds that the entire output of the company will be handled through his branch.

IVAN BUSINESS GOOD

The exchanges throughout the country that handle the productions of the Ivan Abramson Company are reporting such increase in business that the home office is unusually encouraged. Arrangements have been made to hold a convention of Ivan exchangemen in either New York or Chicago at an early date.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

J. C. Graham, assistant to the president of the Mutual Film Corporation, after having spent a week in New York, has returned to Chicago, but is expected to make a return visit any day.

Hopp Hadley of the New York office of the Mutual Film Corporation left for Chicago Sunday last and will be gone a week or ten days. In the Windy City he will confer with the heads of departments of their main office.

C. R. Seelye, Pathe business manager, is making an extended tour through the Middle West and will improve upon the occasion by visiting the various Pathe exchanges in that section.

L. E. Ouimet of the Specialty Film Import, Ltd., and Pathe representative in Canada has returned to Montreal after a two days' visit to the New York office.

With the idea of making things congenial for the trade paper critics who review Greater Vitagraph production in the projection room at 1600 Broadway every Tuesday afternoon, the Vitagraph-V-L-S-E Home Office has installed a piano.

J. G. von Henberg, treasurer of the Greater Theatres Company, Seattle, Wash., is in town for a few days transacting business for his theatrical enterprises on the Pacific Coast.

"THE DEVIL'S BONDWOMAN" RELEASED ON NOVEMBER 20

THE Universal Program for the week of November 20 is noteworthy in that it contains the first issue of the "Universal Screen Magazine" which will be released on November 24. This magazine will treat of new inventions, microscopic and astronomical photography, phases of sociological and civic betterment work and in general of subjects which cannot be strictly classified as "news" for the Animated Weekly. In other words, the Universal Screen Magazine will be a supplement to the Animated Weekly just as the Sunday Magazine section of the daily newspaper supplements and elaborates upon the news of the day.

On November 20 the Universal will release "The Devil's Bondwoman," a five-reel Red Feather drama written by Willie Woods, scenarioized by Maie Havey and produced by Lloyd Carleton. Dorothy Davenport, Emory Johnson, Richard Morris, Adele Farrington, William Canfield and Miriam Shelby appear in the picture. On the same day Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will offer the comic relief in the Nestor comedy, "How Do You Feel?" which was scenarioized by Walter Newman from the story by Robert McGowan and produced by L. Chaudet. Fred Gamble and Priscilla Dean play the principal roles in the picture.

"The Woman He Feared," a three-reel society drama featuring Vola Smith, will be released on November 21 under the Gold Seal brand. This feature was produced by Harry Millarde from the story by E. M. Ingleton. Franklyn Farnum, William Canfield, Clarissa Selwyn and Adele Farrington play the principal roles. The Special Victor comedy, "Felix Gets In Wrong," featuring Edith Roberts, will be released on the same date. The story of the play by Frank Ormston was scenarioized by Calder Johnstone and produced by Frank Ormston. George Felix, Frank Staple, Margaret Whistler, George Odell, Viola Lind also play important parts. There will be no Victor release this week.

Betty Schade and Charles Cummings are featured on November 22 in the Imp drama "When He Came Back" which was written by Joseph Le Brandt and produced by John McDermott. Malcolm Blevins appears in support of the principals. On the same day Billie Ritchie raises particular Ned in "Where Is My Wife?" a L-Ko two-reel comedy and No. 47 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be reelased.

"The Emerald Pin," a Laemmle two-reel drama scenarioized by Maie Havey from the story by E. Magnus Ingleton and produced by Burton George will be released on November 23 with Roberta Wilson, Eileen Sedgwick, Gretchen Lederer, Charles Perley, Louise Owen and Myrtle Gillette in the principal roles. On the same date the Powers juvenile release, "Irma In Wonderland," written and produced by Lule Warrenton will be released with Irma Sorter, Dorothy Clark, Linne Gee, Bennie Suslow, Gerald Ward and George Hupp in the leading juvenile roles.

Universal Submarine Picture Meets with Success

"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" Has Done So Well at Chicago That Picture Will Now Be Shown in Big Theatres All Over the Country

ENCOURAGED by the overwhelming success of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," the new superfeature picture filmed at the bottom of the ocean, now attracting capacity audiences to the Studebaker theatre in Chicago, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has decided to organize a number of companies to present the picture in the principal cities of the country.

Arrangements have already been made to open at the Savoy theatre in San Francisco, November 26, and at the Lyric theatre in Minneapolis, at about the same time. It is quite likely that by the first of the year at least a dozen companies will be operating in as many cities.

The unusual character of this picture has created the widest interest. The uncannily prophetic story of Jules Verne has been followed very closely in the picturization, such scenes as have been added materially enhancing the value of the work in visualizing the author's vivid descriptions. Many months were required to complete the work which, but for the wonderful inventions of the Williamson Brothers would have been impossible.

An entire company of carefully selected players was transported to the West Indies, where the peculiar clarity of the water of the ocean, and the beautiful under-sea gardens afforded conditions ideal for the undertaking. Some idea of the difficulties encountered may be had when it is remembered that there was no guiding precedent for the work at hand.

The Williamson Brothers had successfully made motion pictures under the ocean, but merely of the fishes and formations, with occasionally an incident in the activities of the pearl divers. But the idea of enacting a drama at the bottom of the sea was an altogether different proposition. So carefully had their arrangements been made, however, that the work was carried on with hardly a delaying accident, and although over 200,000 feet of film was used, the drama is concisely preserved in some 8,000 feet, every yard of which discloses wonders of the deep never before revealed to the human eye.

Savage's "Robinson Crusoe" on States Rights Plan

Production to Be Marketed by A. and H. M. Warner—Picture Said to Be Wonderfully Well Produced Under Direction of George Marion

AN announcement of interest to states rights buyers throughout the country comes from Henry W. Savage, who has just effected an arrangement with A. & H. M. Warner of 729 Seventh avenue, New York, whereby the Messrs. Warner will handle the distribution of Mr. Savage's five-part photoplay, Rovinson Crusoe.

With that rare judgment that has enabled Mr. Savage to sense the value of a play and to then produce one success after another, this time he has selected probably the most popular hero in fiction. While all of us know Robinson Crusoe as a childhood joy, Mr. Savage aided by the masterly direction of George Marion has given us a screen version of the exploits of this daring character that makes him an idol for the grown ups.

The release is being handled as a states rights proposition solely. The opportunity for states right buyers to get a five-reel screen play that has not suffered mutilation by the censors, and a play with the universal appeal to all, means much for all.

The scenes of adventure are laid in the tropics and Juan Fernandez Island was never more wild or more beautiful than the spots selected by Mr. Marion for photography. The footprints on the sands, the fight with the pirates, the cannibal feast, the slave market, the real tropical storm and numbers of scenes that approach the colossal give to the Savage production of Robinson Crusoe distinction rarely enjoyed by films.

For centuries millions have known Robinson Crusoe, yet no one ever saw him. Now he comes in all his charm and glory to bring us back to days when we pored over him and to bring the youth of today up to him as a real living screen personage. Many of the flesh and blood heroes of today lack the exquisite charm that attaches to this daring outdoors hero.

With his man Friday, and his pets we see him hold his own against odds and solve problems that might mean disaster. It was a happy selection of Mr. Savage's and the picture industry is richer for it.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

"The 'News' wishes to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything in fact done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to send for publication the successful ideas that he has worked out, also to come to us for suggestions or information. Address the Editor."

Original Business-Getters for Dull Days Instituted by Manager Hoyt at the Liberty, Long Beach, Cal.

PUTTING in a new theatre and charging higher prices than any of his competitors has placed before Manager O. Hoyt of the Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal., the problem of advertising features of the program which will mean good business for his house.

He has resorted to many tried means and some which are only made possible by local conditions. Before he opened the house he made sure that the theatre would have proper advertising, and secured an advertiser, Roy Bagley from a Spokane, Washington, house. Mr. Hoyt aims to give the people the impression that he has the best show in town and he has convinced a large portion of the forty thousand population that this is so.

One of the most successful and yet inexpensive features that he has found, was to give what he termed an "autumnal fashion parade." For this he induced the largest ladies' ready-to-wear garment store in the city to co-operate with him in the furnishing of gowns, cloaks, suits and hats. To properly show these from the stage, twelve professional models were secured. On each side of the proscenium arch at the showing stood a door-man in colonial dress who drew back the curtain to show the living model, and also change the announcement card describing the apparel worn. The added feature to his program was given on the dullest nights in the week, but the novelty of it and the advertising brought record breaking crowds.

The theatre has given fifteen children's matinees, each one held Saturday morning beginning at ten thirty. Each week the theatre has had a full house. Manager Hoyt, has carefully selected the films for these programs, and gives particular attention to eliminating all scenes which show crime, drinking and smoking. The manager lectures the picture himself, and has an intermission at which time a story teller entertains the children. The programs all begin with the children singing some song that they know. The special program is advertised one week in advance by hand bills, and newspaper advertising is used during the following week.

TAMPA EXHIBITOR PULLS GOOD STUNT

Edward Kane, manager of the Alcazar theatre, Tampa, Florida, the Paramount house, recently closed a deal with the city officials which is "some publicity."

Tampa was in need of street depositary cans for each block of the city, so Mr. Kane closed a deal with the officials to supply these cans free of cost to them.

The cans are painted a bright orange color with blue letters and on each can is painted a large Paramount trademark. This new idea was awarded the October prize by "Paramount."

Paramount Empress in Salt Lake Inaugurates Special Entertainment for Children

THE Paramount Empress theatre in Salt Lake, has reaped the harvest of co-operation with the element in the community that demands special entertainment for the children. Matinees every Saturday morning will be boosted by the Home and School League, which agrees to furnish fifty chaperones to care for the children. The opening performance, which used Mary Pickford in "Cinderella" as the backbone of the program, drew in round numbers two thousand children of all ages to this theatre.

It took the management, three school principals, and several employes of the theatre, twenty minutes to sell the tickets, all traffic near the theatre being held up for a while by the crush.

All of which goes to show that the children, as the coming patrons of any theatre, will repay a little cultivation as present patrons. The Paramount Empress made a host of friends, and dealt a great big blow against unfair censorship when they allied themselves in this practical manner with the public spirited folks of their city. Have you tried the children's program yet? Think it over. The women and school authorities are a powerful factor in moulding public opinion in any community.

DUMMY NIGHT RIDER USED TO ADVERTISE "FLOWER OF FAITH"

One of the most attractive and elaborate lobby displays ever made was used by Manager Miller, of the Alhambra theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., to call attention to the fact that "The Flower of Faith" was being shown in his theatre. Mr. Miller booked the International's beautiful Golden Eagle feature for a week's run. At the entrance of the theatre he had erected a horse of white paper mache, mounted by a night rider. The device was beautifully illuminated by night. "The Flower of Faith" played to record business during the week's engagement.
